Dining Commons Snack Bar To Be Reopened Friday Night

by Peter Hendrickson

The North Dining Commons snack bar will be reopened Friday at 8 p.m.

John F. Martin, boarding halls manager, said that the ground floor snack bar facilities, in operation through 1957, are being renovated, "due to the crowded conditions now existing in the Student Union."

Martin noted that there are 10,000 students on campus and only 5,100 are served through the Commons facilities.

The snack bar will be officially opened after the Friday night basketball game. Coach John Orr will be there for a post-mortem of the game and Dean William Field will also attend.

Gerald Grady, business manager of the University, announced that a contest is being conducted to find an appropriate name for the snack bar. Any student may submit an entry on a 3x5 card with his name and campus address. A box for entries will be placed by the cash register in the snack bar. A prize will be awarded the winner. Each student is limited to one entry.

A "PHOTOGRAPH-OF-THE MONTH" contest was also announced by Grady. Students may submit any photograph they have taken to be displayed on the walls of the snack bar. The best photo will be enlarged to 20x24 inches to enhance the decor. Photo credits will be placed by the pictures.

The snack bar will serve essentially the same foods as the Hatch, with the exception of dinners and a take-out service will be available. Operation hours will be from 11 a.m.-10:30 p.m. weekdays.

A piano will be available for anyone who wishes to play. There are also tentative plans to remodel the foyer into a lounge. There is an approximate seating capacity of 250.

Richard Flynn and Richard Ellis, assistant boarding halls managers, will direct the snack bar operation. They need student labor to help in the operation. Proceeds will be placed in the boarding halls trust fund.

—NOTICES—

Dr. David Leonard will talk on "The Crisis in Viet Nam" Thurs., 7:30 p.m. in 3 East lounge Emily Dickinson House.

If you have lost a notebook, check at the Student Union checkroom on Thurs., Jan. 7, from 1-3 p.m.

According to Julius Fabos, U-Mass landscape architect instructor and coordinator of the exhibit that was created at Harvard University, the exhibition is not only a tribute to Olmsted, but a graphic example of the nature of landscape architecture.

Hours for the exhibit are 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. from Sunday, Jan. 3 to Sunday, Jan. 10 when the exhibit will close at 8 p.m.

CAMPUS INTERVIEWS - Wednesday and Thursday, January 6 and 7, 1965

Sure, everybody's got a career program. But we think you'll find ours a little more stimulating, more rewarding, and at least intriguing enough to spend the next minute or so reading about it.

We call it our "Career Acceleration Program." In it, you'll work on such advanced projects as an avionics system for supersonic aircraft, a guidance/navigation system for the Apollo Command Module and LEM, and a new guidance system for the Titan III space launch vehicle.

Seven hours a day you'll work on a specific project. You'll spend one hour each day in formal class work. These classes include courses in Inertial Instruments, Inertial Guidance, Digital Computers, Advanced Transistors, Advanced Servomechanisms, Integrated Circuits, Space Mechanics, plus other mathematics and undergraduate disciplines as required.

We also have a Tuition Refund Plan that pays all of your tuition costs upon satisfactorily completing college-level courses of study undertaken voluntarily. Our "in-plant" evening educational program offers additional opportunities for technical improvement.

If you are completing your BS or MS degree in EE, ME, Math or Physics, we invite you to inquire about the opportunities at any of our three locations. AC in MILWAUKEE—our main research, development and manufacturing facility. AC in BOSTON—our Research and Development Laboratory specializing in advanced inertial components; spacecraft and avionics guidance/navigation systems. AC in LOS ANGELES—our Research and Development Laboratory specializing in advanced airborne computers; ballistic missile and space booster guidance/navigation systems. For further information, see your college placement office regarding a General Motors/AC on-campus interview, or write directly to Mr. G. F. Raasch, Director of Scientific and Professional Employment, Dept. #5753, General Motors Corporation, Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53201.

PhDs, please note: Positions are available in all three AC locations for PhDs, depending on concentration of study and area of interest. You are invited to contact Mr. Raasch for additional information.

Olympian Don Schollander Named Top Performer In Swimming

Olympic champion Don Schollander has been named "Top Performer in Swimming" for 1964 in the 18th annual yearend selections honoring the top performers in each major sport.

Schollander, a native of Lake Oswego, Oregon, captured four Olympic gold medals to run away with honors in Tokyo and in the SPORT poll.

In garnering his bushel of medals, Don set an Olympic record of 53.4 seconds for the 100-meter freestyle, a world record of 4:12.2 for the 400-meter freestyle, and helped to set world records in the 400- and 800-meter freestyle relays.

Another major award names Fred Hutchinson "Man of the Year" for 1964. Hutchinson was chosen for exhibiting unusual courage and devotion to baseball by remaining at his job as manager of the Cincinnati Reds for as long as he was physically able, despite severe pain and the knowledge that cancer was destroying him. The world of sports mourned his death last November 12.

Also named were the other winners of the 18th annual "Top Performer" awards covering participants in all major sports. Third baseman Brooks Robinson of Baltimore was named "Top Performer in Baseball" for keeping the Orioles in the thick of the American League pennant race, and quarterback Johnny Unitas of the Colts captured the "Pro Football" award for leading Baltimore to the Western Division title in the National Football League. The "College Football" prize went to All-American linebacker Dick Butkus of the University of Illinois.

Oscar Robertson of the Cincinnati Royals was named "Top Performer in Pro Basketball" and Walt Hazzard, now with the Los Angeles Lakers, is his "College" counterpart for sparking UCLA to an undefeated season and the national championship.

In a new category, Tony Oliva of the Minnesota Twins was named "Rookie of the Year" for all sports for capturing the American League batting crown as a freshman.

Shooters Win Tournament

In the midst of the various bowl action which took place over the holidays the UMass Pistol Team received official notification that they placed first in the Sharpshooter Class at the 1964 New England Air Force Gallery Championship Meet conducted at Hanscom Air Force Base. Placing second in the Collegiate Division behind Coast Guard, the Redmen outclassed twelve other teams for the title. The team missed taking the Collegiate title by a slim three points.

With eight men entered in two teams the Redmen garnered four individual awards. George Wietecha and Eric Mussen the big shooters so far this season each received second place awards in individual events and sophomore standouts Charles Seavey and Don Hawkes both received first place awards as new shooters.

With the tournament results in this gives the Redmen a 14 and 2 season to date. Losses have both been at home to a powerful Villanova and an equally strong Coast Guard team.

Team candidates John Hurd '67, John Schmelger '68, John Carney '68, Bob Bibby '65 getting equipment on the chairlift to begin a day's work.

(68), and Sigfried Presslauer (68). The "B" team members will train with the varsity team at Thunder Mt.

Coach MacConnell is looking forward to "the best season yet" with hopes of defeating Amherst College who managed to win over UMass by fractions of a second in previous races.

The team left Sunday Dec. 20 from Thunder Mt. to attend a three day training camp at Killington, Dec. 20 through 23, followed by a camp at Thunder Mt. Dec. 27 through 30.

The first race is scheduled for January 30th.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Edwards Bright Light

Redmen Five Has Rocky Xmas

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts basketball team saw plenty of action during the recent vacation while the rest of the campus took things easy. The Redmen downed two New England foes but absorbed three consecutive losses on their first venture into big time basketball as played in the midwest.

The Redmen started their action with a victory over New Hampshire, 93-78, as Chuck O'Rourke pumped in 29 points and pulled down 25 rebounds. Tim Edwards had 23 points and 22 rebounds while Clarence Hill had 23 points as the home club ran their conference record to 3-1.

THEN ON CHRISTMAS DAY the team departed for Evansville to play the number one small college in the nation and the defending NCAA college division champ. The Purple Aces are supposed to have their best team ever and proved it as they won over the Redmen 113-82 despite the fact UMass shot better than 52% from the floor.

The first half was tight as the steady popping of Hill and Edwards kept the Redmen in contention. With the score 42-36, the Aces ran off nine straight points to open a comfortable advantage of 58-43 at the half. Jerry Sloan the most versatile player on the champs, had 17 rebounds in the first half. In the second session, Larry Humes who is averaging over 35 points a game, opened up to complete the victory for the Aces. Hill had 28 points and Edwards 30 with 18 rebounds. They were the only visitors in double figures as many floor errors hurt them.

As was to be shown throughout the trip, fouls were an important factor. O'Rourke fouled out of the game with 17 minutes left with 4 points and 3 rebounds. Mass had 25 fouls called on them to just 13 for the Aces.

EVANSVILLE which is small time in name only won all six of its games with major opponents including Iowa, Notre Dame, and Northwestern among its victims. There were over 12,000 fans at the game which certainly is not small time.

The next stop was Bradley where the Redmen played probably their poorest game of the swing. The game was fairly close at the half, 51-37 as the Redmen rallied to cut a huge Brave lead. So good was the Brave shooting in the second half that they made 16 of 26 shots and 18 of 19 from the foul line as they ran up a final margin of 101-73. A tight man-to-man defense cut off the Redmen fastbreak and hampered the club.

Hill once again was high man with 20 points while O'Rourke added 17. Bradley won the battle for the rebounds and that really told the story of the game. The margin here was 62-34. Ernie Thompson with 21 points and all NIT choice Ed Jackson with 20 paced the Braves to the win.

THE FINAL STOP on the tour was Washington of Missouri where the Redmen dropped a heartbreaker, 84-81. The game was close in the first half with the Redmen holding a 43-42 halftime lead. This evaporated early in the second session as the Bears opened a 61-51 lead in the first five minutes.

The Redmen then fought back as Clarence Hill scored 10 points and went ahead 72-69. Here Edwards fouled out of the game with better than 10 minutes left. With 6½ minutes left the score was 75-72, but the Redmen suddenly went cold and combined with a few floor errors could only score six more points.

After Washington took an 82-81 lead, the Redmen had several opportunities to win the game but couldn't make the key hoop. In addition Hill who had 28 points was shut out for the last eight minutes. Washington played seven men, putting six in double figures and the other scoring nine to overcome the efforts of Hill, O'Rourke who had 21, and Edwards with 14.

Saturday night the Redmen returned to the local action and beat Northeastern, 77-66 in a rough game. Tim Edwards got back on the track as he scored 25 points and pulled down 21 rebounds. He was ably assisted by Hill who had 19. Massachusetts spotted the Huskies a ten point lead then rallied to take the lead late in the half on two hoops by Edwards. The visitors were on top 31-26 at the half and proceeded to open an 18 point lead midway in the second half before a late press by Northeastern cut the margin to the final 11.

So the Redmen now have a 6-4 record and a wealth of valuable game experience with some big time teams. Friday and Saturday will be the last two games for the Redmen before the semester break as they face Vermont and AIC on consecutive nights. There will be contests for the undefeated freshmen before both games.

The leading scorer for the varsity is Clarence Hill with a 21.7 average while Edwards is 17.2 and O'Rourke has fallen off to a 15.5 mark. Edwards still leads the rebounders with a 16.2 average that keeps him right near the top ten in the country. Hill has taken over the lead in assists, while Edwards holds the best field goal percentage with .511 for the regulars. Hill has a .729 foul shot mark to show the way in that category.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

Combined with PSD's 6-2 upset of AEPi and their own 6-2 defeat of PMD, TEP took over sole leadership of the intramural ten pin bowling tournament. TEP now sports a 54-10 record against Pi's 50-14.

Lerner and Fortier led PSD in their upset as they totalled 493 and 505 respectively in three games. Fortier's 192 was tops in this match.

The TEP affair was a team effort with Johnson and Leiderman both posting 183 for the top score.

The high single game for the IFC Monday night was rolled by Paduchowski of TKE with a brilliant 209.

The dormitory East League continues to be a runaway with the Grayson #1 team still sporting an unbelievable 56-0 record. They are currently 20 full games ahead of second pace Greenough with a 32-16 record.

In the dorm West League the Wheeler Andycapps and the team from Mills are tied with 40-8 records. Not far behind is Middlesex with a 32-8 record. Middlesex is sporting the high single score on campus with Tordoff's 267.

In Basketball LCA continues to lead the IFC loop with a 5-0 record. Monday night they conquered PSD 73-28. Shea scored 21 points in that game to maintain his scoring lead with a 135 points in 5 games for a 27 point average.

In the dorm East league the maroons continued their winning ways with a 44-30 victory over the Barracudas. They remain undefeated with a 6-0 record.

The co-leaders of the North League both won Monday night to remain in a tie. The Birches defeated the Redwoods 48-36 and the Hawks beat the Rams 68-59. Both teams are now 5-1 and the league champion could be determined when these boys meet January 11.

In the National division of the Independent League, the Inn Keepers with a 4-0 record hold a slim ½ game lead over Vicky's 202's, Commuters and Dribblers with 3-0 records. The American division shows a tie between the PE Majors and the Eagles who both have 4-0 records.

UMass Skiers Looking Forward To Their "Best Season Yet"

The University of Massachusetts ski team began its fourth consecutive racing season under Coach William P. MacConnell after choosing 12 racers out of a field of 20 candidates.

The candidates conditioned for this season's contests by running five miles per day and participating in weekend work trips at a local ski area. The work trips consisted of cutting a ski trail to be used by the team while practicing slalom and giant slalom.

Returning from last year's team are co-captains Tom Clark and Dick Woods (65), Walt Swiatek (65), and Pete Plastridge (66). Adding the needed depth to the varsity team, which was somewhat lacking in the past years, are Bob Bibby (65), Don Piegza (66), John Hurd (67), and Hanno Fontaine (67).

In order to assure experienced racers for the future years, a "B" team was established consisting mostly of skiers ineligible to race for the University at this time. The "B" team members include Bill Fasano (67), Brian Hendricks (68), John Schmelzer

VISTA Offers Opportunity To Wage War On Poverty

by Ellen Levine

Do you have spirit, ability, determination, a desire to suffer and a fear of foreign countries? If so, then opportunity is knocking at your door. Enterprising Americans will not pass up the chance to earn $1.70 a day, seven days a week with all the un-paid overtime you can handle.

VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America), the domesticated version of the Peace Corp, newly created by President Johnson, enables volunteers to wage their own personal war on poverty. Volunteers will be trained to aid the depressed areas of the United States and the territories. The Office of Placement and Financial Aid Service has preliminary applications available for the program.

As the Peace Corps offers an opportunity for voluntary service abroad, VISTA offers an opportunity for voluntary service at home. VISTA will recruit, select, train, place and support these volunteers. The period of service is one year, including the training period.

Volunteers will work in rural and urban communities in a variety of projects in the fifty states, D.C. Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Trust Territories. By their presence and with their skills, VISTA volunteers will personify the spirit of the war against poverty.

Sartre Contribution Sparks Mass Review

The last poem of slain Civil Rights volunteer Andrew Goodman and the first American translation of an outstanding essay by Nobel Prize Winner Jean-Paul Sartre headline the latest and most exciting issue of The Massachusetts Review.

The winter issue of the Review quarterly journal of the arts, literature and public affairs published at UMass is now available.

ANDREW GOODMAN, one of three Civil Rights volunteers slain in Philadelphia, Mississippi last summer, was a student at Queens college in New York. After a class discussion in a writing course, Goodman wrote a poem, "A Corollary to A. E. Housman's To an Athlete Dying Young."

After Goodman's death, his professor, Mary Doyle Curran, found the poem in her papers. Struck by the literary merit of the work, Prof. Curran, an alumna of UMass, sent the poem to the Review after receiving permission from Goodman's parents.

Sartre's contribution, "Black Orpheus," appeared originally as the preface to an anthology of African and West Indian poets published in 1948. A key document in the history of the concept of "Negritude," the essay has appeared in English only in Presence Africaine, a magazine published in Paris in 1951, and now out of print.

JOHN MacCOMBIE of the UMass department of Romance Languages has provided a new translation for this first American publication. Sartre, winner of this year's Nobel Prize for Literature, gave his permission to use the translation in the Review.

A penetrating essay on "Problems of the Negro Writer," is the contribution of Saunders Redding of Hampton Institute. A leading authority on Negro history and literature, Redding was commissioned by the Review to undertake an up-to-date study of the problems and prospects of the Negro writer in America.

The distinguished American novelist Wright Morris discusses matters of substance and design in his novels in "Letters to a Young Critic." His most recent novels include "Cause for Wonder" and "The Territory Ahead."

OTHER INTERESTING WORKS in the winter issue include "Shadowy Waters," an unpublished play by William Butler Yeats; an article entitled "In Court with the Literary Critic: obscenity and censorship," by Thomas Robischon; "The Theatre of Edward Al-

Senate Studies Problems Of Leadership Incentives

How do you instill in students the desire to become campus leaders—not for prestige but for the benefit of the campus and their own personal satisfaction?

This problem faced the Incentives Committee and ad hoc student senate committee organized last winter to help solve the problem.

Last spring many meetings were called to discuss the possibility of establishing or creating some new incentive to encourage participation in extra-curricular activities. The committee viewed the obvious lack of student enthusiasm from many points of view. Several guests were featured at the meetings, each fostering his own ideas on the incentives problem and possible solutions.

DR. WYMAN, ADVISOR TO WMUA, did not favor monetary compensation. Dr. Wyman felt that paying money to students for volunteer service would defeat the purpose of these organizations.

Another solution was offered by Robert Morrissey, director of placement and financial aid services. He spoke of a pending grant-in-aid program for extra-curricular activities. The grants, to be given to juniors and seniors who have shown their merit in extra-curricular participation, would provide this needed "compensation for work done" without becoming a "pay for doing."

Another set of views was presented by Dr. Venman, assistant to the provost. Also opposed to the idea of salaries, Dr. Venman was in favor of giving academic course credits to those students who devote a great deal of their time and energy to some major activity.

During these two months, the committee reached several conclusions:

It agreed that an added incentive is needed to increase the desire to attain leadership positions.

The committee also felt that blame for the students' apathetic responses to fill these important positions adequately was due to the groups themselves, which, in many cases, have neither done enough scouting for potential successors nor trained adequately the ones who may eventually become successors.

WHILE OPPOSED TO A STRAIGHT WAGE salary, lest the incentive become the motive for performance, the committee was in favor of the grant-in-aid program, although funds for the program are not yet available.

The solution of awarding course credits merits further study because of the complications of setting up such a pro-

University Symphony Band To Present First Concert Of New Season On Sunday

The University of Massachusetts Symphony Band, conducted by John A. Jenkins, will open its concert season on Sunday, January 10, in the Student Union Ball Room at 4:00 p.m. when it presents its Winter Concert.

This concert, open to all without admission charge, will include many of the pieces which the Band will perform during its annual mid-winter tour throughout Massachusetts, Jan. 23-28.

AS FEATURE SOLOISTS THE BAND will present the nine members of the French horn section. The horn ensemble will play Christe, Lux Vera by Giovanni Palestrina and Notturno for Four Horns by Rimsky-Korsakov.

Included among the compositions on the Band's program are: American Overture for Band by Joseph W. Jenkins, Prelude and Fugue in D Minor by Johann Sebastian Bach, and the American Civil War Fantasy by Jerry H. Bilik, arranger of all the music performed by the Marching Band in its 1964 halftime performances.

BETWEEN SEMESTERS, the Symphony Band will tour Massachusetts as a public relations service. They will perform 14 concerts in Chicopee, Winchendon, Swampscott, Boxford, Quincy, Brockton, Framingham, Salem, and Attleboro.

The Symphony Band appeared on Massachusetts Day at the World's Fair in a command performance under the shadow of the Unisphere. They will play this Sunday at 4:00 p.m. in the SU Ballroom.

Two UMass Students Aid In Project To Reconstruct Mississippi Church

Over this past Christmas vacation, two UMass students, Dave Walsh and Louis Pellissier, were among a group of college students who went to Mississippi to rebuild the Antioch Baptist Church which was burned down last November following a civil rights rally.

The project was initiated by Professor Paul Schmidt, head of the philosophy department at Oberlin College. Professor Schmidt first conceived the project as a way students could express their concern over the racial unrest in the country today.

Others, such as David W. Jewel, associate professor of christian education at Oberlin, and Marcia Aranoff, a senior and sociology major at Oberlin helped to organize the project. Notices were sent to various colleges asking for support but response was poor and only a few pledged money or sent volunteers.

THE GROUP THAT DID GO TO MISSISSIPPI numbered approximately 35 when the work force was at its peak, but dropped to less than 30 as some students left early or did not arrive until after Christmas. All volunteers lived within the Negro community with different families.

When the project began, most of the labor was done by the students, but as the work progressed, an equal amount was being done by members of the community. Although the building was not completed by the students, all members of the project feel that the members and friends of the Antioch Baptist Church will carry on the work that was begun for them.

Relations with the Negro community were excellent. As the time alloted for Christmas vacation drew to a close, many of the students expressed a strong desire to return to Mississippi to revisit the families they had come to know so well.

Some of these families had faced threats and intimidations for housing the students, yet none allowed themselves to be coerced.

Mr. Lawrence Spight, who provided food and housing for Dave and Louis said, "Y'all come down here to help us—this is the least we can do for you."

Applications Ready For AFROTC Plan

The department of air science announced that those interested in the new 2-year AFROTC commissioning program should apply now for the 6-week Officers Basic Military Training Course (OBMT). The basic course is a pre-requisite for entering the 2-year program.

The OBMT combines academic, physical, and leadership training which is substituted for the two years of basic AFROTC and the 4-week Summer Training Unit.

The OBMT Courses will be held at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama and at Keesler Air Force Base in Mississippi on 13 June and 1 August 1965.

In addition, all applicants must take the Air Force Officers Qualification Test (AFOQT)), pass a physical examination and complete other forms necessary for pay, travel, etc.

Laos Advisor Speaks On Development

A former community development advisor in Laos will speak today. Sponsored by the UMass department of anthropology and sociology, the lecture is part of a series concerned with the role of American professional people in overseas positions.

Arthur Niehoff, who worked with the International Cooperation Administration in Laos, 1959-61, will speak in the Worcester room tonight at 8 p.m. His topic will be, "The Problem of Social Innovation in Technical Assistance Programs.'

Author of several books, including "East Indians in the West Indies," Niehoff was at the University of Wisconsin before going to Laos. He is currently in the language and area training division of the Human Resources Research Office, George Washington University.

APO Elects Officers For Spring '65

Kappa Omicron Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, National Service Fraternity, elected its officers for the spring semester on Monday, December 12, 1964.

Those elected to office were as follows: President, John A. Kucharski, '66 M.E.; First Vice President, John S. Pretanik, '66 Food Science; Second Vice President, Edmund G. Skea, '66 French; Third Vice President, Roger . Crouse, '66 Math; Treasurer, Laurence E. Reinhart, '67 M.E.; Recording Secretary, Charles D. Myshrall, '66 Math; Corresponding Secretary, Karl O. Polson, '66 Animal Science; Alumni Secretary, Joseph Mazurkiewicz, '66 Pre-Med; Sergeant at Arms, Robert C. Mitchell, '67 History; and Historian, William E. Sockey, '67 Forestry.

These officers are in the process of planning service activities for the campus community and the fraternity for the coming semester.

Two Professors Named To UMass-Boston

Two UMass professors have been named interim chairmen of two basic areas of study to be conducted at UMass-Boston when it opens its doors next September.

University Provost Oswald Tippo announced today that Dr. Arthur C. Gentile has been appointed Interim Chairman of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, and Dr. Paul A. Gagnon Interim Chairman, Humanities.

Dr. Gentile, a member of the University's botany department, has been on the UMass faculty since 1956. Dr. Gagnon has been with the history department since 1952.

Both appointments take effect immediately. The two interim chairmen will serve until September 1.

As chairmen of the two basic academic divisions at UMass-Boston, Dr. Gentile and Dr. Gagnon will aid in recruiting new faculty members and will advise on such matters as the curricula, library, and physical facilities for the new school.

The new chairmen have been involved in planning for the University's Boston facility, Dr. Gentile as chairman of the committee on faculty policies and Dr. Gagnon as a member of the committee studying new concepts.

Dr. Gentile, a 38-year-old native of New York City, is a graduate of the City College of New York. He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago.

A member of Sigma Xi, the UMass botanist has been a Public Health Service Research Feilow of the National Cancer Institute and a plant physiologist for the U.S. Forest Service.

Dr. Gentile teaches courses in plant physiology and plant metabolism at UMass. He is a member of the American Society of Plant Physiologists, the Scandinavian Society for Plant Physiology, and the Canadian Society of Plant Physiologists.

A native of Springfield and a UMass graduate, Dr. Gagnon spent 1951-52 as a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Paris. He received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard University.

Dr. Gagnon teaches French and European history and historiography at UMass. He is a member of the American Historical Association, the Society for French Historical Studies, the Societe d'histoire Moderne, and the Catholic Historical Association.

His first book, "France since 1789," was published in 1963 by Harper and Row. He is currently working on another book, tentatively titled "The Fourth French Republic."

New York Plays To Be Reviewed This Tuesday

Dr. Seymour Rudin of the U-Mass English department will present a program entitled "Review of Current New York Plays" Tuesday, Jan. 12 at 8:00 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

This program is sponsored by the University Women and is open to the public.

Dr. Rudin received his Ph.D. from Cornell University where his doctoral dissertation dealt with the American drama critic, George Jean Nathan. He will return to Cornell as visiting professor to teach Modern Drama and Shakespeare in the spring and summer of 1965.

Dr. Rudin has written many articles on drama, has recorded spoken literature, and also taken an active part in the theatre, playing leading roles in some fifteen college and summer productions over the past ten years.

Refreshments will be served following the program.

Pistol Packing Momma In So. Africa

JOHANNESBURG—A South Africa housewife demonstrates the newest type of brassiere gun hoster designed by a gun expert in her home city. The holster fits snugly at the side of the bra and the manufacturer claims the bustline remains unchanged. In a test, a woman was able to draw and fire a pistol in three seconds. The holster is selling mainly to women who have to return home late at night unescorted. —AP Wirefoto

Education Dept. Adds Courses

The School of Education at the University of Massachusetts will offer graduate courses this spring for teachers-in-service and others.

Classes will be in session from Feb. 3 through the week of June 5. Teachers-in-service may take one or two courses, but not more than two.

Courses to be offered include: principles of school guidance, administering elementary schools, case studies in educational administration, internship in educational administration, history of educational thought, clinical studies in guidance, current developments in theory and research, research design and analysis, adjustment counseling, and educational tests and measures.

Also, secondary school administration, guidance seminar, principles of school law, history of American education, remedial reading, developments in secondary school English, audio visual aids, school personnel administration, administering school guidance, school counseling, personnel services for higher education, social case work, adult reading problems, developing secondary social studies, evaluating elementary schools, practicum in guidance, community relations workshop, educational television workshop, developments in secondary school English, developing secondary school mathematics, and research methods and materials.

There will be a pre-registration for new graduate students on January 26. Regular registration will be in the ballroom of the Student Union January 29, from 8:30 a.m. until noon; 1 to 4:30 p.m.; and 6 to 7:30 p.m.

Complete information about courses, fees, prerequisites and special registration can be obtained from the School of Education.

Lost a Notebook? In a Panic?

The Student Union has acquired a large number of notebooks throughout the semester. Finals are coming! If you are missing a notebook, check at the Check Room on Tuesday, January 12, 10:00-12.00 noon.

Dr. Stern's Elegy To Be Recorded

An elegy for string orchestras by Dr. Robert L. Stern, teacher of music theory in the UMass music department, will be recorded for broadcast this month in Oslo, Norway.

The Norwegian Radio Symphony Orchestra will perform the work under Paul Freeman, young guest conductor from the U.S. who conducted the same elegy during a State Department sponsored tour in Denmark in 1961.

Dr. Stern's composition was commercially recorded by Howard Hanson and Eastman-Rochester Symphony. The elegy, "In Memoriam Abraham," was written in memory of Stern's maternal grandfather.

Composed in 1956 while Stern was a graduate student, the work was performed at the 26th annual Festival of American Music, and has since been played in California, Oklahoma, Texas, New Jersey, and Connecticut.

The More Deadly Female

"The female of the species is more deadly than the male," is a well-known expression. Until recently, however, few realized that she also gets angrier if caught in a misdeed, and more resentful than the male if put into prison for her actions.

These are the findings of research conducted by Dr. Barbara A. Kay, assistant professor of sociology at UMass, and Christine G. Schultz, UMass graduate student from Amherst.

The pair's study, "Attitudes toward Law and Moral Values: Men versus Women Prisoners of Ohio," was presented by Miss Schultz to the American Society of Criminology in Montreal.

The Ohio State University delinquency project financed the study by the two UMass researchers in which they polled 285 prisoners at the Ohio reformatory for women, and 335 male inmates at the state pententiary.

Both groups had been committed for felonies, and the object of the investigation was to find out how the attitudes of the two sexes differed toward law and legal institutions and authorities.

The prisoners, assured that their test answers would be anonymous and not shown to the prison administration, were asked such questions as, "Did you get a fair trial?" and "Is it all right for a hungry man to steal?"

The data collected was put on punch cards, sorted and tabulated. When the facts had been sifted, the women were found to have more negative attitudes toward the law.

They felt more strongly than their male counterparts that they had been given a "bad deal," had been "railroaded," or otherwise unfairly treated. Their stated moral codes and attitudes toward the law were not much different from the males', but they did express more negative attitudes toward all agents of authority.

The authors also suggest that women, because of their role in society, comply with norms much more than they actually subscribe to them, while men's actions tend to be closer to their beliefs.

Further, women offenders who finally go to prison are likely to be the worst of the female crop of criminals, since women stand far less chance than men of being reported, arrested, convicted and then committed. In other words, the researchers say, "when she is bad she is very, very bad."

The facts uncovered by the UMass sociologists also put to rest the popular idea that juvenile delinquency is the training ground for serious adult crime. Almost three-fourths of both sexes had never been arrested for anything before their eighteenth year.

The authors concluded that the difference in attitudes between men and women inmates reenforces the need for further study of our judicial, penal, and parole systems.

Poll Umie Quiz On Self

Who expects the most from a student, his professor or the student himself?

Although many probably suspect that the professor would be the most demanding, a recent study at the UMass showed that the student appears to be the one most critical of himself.

The study was conducted by Dr. Aaron Balasny and Dr. Bernard G. Berenson of the UMass counseling office.

The purpose of their investigation was to find the differences between the way male sophomores and juniors saw themselves, the way they felt they ought to be, and the way their professors felt they ought to be.

It was felt that the closer these three were, the higher a student's grades were likely to be—but this was not so.

FOR GIRLS ONLY

by Sherry Spear

Do you like to belong? Does living have a purpose? Are you planning a trip aboard? Solve all your problems by applying to the Casa Hispanoamerica. You can belong in a group with a purpose. So far, no natives have applied, so it's merely University girls living together on a corridor having a really wonderful time while improving their verbal proficiency. You don't have to be a Spanish major, however it helps if you are taking spanish.

Located on the fourth floor of Mary Lyon House, it's a close knit group; dinner together twice a week (with invited guests), a snack every Wednesday night (free unless you're hostess), a film series planned and lots 'n lots of excitement.

At the beginning of the spring semester there will be openings for interested students. Sorry, girls only. The requisite: a basic knowledge of Spanish.

When the present girls arrived, with dictionary in hand, they knew many interesting words but how do you say "My roommate is cramming for a final?" This invaluable knowledge and the opportunity to bowl over the Rudolph Valentino of your dreams when you visit abroad are yours for the asking (Spanish preferred).

For the entire University (and now the boys who've been sneakily reading along can join in) the corridor will be presenting a Spanish film series next semester. Tickets will be on sale soon.

Any further information can be obtained at the Spanish department in Bartlett Hall or by calling for "una muchacha del cuatro piso" in Mary Lyon House.

Snow For Our WoPE Skiers

by Anne Sherwin

The women's ski team is praying for a snowy winter. Under the direction of Dr. Van Deen the team will be skiing against the other schools in the New England Conference: Boston University, Keene State, Mount Holyoke, Northeastern, Pembroke, Radcliffe, Simmons, Tufts-Jackson, Wellesley, Wheaton and Bradford Junior.

The skiers, meeting Dec. 3 welcoming back three upperclass skiers and about fifteen freshmen. On Jan. 10 a clinic will be conducted at Mount Ascutney, where the team will be instructed in techniques of competitive slalom skiing.

The schedule has the teams skiing at Suicide Six Feb. 13, at Intervale Feb. 27, at Wildcat Feb. 28 and at Pleasant Mountain March 6. All are conference meets, each team participating in the slalom and the giant slalom runs. On Feb. 14 Mount Holyoke and the University will have a dual meet at Mt. Ascutney.

THE UMASS TEAM'S next meeting will be Thursday night and any girls who enjoy skiing, whether they have competed or not, will be welcomed.

The swimming team is also hoping for a wet winter—but inside rather than out. Miss Stacie Wilks, advisor to the team, is drafting a schedule with N. E. Conference schools. The team hopes to swim against Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Jackson, Springfield and Wellesley.

PRACTICE SESSIONS every Tuesday and Thursday nights and Sunday afternoon are putting the team into shape.

Events include the freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly, medley relay, individual medley and freestyle relay.

To anyone interested in joining any of the women's teams, all advisors will welcome candidates.

ED. BLOCK STUDENTS

All students who were approved for the elementary and secondary blocks during the spring semester go to Room 110, School of Education, at your earliest convenience. The School of Education needs to know your definite intention to do student teaching during the spring semester.

MID-SEMESTER BREAK

Old Year Finals; New Year Fun

By Howie Davis

The first semester of classes ends Wednesday at UMass. After a one day reading period to enable the students to finish their last minute work, a week and a half of final examinations commences Friday.

For some students the elimination of classes means an extra hour of sleep; for others it means time wisely spent in preparation for their exams. Whether a student has all his exams scheduled in a srace of two or three days or spread out over the entire examination period there is persistent grumbling in the ranks.

Once exams have ended a period of total relaxation begins. This is the only school year vacation that can be enjoyed without the pressure of papers or other important work waiting when classes resume. Trips are being planned for such romantic places as Miami or Bermuda. But first the students must cope with reality.

During the examination period the University newsraper, the Collegian, ceases publication. The University radio station, WMUA, will broadcast quiet classical music until 2 a.m. Men's and women's dormitories will observe study hours 24 hours a day. All athletic contests will cease until the beginning of the second semester. This is done to enable the student to achieve the best possible conditions for concentrated studying.

The local merchants will find an increase in the sales of coffee and light bulbs that will aid the student in keeping awake until he finishes his studying. For some, a pillow may not be seen until an exam is over.

Attitudes towards exams differ. Some want to get them over with and leave campus as quickly as possible. Others have become so disgusted and tired from the long, hard semester that they will do the minimum amount of studying and the maximum amount of praying. Then there is the total student who will study diligently, remain alert during the exam and also remain on campus after he has completed his exams.

For the student away from home a comforting letter or reassuring phone call is the best medicine. Sounds like the armed forces, doesn't it?

However, when the exams are completed and the students are sticking pins in voodoo dolls of their professors, the majority will return to do it all over again in the spring.

UMass Artist

"Three Plays by Ernest Barlach," a German artist best known for his sculpture and graphic art have been translated for the first time into English by Dr. Alex Page, associate professor of English at UMass. It was issued by the University of Minnesota Press.

Barlach, a leading figure in the Garman expressionist movement, has a well-established European reputation. His plays, widely produced abroad, are little known in this country country because of the inavallability of his plays in English translation.

Persecuted by the Nazis, who removed most of his major public art because it was "un-German," Barlach died in 1938 at the age of 68.

In the volume, Page provides an introduction in which he discusses the plays and the use of dramatic techniques relating them to Barlach's other artistics achievements and to the work of contemporary dramatists of the same movement.

Dr. Page, currently on leave from the University, taught at Rutgers University before coming to UMass in 1956. He received his Master's and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University.

Faculty Composer

The University of Massachusetts Press today issued its fourth book, a volume by Elliot Schwartz, former member of the UMass music faculty.

"The Symphonies of Ralph Vaughan Williams," details the much neglected nine symphonics works of the world-famous English composer who died in 1953 at the age of 86.

Although written in the contemporary idiom, Williams' symphonies are inspired and usually romantic, causing the N. Y. Times to comment, "His was a style and an idiom forged from belief, and not capable of imitation..."

Schwartz's work traces the historical background from which the symphonies emerged and presents an intensive analysis of each. Aimed primarily at the music student and teacher, the book contains 240 musical examples from Williams' scores and tables of measure references that illustrate specific areas of musical style.

Now teaching at Bowdoin College, Schwartz is a graduate of Columbia University, where he received his E.D. degree. His own compositions have been performed by orchestras and chamber ensembles throughout the United States.

Publishes Birds

"Twelve Birds," a book of poems by Herbert A. Kenney, with illustrations by Jack Coughlin, will be published this week by the University of Massachusetts Press, director Leone Barron announced.

The Kenny - Coughlin work is the third to be published by the University of Massachusetts Press. The volume comprises 12 poems about birds of New England accompanied by 12 drawings.

Poet Kenny is arts editor and book editor for the Boston Globe. Artist Coughlin is an assistant professor of art at UMass. He teaches drawing and printmaking.

A graduate of Boston College in 1934, Kenny became a reporter for the now-defunct Boston Post and worked his way to night city editor in 1956.

In 1956 Kenny was the first to receive the Robert Frost Fellowship in Poetry at the Middlebury College Breadloaf Writers' Conference. In the same year he joined the editorial staff of the Boston Globe.

This is Kenny's third book. A fourth, entitled "Suburban Man," is being prepared for next year. The author has contributed to many magazines, including The Saturday Review.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

SENATE RESPONSIBILITY

The Student Senate failed to hold its regular Wednesday night meeting. On the agenda were several bills, one calling for an adjustment in the number of Senators-At-Large from three per class to one per class, another calling for a Senator from the two-year Stockbridge School of Agriculture. Senate President Michael cancelled the meeting because the number of Senators requesting absences indicated an apparent lack of quorum.

It appears that the Student Senate has been derelict in its duty. Some Senators have failed in their responsibility to their constituents. A Student Senator is in the same position as a Collegian editor, S.U.G. Board member, or other student leader. He has to realize, at the time he assumes his position, that he is taking upon himself a duty which is going to interfere with his academic and extra-curricular life because it cannot be half-done at will.

Whether the student body realizes it or not, the Student Senate has a tremendous influence upon its life. The Senate can act upon everything from the Student Activities Tax Fund to the price of pastries in dormitory vending machines. A Student Senator with a casual attitude towards his duties should not be there. Student Senators must see there is more to being a student leader than the status of the title.

Leadership means assuming the attendant responsibilities. The Student Senate needs a sense of responsibility before it can lead the campus.

Fate of Greeks

With the increased enrollment of students every year at the University of Massachusetts, the survival of the Greek system is questionable. Membership in the 26 houses on campus accounts for only a small percentage of students attending the school. It is expected that by 1970 the University will have an enrollment of 20,000.

With this ever increasing number of students, the Greeks are becoming more and more in the minority.

One of two things will happen: either the Greek system will have to meet this "student boom" and maintain its present position on campus, or possibly be content to accept a relatively less significant role.

Examples of what has happened could be cited at the University of Connecticut and Michigan State. At UConn the enrollment is approximately 18,000, including 14,000 at the main campus as well as those at branch extensions. Within four years, the Greek system there is expected to be practically non-existent. As it is now, the campus is more centralized for independent activity rather than Greek centered.

Conversely, Michigan State's increased enrollment produced a vast expansion in the Greek system.

One can see that the fate of the Greek system at the University of Massachusetts rests upon what the Greeks themselves decide to do collectively. Possibly in five years there will be no fraternities and sororities, or, perhaps, the Greek system will play an even greater role on campus than it presently does.

FACULTY EDITORIALS WELCOME

Herman, The Nonconformist

Herman gazed sadly out of his dormitory window. This was only his second semester at the University yet he was already sick of school work. Everything around Herman that smacked of the conventional seemed either to annoy or depress him. He winced as he realized that if things continued in this sad fashion he would have to drop out of school.

Suddenly Herman's face brightened and his lips spread in a wide grin. He had hit upon the solution to his problem. From this day on he would disregard the norms of society, especially those of the University, and become an individualist, a nonconformist. He would no longer wear those common button-down shirts, nor the fashionable sneakers. Also, the sport jacket and the tie would have to go.

Herman beamed with joy as he began to contemplate a new wardrobe, one which would separate him from the herd (the term he used for the general student body) and stress his individuality. First he would buy himself a bright red turtle neck sweater over which he would wear a jet black shirt. Next would come black socks and tall leather boots, preferably black. A dark, tattered, Navy coat plus black baggy trousers would round off the outfit nicely.

In accordance with his new style of dress Herman was determined to let his hair grow long, and to sport a nice bristly beard. If his bank account would allow it, he also would buy a large motorcycle on which to speed around campus. Why should he walk?

Within a few days Herman was wearing his new wardrobe of "distinction" and riding on a Honda. The future now looked promising to him. The drabness and monotony of campus life seemed to have disappeared.

A year passed. Herman was again sitting in his dormitory room and sadly gazing out the window. Once more he was depressed and worried about dropping out of the University. He languidly plucked his beard as he recalled how it all happened.

For a few months the new wardrobe and the motorcycle had proved to be quite a lot of fun. However, the novelty soon began to wear off. Moreover, Herman noticed that his wardrobe was not unique after all. There were also at least two dozen motorcycles on campus. What angered Herman the most was the fact that when he was among students wearing clothes similar to his, there was nothing which distinguished him from them. And yet, individuality and distinction were the things Herman craved above everything else.

As Herman considered this unhappy turn of events, he struggled in his mind for a solution to his problem. The only answer that kept on popping up was the idea of procuring yet another set of clothes. Perhaps, this time he would find something really unique and individualistic, something which nobody wore on campus, say like a cowboy outfit. Well, it was worth a try. Tomorrow Herman would go into town and see what could be found in the way of Wesern type clothing.

What Herman in his reverie failed to realize is that a gaudy external appearance is not an indication of individuality or distinction. Rather it is strong evidence of immaturity, and merely amounts to fanfare and ostentation. The true criterion for individuality and distinction depends on a person's ability to utilize his physical or mental powers for the purpose of excelling in any given field of human endeavor.

ASSISTANCE OR HINDRANCE

(Editor's Note: The following article is by Jonathan Fife, former President of the Student Senate. The Collegian will be printing these articles to bring to the students the ideas, experiences, and viewpoints that Fife has gained through participation in major student activities.)

As the semester draws to a close I begin to think back over the many Administrative offices that I have come in contact with. Of all these offices, the ones that effect the students the most are the offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women. Here lies the nerve center that controls our social environment during our short stay at the University.

Rarely in a person's life do so many things depend on so few things than they do during college years. The type of roommate you get may change your entire grades; the type of dorm you are in may change your whole way of life; the means of relaxation provided by the University, or the lack thereof, may mean the difference between sane, normal action and nervous exhaustion. All these things, and many more, are influenced by the actions taken by the Deans' Offices.

The question that I raise is this — are the offices of Dean of Men and Dean of Women doing their part in making this change compatible with good educational atmosphere?

Although the Dean's Offices are separated into dealing with the individual problems of men and women and although the Dean of Women's Office assumes a more parental role towards the women, they are essentially performing the same functions. And what are these functions?

The Dean's Offices are responsible for all phases of out-of-class matters with which the students are concerned. This means the extra curricular activities of R.S.O., to the conditions of the dorms. The Deans' offices' are open to aid all the students with their problems—they welcome students to come to them and yet many students do not. But why is this the case? The answer is simple. Many students feel that either they will not be listened to or they will be treated as children. This is unfortunate for they desire help and guidance but they are not children; they are young adults who know what they want but do not know how to go about getting it. If this attitude is prominent on the campus something is wrong. The University has grown past the stage where every student personally knows the Dean's office and therefore it is just that more important to have a place where the students may go when they need help—where they can go and feel comfortable in going there.

One of the saddest comments I have heard since I have been here was when the Chairman of House Chairmen stated that the dorms were not a living place but only a place to sleep. I am sure that this attitude is not a reflection from the Dean's Office but it is indicative of an attitude that exists.

This Sunday night at 7:00 p.m., I hope that we can further explore the role of the Deans' Offices and their relation with the students. I have proposed some questions that remain unanswered, I have proposed some thoughts that remain unfinished. Let us see if we can furnish the answers then.

Letters To The Editor

A Job Well Done

To the Editor:

At this time a word of thanks should be given to a student for the fine work he did in helping to coordinate one of the biggest weekends of the University of Massachusetts—the Tangerine Bowl. This student is George Michael, President of the Student Senate.

From the time the University accepted the Bowl Bid until the weekend itself, President Michael worked constantly with the administration in coordinating the weekend and the various projects and activities leading up to it. Among these events were: the orange booster buttons, miniature tangerine trees, Highlights Night, and the trip for the band and cheerleaders to the Tangerine Bowl.

For doing a commendable job in making the Tangerine Bowl weekend a memorable one for the University, I would like to thank President Michael for the time and effort he devoted to this project.

Faculty Symposium

Editor's Note:

The Collegian hopes that this column will encourage faculty and administration to express their opinions, and thereby create an atmosphere conducive to creative and critical thinking. If enough interest is shown, the editors will feature a weekly page for faculty opinion.

This issue we present a highly stimulating article by Dr. Berenson of the Guidance Office.

The "Screeners" and "Techniquers"

It seems to me that students appear to be overly concerned about the increasing size of the University and how this kind of rapid change will influence their interactions with professors. The size of a community does not by itself determine the quality of human relationships. I do, however, feel that our rapid growth may serve as a useful stimulant. Perhaps now, more than ever, theirs is a need to explore the entire area of interpersonal learning. This article will treat, briefly, one aspect and, perhaps, raise a few questions.

The recent technical literature points out that there are a large number of important encounters in life which have either a constructive or deteriorative effect upon the individual's functioning. Failures in college, and some mental health problems, are, to a significant degree, the result of profoundly "for worse" relationships. Those who go on to become engaged in a lifelong learning process, who are able to facilitate the lives of others, are likely to have experienced "for better" human relationships.

Let me treat one kind of "for worse" relationship: an encounter with a "Screener". The "Screener" is at first very difficult to identify and, for that matter, once identified, difficult to fight. He assumes the posture of the protector of the community and academic standards and often appears to possess a monopoly on the preservation of these worthwhile values. It, however, becomes increasingly more simple to identify the "Screener", because he typically complains that he finds larger and larger numbers of students who are not "shaping up". One wonders why others do not seem to have this problem. Being overburdened with a large number of students who do not "shape-up" is symptomatic of a set of assumptions which often create "for worse" relationships. I would like to explore one of these assumptions.

Assumption: A university is made up of two separate populations: "The More Knowing" (Professors, Administrators, Counselors, and Therapists) and "The Less Knowing" (students, advisees, counselees, and patients). It is usually felt that any interaction between a member of one of these groups with a member of the other can result in positive gain or no gain at all for "The Less Knowing". Yet there is ample evidence that some significant number of these encounters are deteriorative.

In an effort to broaden his sphere of influence so that there is no threat, the "Screener" perceives learning as a downward flow of knowledge, from "The More Knowing" to "The Less Knowing". This definition of the learning process closes "The More Knowing" to new and significant encounters with students and even retards learning, for it denies the value of a truly open encounter between two persons.

This perception of learning is usually coupled with the desire to shape students or guide them. Often in this kind of encounter, the successful student is found to be most like the "Screener", and he owes his success to providing support for how the "Screener" lives his life. The fact is, however, that the great majority of professors and administrators are not "Screeners" but are people who want most of all to engage the student in a lifelong learning and re-learning process.

Your best teachers likely provided you with a deep and significant level of regard, understanding, and challenge. But, most important, they served as a model of an open human being, willing to take, along with you, the risks involved in new learning. In addition, this teacher allowed you to discover that you can make contributions—one of the most significant steps toward leading an open, courageous life.

My last point here involves the danger of turning to techniques in order to cope with a fast-growing university. There are a number of dangers in becoming a "Techniquer": 1) students and Faculty fast become objects to manipulate, and no real communication takes place; 2) there is the implication that the "Techniquer" (whether student nor faculty) knows what is best for others and knows all that there is to know. Mastery of techniques offer only comfort and temporary confidence.

The professor and student who share with one another their questions, doubts, and congruence as people are more apt to engage in a partnership in search for new and creative insights. In other words, their kind of student-professor relationship maximizes the likelihood of significant learning really taking place.

Freshmen Support Boycott

It pleases us very much that the students and their representatives are working toward lower prices for food in Dorms.

We fully support this action and hope that this will lead toward the possibility of giving the funds to the Dorms instead of the Athletic Department as it was until 1958.

The men of Brett House, especially the freshmen, hope that the action will continue to draw the full support of the whole school and that it will show that the University students will accept and support the actions of the Student Senate.

UMass Precisionettes Are Unique Drill Team

The acclaimed UMass Precisionettes performing before an away crowd at half-time during the football season.

by Charlotte Langone

The only girls' collegiate drill team in the East is right here at UMass—their name—the Precisionettes.

If you've attended a football game, a parade or a military review on campus, you're almost certain to have seen them. Along with this busy schedule they have entertained during half-time at some away football games and find the time to practice one-two hours every day during the fall season.

In previous years they performed with the band but this year they are on their own under guidance of the Army ROTC. Still another change is their new uniforms which they designed.

A group of 30 girls, they are recruiting new members for next year. To be eligible for the Precisionettes, a girl must be an unmarried undergraduate between 5'4"-5'7". No experience is needed because the girls who are selected will first be trained in precision marching. So far, 70 girls have signed up while only 15 will be selected.

The Precisionettes are an RSO organization. Capt. Nielson is the advisor and Paul Anderson drill master. The leader of the group is Anita (Ace) Handalian.

Graduates Featured On TV Program

Seven UMass graduate students will be featured Saturday, Jan. 9, on "R.F.D. 3," a WTIC-TV (Channel 3) program at 12:30 p.m.

With Frank Atwood as host, the students, studying in the department of landscape architecture, will discuss the science and art of planning man's natural environment.

They will also demonstrate the significance of landscape architecture in providing the background and surroundings for living, working and playing.

Campus Radio Plans New Special Programming

New Year's Greetings will be the special feature of this week's Sounds of Sunday on WMUA. For your Sunday morning pleasure, host Bill Bastable will feature many RCA Victor recording stars: Ann-Margret, Al Hirt, Peter Nero, Skeeter Davis and special guest star Lorne Greene.

Bill will also play many of the fine new sounds of '65. Featured guest artist on this portion of the show will be Johnny Mathis.

As a service to English 25 students, WMUA will broadcast the following lectures before finals:

Jan. 11, 7:00 p.m., Euripides
Jan. 11, 7:30 p.m., Plato #1
Jan. 12, 7:30 p.m., Plato #2
Jan. 13, 7:00 p.m., Dante

To provide a compatible study atmosphere during final exams, WMUA will begin special programming on Jan. 13 at 5 p.m.

This semester's format will be different from that of previous years. Due to the final exam schedules of the station members, WMUA will not broadcast 24 hours per day. Instead, programming will consist of uninterrupted classical music from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 5 p.m. to 2 a.m., uninterrupted down-tempo instrumental music, a pleasant background for studying.

Programming will end at 2 a.m., Jan. 23, the last day of exams.

U. of Mass. Is Awarded Health Grant

A $13,980 public health service grant to continue research on the heat breakdown of edible fats has been awarded to the University.

The research is being conducted by Dr. Irving S. Fagerson, professor of food science and technology. His previous studies on the role of fat in the diet have indicated its importance in relation to disease. His research is seeking basic information on the breakdown of fats during the heating and preparation of fat-containing foods.

The grant, which will total $103,504 by the end of its seven-year period, is supporting research conducted as part of agricultural experiment station activities.

Dr. Fagerson's research involves radioactive tracer techniques and gas chromatography, as well as ultra-violet and infrared spectrophotometry.

Known internationally for his work in the field of gas chromatography—a method of determining off-flavors and spoilage of food through analysis of food vapors — Fagerson has done allied research with the U. S. department of agriculture and the U. S. army quartermaster research and development center in Natick.

Don't forget University Theatre tryouts tonight from 7:30 to 10:30 in Bartlett 125. Any University student is welcome; previous theatre experience is not required. Prof. Mahnken is directing Julius Caesar which opens March 4.

School Of Liberal Arts Is Popular With Freshmen

by John G. Cushing

More students of the Class of '68 have chosen to major in the College of Arts and Sciences at UMass than in all other schools combined.

The total figures show that the College of Arts and Sciences have 1,571 enrolled while all the others only have 862.

The favorite major is mathematics (264). The next four most popular are in order: English (198), history (139), psychology (130) and pre-med (128).

At the other extreme, there is only one major in Italian. The next six smallest majors in order are: astronomy (3), geology (6), music (6), philosophy (7), microbiology (8) and botany (8).

An interesting observation is that in such subjects as English and psychology, women outnumber men by nearly four to one. Women psychology majors (101), men (29).

This also can work in reverse as the men majoring in chemistry and pre-med. outnumber the women by as much as four to one: men majoring in pre-med. (100), women (28).

Finally it can be also be observed that the total women enrollment is greater than that of the men. There are 869 women as compared to only 702 men enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Looking at the figures covering all other schools, it can be seen that the largest school is engineering (286), while the smallest is public health with only 32 majors. Totalling the enrollment figures in all these schools, the men outnumber the women 479 to 383. Overall though, there are 1252 women and only 1181 men in the Class of '68 at UMass.

UMass Students Support Senate Boycott Of Machines

Verses From An Irate Pen

Those soggy pastries cost so much,
Our pocket change is growing shy.
The Athletic department's got the touch,
And there's an obvious reason why.

Atrico is up at bat,
So why should students want to pitch?
The football slush fund's growing fat,
5 cent brownies are quite a switch.

Try to help, we'll save the day,
Just try those donuts tasty.
Back your Senate all the way,
And push that ten cent pastry.

R. C. G.

Many students throughout campus have stopped buying the fifteen cent Danish pastries, cakes and brownies of the pastry machines. The question is still whether the majority of the student body will support the Student Senate's action to effect a boycott of these machines.

The Senate has contacted members of the athletic department, who control the vending machines with the Automatique Company of Northampton to discover if there are, as yet, any decided financial repercussions. It appears, however, that it is still too early for these two concerns to evaluate their returns of the past four days that the boycott has been in force.

THE SENATE TOOK ITS ACTION AFTER it was learned that these price increases were unwarranted. Senator Betty Chambers (Van Meter So.), in connection with this price increase stated, "that since the athletic department receives a portion of the profits from these machines, and since they at the same time receive student tax money, the department should be working to support this attempt to lower the prices."

"However," she continued, "their past actions have not indicated they are willing to pressure Automatique to do this. It is hard to understand that the athletic department would refuse to pressure this company to lower its prices, since in the past few years they have had a substantial surplus in their budget, which could absorb this so-called 'needed' price increase easily."

3rd Annual Art Exhibit Opens Sun.

The third annual exhibition of the University of Massachusetts art acquisition program will open this Sunday, Jan. 10, from 3 to 5 p.m. in the foyer of Bartlett Hall.

The program's director, Walter Kamys of the UMass art department, said the exhibition will continue through Jan. 29.

This year's show, Kamys said, will differ greatly from those of the past two years, which concentrated on drawings by American artists.

Paintings make up most of the present exhibition, which will show a strong European orientation. Artists whose works will be shown include Jaap Wagemaker, Joan Josep Tharrats, Pablo Picasso, Bent Sorensen and Joan Vila Casas.

The 1965 exhibition will also contain a pair of large sculptural expressions, Kamys said. These are David von Schlegell's "Flight Plan" and Richard Fishman's "No, not Icarus," both purchased with funds donated by last year's senior class at UMass.

UMass Department Head Authors Government Book

A new book treating the consolidation of rural and urban areas, written by the chairman of the University government department and a Louisiana State University professor, has been published by the Louisiana State University Press.

"Rural-Urban Consolidation: The Merger of Governments in the Baton Rouge Area," by William C. Havard of UMass and Floyd L. Corty of LSU deals with the 1949 merger of governments of the city of Baton Rouge and East Baton Rouge Parish (county).

They evaluate the success of the consolidated government in easing the transformation of rural areas into urban ones by long-range planning and by effecting the participation of residents in decisions that determined the nature of their future community.

Based on their analysis of the city-county government and its record, the authors suggest guidelines for local governments experiencing rapid growth.

"Rural-Urban Consolidation," says Prof. Daniel R. Grant of Vanderbilt University, "is a long-overdue account of a highly significant governmental experiment and its aftermath."

Professor Havard has been head of the UMass government department since September 1964. He comes from a similar assignment at Louisiana State university. He is co-author of "Lousiana Elections of 1960," and "The Politics of Mis-Representation: Rural-Urban Conflict in the Florida Legislature."

Co-author Corty is associate professor of agricultural economics and agribusiness at Louisiana State University.

Siegfert Dafner, a professional fire-eater from Manheim, Germany, was sentenced to two months in prison in Paris after (1) he started his fire-eating act in front of a newspaper stand; (2) the stand operator objected, shouting "get the — out of here. . . . Convocation Will Feature Plant Talk

The College of Agriculture convocation, to be held in Bowker auditorium Feb. 11 at 11:15 a.m. to 12:05 p.m., will feature Dr. James G. Horsfall, director of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station in New Haven. His talk will be entitled "How Crops Grow."

Dr. Horsfall's accomplishments in plant pathology are lauded on all continents. He has pioneered in the use of chemotherapy in treating plant disease, helped to develop new fungicides. He is an authority on root rot diseases, abnormal plant physiology, vascular diseases of plants, nutrition in plant diseases, and the dangers of radioactive fallout to human and plant life.

In addition to his research at the experiment station, he lectures in biology and microbiology at Yale. He is a member of the advisory committee on biology for the U. S. Atomic Energy commission, and a consultant to the president's science advisory committee, as well as a member of several professional societies. Last month he delivered a series of lectures in Argentina.

greatly between what he thought he was and what he thought he should be was no more likely to perform poorly in college than the student who came close to thinking he was what he ought to be.

Another part of the study involved members of the UMass student-personnel staff. Because of the staff members' interest in student problems, the researchers expected a more tolerant attitude toward students than professors or students themselves. The study showed otherwise.

Recommendations by Balasny may result in probing the vital area of interaction of personnel in a college environment.

More UMass Students Seeking Financial Aid

by Carolyn Smith

The number of students applying for financial aid at the University of Massachusetts is increasing significantly every year.

The University offers scholarships and national defense loans.

For the school year 1964-65 UMass financial aid services estimates that 45 percent of the students need financial aid of some kind. Of this figure, only 17 percent receive aid through the University, the other 28 per cent getting assistance from other sources.

Last year approximately 3,000 high school seniors, applicants for admission at the University sought financial aid. Of this number, nearly 300 received aid. It is expected that there will be a substantial increase for the year 1965-66.

Approximately $800,000 is available to students for 1964-65. This is equally divided in scholarships and national defense loans.

To receive loans a student must show a financial need and meet the "required academic standards." On the other hand, to receive a scholarship a student must have a 2.5 cumulative average or a 2.0 or better cum with a 3.0 quality point average for the semester previous to application. This new stipulation goes into effect next fall.

The amount of financial aid available is growing every year.

New Research Presented By Geologist

A University of Massachusetts geologist, Dr. Oswald C. Farquhar, presented a paper at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Montreal last week.

Based on research conducted by Dr. Farquhar while on leave last year from the UMass geology department, the paper deals with stages in island linking of northernmost New Zealand and the Magdalen Islands of Quebec.

Dr. Farquhar, a native of Great Britain, received his master's degree from Oxford university and the Ph.D. from the University of Aberdeen in Scotland in 1951. An Amherst resident, he is the author of a number of scientific articles and a member of many professional organizations.

Roister Doisters, the student drama organization, has chosen the casts for its "Evening of One-Act Plays", directed by Mrs. George Forest of the Speech Department. The students will renearse over intersession and the curtain goes up in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15 on Feb. 5 and 6.

David Axelrod, Paula Norton, Charles Interland, Betty Corea, Jane Abbiati and Roland Laramee will appear in Eugene Ionesco's "Theatre of the Absurd" masterpiece, The Bald Soprano.

Bertolt Brecht's Private Life of the Master Race is a series of short vignettes about life in Nazi Germany. In the two scenes chosen by Roister Doisters, Sheila Ferrini has the title role in "The Jewish Wife" and Michael Haley and Charlotte Werlin will star in "The Informer".

In The Forced Marriage, Mollere's rollicking satire of an old man seeking a young wife, Tom Kerrigan plays the foolish lecher, Sganarelle. Aiding and abetting, foiling or frustrating him are Ken Glenn, Richard Guerra, Dave Blaisdell, John Childs, Carol Willard, Charles Interland, Frank Foley, Marcia Elasowich and Carolyn Miller.

Tickets for the production, at $1.00 apiece, will be on sale at the S.U. Box office from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., Jan. 11 to 16.

Girls in Men's Rooms? Nay, Quoth Maine Dean

By Al Wescott

The wild and wooly world of men's dormitories may soon echo with the purrs and coos of coeds, and the halls, previously trod only by members of the hardy sex, may ring with the clatter of high-heeled shoes. That is, if the signers of a petition currently circulating among students have their way.

At a recent meeting of the Cumberland Dorm Council, members were discussing the problem (?) of having women's dorms. Bob Laskoff, a council member, tossed a recommendation to the floor: why not place a few restrictions on the visiting privileges, and throw open the doors to the girls? Not, certainly, just the main doors, but ALL the doors.

Council members then discussed their views with Dean of Men John Stewart and Assistant Dean Barry Millet. They, however, were somewhat less than enthusiastic about the plan. Dean Stewart, in a letter interview, declined to comment until he had seen a copy of the petition which underlines the advocate objectives.

The petition, which has been signed by an estimated two to three hundred students, delineates the following restrictions:

1) Rooms in men's dormitories would be open to women only on Sunday afternoon.

2) Any male student wishing to have a coed visit his room on Sunday must submit a notice to the head counselor's office before Friday noon.

3) The coed's visit must be approved by the male roommate.

4) The room must be inspected by a counselor.

5) There must be a counselor on duty in the section when women are in the dorm.

6) The doors to rooms must be open while there are women in the section.

The plan is modeled after a similar one used at Boston University last year. Laskoff noted in an interview that although the plan might not succeed this year, it might be deemed feasible in years to come.

While the Dean of Men's office has been reserved in its opinion, Dean of Women Mary Zink was more adamant:

"They have plenty of space in the lounges. Most schools that I know of that have tried it have lived to regret it, and many have reversed their decisions. Our dormitories are not suited to this!"

Dining Commons Displays New Look Of The Future

by Steve Gordon

The new look in the South Dining Commons is apparent in program as well as facilities, according to John F. Martin, Dining Commons manager.

Martin, in a Collegian interview, said that "the food service function must supplement the overall University program of academic and extra-curricular activities, and will seek to cooperate with these activities."

Martin has initiated faculty guest programs, catering services and a special events policy in the new $1.4 million South Dining Commons.

Special events planned for the future include dinner-dances, weekend buffet suppers and dinners featuring foods native to other cultures.

The fully air - conditioned South Dining Commons seats 1,200 people at various size tables. The Commons can serve 10 to 12 students per minute, and the line wait should never be longer than 12 minutes.

The new Commons features a system of ramps to bring the students in, and a fully furnished lounge below the dining area.

One of the new programs instituted at the Commons is the creation of a staff of Dining hall counselors. These counselors eat each evening meal at the Commons, and meet with the Dining Commons administration once each month to relay student suggestions and food preferences.

Martin also said that Bill Bagnall Associates, a Boston designing firm, had been hired as consultants for the renovation of the North Dining Commons. This renovation is to include new curtains, china, wall decorations and planters.

Agent 007 Denounced

LONDON—(AP)—The war cry has gone out—save our youth from James Bond's amorality.

The Salvation Army newspaper denounces the late Ian Fleming's fictional hero as a menace to young people, to charity drives and to highway safety campaigns.

Secret Agent 007, said the recent issue of the War Cry, is an intolerate mixture of violence, illicit sex, gambling and gluttony.

"He kills people all over the place," said Lt. Col. Bernard Watson in a front-page article: "This is never murder. Bond does it by license.

"Bond girls are invariably unchaste. He does not seduce married women simply because in the Bond circle they do not need seducing.

Bond's taste for fast cars "is likely to threaten the success of road safety campaigns," Col. Watson said. He continued:—

"It is certainly easier to interest people in Bond's quite incredible exploits than to interest them in the plight of those homeless who need the Salvation Army's care.

"During 1965, the year of the army's 3 million pounds ($8.4 million) centenary appeal, the turnover of the James Bond industry is expected to exceed 5 million pounds ($14 million) in Britain alone."

The colonel noted that London has a James Bond Association where young people meet to drink vodkatinis (vodka martinis) in emulation of their hero.

Watson said his complaint against the Bond cult was aimed not so much at immortality as at "amorality—a total absence of morals."

Whoosh! What you almost saw above was the wooliest number in years: Oldsmobile's 4-4-2. Sporting (and standard) equipment includes a 400-cu.-in. 345-hp V-8 mill backed with 4-barrel carb and acoustically tuned, chambered twin pipes. And "sticky" red-line tires. And front and rear stabilizers, heavy-duty frame, springs and shocks that make lean and sway mere memories. Three transmission availabilities, too, including 3-speed synchromesh, 4-on-the-floor and Jetaway automatic. Better hurry over to your Olds Dealer's. The 4-4-2 is a restless beast! College Regulations

Mount Holyoke Reviews Others' Rules

"Research and brainstorming," commented Barb Smiley, head of this year's Rules Committee, "was the work done by last year's group." What the research involved was a thorough investigation of the organization of rule books, the information included, the regulations and comparisons of Mount Holyoke's rules with the rules of similar colleges such as Wellesley, Smith, Connecticut College, Wheaton, Bryn Mawr, Radcliffe and Vassar. The brainstorming involved consideration of ideas gleaned from these studies as applicable to Mount Holyoke.

The regulations at these colleges are very similar to those at Mount Holyoke. All operate under comparable academic and social honor systems. The process for registration for evenings and for overnights is analagous to ours.

One of the main differences in rules is that of graduated privileges. For example, at Wheaton, the hours are 1:00 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays for freshmen, sophomores and juniors and 2:00 a.m. for seniors. Radcliffe's freshmen may have 1:00 o'clocks thirty times first semester; sophomores need permission from the senior resident to be out after 1:00 or take an overnight; juniors and seniors are unrestricted. At Vassar, the hours are 1:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights; each semester two 2:30 a.m. sign-outs are allowed to freshmen, five to sophomores and an unlimited number to juniors and seniors. Wellesley's underclassmen must be in by 1:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday; seniors are allowed unlimited 2:00 a.m. permissions on Saturday nights. At Bryn Mawr, too, the hours are more permissive, girls must be back in the dorm by 2:00 a.m. As can be seen, in addition to graduating privileges, most of these schools have a 1:00 limitation on Friday as well as Saturday nights.

Another important difference between Mount Holyoke and these schools is the existence of parietal hours, sometimes in conjunction with graduating privileges. Seniors at Conn. College, for instance, may entertain men in their rooms on Sundays from 2-5:00 p.m. The men must be signed in and introduced to the House President and to the faculty resident; the door of the room must be left open.

Wheaton, Bryn Mawr and Radcliffe allow all students to have male guests in their rooms. On Sundays from 2-5:00 p.m. and on the first and last days of the college year, girls at Wheaton may have male guests in their rooms. At Bryn Mawr, men may be in girls' rooms until 6:30 p.m.; fathers may remain until 10:30 p.m. Radcliffe leaves the decision up to the students in each dorm; limited to twenty - five hours per week of parietal hours between noon and 10:00 p.m., the girls decide when and how often males will be allowed in their rooms.

In comparison to Mount Holyoke, rules concerning cars on campus are more lenient at some schools, more severe at others. Wheaton graduates have car privileges; a sophomore may have a car on campus for thirty days, a junior for ninety days and a senior for an unlimited period. There is no grade requirement. Students at Smith are not allowed to have cars on campus except, with permission, for special purposes. At Vassar, only seniors are allowed cars, but all sciors may have them.

It seems, in comparing our regulations with those of the above schools, that the rules are very comparable. As for as liberalism of rules is concerned, graduated privileges and parietal hours are the two areas where Mount Holyoke lags.

"The Rules Committee, this year," Barb Smiley commented, "will be starting from where they left off last year. Feasible plans for graduated privileges are being investigated; the possibility would involve is being considered." Barb would also like to see the book reorganized, perhaps along the lines of the Vassar handbook, with hints and rules clearly separated. A more realistic, more meaningful penalty system is another change Barb would like to see incorporated into the rules system.

Skiing Tied To Japanese Zen Beliefs

There's a lot more to skiing in Japan than the swift plunge down the slopes of Japan's six million skiers — there's Zen Buddhism, too.

Skiing is deeply tied in with intangible elements of Japanese culture and a connection exists between the Japanese approach to skiing and the nation's Shinto and Buddhist religious beliefs, according to the current issue of Ski magazine, just released.

Zen is a way of thinking that stresses escape from self-centeredness; Zen affirms the world and accepts the world's pleasures, said Ski. As a result, many sports are accepted as part of Zen discipline.

Skiing is not yet an official Zen discipline but many Zen believers feel that skiing may soon become an accepted way of practicing the Zen art of "direct understanding," said the magazine.

The Japanese skier will practice weight-shift and lead-with-the-inside-shoulder time after time, waiting for a sense of mastery. He practices his fundamentals happily, rejoicing in the ordinary, stated the article.

"Those who flock to the mountains and deep snow of the North and East (of Japan) are urged not only by desire to get away from frantic Tokyo, Osaka or Nagoya. A mountain is a special place, a holy place," stated the article.

UCLA Tops Hoop Poll; Friars No. 1 in N. E.

by John Goodrich

COLLEGE BASKETBALL across the nation is this year once again marked by upsets. Only one undefeated major college is left in the country, and that is none other than the Providence College Friars who have won their first ten games.

Wednesday night the Friars removed one of the threats for their top spot in New England when they beat Boston college 89-79, in a foul filled game. A pair of sophs, Jamie Walker and Dexter Westbrook, have been the sparks in the fast start by the Friars, joining juniors Bill Blair and Jim Benedict.

The club scored one of the top upsets in the East last week when it beat St. Joseph's who had been unbeaten 65-61, and had beaten Illinois and Wichita in the Quaker City tourney earlier in the week. The Hawks are presently the number four team in the country.

Most of that game between the Hawks and the Friars saw no seniors on the court as both are blessed with an abundance of young talent. These two should be at the peak of eastern basketball for the next couple years.

For this year they will get plenty of competition from St. John's, another future opponent of the Redmen. The New York Redmen also got into the upset act as they beat top ranked Michigan, 74-73, to give eastern teams a sweep of the two top holiday tourneys. Sonny Doven, soph center, Jerry Houston and the MacIntyre boys have been the sparks as these Redmen reach the seventh place in the current poll.

BACK ON TOP of the rankings is UCLA who has put together nine straight after losing the opener to Illinois. Once again Coach John Worden seems to have put together a club which though short on height makes up for it in well drilled floor play and accurate shooting. Gail Goodrich leads the Bruins who are seeking to become the first team in quite a while to win back to back NCAA titles, something few teams have done.

Indiana was undefeated and given the number two slot, but they made their visit to Illinois and came out on the short end, 86-81. Alumni Hall at Champaign had over 16,000 fans watching this game between two contenders for the big ten title. The first big contest in that league occurs Saturday when the Illini travel to Ann Arbor to play Michigan.

Michigan will be trying to regain its top ranking that it lost by losing two one point games. Cazzie Russell and Bill Buntin, the all-American tandem, will lead the Wolverines in the Big Ten showdown.

WICHITA dropped from second to fifth in the rankings and does not seem to be going to much higher for the time being. In addition, Dave Stallworth, a fine ball player and all-American, is ineligible after the first semester action. The Shockers will still be a good team but will have to be hurt by the loss.

Duke and Davidson are the tops in the South this year, or at least that is the way it appears. Despite the loss of Jeff Mullins, the Blue Devils have enough talent to win the Atlantic coast conference barring upsets. Davidson has Fred Hetzel and he alone could make them the Southern Conference champs.

WHEN SPEAKING of fine individual players, one cannot overlook the tremendous play of Princeton's Bill Bradley, the MVP in the Holiday Festival. His 41 point performance against Michigan almost gave the Tigers the win, but they bowed 84-78. A Philadelphia sportswriter made the following comment about Bradley: "He could play with the Marx brothers and make them a tough basketball team. Bill Bradley could play with four chimpanzees on rollerskates and earn the other club's respect. Bill Bradley transforms ordinary ball clubs into tough ones."

With all this hoopla, Bradley would seem a shoo-in for pro ball, but there is a good chance he may never get there. Mr. Bradley is also a Rhodes scholar who will more than likely study at Oxford next year. Bradley is the complete individual in all respects.

Little Redmen Off to Fast Start; Bernard, Tindall Pace 4-0 Record

by Ken Feinberg

Before the 1964-65 New England Basketball season started, pre-season basketball critics felt that as far as the freshman outlook goes, Boston College and the University of Connecticut were the cream of the crop. But, with the fine performances of the 1964-65 version of the Little Redmen coached by Jack Leaman it appears that any prediction discounting Massachusetts was a mistake.

Led by the offensive one-two punch of Mike Bernard of Brockton, and Bill Tindall, a six foot five inch giant from Brooklyn, New York, the Redmen have jumped off to wins in their first four games including a stunning 81-65 victory over UConn at Storrs. "This was definitely our best played game" said Coach Leaman. "We moved the ball well, and played as a smooth single unit." The success of the freshmen is by no means due to a two-man performance, however.

The scrappy ballplaying of backcourt men Hagen Anderson and Don Alberico has helped the Redmen as has the defensive play of colorful Chuck Winston, Gary Gasperack, and Rick Perkins. "That's the type of team we have, every player contributing a great deal in an effort to assure Massachusetts of a winning basketball team", said Coach Leaman. Indeed, if benchstrength is an indication of a winning team, then the Redmen will continue to be tough to beat. THE upcoming game against B.C. frosh in February should go a long way in determining this year's freshman champs. B.C., with Bob Cousy at the helm, has done some phenomenal recruiting and the freshmen are loaded with talent. But the underdog Redmen have displayed some talent of their own, and if they continue to play the basketball they're capable of playing, the B.C. game could present some surprises.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

LCA and KS continued rolling over their opponents to remain in a first place tie in the IFC basketball league. Wednesday night LCA dumped QTV 93-36 and KS beat SPE 41-29. LCA can attribute their success to Steve Shea who leads all scorers with 176 points and is fourth in rebounding with 91.

KS's Jim Neary is third in scoring with 90 points and is the only KS in the top five of that department. There is not a single KS in the rebounding department to show that they work as a team on the court.

Bill Foisy of PSD leads the league in rebounds with an even 100. He picked up 22 Wednesday night to jump from the fourth position.

The dorm East division shows the Maroons maintaining their lead with a 7-0 record. Their latest conquest was over the Limes 76-18. The amazing fact is that this team does not have one man in the top ten scorers. Stewart is the second leading rebounder with 65. The leading rebounder is Flint of the Buffaloes with 78.

In the West division The Elms remain a ½ game lead ahead of the Trojans after their 58-46 victory over the Palms. The Trojans beat the Pines 61-44 to stay in the running. The latter team has the top scorer in the dorm league with Manos' 146 points.

The North division shows a tie between the Birches and the Hawks with 6-1 records. Kent of the Birches moved from fourth to third in the rebounding department after he gathered in 11 rebounds Wednesday night. His total is now 65.

Plans are being made in the intramural office for All-Star teams in the dorm, fraternity and independent leagues. Players are urged to keep an eye open for the opposing players that have impressed them the most.

The intramural handball tournament has been in progress for the last two weeks. Coming into the quarterfinals are Terry Swanson, Hal Ryder, Mike Zota, Al Caruso, Larry Schidt, Kevin Carpenter, Jim Duggan and Dick Gothage. These men are in the winners bracket. Championship game should be held by February 10.

Gymnasts Will Meet Penn State and Pitt

The University of Massachusetts varsity gymnastics team travels to meet two top Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League members this weekend.

The Redmen will be at Penn State for a 2:30 p.m. meet Saturday and at Pittsburgh for a meet Monday at 2 p.m. Penn State had three of the four top all-around performers in the league last year and they have returned this season to make the Nittany Lions the league favorite. Junior Ed Isabelle, former standout at Springfield (Mass.) Technical High, is the top all-around performer for Penn State. Last winter the Redmen dropped a 155-127 decision to Penn State.

Pittsburgh is an improving team. The Panthers will be opening their season against UMass and a close meet is expected. It will be the first meeting in gymnastics of the two Universities.

Massachusetts has defeated So. Connecticut, 78-40, in a non-league meet and lost to Army, 78-34, in a league meet. Penn State owns a non-league victory over West Virginia.

The Redmen will be without the services of senior letterman Fred Peterson, who has withdrawn from the University. Peterson placed first in both the rings and parallel bars against Army.

The meet at Penn State will be part of a dedication program Saturday of a new expanded athletic facility.

Coach Erik Kjeldsen and his squad will fly to Penn State today and will return to campus Monday night following the Pittsburgh meet.

Trackmen Take On Bates After Christmas Lay-Off

by Terry Carpenter

The Indoor Track Team travels to Lewiston, Maine tomorrow to meet Bates College. The team had been undergoing intensive training before vacation and Coach Footrick hopes the boys were able to stay in shape. If so, he will be taking a strong club to Bates.

Leading the team in the high jump and broad jump will be junior workhorse John Mederios. Sophomore Hall backs him up in the high jump, while Sadowsky, Sloane, and Sarvey help him out in the broad jump. In the weights, Footrick will have experienced senior Doug Renwick throwing the shot; but little experience in the 35 pound weight. Sophomore Bassett and newcomers Drover and Gola lead the way here. They will also be helping Renwick in the shot. Rounding out the field events, we have senior and co-captain Dave Sadowsky in the pole vault. He is backed up by Bob Murray.

The dashes and hurdles are led again by Mederios. In the dash, he is helped by veterans Sloane and Hall, sophomores Ayanaba and Larvey. The 600 features sophomores Gaffney, May, and Thoms and junior Collins. Leading the 1000 are junior Bob Larson and sophomores Mike Sheeley and Bill Thoms. In the mile and two mile are senior and co-captain Tom Panke, senior Bob Ramsey, and sophomores Carpenter, St. Clair and Sheeley. These boys all ran well with the cross country team last fall.

The meet winds up with the relay race, and here Coach Footrick has an abundance of talent. He can choose his four boys to run from any of the following: Hall, Sloane, Collins, Gaffney, May, and Ayanaba. This meet will be the only one for the team until next semester.

1965 Football Schedule

A nine game football schedule for 1965, including five home games in a new 24,000 seat stadium, was announced today by University of Massachusetts Director of Athletics, Warren P. McGuirk.

The defending Yankee Conference Champions, who finished second in the NCAA Atlantic Coast College Championship last month in the Tangerine Bowl, will have just one change from the 1964 slate, American International College which replaces Harvard University, as the second game of the year.

The Holy Cross game will mark the first time that the Crusaders have played in Amherst in the history of the nineteen game series. Dedication of the new Redmen stadium, which promises to be one of the East's finest collegiate facilities, is scheduled for October 16th, when Massachusetts plays host to the University of Rhode Island.

The complete schedule: Sept. 18 at Maine; Sept. 25th American International; Oct. 2 Buffalo; Oct. 9 at Connecticut; Oct. 16 Rhode Island; October 23 at Boston Univ.; Oct. 30 Vermont; Nov. 6 Holy Cross; Nov. 13 at New Hampshire.

Sports Quickies

University of Massachusetts Assistant Athletic Director Earl E. Lorden announced today two changes in the Redmen varsity hockey schedule.

The game with Worcester Tech, postponed due to inclement weather on Dec. 12, has been rescheduled for Jan. 9 at 2 p.m. at Amherst College's Orr Rink.

A Jan. 13 game against the University of Connecticut has been changed to Jan. 11. The site of the game has also been switched from Storrs to Amherst due to the incompletion of the Connecticut rink.

Redmen Face Vermont, AIC In Weekend Doubleheader

by John Goodrich

Massachusetts will attempt to maintain its second position in the Yankee Conference race tonight then do a little heavy hoping as their opponent, Vermont, takes on the Connecticut Huskies Saturday.

Vermont has only a 1-3 mark, 1-2 in the conference, but has the number 11 scorer in the country and one of the top ten rebounders in the person of Ralph D'Altilia who is carrying a 26.7 average and a 16.5 rebound mark. The Cats have not played since December 11, so the long layoff might hurt them especially in the shooting department.

The Catamounts are bothered by a lack of height, and the Redmen will have an advantage in this respect. However, the home team will also have to contend with Milt Goggans, a star as a soph, who presently sports a 12.7 average and 13.7 rebounds per game. He is capable of bigger things. The other starters for the Cats are Layne Higgs, a playmaking guard with a 13.5 average, Joe Gannon, and Bruce Hanna.

COACH JOHN ORR is still seeking the balance from the other members of his team to go with the fine efforts of his big three. Clarence Hill is averaging 21.7 points, Tim Edwards 17.2 points and 16.2 rebounds, and Chuck O'Rourke with a 15.5 average and 12.1 rebounds.

Orr has said that he will start John Lisack, who got the call at Co-Capt. Charlie O'Rourke having a little trouble getting started but is still third in scoring and second in rebounding.

Northeastern. He is a hustling soph that can score from the outside. Paul Gullickson had a strong second half against the Huskies and is sure to get the call if Lisack runs into trouble. Jim Painten will also see much action.

The last guard slot is also undecided with Charlie Kingston and Mike Meola battling out. Kingston is a good shot and floor general but has had his troubles outside of the 25 points he scored against Rutgers. He has a total of 20 in the other nine games. Meola has been a hard working defensive player that has been playing consistently on offense as well. Either one could start.

ON SATURDAY, AIC travels to Amherst to do battle with the Redmen who seem to play in spurts, as far as frequency of games go. Last year the Aces gave UMass quite a tussle before bowing 84-70 behind a late drive by the Redmen which wiped out a ten point lead.

The Aces have the top scorer in Western Mass. in Jim Calhoun with a 23.3 average. Hill presently stands second to him in the race. Norm Lamberst, Frank Oppedisano, Tom Cannon, and Charlie Stone round out the Aces lineup.

Both games will have frosh prelims. Mike Bernard and Bill Tindall will lead their mates against Champlain junior on Friday, and the AIC frosh on Saturday. The frosh presently have a 4-0 record with 11 points their closest game. For the last few years, the Redmen have always fielded a top flight frosh club and this is no exception as Coach Jack Leaman has developed the high school stars into a smooth hustling unit.

As for Vermont, they will move to Storrs to face a UConn team that has lost its last two games after winning eight in a row. They will, however, be forced to play without the services of top scorer Wes Bialasuknia who has an injured arch. The injury will keep him sidelined a couple of weeks anyway. Toby Kimball, recovering from a muscle spasm in his chest, will not be at full effectiveness for the contest. This could be as good an opportunity as there is for one of the conference teams to upset the Huskies.

Clarence Hill from Washington, D.C. leads all Redmen scorers with a 21 point per game pace.

Tim Edwards off to a brilliant start tops all rebounders and is second in scoring.

Redmen Skaters Stumble At Yankee Conference Tourney

by Gary Mallory

The varsity hockey team journeyed to the Univ. of Vermont for the annual Yankee Conference Hockey Tournament. On this trip UMass was hampered since coach Steve Kosakowski was missing three of the regular players.

In the first game of the tourney U.N.H. drubbed UConn 12-1 to advance to the finals. In the evening Vermont hosted UMass. This game got off to a quick start with both teams having good scoring opportunities. Mass., however, playing their best hockey of the season, controlled the play for the majority of the period but could not put the puck past the Catamounts' fine goalie Bob Sousville. The lone goal of the period was scored by Vermont when Tom Rishe picked up a loose puck in the UMass. end and fired a shot to the near side past Bowen.

IN THE SECOND PERIOD Vermont picked up the pace and carried the play as the Redmen began to tire slightly. Vermont scored its second goal of the game when Ozre Swett poked the puck into the net from a scramble in front of the Mass. cage. The Catamounts continued to dominate play and scored their third goal near the end of the period when Twomey tipped in a pass from the corner while the Redmen were shorthanded.

The third period was really rough for UMass, as they completely ran out of gas. Vermont scored three goals to take a six to nothing lead, while they dominated play throughout the period. The complexion of the game could have been considerably changed if the Redmen had a third line to relieve some of the pressure from the regulars. The final score was Vermont 6, Mass. 0.

THE FOLLOWING NIGHT, UMass faced off against UConn. for the consolation prize of the tourney. Strangely enough, the game turned out to be the best of the tourney as the underdog Huskies defeated the Redmen in a sudden death overtime 5-4.

In the first period both teams skated evenly with the Redmen having a slight edge in play. However, the period ended scoreless as both goalies played strong hockey.

In the second period Mass. got off to a quick start when Ed Polchlopek, a sophomore, scored the first of his three goals as he converted a pass out of the corner by Paul Donavon. The Redmen scored again midway through the period when Dave Eaton tipped in a shot from a goal mouth scramble. UConn. scored their lone goal of the period when Tom Anderson stole the puck in the UMass. zone and fired a rising shot to the far corner past Bowen. Mass. continued to dominate the play but could not increase their lead.

The third period turned into a wild and woolly affair. The Redmen took a three to one lead as Ed Polchlopek scored his second goal of the game. Assists went to Donovan and Callahan. Conn. fought back on two quick goals by Frank Capizzo. The first came on a scramble in front of the UMass. net and the second was a back hand from twelve feet out. UMass. refused to quit and Polchlopek, playing his best game of the season, scored his third goal to make the score 4-3. With a minute left to play, Conn. pulled their goalie and swarmed around the UMass. end, finally tying the score at 4-4 on a long screen shot that Bower saw too late.

In the sudden death period UMass. tired and Conn. pressed. With thirty seconds left, Agnew took the puck in the faceoff circle to the right of Bowen and fired a shot into the far corner to climax the Huskies uphill fight. In this contest the Redmen held leads of 2-1, 3-1, 4-3 but just couldn't hang on long enough to defeat the inspired Huskies.

DURING THE TOURNAMENT UMass. played better hockey than at any previous time in the season and hopes of a better record for the second half of the season are almost assured.

M. A. Dickinson Retired From Phys. Ed. Dept.

Mason A. Dickinson, Jr. of 243 Amity Street, Amherst retired from the Physical Education Department at the University of Massachusetts on December 31, 1964.

He and his associates at Boyden Building have handled and issued all the physical education equipment for 2800 freshman and sophomore students for their required physical education courses for the first two years at the University.

Dickinson's father was a grocery and hardware merchant in Amherst for 55 years operating the Grange Store with his two sons associated with him for a period of 25 years.

The era of the trolley cars in and out of Amherst, and the practice skirmishes of the military brigade at Massachusetts Aggie around the year 1908, on the open athletic fields west of the present Old Chapel building with real powder, noise and gunsmoke are vivid early memories of Dickinson.

Dickinson has been much interested in operating a sports bulletin board both in Curry Hicks Cage and lately in Boyden Building under the heading "Across the Lines in Sports". Here he has placed daily all the newspaper clippings in all sports of athletic teams at the university featuring all contests in sports with Dickinson and his wife have no definite plans for their retirement except to remain in Amherst for the present and to watch the town and the university grow larger and larger during the coming years.

Adelphians To Present Slides During High School Tour

Eight Adelphians will spend their after-finals break touring Massachusetts' high schools.

Thirty secondary schools in the Bay State will be visited by the members of the University's senior men's honor society.

The Adelphians will present a slide program to high school students in college preparatory courses. The slides will be followed by a question and answer period in which the younger students will have the opportunity to ask the Adelphians questions about the University and college life.

The slides depict many of the campus facilities, including artists' conceptions of yet-to-be constructed buildings. Also included in the slides are scenes of campus extracurricular, academic and athletic activities.

UMass coeds will aid some of the Adelphians in their presentations.

According to Leonard Charest, Adelphian chairman of the slide project, one of the main benefits of the program is that "high school students will have a chance to ask other young men and women not separated by a gap of many years, questions about college life."

Adelphia, the oldest honorary society on campus, is currently celebrating its fiftieth anniversary. The organization was founded in the spring of 1915 when the campus' two Greek letter honor societies merged.

In addition to the high school slide program the Adelphias, Jeff Davidow, Dennis Busche, Wade Houk, Bill Wilkinson, Bob Healy, Bill Landis, Don Boyd and Charest, also sponsor a number of other campus-oriented programs.

The pre-football game rallies and dances, the scheduled high school honors day, a commemoration celebration of the golden anniversary and work with culturally deprived Springfield high school students are some of the activities of this year's Adelphians.

Four College Group To Host Tri-Part Civil Rights Conference

Students of the four-college area will present a conference entitled Civil Rights: Reform or Revolution? Feb. 12, 13, and 14. To those within the civil rights movement, the March on Washington two summers ago, represented the closing of one era, and the Mississippi Summer Project the opening of another.

It is the intention of the students organizing this conference to bring together the leaders of the movement — governmental, ministerial, and radical — for a fruitful discussion of new factors and new approaches The conference is educational.

IN A SENSE, those in the Pioneer Valley feel they are far removed from the forces that are molding America today, and if they are unable to take part directly, they hope to at least become educated through discussion, and from this bring about more active support and interest.

The conference is divided into three sections. On Friday night, Feb. 12, delegates will be registered at Chapin Hall, Mt. Holyoke College. There will be three speakers, Michael Harrington, Ozzie Davis, and Malcolm X. The three speakers, representing the government, the fine arts intellectual and Afro-American nationalism, will attempt to set forth the general outlines of the new forces in the country.

SATURDAY MORNING, the conference will move to the University, where three panel discussions will be held. The first will be Economic Reorganization, followed by a panel on Politics, and the final panel will be on Community Organization. Saturday afternoon Amherst College will host fifteen to twenty seminars to be held in fraternities and dormitories. Some of the seminar topics will be Forced Integration, Rent Strike, Direct Action Tactics, Black & White Together?, Pan-Negroism, and Violence and Non-violence.

On Sunday, the conference will close with a general meeting at Amherst College. The closing speaker is scheduled to be Noel Day, but this is not definite. At that time, the delegates will turn in their notes on the conference, to be issued in booklet form later in the semester.

OVER THREE HUNDRED DELEGATES and thirty speakers are expected from outside the four-college area. The hosts need financial aid and housing. Those who wish to contribute financially, please make all payments to "Civil Rights Conference" — RSO. All contributions, space for housing delegates, and inquiries in general should be addressed to:

Faculty Senate Votes On Post-Season Athletics

The Faculty Senate voted 46 to 25 to defeat Dr. Beth's bill to curtail post-season athletic contests.

Speaking in support of this resolution, Dr. Beth stated that he believed it served to emphasize the present UMass policy and adherence to Yankee Conference rules, and did not consider it to represent a new idea.

During the following debate, proponents of the bill professed personal approval of athletics but expressed concern over time lost from classes by athletes and other students involved in post-season games. Some expressed fear of future over-emphasis on athletics which would be detrimental to academics. Speaking in favor of the bill were Senators Fenton, DePillis, Wexler, and Wellman.

Opponents objected to the idea of a "rigid policy" and what they considered a piece-meal approach to athletic policy, referring to the function and responsibility of the Athletic Council. Dean Moore spoke in favor of bowl games as valid and educational experiences.

After further serious discussion, the vote was taken and the bill was defeated.

Free Coffee To Students For Finals

Mr. Russell Colvin, manager of the SU Hatch, and John F. Martin, director of the Dining Commons, announced yesterday a joint Student Union-Dining Commons program to provide over 2,000 free cups of coffee for dormitory residents during examination periods. The coffee will be delivered in large urns after 10:30 p.m.; cream, sugar and paper cups will also be furnished.

The sponsors are expressing appreciation for fine student conduct as well as wishing them well in their semester exams. Coffee will be delivered to the following men's residence halls on Jan. 14, 15, 17, 18, 19 and 20:

UMass Symphony Concert Draws Overflow Attendance

The University of Massachusetts' Symphonic Band drew an overflow audience Sunday afternoon for its winter concert in the ballroom of the Student Union.

More Chairs Added

Fifty to 100 chairs were added to the 700 already set up, but latecomers kept coming and were obliged to stand at the back of the hall. And there were small groups listening to the concert by way of electronic amplifiers or the broadcast by the Four-College FM radio transmitter.

Under the direction of its new conductor, John A. Jenkins, the band has been expanded to 85 members. It is scheduled to go on its midwinter concert tour Jan. 23 through Jan. 28.

On Sunday afternoon it presented a program of nine pieces with a well-knit cleanliness of unity that could come only from enthusiasm and discipline. In the square, reverberant ballroom the sound was full and warm, most impressive, perhaps, at low volumes.

In The Program

The program included "The Bandstand, Hyde Park" by Haydn Wood, Prelude and Fugue in D minor by J. S. Bach; "American Overture for Band" by Joseph W. Jenkins; "Zueignung" by Richard Strauss; "Pride of the Illini" by Karl King; "A Festival Prelude" by Alfred Reed; "Christe, Lux Vera" by Palestrina; "Notturno for Four Horns" by Rimsky-Korsakov, and "American Civil War Fantasy" by Jerry Bilik.

Purists may have been disturbed at hearing a Bach prelude and fugue transcribed for large wind band, and in truth, there were times when the music didn't sound like Bach. But that reaction may be attributed to a preconceived opinion of what Bach should sound like.

It was played seriously and with care, and it sounded fine. The long organ tones came from the tubas big and fat, and the fugue melody was passed from hand to hand among the choirs with finesse and accuracy. It may have been odd-Bach but it was nice.

Care Evident

The same care for timbre and agility was evident throughout the program, as for instance in the thick, ponderous, sonorous timbre of the Strauss "Zueignung" and in the nimble, toe-tapping march of King's "Pride of the Illini."

Of special interest were the

UMass Women's Team Takes Part In Ski Clinic

Seven members of the Women's Ski Team attended a preseason clinic at Mt. Ascutney, Vt., Sunday. Participating with UMass were Mt. Holyoke, Pembroke, and the sponsors, Keene State.

Though the snow was scarce, a morning trial race was held on a grass-patched trial, reached by trekking through the woods. Racers were rated according to their ability and placed in classes conducted by the Keene State Men's Team. In the afternoon, after instruction, a two-run race was held with skiers competing among themselves for faster time. The day ended—then it snowed.

Participating were Jean Craigen, captain, Jeanne Brown and Carol Durna, returning from last year, and Ann Noble, Carol Wiggins, Pat Ripley, and Brenda Swithenbank.

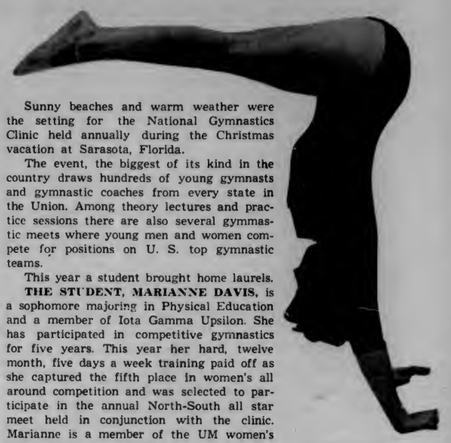
Girl Gymnast Scores



Sunny beaches and warm weather were the setting for the National Gymnastics Clinic held annually during the Christmas vacation at Sarasota, Florida.

The event, the biggest of its kind in the country draws hundreds of young gymnasts and gymnastic coaches from every state in the Union. Among theory lectures and practice sessions there are also several gymnastic meets where young men and women compete for positions on U. S. top gymnastic teams.

This year a student brought home laurels. THE STUDENT, MARIANNE DAVIS, is a sophomore majoring in Physical Education and a member of Iota Gamma Upsilon. She has participated in competitive gymnastics for five years. This year her hard, twelve month, five days a week training paid off as she captured the fifth place in women's all around competition and was selected to participate in the annual North-South all star meet held in conjunction with the clinic. Marianne is a member of the UM women's gymnastics team and will compete in their first home meet on Sat. Feb. 6 at the Boyden gymnasium.

The two faculty members attending the clinic were Mr. and Mrs. Kjeldsen from the Physical Education Department.

Mr. Erik Kjeldsen is the coach of the men's gymnastic team (their next home meet will be held Feb. 6 at Boyden). He was elected coach of the North team which won 51-45.

Mrs. Kitty Kjeldsen, coach of the UM women's team and a nationally recognized gymnastics judge, took part in many activities and judged all the gymnastics meets held at the clinic.

BABY'S STRESS = TOP STUDENT

CPS—A little stress during infancy can produce a superior student during later life, in cats at least, and maybe in humans, according to a Pennsylvania State university psychology professor.

Cats and rats, and probably humans, which have been subjected to mild stress early in their lives react more adequately to stressful situations later in their lives, making learning easier, according to John M. Warren, director of the Penn State Animal Behavior laboratory.

Of four groups of kittens tested, the group which had received the most handling by students when they were young—the group which had been subjected to the most emotional stress and new experiences—was the group which learned easiest and best, and which behaved best under stress and unusual conditions.

Warren said the study confirmed other research on rats which showed that handling before weaning reduces emotional reactivity and the exposure to a complex environment after weaning facilitates problem solving.

Profits Go To....?

It appears that once again someone is disregarding the welfare of the Student Body. The vending machines in the dormitories are the point in question. Are the students at the University to gain an education or to be a source of revenue?

Last year the University's revenue from the vending machines totalled $53,000, money which the Student Body never received. The machines were placed on campus to provide a service to the students, the young men and women who are on campus to receive an education. Now it seems that the service aspect has been dropped in favor of the revenue from the machines. Investigation by the Senate Services Committee, purports to show that the increase in the price of pastries in the vending machines was based upon a desire for higher profits due to increased sales of the product. There is more at stake than the fact that the average University Student has a limited budget.

An unwarranted increase in prices in the vending machines, placed on campus by the University, is to be viewed with alarm. Has the Student Body become a source of revenue to the University? The multi-million dollar University of Massachusetts is in existence for the students, not vice versa. We will not spend our limited funds to enrich an organization which is working for us. A successful boycott of the vending machines will bring the prices of the merchandise to where the students want them; possibly even bring the money back to the students where it belongs.

Behind Closed Doors

Last year, Collegian Editor Jeffrey Davidow requested permission to be granted admission to Faculty Senate meetings. After considerable discussion, the Senate voted in favor of the request, and he was enabled to unobtrusively observe the mechanics of said hallowed body.

This year, a similar request by present Editor Scott Freedland was denied. The denial was tendered after a discussionless, overwhelming vote.

Seemingly, the Collegian's desire for admittance was far from unreasonable. The Faculty Senate's activities are often all-important to the Students of this University, and their decisions play a major part in the University policy. By his presence at their meetings, our Editor hoped to gain a greater insight to their activities, in order that the Collegian might be able to present in depth coverage and explanation of topics and decisions relevant and important to the Student Body. Certainly, a better perspective can be gained from physical presence at a meeting than from a later perusal of summatory minutes.

A question, hinging naturally upon a hint of sus_.cion, arises from the refusal. Why is the Faculty Senate an entirely closed body, with admission limited strictly to Senators? Even the Senate of the United States, doubtless a body of great integrity, provides a gallery for interested observers.

Dan Glosband
Managing Editor

Senate Pres. Chastised

The undersigned senator wishes to express extreme displeasure at the open disregard for procedural legality and for senatorial responsibility which were manifested in the cancellation of the scheduled student senate meeting last Wednesday night. There are no provisions in the Student Government Association Constitution, Senate By-Laws, or Rules of Order for such high-handed action on the part of the Senate president.

President Michael, without so much as a conference with his executive committee, took it upon himself to cancel the meeting because he thought that there might not be a quorum. This action was taken with less than four hours notice, causing considerable personal inconvenience to a number of senators.

This inconvenience is of small consequence in comparison with the lack of consideration for and duty toward those members of the student body who depended on legislation passed by the Student Senate for the operation of their organizations.

I must view this arbitrary decision made by President Michael as being a flagrant breach of trust and duty and an action not befitting a leader of the student body.

Other Campuses Speak

Censorship ?

"Freedom of expression," the "search for truth," "academic freedom"....

Principles valued by many, particularly in a university community, these would seem to be empty phrases in light of recent administrative action in removing a short story from publication in the student literary magazine.

Whether or not this was a case of actual censorship is a matter of definition. The story was removed from the press while Showcase was being run off. Considering the kind of printing process (offset), the time element involved in meeting publication deadlines (necessary in order to sell the magazine before Christmas vacation), and the time required to discuss the controversy raised, removal from the press meant definite removal from the magazine.

There is a possibility that Tony Chamberlain's story, "Erebus," may be printed in the spring issue of Showcase — provided that it is not removed again and provided that enough of the fall issues are sold to finance a spring edition. Officially the work has not been censored. But it has not been printed, either.

Howard Keyo, director of Public Information and Central Services, consulted the magazine's adviser, Dr. Carroll Terrell of the English department, before directing the University Press to pull the story. In fairness to Keyo, it was Terrell who first suggested that the magazine be run minus the story. However, the suggestion was made because taking time out to discuss the matter then would have held up publication with results Terrell feared would be fatal to sales.

Terrell had not read the story since as an adviser he advocates a laissez faire policy concerning student publications. He is available for advice if and when it is sought, but does not act as a censor. (This is also the policy of Campus adviser Brooks Hamilton.) This is the best type of advisership because it puts responsibility where it belongs — with the student — creating an ideal learning situation.

And what is the aim of a university if it is not learning, in every sense of the word?

In this case there was no question in the mind of Showcase editor Gus Bombard, a writer himself, as to the merit of Chamberlain's story. Therefore he did not consult Terrell. In not doing so he was completely correct and within his rights. It is the editor who is responsible for his publication, be it a private or university student enterprise. If he makes a mistake, he suffers the consequences — but after, not before publication.

The entire situation is most unfortunate; it could and should have been handled much differently. Regardless of what it has been called, we consider this a form of censorship; a violation of democratic and journalistic principles in which we wholeheartedly believe.

Academic freedom is a principle which University students highly value. Showcase, similar to many literary publications today, prints extremely realistic works on nearly any subject. Consequently, at times it is bound to be controversial. Indeed, it is often the controversial and thought-provoking pieces which make the magazine worth publishing. Showcase is an excellent medium in which students may air their ideas on contemporary subjects.

We hope that the University is not embarking on a policy of suppression of student publications — the Showcase incident could set a dangerous precedent. Similar future actions will not be taken lightly.

An Oversight

To the Editor:

We would like to compliment the department of landscape architecture for its inspiring and exciting exhibition on display in the Student Union.

We are, however, bothered by the fact that Andrew Jackson Downing was not mentioned in connection with the design of New York's Central Park. It is common knowledge that Mr. Downing's original concepts of the undulating lawn and the sinuous line were included and improved upon in Olmsted's design.

We ask this simple question, Why wasn't credit given where credit was due?

Lose Four-Goal Lead

Redmen Sextet Downed By W.P.I.

by Gary Molloy

The varsity hockey team hosted Worcester Tech, Sat., Jan. 9, at Walter Orr Rink, on the Amherst College campus. The favored Redmen were defeated by an inspired Worcester team, 6-5.

UMASS got off to a fast start by scoring four goals in the opening period. Ken Palm, playing his first game of the season, opened the scoring at the three minute mark with a quick slap shot from 25 feet out. Ed Polehlopek scored the second Redmen goal at 6:17, firing a shot right off the face off. Bill Skowyra scored the next goal and Jim Bisbee rounded out the first period scoring as the Redmen completely dominated play.

The Redmen took the 4-0 lead into the second period but from there on, it was all Tech, as they out-skated, out-hustled and completely outplayed the listless UMass team. The Technicians scored four goals in this period, two while the Redmen were shorthanded. Eaton scored the sole UMass goal the period to give the team a 5-4 lead going into the third period.

THE LAST PERIOD proved disastrous for UMass as their entire offense fell apart. Tech pulled even at the five minute mark and continued to carry the play for the rest of the period. The tiebreaking goal was scored with less than two minutes to play, as the Redmen suffered their second straight defeat in the closing minutes of the game.

Tonight the Redmen host UConn in a 7:00 contest at the Amherst rink. The last time these teams met, UConn won in overtime 5-4.

"can IBM use my degree?"

If your degree is in Liberal Arts, Engineering, the Sciences, or Business Administration, you may very well find your route for advancement at IBM. The marketing and application of computers offer opportunity to new graduates in a variety of ways.

At IBM, Data Processing Systems Engineers study the best ways to solve customer problems. They find the best methods and select the best equipment to handle each type of problem. If your college experience has taught you to organize information and approach a problem systematically, see IBM.

An IBM Data Processing Representative shows customer executives how IBM can help business become more efficient. In selling to business, industry, government, or defense, you use your own initiative and individuality. Advancement comes as you develop skills acquired in college.

Thorough initial training will teach you the techniques of data processing and marketing computers. If you are looking for opportunities to grow, join IBM. Your placement office can give you our literature—or make an appointment with our interviewers. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

moving the ball, but the Aces just couldn't cope with the all around talent of the UM team.

The frosh now take a slight rest through intersession before returning to action against the toughest foe on their slate.

The Boston College freshman have mowed down nine opponents without a defeat, including a smashing 96-50 win over the Providence Frosh. Also among their victims in the UConn frosh that the Redmen have already defeated.

Bob Cousy seems to have done a fine bit of recruiting to bolster his drive to make BC a basketball power. Leading the club is 6'10" center Tom Pacynski of Bay City, Michigan. The forecourt has 6'5" Steve Adleman of Natick and 6'7" Jim Kissane of Hyde Park, New York. The guards are 6' Jack Kvanz of Bridgeport, Connecticut and Steve Kelleher 6'1" from Worcester. This club has been getting a lot of good press in the basketball journals and seems to be among the best in New England.

THE REDMEN FROSH will counter with a unit that has done a fine job thus far this season. Mike Bernard leads the club with 19.2 average and 12 rebounds per game. He has hit 56% of his shots. Bill Tindall has a 15.2 average and a shooting percentage of 62% while pulling down 10 rebounds per outing.

Jim Girotti with a 12.3 average and Hagen Andersen with a 12 point average are other frosh in double figures. Rick Perkins (6.6), Gary Gasperack (5.5), Russ Vitallo (7.8), and Don Alberico (5.5) are others who see plenty of action. Rounding out the squad are Bill Cannata, Greg Rand, Alex Vyce, and Chuck Winston.

The frosh game with BC could be one of the best of the year.

There is a possibility that the frosh will be playing an intra-squad game as a prelim to the Pittsburgh contest January 29.

VAR. BASKETBALL . . .

With five minutes left in the game it was 76-70, but Hill scored eight of the last 17 points as the Redmen put away their eighth win in 12 starts. In an oddity, all ten men that started ended in double figures. For the Redmen, Edwards had 20 on 9 of 11 shots from the field, even though he fouled out with better than six minutes left.

Others in double figures were Hill with 19, O'Rourke with 16, Meola with 15, and John Lisack with 11. Lisack who is starting at one of the forward slots had 20 points and 13 rebounds in the two nights. AIC was led by Sands with 22 and Jim Calhoun with 17.

Determined Bates Squad Upsets UMass Trackmen

After spotting UMass a 21 point lead early in the meet Bates College came roaring back to score heavily in the last four events and edge the Redmen 62½-50½.

Junior John Mederios started up right where he left off last season. He competed in five events and placed in them all including two firsts. He shared the spotlight with soph Terry Carpenter who also posted two victories. Mederios started the meet off by winning the broad jump. Art Larvey was third. The winning jump was 22'1". Carpenter then won the mile. Mike Sheeley and Tom Panke placed second and third for a sweep in this event. The time was 4:28. Mederios repeated his victory in the dash. Art Larvey and Doug Sloane made it another sweep. The winning time in the final heat was 5.2, but both Mederios and Sloane ran a 5.1 in the trial heats, to tie the school records. At this point UMass lead in the meet 24-3.

Bates began to bounce back immediately with a sweep of their own in the 35 lb. weight. They then took first and third in the 600. Damian Gaffney of UMass was second. All the Redmen could get in the high hurdles was a third by Mederios. Now UMass lead by only 28-26. They widened the lead, however, as Terry Carpenter and Bob Ramsey placed one, two in the two mile. Bob Larson and Tom Panke then took second and third in the 1000. Doug Renwick took the shot put with a fine throw of 46'10" and Paul Freedman was third. The UMass lead had now opened to 46-35.

Refusing to give up, Bates limited the Redmen to a third by Mederios in the high jump. The hurdles saw Mederios get nipped at the tape in a close race. Bates then took first, second, and a tie for third in the pole vault to wrap up the meet. Bates lead was 57½-50½ with only the relay to go. Since the relay only carries five points, the Redmen could not win the meet even with a victory in this event. The relay went to Bates, and the final score read: Bates 62½; UMass 50½.

The next Redmen track meet won't be until second semester when they take on Bowdoin on Feb. 13.

Redmen Sweep Weekend Pair; Hill and Edward Set The Pace

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts scored a pair of victories this past weekend as they downed Vermont, 120-84, and American International College, 93-79.

In the Friday battle, the Redmen set three records and tied a fourth while keeping pace with the University of Connecticut in the Yankee Conference race.

The 120 points is the equal of last year's high mark also set against Vermont at the Cage by the same margin, 120-84. The team tied marks for most points in a half, most baskets in a half and most hoops in a game.

The margin is even more impressive when it is realized that with 9½ minutes left in the first half, the Redmen had scored only 19 points. Vermont, in fact, had a seven point lead at the ten minute mark, but the zone press that UMass has installed forced the Catamounts into floor errors that got UM back into the lead.

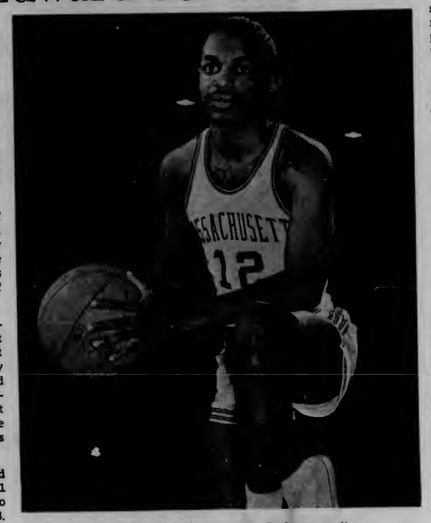
The visitors were outscored 20-1 to give Massachusetts an 11 point lead which was extended to 20 at the intermission, 53-33. Clarence Hill had 18 points in the first half to pace the Redmen.

The second half saw the home team tossing through 67 points for a record as everybody was hitting. The team made 29 of 52 shots. Vermont also shot better than 50% from the floor in the second half but they were no match for the UMass cagers.

HILL FINISHED the game with 29 points and got good support from Tim Edwards with 19, Chuck O'Rourke with 17, and Mike Meola with 14. Edwards had a season high in assists with 10.

For the night UM hit on 50 of 101 shots and 20 of 28 foul shots. The win was most important because the next night UConn demolished Vermont, 111-66. That gave UConn a 3-0 conference mark with two YC games this week, one at UNH and a Saturday encounter with Rhode Island at Storrs.

Massachusetts has a 4-1 mark and is hoping for an assist from the Rams, who also have one loss.



Clarence Hill, leading scorer for Redmen varsity.

In the Saturday game, the Redmen took on AIC, always a tough foe. This year was no exception as the Aces ran up a nine point lead, 19-10. Once again UM used its zone press, but the success was a little less impressive as the skillful passing of Tom Cannon was setting up his big men for layups.

Trailing 44-5[illegible] just over two minute to go in the half, UM got three quick hoops to narrow the half time margin to two. A good defensive job on Clarence Hill by Tom Cannon kept the Redmen ace with only 11 at the half and gave him sufficient trouble in the second session to have him miss eight shots in a row.

TIM EDWARDS at the half way mark had hit on four of his five shots and two fouls for 10 points. The Aces were led by Jim Sands with 15. Sands had been benched for his play earlier in the year but seems to have come back in this game. AIC outrebounded UM by 11 in the half.

The game remained close for the next 15 minutes of action. The Redmen had taken the lead to stay at the 14:16 mark as Paul Gullicksen scored a foul shot and a basket to provide a 56-53 lead.

Frosh Five Win Two; Set New Cage Record

The University of Massachusetts freshman basketball team rolled to two more victories this past weekend as they went over the century marks both nights.

On Friday, the Redmen coasted to a 122-64 victory over Champlain Junior College. This is a record for the Cage. The frosh attack was so well balanced that six men hit double figures with the highest at 17.

BILL TINDALL scored 17 points and Mike Bernard 16 in the big victory. Russ Vitallo led the rebounders with 13 as the club raced to an early 24-8 lead and were never headed.

On Saturday night, the frosh faced a rugged opponent in the AIC frosh. This club had defeated the Holy Cross team and given a good battle to UConn. They had two real fine scorers and an All-American high school player in guard Henry Payne.

UMass frosh were hard pressed for the first half leading by just ten at intermission .In the second half, the club left little doubt about the outcome as they rolled up a 20 point plus margin.

Bill Tindall was the big scorer with 25 points while Mike Bernard had 23 and a like number of rebounds, a single high for the season.

Russ Vitallo and Jim Girotti both contributed heavily to the final 101-83 margin. Greg Rand put in 10 points, including the final hoop that broke the century mark.

For AIC the two big scorers Miele got 25 points and Sillari got 22, Payne did a fine job of

George Michael Resigns, Senate Gavel To Landis

by Jim Foudy

After calling the Student Senate to order last Wednesday evening, Senate President George Michael reluctantly presented his resignation as President and Senator from Brett.

Placing his academic pursuits ahead of extracurricular activities, Michael said:

"During the past nine months that we have served our student body together, I have shared with you many satisfying experiences.

"Through every senator's cooperation, the Student Senate has performed its duty, not as a group of disconnected parts striving for the personal gain of each, but as a unified, representative government fulfilling its responsibilities to the student body.

"After serving three-fourths of my term as President of the Student Senate, I find myself in a position where my senate commitment is in conflict with my academic pursuit.

"Because of the tremendous scope of the responsibility of the Senate presidency, it is often possible to devote all of one's time to this extra-curricular position. It is easy, therefore, to lose perspective of our primary commitment to academics.

"In this light, I must resign as President of the Student Senate and as Senator of Brett men's residence hall . . .

State Auditor Hits UMass Building Mess

by Stephen Gordon

Construction at the University was cited as among state contracts containing "many irregularities," according to a report issued by State Auditor Thaddeus Buczko.

The notes and comments section of the Auditor's report (No. 65-5), released Feb. 3, mentioned irregularities in work on the Education Building and the Engineering and Physics Shop Building at the University.

The Education Building contract, dated June 8, 1959, was awarded to Joseph Rugo Co., Inc., for $1,669,000 and planned for completion Oct. 17, 1960.

The project had 34 construction change orders which added $41,834.54 to the contract price, bringing the total cost to $1,710,-834.54.

The report stated that the Bureau of Building Construction (BBC) had granted the Rugo Company an extension of 202 days, based on the work involved in the construction changes. This meant a waving of liquidated (late) damages of $200 per day.

The building was finally accepted Feb. 28, 1962, which constituted an overrun of 198 days. As on previous occasions,, the BBC failed to assess liquidated damages against the contractor, even though the contract was not completed on time.

"A tightening of this policy together with a stricter evaluation of the necessity and the reasons for contract extensions will make for more effective control of losses of the above mentioned type," stated the report.

The second contract, the Engineering and Physics Shop Building contract, let Sept. 20, 1960, to D. A. Sullivan and Sons, Inc., for $685,578 was originally scheduled for completion Sept. 24, 1961.

Buczko's report stated that the original date was later extended a full school year to June 21, 1962. A conditional acceptance was made on May 28, 1962, including change orders totaling $1495.34.

An inspection of the Engineering and Physics Shop Building in July, 1964 revealed bubbles or blisters on the roof up to 12 or 15 inches wide, two to four feet long, and two to three feet high.

According to the report of this inspection, "the only solution to this problem is to strip the roof, allow sufficient time for drying, and install a new roof."

Lederle Greets Swing Frosh At Monday Eve Convocation

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

Nearly 180 "swing-shift scholars" were officially welcomed back to UMass at a Monday evening convocation by President Lederle and others after a semester's absence from the University.

The so-called "Special Class of 1968' returned to UMass to continue their education, having started it last summer in an experimental summer school program.

The class of 1968 enrollment was set at 2,600 out of a total predicted enrollment of 9,520. The admissions office calculated that 4,200 applicants could be accepted to get 2,600 qualified students.

By early 1964 applications were running far ahead of any previous class and the admissions office discovered that even by accepting 4,200 applicants there were about 8,000 students rejected, some 3-4,000 of whom would have been accepted in previous years.

President Lederle brought these facts to the attention of the Senate Ways and Means committee and later initiated the plans for UMass-Boston. UMass-Boston will accept 1,000 students for next fall, but this did nothing for those rejected for the fall of 1964.

To help out those students on the waiting list and some highly qualified late applicants, the University notified 530 students of a novel program.

The applicants were offered the opportunity to begin their

AF Academy Sees Scandal Mushroom

by Joe Sullivan
Staff Reporter

"We sent our boy to the academy with honor and integrity—what have they done to him?"

This was the plaintive query of the mother of one of the 105 Air Force Academy Cadets who resigned in the midst of a mushrooming cloud of deceit, dishonor, and the sale of exams for fun and profit.

The Pentagon last week dispatched a special investigation panel to Colorado Springs to find the answers to this and other questions raised by a cheating scandal that tarnished a bright, newly-minted tradition and cast yet another shadow on the integrity of our generation. Their findings:

Just before Christmas, a third year cadet obtained a key, opened a locker, and stole some examinations.

The cadet corps, in the process of final exams, was an ideal outlet for the examination papers, and the cadet was eager to dispense his "academic care packages" among them—for a profit.

The starting price was reported to be $1, running up to $10, depending on how desperate the particular cadet or how well equipped he was to pay.

Hiring a sales force of 10 other cadets—on a strictly commission basis, of course—he eagerly proceeded to market his commodity.

The only pitfall in their private little goldfield was the Cadet Honor Code, a stringent one which stipulates that a cadet not only must not "lie, steal or cheat" but "must not tolerate it in others."

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS

A special election will be held to fill the vacancies that have occurred in the Student Senate this semester. Nomination papers will be available in the R.S.O. Office Friday, Feb. 5. These papers must be returned to the R.S.O. office by 5 P.M. on Friday, Feb. 12. The election will be held on Tuesday, Feb 16.

Candidates are reminded that, upon returning nomination papers, they must sign a paper stating that they have read the election rules and will abide by them. Failure to do this will result in disqualification of the nomination papers and the candidate.

The following vacancies exist:

In a report submitted to the Faculty Senate Jan. 7, Dr. Henry A. Lea of the music department called for a transfer of control of the Concert Association from students to the faculty.

The purpose of the report was stated to 1) inform the Senate "on how the concerts are currently selected and managed," 2) to examine "some educational and administrative aspects of the present procedure," and 3) to recommend "possible improvements."

Lea reported that since $16,710 of the Concert Association's budget of $19,210 comes from student tax funds, "ultimate control of the series rests with the students."

After outlining the specific procedure employed in selecting performers and in running the concerts, Lea asked, "Is this the best method of running a concert?"

When asked to comment on the Faculty Senate report, new Student Senate President Bill Landis said, "Regardless of the choice, I am opposed to any plan which would incorporate student tax appropriations, for the support of a concert association series without providing for student participation."

Lea contended that the present method is not the best and gave five reasons:

1) A significant educational purpose is not served. 2) The present procedure is "time-consuming, cumbersome and inefficient." 3) "It exposes the concert series to a possible veto on extra-musical ground such as attendance figures and the popularity or fame of the performers 4) "It leaves control in the hands of laymen in a field that requires expert knowledge." 5). It operates in an area which is better served by the faculty and in which the University should assume some responsibility because of its specialied nature and curricular status.

Lea said in his report that a look at the Student Senate budget of $166,000 for this year "shows that substantial portions of this money are misassigned; that is to say, some of these funds should really be in the budgets of individual departments."

Lea contended further that the "present system forces departments to appeal to the Student Senate for funds to carry on their activities after their own funds have been exhausted." This situation, Lea said, "introduces student government into a field in which it has no place."

The report to the Faculty Senate cited two possible alternatives to the present system. One was to retain the student tax, but to let the University operate to concert series, and the other was to institute a subscription series.

In regard to his first plan, Lea said that the administration "could probably use moral persuasion" to gain student support for his proposal. When Lea, who is on a sabbatical leave this semester, was contacted by the Collegian in regard to his second plan, he said that "the practical aspects are difficult."

He thought the best plan would be to have a music or concert fee appended to the tuition fee by the University administration and let a faculty committee operate the series with University funds until such time in the future as the concert series was able to support itself on the subscription basis.

When asked by the Collegian about the factors leading to the submitting of the report to the faculty senate, Lea said it was precipitated primarily because he "felt that the students didn't know enough about music." Contributing to this lack of knowledge, Lea said, were the students' cultural background and the University's recent agricultural and scientific orientation. Therefore he said, "The students cannot be expected to know enough about the arts."

The disposition of the report is now in the hand of a seven man committee appointed by the Faculty Senate.

and because of you my fellow senators, I am not sorry for the road I have travelled."

SHOWING THEIR admiration and appreciation for Michael's work and leadership, the Senate members responded with a spontaneous, standing ovation for their ex-president, and unanimously passed a motion of gratitude on behalf of the Senate and the student body.

Following the presentation of the gavel to Michael, Vice-President William Landis assumed the position of president, a position he said he felt "badly about taking at this time", and referred to his work with Michael as a "rewarding situation . . . he is one of the best presidents I have ever seen."

THE RESIGNATION and succession of Landis as president creates the problem of how to fill the vice-presidential vacancy.

Since there is no clear method of succession legally acceptable under the Student Government Association By-Laws, the Executive Council will hold a special meeting Tuesday evening, open to all senators, to discuss and determine the best method of filling the vacant Senate position.

Landis postponed the originally scheduled Constitutional Convention because the necessary quorum of class officers was not reached, and proceeded with the regular Senate meeting, first suspending the rules so that Senators Peter Bosworth (Commuter) and Richard Hatfield ('65 at-large) could be sworn into office.

IN HIS FINANCIAL report for the period ending Jan. 30, Senate Treasurer Joe Piecuch stated that the amount raised for Tangerine Bowl expenses was a little over $5,200, and that the amount which must be drawn from Student Tax Funds is still uncertain but could cost between $3,600 and $4,100.

Civil Rights Conference Set — Area Costs Reduced

With the registration of over two hundred delegates from outside the four-college area, plans for the forthcoming civil rights conference near completion.

In order to ensure the participation for students and faculty from within the area it was decided to offer them full registration privileges, but at a reduced cost. Because funds from other sources were sufficient to cover major expenses, it was deemed possible to allow registration from the University for two dollars, instead of the full seven which other delegates pay.

Registration as a delegate will provide round trip transportation to Mt. Holyoke on Friday night, Feb. 12, and reserved seating at panels and seminars. In addition, it will allow free admission to the party Saturday night, where there will be folk singing and a dance band.

Delegates will also receive an information packet on the speakers and the subjects and a copy of the proceedings of the conference.

Registration at the University will take place on Monday, Feb. 8, in the Student Union lobby. The number of participants allowed to register has been limited to 175 from each school, therefore, it would be advisable to register early, while openings are still available. Others who wish to attend these functions will be admitted with the general public, and only after the delegates have been seated.

This Sunday there will be a general meeting for all those interested in working on the final arrangements for the conference. The meeting will be held in the Nantucket Room at 7 p.m. At this time, assignments for drivers, ushers, registrars, and information desk people will be given out. Workers will receive their staff stickers at this time. Volunteers are also needed to help make up the registration packets on Monday night in the Hampden Room. This will begin at 6:30, and will probably be over by 10.

Under-Table Rebellion Brews

Campus Drinkers Ignore Regulations

Reprinted from Dalhousie Gazette

Canadian students' attitude towards university liquor regulations is generally one of overt acceptance or "bottle-under-the-table" rebellion, a nation-wide survey showed this month.

The survey indicated most students show utter indifference or contempt for university liquor regulations; regulations are ignored on almost all Canadian campuses and students usually get away with it.

Disciplinary action by campus or city and provincial police usually occurs only when drinking is accompanied by rowdy and disorderly public behavior, notably at football games.

Queens university reported liquor regulations have been strongly enforced on campus after a bottle was thrown from the football stadium injuring a passerby on the street last year.

But, in most cases, campus police and university authorities turn a blind eye to breaches of university liquor rules.

In a probe of disciplinary problems associated with university liquor regulations, the survey asked the editors of campus newspapers to assess student attitudes toward regulations, enforcement by campus police, and fraternity practices toward provincial regulations.

A majority of universities reported a total ban on liquor on campus but only one of the dry universities, Sir George Williams, said rules were fully accepted and respected. Of the others, three blamed enforced teetotaling on religious tradition.

Some universities reported liquor regulations are strictly enforced and students are at least careful to obey in the open.

On the other hand, at the University of Guelph, liquor regulations are reportedly disregarded. Bottles are openly brandished at football games, although theoretically the penalty for drinking on campus is exnulsion.

Three universities said drinks are permitted in designated locations on campus, or at official off-campus university functions. At Bishop's university, where students are allowed a "quiet drink" in residence rooms, and at Carleton university, where alcohol is allowed in residence and in the official student lounge, few problems concerning liquor were reported.

The survey showed that while city and provincial police strictly enforce provincial liquor laws, most campus police act only when offenses cannot be ignored.

RD PLAYS BOW IN BOWKER
Tonight and Tomorrow

A telephone keeps ringing. Finally someone shouts "Is that the real telephone?" and scurries when the answer's "yes." With final run throughs to make sure lines are straight, remaking an entire costume, losing and finding a wig in a minute's time or painting a set while rehearsal is in progress, Roister Doister Three One Act Plays are getting ready for their debut this Friday and Saturday evenings. At 8:15 this completely student directed, produced and operated theater association will present their two and a half hour production of Moliere's "The Forced Marriage," Ionesco's "The Bald Soprano," and Brechts "The Private Life of the Master Race."

This weekends' performances will be the culmination of weeks of rehearsal, including seven days a week during intersession. Bowker Auditorium is where you laugh at a Moliere Comedy celebrating its 301-st anniversary this week. Ionesco represents the Theater of the Absurd, while Brecht portrays the plight of the Jewess married to a German doctor in Hitler's Germany of 1935.

The accent is on entertainment this weekend. For an enjoyable evening, don't miss the Roister Doister Three One-Act Plays. Tickets are on sale at the Student Union Lobby Counter or may be purchased at the door for one dollar.

WFCR Features Opera

Radio Station WFCR (FM) will broadcast a festival of grand opera during Feb. at 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Hosting the series will be Philip Keppler and Edwin London, both of the department of music at Smith College, who will give background material and tell the story of the opera.

Individual operas will be presented on the January programs. During February the entire series will be devoted to outstanding recordings of operas of Giuseppe Verdi, made available by RAI of the Italian Radio and Television Corporation, and not previously heard in this area.

— FROM THE WIRES —

A campus committee at State University of New York, Buffalo, achieved a decrease in the price of milk products furnished by the school's food service.

The food supply firm conceded the milk produce prices were undoubtedly out of line after the committee compiled facts and figures related to wholesale and retail food costs at UB and other institutions, says the campus newspaper, SPECTRUM. The student committee now is checking prices of juices, pastries and salads. (ACP).

(CPS-CUP) — The possibility of completing an entire undergraduate career—from registration to bachelor's degree — without ever attending classes will be offered 75 U. S. college freshmen next September.

The experiment — underwritten by a $325,000 grant from the Ford Foundation—will be launched at three liberal arts colleges: Alleghany (Pa.), Colorado college and Lake Forest (Ill.).

A national selection committee will pick 25 students from the freshman class at each college for the program. All will be talented students with accelerated high school preparation.

The chosen undergraduates will then pursue their first degrees through faculty-guided independent study, free of usually required courses, class attendance, grades and credits.

Each student will have, however, a faculty advisor in the role of preceptor, critic and guide. Each will also have special access to visiting scholars, lecturers and artists.

MINNEAPOLIS (CPS) — Students at the University of Minnesota recently ran a nursery school—for college students.

College students attending the school, which met in the university's student union, busily played with building blocks, modeling clay, crayons and board games.

The school was named "Mother Luck's Nursery.

Mother Luck's charges were not going through a second childhood brought on by the pressures of final examinations—as the casual observer might have deduced—but were actually staging a protest demonstration against a decision by the student union's Board of Governors to card playing in the building's grill area.

George Burke is an attorney and city councilor from the city of Quincy. David Bartley is a former teacher and member of the General Court. Both were co-captains and star guards on the 1954' '55 and '56 University of Massachusetts teams, which had the best record in basketball history with seventeen wins and only six losses.

STADIUM SET FOR SEPT.

The new home of the Redmen football team, under construction since September, is on its way to completion on schedule for the 1965 football season.

The stadium is being built along Route 116, just south of the southwest dormitory complex construction site. It will seat 24,000, about triple the capacity at Alumni field.

During the past few seasons, it became apparent that Alumni field was too small to accommodate the increasing numbers attending UMass football games and a new stadium was the only solution. When plans for building a new administration building on Alumni field were announced, it became more obvious that a new stadium would be needed.

Many have expressed concern that next season may arrive before the field is completed, but the athletic department reports that work is on schedule. Cement footings for the stadium have been poured in the past few weeks and work on the stadium itself is expected to move rapidly once under way. A cement structure will rise on each side of the playing field. Both ends will be open for the present. The design allows for the north end to be closed, making a horseshoe-shaped bowl, if future years find 24,000 too small a canacity.

In addition to the stadium, a facilities building is being built to provide rest rooms for spectators, locker rooms for home and visiting teams, rooms for game officials plus offices and meeting rooms for the football coaching staff. This building will be just south of the stadium.

At present, there are no roads or walks giving access to the stadium but plans show a complete system of entrance and exit for cars and pedestrians to avoid the chronic jams on North Pleasant street after a game at Alumni field. The student entrance will cut through the new dormitory complex which should make the walk as short as possible to the main campus. Also under way are parking facilities expected to hold thousands of cars.

Michael's Resignation

Wednesday night Senate President George Michael resigned his position due to academic pressures. For the second consecutive year the Student Senate President has been forced to step down for personal reasons. Student leaders realize that their position will affect their academic and extracurricular lives, but they cannot jeopardize their entire academic career.

In an earlier editorial it was stated that the Student leaders have a responsibility which will affect their entire college existence. However, the University community as a whole must realize that they have a responsibility to the students who work for them. The community must establish a system of grants-in-aid and released time to permit the Student Leaders to be both students and leaders in the University community.

It is not a question of their being unable to handle their courses, former Senate President Michael is a top student. The University has become so big that the Senate President, Adelphians, Class Officers, and other Student Leaders have full time positions. They must be aided by the Community to maintain both the student and the leader aspects of their positions. They can only carry on to a certain point before even the most responsible of them must step down.

Stimulation or Frustration

How has English 25 affected your life?

At this time, three out of every four students at the University have taken the English 25 course. What is the result?

A course which is designed to give a student an introduction to a new field should stimulate him to further, on his own, his experience with that field of study.

But how does a student feel after completing the introductory course on Masterpieces of Western Literature? More likely than not, he never wants to see another "Masterpiece," let alone proceed to English 26.

If it is true (and of this there is little doubt) that the selections which are explored are truly masterpieces, then it should follow that students are not enjoying them because of the presentation.

This also is true.

It is more likely than not that Shakespear and Dante, two of the most feared names in Western literature, wrote their volumes of verse and prose to be enjoyed by those who read them. How would they feel if they knew that their great works, upon which they labored so hard, were today being dissected and mutilated to the point that the majority of their readers detested them?

But then, how can a student possibly enjoy Dante's "Inferno" when he knows that the next day he is to be tested as to "where in Hell" some minor character appeared?

There are TWO solutions to the problem. One calls for action by the students, the other calls for action from the English Dept.

The first solution is very simple. It requires only that the students stop buying the books used in the course and buy instead the review books, study guides, and other assorted "trots."

For these will give all the information required to pass the exams with flying colors, and in addition, as an added, extra benefit, they will present the student with the author's philosophy which would have otherwise gone unnoticed, preference being given to more important facts such as who fell off Circe's roof.

The other solution, by far the better one, will require a course re-evaluation on the part of the English Department. It will mean a revision of course material, and a drastic change in the presentation.

Only in this way will students be encouraged to further their reading, and truly benefit from the reading done in the course.

Anatomy of Dishonesty

The cheating scandal at the U.S. Air Force Academy has flared up as a scorching testimony of academic dishonestry. Similar investigations in the past have revealed that cheating in the nation's colleges and universities has become a popular and widespread practice. UMass is not free from this problem. In all probability, the sky-rocketing enrollment of the University has served as a catalyst for the spread of academic dishonesty on campus.

Educators cite various reasons for the prevalance of academic dishonesty. Some point an accusing finger at professionalism in college sports. Others blame parents for not instilling in their children a sense of honesty. Still others accuse professors for not developing sufficient preventive measures to cheating.

Undoubtedly, all these accusations are justified to a certain degree. However, they don't project the whole picture. They don't account for the primary motivating force behind cheating.

The crux of the problem centers around the substitution of grades for genuine academic stimulation. At the University, as in most colleges and universities throughout the country, grades dominate student life. They are shibboleths to success. Grades keep parents happy and make them send allowance checks. Grades impress employers and promise future jobs. Grades qualify students for scholarships. Grades determine a student's acceptance to graduate school.

It is this overemphasis on grades which provides students with the ideal device for cheating. Why should a student bother with the tedious task of studying when he can disguise his ignorance by cheating on exams?

The issue involved here is not intelligence but the appearance of intelligence. With grade-oriented study students are not motivated by personal curiosity, nor by the appreciation of knowledge for its own sake. Rather, what becomes important to students is that they convince their educators and employers of their apparent wisdom and thereby reap social and economic rewards.

Academic dishonesty will continue to increase until colleges and universities stop selling education as a grade commodity. Educators must introduce a scholastic program which recognizes and rewards moral integrity and academic initiative over mere accumulation of good grades. Such recognition of positive character traits will reflect on the maturity of an educational institution and innoculate it against the disease of academic dishonestry.

War Cry

The British Salvation Army weekly, War Cry, recently suggested that the "violence, illicit sex, gambling and gormandizing" of the late Ian Fleming's James Bond books may be demoralizing British youth.

"Violence in the Bond books reaches psychopathic degrees. Cruelty seems to be for the love of cruelty: sadism is present, too," the newspaper said.

It then suggested that, "As most Bond fans are youngish, it may not be coincidence that the . . . criminal statistics for England and Wales show a nine per cent increase of indictable offenses, including robbery, murder, and other crimes of violence."

It is granted that violence gambling, and illicit sex are enough to corrupt any callow youth. Their standards, however, raise some interesting thoughts about another, even more famous, work of literature.

This book also includes many scenes which, by British Salvation Army standards, must be judged quite degrading for "youngish" readers. Among them:

An exotic dancer, by a shameless display of her charms, so bewitches a head of state that he orders the brutal beheading of a ranking religious figure.

A swashbuckling young hero, easily equal of secret agent 007, tears a lion asunder with his bare hands, lights torches to fox's tails to burn down grainfields and kills a thousand men with a jawbone of an ass (surely a greater feat than the havoc wrought by the karate blows of Goldfinger's henchman Odd Job.) The hero, unfortunately, is seduced and betrayed by a woman he had trusted.

The book includes one of the great erotic poems of history, other tales of conquest, rape and plunder, a detailed account of the sadistic torture and brutal death of a carpenter who was captured by a ruthless conquerer which had bribed one of his confidants to learn his whereabouts, descriptions of wild banquets and numerous other instances of "violence, illicit sex, gambling, and gormandizing."

Perhaps the British Salvation Army or some other censorship-minded group should become aroused and attack this book as corrupt and degrading to our youth.

Who knows, if they did people might even start to read it.

No Men Allowed

To the Editor:

Did you ever wonder how a dog feels when he strolls calmly onto a summer beach and is met with a sign, "NO DOGS ALLOWED?" Many men on this campus know the feeling exactly, and those who don't only need to walk into Eugene Field house to experience it. The feeling may be even a little worse than that experienced by dogs because the numerous "NO MEN ALLOWED" signs aren't even printed neatly. Worse than that, the scrap paper used for the signs is plastered to painted walls with mending tape, not masking tape! It's an insult! What ever happened to the informative but kind sign that says "Residents Only?" Unless you girls want to go to men's dorms to find men, do not make it unpleasant for men when they come to your dorm.

In Appreciation

To the Editor:

I read the review of my book, "White Teacher in a Black School," in your good paper and I just want you to know how pleased I was with it.

My book is not intended as a personal slap at anyone but rather an attempt to honestly face the vital issues involved in American Negro education today. If the standards are the same in the black school as in the white school a high school diploma can then be equal and only thus can true educational opportunity exist. It would be far wiser for the Negro people to obtain work on personal merit through equal competition instead of blanket policies which downplay the role of the individual and his responsibility.

Again, my thanks for granting space to that fine review of "White Teacher in a Black School." There is talk of making a motion picture of it and I hope it will come to pass following the book line and thus reach the widest audience.

History Haze

To the Editor:

It came as a shock to many students at pre-registration that they could not pre-register for an advanced history course without the permission of the instructor.

The student had to obtain permission from the instructor of a given course to pre-register for the course.

This, however, did not ensure the student's enrollment in the course. If the instructor felt that he wanted to limit his course to history majors only, then he was free to do so. I do not protest the fact that history majors should have preference for a history course over non-history majors. But I do feel that if a student has to obtain permission to pre-register for a course then the student should be able to take the course.

To the best of my knowledge no other department requires a student to obtain permission to pre-register for a course.

I, for one, vehemently protest this authoritarian and arbitrary action on the part of the history department. If all departments were allowed to pursue this policy the resulting red tape would be enough to discourage all but the most persevering student from taking a course outside his major department. Chaos would result if such a widespread policy were adopted. We would have a large number of students with no advanced courses outside their major. We would have students lacking graduation credits. This must not happen!

NO SMOKING

Students are reminded that the Faculty Senate, at its meeting of Nov. 12, 1964, voted to recommend to the administration that smoking be prohibited in classrooms while classes are in session. This policy, based on considerations of health, comfort and safety, has the approval of the president. The cooperation of all concerned with enforcement will be earnestly appreciated.

New Course Rules Established

Upon recommendation of the Board of Admission and Records and with several amendments, the following regulations for Course Enrollment and Withdrawals were offered by the Faculty Senate on Thursday, December 3. These regulations go into effect during the second semester of the 1964-65 academic year.

To add, drop, or change a course, the student must obtain the signature of the instructors concerned, the faculty advisor, and the appropriate officer in the Registrar's Office. Signed cards are to be filed with the Registrar. Instructors and advisors are referred to the Manual for Faculty Advisers for specific information.

Exception to the regulations are made only in cases of protracted illness, critical personal or academic problems, and then only with the approval of the student's Academic Dean based upon recommendation of the appropriate one of the following: Health Service, Deans of Men, Women, or Students, or Counseling and Guidance Office.

ADD PERIOD — Within the period of up to and including ten academic days from the beginning of a semester may add, drop, or substitute a course without notation on his record. Monday through Saturday are defined as full academic days. No courses may be added after this period.

W PERIOD — Within the period of the 11th academic day and up to and including 28 academic days from the beginning of a semester a student may drop a course subject to the minimum load regulations above and the notation of withdrawal on his record as a W is the only penalty. The W period is extended to six academic days beyond the closing date for mid-semester grades (printed in the University Calendar) for the first semester freshmen and first semester transfers.

WF PERIOD—After the 28th academic day and subject to general regulations above, a student may not drop a course without having a WF entered on his record at the time of withdrawal. This grade is figured in the cumulative average.

Withdrawal from the University:

Prior to the closing date for mid-semester grades, when a student withdraws from the University, grades of W will be noted on his record. The portion of the semester will not count as one of the ten semester permitted toward graduation.

After the closing date for mid-semester grades, grades of WF or WP will be entered, as appropriate, for all courses in which the student is enrolled. The WF's will count in the cumulative average. The semester will count as one of the ten semesters permitted for graduation.

Incomplete grade:

The grade of incomplete shall be reported only when a portion of the assigned or required class work or the final examination has not been completed because of necessary absence of the student, serious illness, extreme personal circumstances, or extended scholarly research. If the student's record is such that he would fail the course regardless of the result of the missing work, he is to be given a failure.

In order to qualify for an incomplete a validation form is obtained from the instructor. One would not be issued by him if the quality of the work to date did not justify it. This form is countersigned by the Health Services or the appropriate Personnel or Academic Dean with copies returned to the instructor and filed with the Registrar.

A student can obtain credit for an incomplete only by finishing the work of the course within two weeks from the date of the final examination. The grade of incomplete is converted to a failure if the course requirements have not been satisfied by this time. Exceptions to the two week deadline may be requested by the appropriate agency in cases of protracted illness or critical personal problems. The inicollege careers in the summer, take the following fall off, and return for the spring semester to take the place of normal dropouts from the total student population.

Commenting on the experiment, President Lederle said he was pleased with the results and would continue the program next summer. Lederle was concerned about the students making the adjustment from a relatively relaxed summer school environment to the more demanding pace of the regular semester.

The President also stressed the importance of creating personal ties on a large campus, "We don't want you to get the idea it's too big or impersonal. Teachers do take an interest. No one here wants to see you flunk out. Our objective is to see that you get through and get an education." He advised that students make the effort to meet their professors before it was too late in the semester.

Lederle noted that the University this class graduated from would not be the same one they entered last June. By 1968 the total enrollment will have risen to 14,500, Bartlett Hall will have an extension, an administration building will occupy the old football field, the Southwest Residences will be completed, housing 5,200 students in 22-story buildings, the stadium will be completed and a Fine Arts building will cover the road that now winds around the south end of the campus pond.

Lederle noted in passing that The Collegian would probably criticize the every move of the administration but that they would continue in their tireless effort to emphasize the importance of the individual.

Why must the University grow so large? Lederle said, "The reason we do it is because we've got to give them the same opportunity their fathers had."

George Michael, then Senate President, whom Dean Field called "the Tangerine King," compared the adjustment the Freshmen must make to the adjustment that the students living in the Orchard Hill Complex were forced to take in stride. He urged that each student, "seek his own personal atmosphere."

John Robinson, the President of the Class of 1968, quipped that the class "was like a new cadillac without lacquer, not complete without you." He informed his constituents that they had been a campaign issue before his election and that they were an economic issue after the election.

Dean Field noted that Robinson had made every effort to assure the integration of the special class into the class and the University.

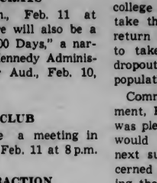
Next week the performance of the "swing-shift scholars" will be examined. Their activities during the fall will also be discussed in a future article.

LIBRARY FINES

Books now in circulation and due between February 2 and 22 or now overdue will be charged the 2¢ rate. All books overdue after February 22 will be subject to the 25¢ a day fine. With the beginning of this current semester, books will be due only on Mondays thereby increasing the length of loan for undergraduates in some instances to 20 days.

Ford Motor Company is:

variety



Robert Anderson
A.B., Univ. of No. Carolina
M.B.A., Stanford University

It's been written that "variety is the spice of life." But at many companies it's difficult to obtain a wide range of work experiences. A college graduate can join a company, get locked into one type of activity and stay there and stay there and stay there. That's not the way we do it at Ford Motor Company where our young men may work in several areas to develop their full capabilities. We believe that a thorough grounding in many phases of our business is one of the best ways to cultivate management talent. An example: Bob Anderson of our finance staff.

Since Bob came to us in July, 1963, he's been actively involved in five important areas of the Company. As a member of our finance staff, he has reviewed budget and cost programs of a division marketing cars, another manufacturing tractors and subsidiaries engaged in automobile financing and insurance. In addition, Bob was selected to assist in the 1964 national labor-management negotiations. His present assignment is as a staff budget analyst for product engineering and styling. Because of experiences like these, Bob will be able to channel his career toward the activity that interests him most.

As a large automobile concern, Ford Motor Company needs people who can handle a wide variety of assignments. Our college graduates come to us with all types of educational backgrounds. And many of them move into management positions unrelated to their degrees. If a fast-moving career appeals to you, see our representative when he visits your campus. He may have the spice for your future.

"In White America" Fills S.U. Ballroom

by Norm Trump

People were turned away at the door Thursday night at 8:00 when the Distinguished Visitors Program (DVP) presented "In White America" to a capacity crowd of 800 in the Student Union Ballroom.

The play, using a sketchbook format, showed the tribulations of the Negro in America and was based almost entirely on documents dating from 1788 to the present.

THE CAST OF THREE NEGROES and four Caucasians presented the material by means of monologues and dialogues, with chairs, benches and a table as the only props.

The play was divided into two acts, the first dealing with the Negroes' plight in slavery and the second with their problems in freedom.

Act One began with a graphic account of the barbaric treatment accorded Africans on slaving ships.

Following this, an excerpt from a letter by Thomas Jefferson showed him to believe that "slaves are inferior to whites in body and mind."

IT WAS IN ACT TWO, however, dealing with the Negro and his white opposition after the Civil War, that the play's high points were reached.

Andrew Johnson was shown granting an interview to two Negroes from North Carolina, who asked him to make a statement on the voting privileges of Negroes.

Johnson neatly side-stepped the issue by claiming that the people, not he, had to decide on the matter.

Woodrow Wilson, when having an interview with a representative of the NAACP, claimed that segregation, far from being a hindrance to Negro development, was a definite benefit.

AN ELECTRIC PERFORMANCE was given by Anthony Palmer, depicting a Southern Senator after the Civil War, defending the lynching of Negroes.

Palmer, using the Senator's words, made the claim that Negroes who ravished white women were outside the pale of the law and deserved to be lynched.

A scene from the trial of a Ku Klux Klan member who had participated in the brutalizing of five Negroes, showed that his type is no new phenomenon.

Most of the Second Act detailed the struggle of the Negroes to gain the freedom promised them in the Emancipation Proclamation.

ONE CRITICISM of the play might be that the documents were almost exclusively chosen to show the white man as a callous or ignorant bogyman and the Negro as the virtuous victim.

It cannot be denied that the Negro has suffered and been humiliated. He does have cause for cynicism.

In a drama such as this, however, where the audience's feelings are deliberately channeled on such an important topic, one wonders whether there is not more to the story.

When, in a song at the end, the cast asks, "Which side are you on?", the audience should not have been steered into believing that the only alternatives offered are either being completely for or completely against the Negro.

But these criticisms do not detract from the sincerity of the actors and their polished performance.

"In White America" is a stimulating play, and as such deserves the extended applause it received at its conclusion.

Pictured here the cast of "In White America" who appeared last night in a DVP play.

Equestrians Activities

Unknown to most UMass students, the University has an active Equestrian Club whose main program centers around the Horse Barn, located behind Machmer Hall.

Most of the activities, including riding, driving and training, utilize the University Morgans. Free riding instruction is available during the week for club members.

In order to acquaint more students with the club, a skating party has been planned for Saturday Feb. 6 at the Campus Pond. All are invited to attend.

Dave Lizotte placed second while on side horse, Jim Dusenburg, Dan St. John and Bill Payne unexpectedly broke in their exercise. In the events that followed—trampoline, horizontal bar and long horse, the UMass team came back strong, trying to break the edge that the Pitt team had acquired in the first two events. Dave Lizotte took a second on trampoline and and Joe Parner placed second parallel bars, while Al Carver and third, on high par.

The highlight of the meet was Al Cohen's longhorse vault, which brought a score of 9.45 from the judges and an unquestionable first place for the UMass team. This places Al up with some of the best vaulters in the country.

In the last two events, parallel bars and still rings Pete Grosso of UMass took a second on rings and a third on parallel bars. This however was not enough, as the Pittsburgh team had gained enough points to win the meet.

The gymnasts will meet Syracuse in a home meet today and Temple University on Saturday, Feb. 6 in Boyden Gymnasium at 3:30 and 1:30 respectively.

Show All-Around Strength

Mermen Down H.C. 63-31

Joe Rogers' Mermen pulled out their first win of the season in overpowering Holy Cross 63-31 on Tues., Jan. 12 at Boyden PE.

UMass showed all-around strength in beating the Crusaders, as a number of swimmers turned in their best performances to date.

Dick Daniels took firsts in the 200 and 500 freestyles, with teammate Frank Wilson taking a strong second in the 200 and Bill Cowern a third in the 500. Wilson, who has been steadily honing down his time in the 200, turned in a 2:08.6, his best yet.

CHIP WYSER swam a good meet, winning the 50 freestyle and taking a second in the 100, Lovitch taking the third in that 100. Dan O'Mara's 2:32.8 was outstanding, but not enough to beat the Cruseaders' Foley in the individual medley. Later, Dan came back to take second in the breaststroke behind co-capt. Charlie Monnier, who won that event in 2:35 flat. Hoffman took third in the medlay.

In the diving, UM showed considerable strength, with Tom Hanley taking a smooth first and sophomore Bruce Colby picking up the third. The big surprise of the meet was Walt Orzak's upset victory in the backstroke. Walt's 2:32.2 represents a net improvement of roughly tihrty seconds over his early season performances. Sophomore Steve Levy swam the 200 fly in 2:43.2, but was, like O'Mara, a victim of the Crusaders' Foley.

UM swept the relays, with Orzak, Monnier, Levy, and Lovitch winning the medlay relay, and the team of Wilson, Lovitch, Daniels, and Wyser, taking the free-style finale.

IT WAS a well-deserved victory, with the points being distributed over a large number of swimmers. Joe Rogers is watching optimistically as the team's former weak spots are definitely evolving into strengths. His team faces a big test against Coast Guard Academy tomorrow (Sat.) morning at eleven o'clock in Boyden.

Two Weekend Meets

Gymnasts Lose To Penn State, Pitt.

by Dick Cardiff

The gymnasts were on the road just before vacation as they met Penn State on Saturday, Jan. 9, and the University of Pittsburgh on Monday, Jan. 11.

The strong Penn Stater's proved too much for the UMass team, as the contest was held before a crowd of 6,800 spectators. The events that the Redmen placed in were long horse, parallel bars, and trampoline.

The meet at Pittsburgh proved to quite a battle as Pitt overcame UMass 67-52. For the UMass team in floor exercise,

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

With the beginning of the Spring semester the Intramural department, directed by Chet Gladchuck, is prepared to aid the students in all fields of athletics.

The intramural basketball tournament has another month to go with champions still to be determined in all the dorm leagues, the fraternities and the independent leagues. An All-Star team will be picked by the participants in each league and individual honors will be awarded for leading scorers and rebounders.

The IM handball tournament, a double elimination affair, has reached the quarterfinal round and all participants are urged to check the bulletin board outside the office in Boyden building for the remaining scheduled matches.

Returning students and incoming freshman should be reminded that the Intramural department offers a wide variety of sports to enable the student to relax and keep in shape at the same time. To look forward to during the Spring semester are the softball tournaments in which Mr. Gladchuck hopes to have many more teams participate than in the past. Also included in the program will be a vollyball and squash tournament. Anyone wishing to enter the squash tournament must do so by Tuesday of next week. Play commences February 16th.

The All-Star football game films are now available at the Intramural Office for any organization's entertainment.

Basketball . . .

the margin, but it was too little too late.

The capacity crowd, obviously disappointed in the game, began to leave at the ten minute mark. Cousy substituted early and often.

CARTER, IN PACING THE EAGLES to their fifth win in a row, had 30 points while Austin added 17. Everybody scored in the BC lineup. BC's record in now 13-6 as they will undoubtedly continue in the number three slot behind Providence and UConn.

Hill had 20 points in the second half for the game high of 31. John Lisack had 21 as he set a season high by sinking 13 of 15 foul shots. Tim Edwards contributed 18 points and 14 rebounds, but he along with Charlie O'Rourke were stymied underneath by the fine defensive play of Willie Wolters who must have blocked ten shots.

With their 8-6 record, the Redmen will try to keep in contention in the Yankee Conference race with a victory over the Catamounts, a team they defeated 120-84 at UMass. The same thing occurred last year, but when the Redmen traveled to Burlington they were defeated 98-85.

A loss would be disastrous as it would give the Redmen two losses in the conference. Next week will just about decide the season for the Redmen as they face UConn on Tuesday and Rhode Island on Friday both at home. These two games could go a long way toward deciding the conference title for the 1964-65 season.

Redmen Attempt To Snap Slump At UVM After Losses To Pitt., B.C.

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts basketball team looks toward Yankee Conference action this weekend as it tries to recover from two surprising defeats in its last two outings.

The fact that the club lost was not the primary surprise as both the Pittsburgh and Boston College games were rated even but the surprise was the ease with which the visitors to Curry Hicks Cage won. Pitt won 89-74 as they never trailed in the game, BC rolled to a 109-97 verdict over the Redmen.

PITT HAD only won three games all year prior to their appearance at Amherst, but the Panthers displayed a scrappy club that got good scoring from Larry Szykowny with 24 and Daryle Ruby with 21. The sparkplug, however, was little 5'9" backcourt man Brian Fisher who spearheaded the aggressive Pitt defense.

The Panthers took the lead early in the game and UMass just never got very close after that. The margin reached as much as 14 before John Lisack and Clarence Hill combined to cut the margin to seven at the half. The zone press was used to good extent during this flurry. The score was 44-37 at intermission.

UMASS LOST the momentum and Pitt came out and quickly opened a 59-41 lead. The Redmen then got hot behind Hill and cut the margin to 65-60. A few missed passes and foul shots were decisive for the Redmen who saw Pitt run off eight straight points. Pitt then coasted to their fourth win against nine defeats.

Mass got its usual fine night from Hill who ended with 23 points while Lisack added 12. Tim Edwards had 11 with 14 rebounds. The Redmen did not have a good shooting night, far below their season's mark of .455.

The BC game was billed as an offensive show and it proved to be just that. The Redmen took an early lead as Jim Painten had five and Hill four. It was 14-8 in favor of the Redmen when they suddenly went cold.

It was seven minutes before another UM field goal was scored, and during that time, Ted Carver and John Austin combined to push the Eagles to a 31-18 lead. For all intents and purposes, that was the ball game. UMass never got closer then ten points after that.

The margin was 51-38 at the half as Austin had 17 points and Carter 15. The Redmen had 11 from Hill and 12 from Lisack.

Any hopes for a rally were wiped out in the first two minutes of the second half as BC scored nine points as Carter got five. UMass missed six shots in a row and trailed 60-38. Bob Cousy then lifted Austin with 16 minutes left in the game as the BC star got one of his infrequent rests.

With 10 minutes left it was 83-58, the widest margin of the game. Hill began to sink his shots and the Redmen cut into

by Rick Kerwin

Before the largest crowd of the season, UMass hosted an undefeated B.C. freshman team on registration night. Starting off slowly the freshmen fell 10 points behind within five minutes of play. During this period Kelleher scored six points for the visitors. UMass just couldn't find the range while B.C. played precision ball. The Little Redmen, however, began to give the large crowd something to cheer about as they fought back under the leadership of Billie Tindall. At one point Tindall scored ten straight points while controlling the boards at the same time. Finally, at the 3:46 mark of the first half UMass. went ahead and built up a five point lead. B.C. brought it down to three as the half ended 35-32. In the rise to the lead Tindall grabbed six rebounds and led all scorers with 14 points.

Gasperack came off the bench with 10 points and three important rebounds. Kissane, the 6'8" center for B.C. had seven points and six rebounds. The leading scorer for BC. at the end of the half was Kelleher with ten points.

In the beginning of the second half UMass started where it left off. Tindall scored two quick baskets. But BC showed the fans why they hadn't lost a game by playing steady ball as the Red-men's lead slowly dissipated. Scoring easily, B. C. wiped out the seven point lead and went ahead with a little over ten minutes remaining. At this point BC began to freeze the ball displaying that they were drilled in the fundamentals of ball control. Unfortunately, it was much too soon to begin freezing the ball and the Eagles lost their momentum. A couple of steals, a couple of two for one point exchanges, and UMass came within two. Vittallo scored eight points, most of these coming from under the boards, in the late stages of the period. BC remained on top as the lead ranged between 4 and 1 in the final minutes. Kvancz hit three clutch foul shots and was at the line with seven seconds left and the score, BC 64, UMass 62.

A good shot by Greg Rand helped put the Redmen in this position. The crowd rose to its feet as Kvancz missed the shot, but unfortunately BC controlled the rebound and killed the clock. The crowd gave both teams a standing ovation as they left the court. BC has now ended four opponent's undefeated streaks. Tindall led all scorers with twenty six points and he also had twelve rebounds. In the final analysis, the biggest difference in the two fine teams was the color of their sneakers.

Legislators to Meet Students

The Junior Class Executive Committee is sponsoring a luncheon in Boston on Tuesday. In attendance will be Governor John Volpe, State Senate President Maurice Donahue, Representatives and Senators from the various districts of the Commonwealth, Miss Massachusetts, and 47 students from the University.

Bernie Dallas, Junior Class President, is co-chairman of the affair with Collegian editor, Scott Freedland. The luncheon is intended to acquaint the Governor, Legislators, and Miss Massachusetts with the Winter Carni weekend which the Executive Committee has been working on since last May.

A group of 50 will be leaving from in front of the Student Union at 8 a.m. on Tuesday morning. The student body will be represented by 43 members of the Executive Committee and the four Queen candidates. Dr. William Venman, Junior class advisor, Miss Mary Alden, Program Director, and a member of the administration will accompany the students.

At the luncheon the Governor, Legislators, and Miss Massachusetts will be presented with complementary tickets and souvenirs of the University. President Dallas feels that the luncheon is an excellent opportunity to acquaint not only the legislators, but the people of Boston, site of the new branch of the University, with the University.

Concert Association

Violinist at Student Union

Famed violinist Erica Morini will appear in concert tonight at 8 p.m. in the ballroom of the Student Union.

Miss Morini will be accompanied by Leon Pommers at the piano. The concert is being sponsored by the Concert Association, which each year bring a series of outstanding musical events to the campus.

The evening's program will include Handel's "Larghetto," "Variations on a Theme of Corelli" by Tartini and Kreisler, Brahms' "Sonata in D Minor, Op. 108," Beethoven's "Sonata in G Major, No. 8," and Henri Wienawski's "Souvenir de Moscou."

Miss Morini, called "one of the great violinists of the century" by critic Harold Schonberg of The New York Times, has fulfilled well over 1000 orchestral engagements in North America, Europe, Australia, and the Far East.

Since settling in the United States, she has toured the country more than 20 times in recitals and in appearances with almost every major American symphony orchestra.

Her recordings for Decca, Deutsche Grammophon, and Westminster Records have met with praise comparable to that given Miss Morini's concerts and recitals.

Alfred Frankenstein of the Sar Francisco Chronicle, after hearing Miss Morini's recording of the Cesar Franck Sonata, compared her artistry to that of "Kreisler in his heyday."

UMass at Dartmouth Sought; Legislator Proposes Branch

By Dan Glosband
Managing Editor

A suggested incorporation of the proposed Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute into a third branch of the University proved to be the high spot of Senator Antone L. Silva's (D-New Bedford) parting Senate speech. The proposal was hailed by Senate Pres. Maurice Donahue (D-Holyoke) and Majority leader Kevin Harrington (D-Salem) as a solution to the tussel over SMTI's autonomy brought on by the Willis Report.

The Willis Commission, headed by Sen. Harrington, called for a revamping of the state's educational policies aimed at coordination on the secondary level. This idea presented an antithesis to the possibility of SMTI developing into a separate institution and rivaling the University. Silva's plan offered a diplomatic digression, and could easily quell the disturbance raised about the Willis report by incensed residents of the New Bedford-Fall River area who felt their educational needs were being slighted.

Silva urged the SMTI trustees, who have already begun operations under the eighteen million dollar grant they received from the Legislature, to approve his proposed final resolution definite action to be left to the present UMass trustees.

President Donahue noted the "great merits" of the plan as he saw them, and Sen. Harrington confirmed their agreement with the Education Commission Report.

The UMass Dartmouth branch "wouldn't have to fight for years and years for accreditation. It would have immediate accreditation.

Any faculty not available for immediate recruitment in the local area could be drawn "from the great university in Amherst."

If the merger takes place, young men and women from southeastern Massachusetts would be able to begin study next Sept. toward a university degree, confered by the University a well-known and accredited institution.

Many programs which could not be offered by SMTI could be offered next fall by the UMass branch.

It is asserted that parents of southeastern Massachusetts who cannot afford even the low expenses of a residential college education at UMass in Amherst could guarantee their children a first-rate university education within commuting distance.

Silva said he was particularly interested in the excellent liberal arts programs which a UMass branch could offer since 40 percent of the students applying for SMTI next fall want to enroll in liberal arts.

Donahue said there had been much "misunderstanding" in the arguments over public higher education in southeastern Massachusetts in recent months, and felt "the proposed merger would greatly strengthen public higher education in the commonwealth."

Harrington said such a transition of SMTI into a branch of the state university was directly in accord with the Massachusetts Education Commision's recommendation for coordinating higher education.

School of Agriculture Name Stays

After careful study, and after giving consideration to the increasing demand for agricultural college graduates, University President John W. Lederle announced that he would recommend to the University Board of Trustees "that the name of the College of Agriculture remain unchanged."

President Lederle's decision was based on a three-year study conducted by the faculty and administration of the College of Agriculture. The study took into consideration the shift in enrollments within the College from the agricultural production courses to such areas as wildlife biology, food science and technology, forestry, landscape architecture, etc.

Total enrollment in the College of Agriculture has increased 26% since 1960 and continues to grow. Total enrollment in agriculture this year is 1048. In Sept. 1964, 493 high school graduates applied for admission. Applicants for admission in Sept. 1965 are expected to exceed 600.

Provost Oswald Tippo noted that the recommendations for improved programs and operations in the colleges of agriculture at the six state universities, proposed in the New England Board of Higher Education study released last fall, have already been put into effect.

The recently released Massachusetts Education Study (Willis - Harrington Commission) report recommended that collegiate training in agriculture be offered in Massachusetts only at the University. In view of these recommendations and the increasing demand from potential students. President Lederle stated "that our efforts to improve the quality of higher education in the broad field of agriculture at the University will be continued."

"But," he also observed, "we will continue to insist upon economy and efficiency consistent with good education, and we will shift resources whenever necessary to meet the changing needs of the students and the Commonwealth."

Five Students Commissioned

One Army and four Air Force ROTC graduates were commissioned as Second Lieutenants in their respective services at a ceremony in Mahar Auditorium. The oaths of office were administered by the Professors of Air and Military Science. The guest speaker was Colonel Benjamin Cassiday, Secretary of the Air Staff at the Pentagon. The University Administration and Faculty were well represented. The new officers are: James A. Blanchard, Jr. (USA), Richard H. Johnson (USAF), Robert A. Moore (USAF), James W. Ruest (USAF), and Theron J. Sumner (USAF).

After the ceremony the graduates, their parents, and guests joined the military staff at the Faculty Club for a dinner.

Amherst College Purchases Home of Emily Dickinson

Amherst College has purchased the home of poet Emily Dickinson from the family of Mrs. Harvey C. Parke and the late Reverend Parke. Located on Main Street near the Amherst campus, the house has been owned by the Parke family since 1916.

Known as "the Old Homestead" and as "the Mansion" the property has long been associated with both the College and the town. Emily was born in the house in 1830 and died there in 1886.

The family did not always reside on Main Street. In 1833 Samuel Fowler Dickinson moved to Ohio (where he died in 1838) and sold the house to David Mack, Jr. of Middlefield, Mass. Edward Dickinson leased and lived in the east wing of his former home until 1840 when he purchased a house, no longer standing, on nearby Pleasant Street.

For fifteen years the family occupied that home before Edward repurchased the Main Street residence from Samuel E. Mack, son of David, in 1855. The College, by coincidence, owned the Dickinson's Pleasant Street home from 1856 to 1865.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD" remained the property of Austin's widow, Susan Gilbert Dickinson, until her death in 1913. In the settlement of her estate in 1916, the house was purchased by the late Reverend Parke, then rector of Grace Episcopal Church in Amherst.

After Mr. Parke left Amherst to serve another parish, he and his family dwelt in the house during the summer and, upon his retirement, he and Mrs. Parke made it their home. For many years Mrs. Parke opened the house to countless visitors interested in Emily Dickinson.

IN EARLY NOVEMBER THE HOUSE was designated a national monument in a ceremony at which Conrad L. Wirth, former director of the National Park Service, presented an historic plaque, and Prof. Richard B. Sewell, master of Ezra Stiles College at Yale University and an authority on Emily Dickinson, spoke on the poet.

David Parke, who negotiated the sale, expressed his mother's and his own satisfaction that their former home is now the property of the College which will maintain it as an historic building. Amherst intends to use it as a residence for a member of the faculty who will continue to make it available for public inspection as his time and schedule permit.

Once Upon A Snowy Time

"Once Upon A Time" in Umieland was a Winter Carnival. King Bernie and his royal assistants worked diligently to make the weekend a spectacular that his kingdom would always remember.

Umieland citizens prepared their snow sculptures many weeks in advance so that Friday evening, Feb. 19, at 8:30 p.m. they would all be able to attend the ball at the Ice Palace. The four prettiest princesses were there to await the crowning of the Queen by the Royal Governor Volpe.

Everyone in Umieland rose bright and early to be at the Pancake Breakfast by 9 A.M. on Saturday, Feb. 20th. After feasting on delicious pancakes the citizens scurried to the Umieland pond for the toboggan races, sleigh rides, and the speed skating show.

Swinging citizens of Umieland and other neighboring kindgdom came to see the Rock 'n Roll Show starring Bo Diddley, the Shirelles, Hank Ballard and the Midnighters, and the Isley Brothers with Jefferson Kaye from the capital of Bostonia on February 20, at 4:00 P.M.

"'Be bop" Umieland gals and guys hurried over to the new Copper Kettle to hear the Kingsmen wail out. More energetic gals and guys danced from 8-12, Saturday, Feb. 20.

The day of rest arrived, but everyone in Umieland rushed to the pond to watch the Ice Skating Show and the Ski Show, on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 21st. The highlights of the weekend finally arrived on Sunday, Feb.

Financial Aid Apply Now

Students having financial need for the summer of 1965 and/or the 1965-66 academic year should visit the Placement and Financial Aid Services office in Machmer Hall as soon as possible.

To be eligible for any form of financial assistance one must submit an application and a Parent's Confidential Statement prior to March 15, 1965. The necessary forms may be obtained from the Financial Aid office.

Five forms of financial assistance are available. These include monetary scholarships, undergraduate assistantships (work scholarships), part-time work, loans and work-study opportunities. Although there are specific requirements for each of these awards, sufficient coverage is now offered so that any student with a financial need may qualify for one or more of these forms of assistance.

A new Work-Study Program goes into effect this semester in addition to the other financial aids offered through the Placement and Financial Aid Services on campus.

Provided by the Economic Opportunity Act passed by the federal government, this work-study program allows any student who is from a low income family or who has no family regardless of academic rank (graduate or undergraduate) and regardless of cumulative quality point average to work under this program. A variety of jobs are available requiring 10 to 12 hours work per week. Payment for work performed will be received monthly.

Interested students should apply immediately at the Placement and Financial Aid Services office in Machmer Hall. Work will start as soon as proper qualification is determined.

Two Receive Awards

Two UMass staff members have been awarded gold medals and $1000 each awards for outstanding contributions to their fields.

Receiving the awards from the Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture were horticulturist Franklin W. Southwick of Amherst, and Warren D. Whitcomb, entomologist emeritus at the UMass Waltham Field Station.

Horticulturist Southwick was honored for his contributions to the important apple industry of the state through research on fruit-thinning chemicals, the post harvest physiology of apples, and controlled atmosphere storage techniques.

Dr. Southwick started in 1948 as a research professor at UMass, became department of horticulture science head in 1963, and has headed the newly-formed department of plant and soil sciences since July 1964.

UNICEF Coordinator To Speak

A talk will be given by Paul Edwards, Acting Director for the Public Information Division of the United Nations Children's Fund in the Main Lounge of Eugene Field House, Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 8 p.m.

Mr. Edwards has done work co-ordinating the Peace Corps and UNICEF. Through his efforts, a close association has developed between the two organizations.

Mr. Edwards' background is varied, including service with the American Red Cross, assignments undertaken with newspapermen, and resident representative in Pakistan.

Profiles In Education

Would a professor live in his office almost all day and night? Would he always be available to his students? Would he write directions to his house on his office schedule? Would he offer himself as a date to the lucky holder of a raffle ticket in order to help a student cause? Would a professor help finance the education of someone unrelated to him? Would he be amused by unanimous students who gave him a noose to wear around his neck because they didn't like his tie? Would he be willing to oppose the administration and his department for a student or a belief? Would he do cartwheels around the class in order to illustrate a concept and to grab student attention so that they can better grasp something?

He would. He did. He is Dr. Ross of the physics department.

Yet these are not the major reasons for his overwhelming popularity with undergraduate physics students. He is a refreshing break in the College of Arts and Sciences from professors who stress fact at the cost of concept, from those who stress nothing, from those who paraphrase the text and cause a cynical feeling in the minds of students concerning the value of professors in the classroom, and from those who use the classroom as a propaganda platform.

Certainly, a professor, being of high intellectual calibre, should have an opinion on issues in his field. He should not, however, pose himself as an expert in areas other than his own or as the sole authority in his field.

The function of a professor with respect to undergraduate students is to supplement the text and give them the benefit of years of study in a given area. Certainly, he should offer the opinion of other scholars. He should not offer only his own opinion when the issue is controversial. Nor should he expect students to agree exclusively with him when answering exam questions.

A university, however, is not only concerned with undergraduate students. A university, by definition, is distinguished from a college in that it is a center of research as well as a center of learning. The calibre of a department is measured by the findings of its studies and its research. Thus, the publish or perish doctrine was initiated as advantageous to a department's reputation. This practice, however, should not be carried on to such a degree that good educators are handicaped by a department's desire for publicity, that men who could make great contributions to their field are overburdened with classes while some other professor is repeating research probably already done on another campus, or that the function of undergraduate students is limited in theory to the advantages their presence offer the graduate student.

Dr. Ross is a great educator. He was described by a professor in the Agricultural College as testimony to the need for abolishing the publish or perish doctrine.

He is a great educator because he loves his field; he loves his students; more important, he loves life; he is able to explain physics in comprehensible terms; he creates an atmosphere conducive to learning by introducing novelties to his pre-sentation; and he makes sure that there is a clear distinction between what is physics and what is Dr. Ross.

Too many professors are using their classrooms to indoctrinate rather than educate. A strongly felt outburst of opinion, such as those expressed by Dr. Leonard who unfortunately we are losing at the end of the semester, is permissible in that it is identifiable as an opinion. Such expression may even be welcome since, as in Dr. Leonard's case it stems from deep feeling for people and his subject and since well grounded disagreement is welcome. Such practice, however, is unforgivable when it is concealed and represented as undisputable.

Prof. Carl Keyser of the Engineering department announced over WMUA in a debate with another professor last semester that he knew of a department head on campus who said that he would not have anyone in his department who is not a Democrat. On a campus where such academic bigotry is practiced, one can certainly be grateful for the presence of Dr. Ross.

A Midwinter Night's Dream

"An Evening of One-Act Plays" was, by nature of the dramas chosen, perhaps too lengthy and drawn-out; but was, nevertheless, entertaining and artistically produced. Directed by Mrs. Elizabeth Forest, the Roister Doister Dramatic Society in its Feb. 5 and 6 performances added another credit to its long list of Bowker Auditorium productions.

It has been said that "the absurd is first something which is felt, an awareness of the disparity in man between his dream and his demarcation." David Axelrod and M. Paula Norton, as Mr. and Mrs. Smith, open Ionesco's "The Bald Soprano" with a banter of small talk that spells absurdity from the very beginning. They are soon joined by their maid Mary, played by Jane Abbiati, well remembered for her boisterous characterization in "Oklahoma." Mary proceeds to disprove the final deduction of an agonizingly overwritten series of "curious coincidences" in which Mr. and Mrs. Martin (Chuck Interlandi and Elizabeth Corea) discover they have a child in common. Yet as Mr. Martin puts it, "there's a certain warmth to those lines."

Red-helmeted Fire Chief Roland Laramee enters the sitting room scene, and sense destruction and dehumanized language rein supreme.

"The Bald Soprano" is generally oversaturated with absurdity. But if the slightly uncomfortable feeling evident throughout the audience is any indication of a situation well acted, the play's cast performed well indeed.

Bertolt Brecht's "The Private Life of the Master Race" follows as a two-part portrayal of life in Nazi Germany. Staging for both parts was notably effective in conveying the human anguish of an uncertain existence. Lighting arrangements deserve special credit in this regard.

Peter Alan and Charlotte Werlin took good command of their parts as husband and wife in "The Informer" scene. Both portrayals relied heavily on voice expression to carry the mood and situation, with little help available through blocking. Both Peter and Charlotte gave what can be described only as concentrated, exacting performances.

Sheila Ferrini characterizes "The Jewish Wife" in a second scene from "The Private Life . . ", and effectuates an otherwise ordinary speech rehearsal sequence with uniqueness and a well-developed talent.

Although Moliere's "The Forced Marriage" utilizes the largest RD cast, it is strictly a one man show. Tom Kerrigan could not help but steal all the attention as Sganarelle in a role which surrendered easily to his masterful aptitude for character acting. Ably supported by a fine supporting cast and colorful costuming, "The Forced Marriage' rounds out a varied evening in gay slapstick fashion.

Letters To The Editor

A GROWING IMAGE

To the Editor:

This morning we received a visit from two of your senior boys, William Wilkinson and Jeffrey Davidow, representing a senior honor society.

These young men spoke to a large group of our students who are considering the University of Massachusetts. I am one who has always felt a deep pride in our Commonwealth and in our state university, and I have been deeply concerned with the incorrect impression which many people have of the institution.

Although we have done a great deal to represent quality for the University, our efforts were paled beside the mature, gentlemanly, and urbane presentations of these young men.

They answered questions in a modest, friendly manner and they presented high scholarship and true college spirit in the most attractive manner possible. I felt that you should know of the magnificent service they are performing and of the splendid image they are giving of the University of Massachusetts. I would be very proud to have them represent our school at any time or place.

Permit me to salute you, sir, for the remarkable work you are doing.

Respectfully yours
T. Franklin Grady, Jr.

Auto-Stop, But Why?

AUTO-STOP, but Why?

We call it Auto-stop in Europe; You refer to it as Hitch-Hiking here. The trouble is that no matter how you call it, it is not something called for!

I am told that the University has "out-lawed" this peculiar road phenomenon. I will not challenge this decision.

Hitch-hiking may be necessary for some students who don't want to use the other facilities provided by the School and the town for their transportation of students.

And for those who pick-up hitch-hikers it may be a symbolic gesture of co-operation, "giving-a-hand" or expression of Humanism.

That's fine! But when hitch-hikers stand in the middle of the road, forcing oncoming traffic to slow down, creating hazardous traffic conditions, and endangering their own lives by testing the ability of the drivers to by-pass them and leave them alive too, I think that they become a nuisance and they should be more considerate of the effects of their action.

I guess hitch-hiking students could also be taught how to be more considerate. But is such a lesson really necessary?

ROTC Dept. Announces New Program

The Department of the Army and the University of Massachusetts Army ROTC detachment have announced a new program for college sophomores leading to a commission in the US Army. It will be a two year ROTC program with only one significant change from the regular pattern followed by four year cadets.

Any student applying for the two year program will have to attend a six week summer camp at Fort Knox, Kentucky prior to the start of his junior year. This camp replaced the first two years of ROTC under the four year program.

On Saturday, February 6, the Flying Redmen, pictured at Fall Review, marched before a crowd estimated at seven thousand in Greenfield at their Winter Carnival Parade. However, because of the poor weather conditions, they were able to do only a few of their trick drills.

The training will consist of instruction in the basic infantry operations. The training will be conducted by Regular Army drill instructors with only a few ROTC officers present.

After the basic camp, the cadet follows the normal four year pattern for the advanced cadet. To qualify for the advanced course, the individual must pass a physical examination, a physical fitness test, and a general aptitude test. In addition, he will have to appear before a board of officers and one university official to determine his officer potential.

After the completion of this processing, the cadet will be accepted into the advanced course. These cadets are paid $40 per month and given two academic credits per semester. He must also attend the officer preparatory summer camp between his junior and senior years, or at the completion of his senior year if circumstances warrant.

Any sophomore interested in information about this two year program should go to room 105 Dickinson Hall and see Captain Parker.

Ford Motor Company is:

challenge

Dale Anderson
B.A., Wittenberg University

At many companies the opportunity to work on challenging projects comes after many years of apprenticeship and a few grey hairs. Not so at Ford Motor Company where your twenties can be a stimulating period. There are opportunities to prove your worth early in your career. Dale Anderson's experience is a case in point.

After receiving his B.A. in Physics in June, 1962, Dale joined our College Graduate Program and was assigned to our Research Laboratories. Recently he was given the responsibility for correcting cab vibration occurring on a particular type of truck. His studies showed that tire eccentricity was the cause of the trouble. Since little change could be effected in tire compliance, his solution lay in redesigning the suspension system. Tests of this experimental system show the problem to be reduced to an insignificant level.

That's typical of the kind of meaningful assignments given to employes while still in the College Graduate Program—regardless of their career interest. No "make work" superficial jobs. And, besides offering the opportunity to work on important problems demanding fresh solutions, we offer good salaries, a highly professional atmosphere and the proximity to leading universities.

Discover the rewarding opportunity Ford Motor Company may have for you. How? Simply schedule an interview with our representative when he visits your campus. Let your twenties be a challenging and rewarding time.

Amherst Parallels University Growth

Bolstered by ambitious expansion plans of the University of Massachusetts, the Town of Amherst continues as the economic bright spot of Hampshire County and possibly of the entire Pioneer Valley.

The University's growth, limited at present only by the speed with which dormitory and classroom buildings can be constructed, included an enrollment increase this year of 1686, to a total of 10,497 as of September, 1964, including both graduate and undergraduate students.

The revenue from students themselves as customers of retail and other establishments in Amherst is only a part of the economic boon being provided to the town by the burgeoning university.

According to the college's statistics, the increased enrollment has added more than 100 new faculty members to the population this year, with incomes ranging from $5500 to $21,300.

The total of more than 750 faculty members is complemented by approximately 1500 other administrative, service and other personnel, earning an average annual pay of $4600. Total university salaries for 1964 amounted to $13,000,000.

The growth, which already has made a boom town of Amherst, is expected to accelerate in the immediate future to bring the total student enrollment to more than 20,000 within 10 years.

Six new dormitories to rise 22 stories high already are under construction as part of the projected southwest complex of 15 dorms and three dining halls, which will house 5600 students. When this complex is completed, a new northwest one will begin, giving the University a dormitory complex at each corner of its campus.

Not only has this given a great boost to the heavy construction industry, but it has created scores of smaller projects, including motels, shopping centers, homes and apartment buildings.

The effect has spread to surrounding communities, including Pelham and Belchertown, but it has had a special effect on once-sleepy Hadley, sandwiched between the larger communities of Amherst and Northampton, where issuance of building permits has long since outraced that of South Hadley, once the county's fastest-growing towns.

Also contributing heavily to a healthy construction industry, in addition to several municipal projects including schools and Northampton's new police station, have been new structures at the county's three other colleges, Amherst, Smith and Mt. Holyoke, which join the university to make education Hampshire County's largest single industry.

Progress is slower but substantial in non-educational areas of the county's economy.

In Northampton, not too far away to feel some of the effects of the boom in Amherst, industrial plants ended the year with about the same overall picture as that with which they began it, but there were strong hints of expansion in the wind.

Cohen, St. John, Lizotte Stand Out

Gymnasts Downed by Syracuse, Temple

The Massachusetts varsity gymnastics team lost a pair of home meets this weekend against Syracuse and Temple Universities. Erik Kjeldsen's squad dropped a 67.5-44.5 match to the Orangemen Friday and then lost to Temple by a 78 to 42 score Saturday afternoon, their fourth and fifth loss of the season in Eastern Gymnastics League competition.

The two events weren't without their high points for the Redmen, however, as several individuals had outstanding performances. On Friday, Syracuse captain Sid Oglesby started off the meet by winning the floor exercises with an 8.7 that nipped out UMass' Dave Lizotte's 8.3 score. Mass also took fourth and fifth place points. The Redmen gymnasts also placed second and tied for third in the side horse competition.

LIZOTTE recorded the highest place in the trampoline event on the Mass team, a third behind Chan Rudd and Terry Orlick who both scored in the eights. The Orange took the top two spots on the high bar, and Oglesby, the defending NCAA long horse vault champ, won his specialty, just barely beating out Al Cohen by a 9.5 to a 9.4 margin. The parallel bars event was nearly as tight as the side horse. Mass averaged an 8.03 on the rings, but top notch performances by Ted Edwards and Ray Walters beat out Grosso and Dusenbury.

THE TEMPLE meet on Saturday proved to be the opposite of the Syracuse competition. Against the Pennsylvanians, UMass took two first places, won one event and tied another, and yet they still lost by a greater margin than they did the previous day. Temple looked better than they had in some previous meets while the Redmen gymnasts weren't as sharp throughout the meet as they might have been.

The first few events proved to be the strong points of Temple. Jim Pettrino won the floor exercises, the event he was league champion in last season, with a 9.35. Lizotte scored three meet points with a third place. UMass added five more points on a third and fourth by St. John and Jim Dusenbury in the side horse competition.

Joe Parnar jumped from fourth against Syracuse to first against Temple on the high bar with a 7.5 that was more than enough to beat John Ellis' 6.9. Parnar and Al Carver had the misfortune running into a 9.1 the previous day that was too good for anyone to beat. Cohen won the long horse with a 9.45 that topped Pettrino's 9.25. Carver came in fourth to give the Redmen the event 9-7. They also did well on the parallel bar as St. John took second and Lizotte third. Four points by Norm Mitman in the rings and his six in the all - around competition plus Ellis' six winning markers in the rings boosted the Temple total to 78 at the end.

THE BIGGEST WINNER in the two meets was Al Cohen who picked up ten of a possible 12 points in six total events. Joe Parnar and Dan St. John were the other standouts

Chip swam his hundred in 53.5 to reopen the lead to about six feet for anchorman Daniels. Coach Rogers leaped off the bench as Daniels flipped his turn too far from the wall and lost valuable ground. But Dick made the subsequent turns flawlessly and came on like a barracuda in the last lap to nail down the mermen's second straight victory.

The meet did not run true to form in any sense. Each member of Coast Guard's medley relay team beat his man soundly, but later, with the same men pitted against each other in the special events, the Redmen outstroked them to control the meet. Coach Rogers did not comment on whether this indicated a poor opening relay on the part of his charges, or if they had outdone themselves in the later events. In either case, it was an outstanding competitive match.

Wednesday both the freshmen and the varsity head for UConn as the varsity seeks its third straight.

B-Ball Bonus

By Mr. D.

This is the week that decides UMass' conference fate. After a big loss to B. C. last Tuesday night, the Redmen bounced back against Vermont 95-52 Saturday night. The top of the Yankee Conference now looks like this:

	W	L
URI	5	2

The Huskies, led by Toby Kimball, fourth leading rebounder in the nation, and Wes Bialosukonis, sophomore scoring sensation, look like favorites to cop the crown once again. The battle shapes up Toby Kimball vs. Timmy Edwards off the boards and Clarence Hill vs. Bialosukonis in the point-getting column. But it looks as though the defending champions are too strong for the young Redmen.

New England Basketball

1. Providence
2. UConn
3. B. C.
4. UMass
5. U R I

ON THE NEW ENGLAND SCENE, the Providence Friars easily rank No. 1. The Friars, fourth in the nation and the nation's only major undefeated team do not have a senior on the club. They are led by the 6'3" playmaker and scoring sensation Jamie Walker from Boston. UConn ranks second and B. C. third. The Eagles are led by All-America John Austin and are finally beginning to roll along. UMass ranks fourth with most of their losses coming to such powers as Bradley, Evansville, and B. C. 5th ranked are the Rhode Island Rams led by Dennis McGovern's 23 pt. average.

New England's mid season all-star team shapes up this way:

GUARDS—John Austin, B. C. and Jamie Walker, P. C. Reserve —Clarence Hill, UMass.

CENTER—Dexter Westbrook, P. C.

FORWARDS—Toby Kimball, UConn, and Dennis McGovern, URI. Reserve—Bill Blair, P. C.

Redmen Rebound at Vermont; The Game Tomorrow is UConn

By John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts basketball team combined aggressive board work and a sizzling fast break to swamp Vermont, 96-58, and set up a crucial Yankee Conference game tomorrow night against Connecticut.

THE REDMEN must beat the Huskies to stay in contention for the crown. UMass has a 5-1 conference record while UConn stands 7-0, after thumping Maine 95-59 Saturday night.

Vermont got a pair of quick hoops to start the game, but Chuck O'Rourke, Charlie Kingston and Clarence Hill scored to put the Redmen on top to stay with 17 minutes in the half.

The UMass club began to string points together as they steadily opened the gap between themselves and the Catamounts. A six point chain opened a 17-8 margin. Another one made it 25-16 after UVM narrowed the lead. This was followed by a nine point chain to put the Redmen out in front 34-20.

Any hope the Catamounts had for a comeback was wiped out as the Redmen went into their half court zone press. Mike Meola had two quick hoops as the Redmen raced to a 50-31 margin. A basket by Ralph D'Altilia, who had 16 points in the first half, cut the spread to 17 at the intermission.

O'Rourke came up with 13 points during this segment of the game while Tim Edwards contributed 10. John Lisack helped the other two men off the boards and contributed seven points. Hill turned playmaker and came up with five assists, mostly off the fast break.

O'ROURKE and D'Altilia continued their personal scoring duel for the first four minutes of the second half. Then Charlie picked up his fourth foul. D'Altilia, picked up his fourth seconds later.

Massachusetts proceeded to go on another streak, outscoring Vermont 14-2 over the next five minutes. This gave the visitors a 72-43 lead. Edwards and Lisack had four points each in this run while Hill came up with five.

The Redmen continued to score consistently until Coach Orr turned the floor over to the subs with better than five minutes left. The lead reached a 92-53 margin with about three minutes left in the game.

The Redmen had a real fine shooting night as they hit 38 of 91 attempts from the floor, compared to a weak 25 of 91 for the Catamounts. Hill got 13 points in the second half to finish as high scorer with 20 points. Edwards had 18 on 8 of 10 field goal attempts. O'Rourke came up with 17 points and ten rebounds, the same as Edwards. John Lisack contributed 16 points and led the rebounders with 12.

Vermont got 20 points from D'Altilia, 16 from rugged Milt Goggans and 11 from Layne Higgins, which accounted for all but 11 of their total output.

MASSACHUSETTS will be trying to avenge an early season loss to the Huskies which currently stand 15-2 overall. In December, the Redmen failed to win at Storrs for the 29th year. This time the margin was ten points, 77-67. A dead spot between the 15 and 10 minute marks of the second half cost the Redmen the game.

The Redmen frosh will attempt to rebound from their only loss of the season as they face the UConn pups. That game is a sellout, so the students shouldn't bring any outside people along unless they have tickets. The booth will not even be open for the game.

In that contest, Clarence Hill had 27 points and Tim Edwards 22 with 20 rebounds to lead the visitors. Connecticut was led by Sophomore sensation Wes Bialosuknia, who had 32 points.

Last year the Redmen managed to dfeat the Huskies at Amherst in a memorable game 60-59.

UConn got 31 points and 25 rebounds for star Toby Kimball against Maine. Bialosuknia contributed 20. Wes has a 23.0 average in Yankee conference play. He is second to the talented Hill who is barely ahead with a 23.1 mark. This scoring should be an interesting sidelight to the main show in the game.

UConn will have Ron Ritter, Dan Hesford, and P. J. Curran in the starting lineup along with Kimball and Bialosuknia. Massachusetts will go with Hill, Edwards, O'Rourke, Lisack, and probably Charles Kingston for the game.

The Huskies are not a tall team outside of the 6'8" Kimball. Their next tallest starter is about 6'4" tall. UM will have a slight height advantage with O'Rourke at 6'7", while Edwards and Lisack both are near the 6'5" mark.

The Redmen frosh will attempt to rebound from their only loss of the season as they face the UConn pups. That game is a sellout, so the students

Swimmers Edge Coast Guard Academy 53-42

By Bud Pratt

In a meet that went right down to the final relay, the UM swim team defeated Coast Guard Guard Academy 53-42 before a large crowd at Boyden PE Saturday morning This meet was an almost exact repeat of last year's contest at the Academy's home pool in which the Redmen barely won in the final relay. Both meets rank among the most exciting Joe Rogers has ever coached.

SATURDAY'S MEET began in a most discouraging way, as Coast Guard's medley relay team swamped UM unexpectedly, man for man. At this point coach Rogers was hard pressed not to reveal his anxious state of mind, for he not only faced an anticipated seven-point deficit, but he had just seen four of his best men defeated individually. He faced a long and unlikely comeback.

Dick Daniels began the comeback with a victory in the 200 free-style in 2:01.7, but Coast Guard's depth took both other places, so that Dick's first netted only one point. The same problem haunted UM in the 50 free-style. Chip Wyser won this in 24.1, but Coast Guard was right there for second and third.

THE INDIVIDUAL MEDLEY was all UMass. Sophomore Dick Lennon ran away with the event in 2:22.9 and Dan O'Mara hustled off with a valuable second place to give the Redmen a two-point lead. The diving competition, usually a strength for Mass., turned into a nightmare, as Coast Guard divers placed one-two to retake a five point lead in the meet.

Once again UM began chopping away at the lead, fighting superior depth. Levy's record-shattering 2:35.2 in the butterfly (breaking Jim O'Sullivan's UMass record of last year) gained a point. Chip Wyser took his second first of the meet in the 100 freestyle, but Walt Orzak's second was all the Redmen could get in the backstroke, and this left them trailing, 38-32. Always strong in the late events, UMass began to unload. Daniels walked away with the 500 freestyle, and sophomore Mike Shameklis pulled out the third place to pull within three points. Beaststrokers Charlie Monnier and Danny O'Mara placed one-two respectively pulling the team ahead 46-42, leaving everything up to the freestyle relay.

SOPHOMORE DICK LENNON opened up a lead of better than a bodylength in the opening laps of the relay, and the Redmen simply hung on. Frank Wilson kept the lead, though it diminished to about three feet as Chip Wyser hit the water.

State House Hears Dallas As Winter Carni Snowballs

by David Gitelson

Thirty-seven members of the Executive Council of the Class of '66 and the four Queen contestants travelled to Boston yesterday to acquaint state legislators with the University's 1965 Winter Carnival, and to extend official invitations to attend the weekend's activities.

In other highlights, Governor John A. Volpe paid the Council members a surprise visit, Bernie Dallas addressed a joint session of the State Legislature, and the University was praised for its level of excellence.

Guests of the Council at a luncheon at the Hotel Somerset included Senate President Maurice Donahue, Senator Charles Bisbee, and Representatives George Burke and David Bartley, the latter two UMass graduates.

Also present were Miss Catherine Kenneally, the reigning Miss Massachusetts, and Edward Foley of the news staff of WBZ-TV.

During luncheon, the guests were presented University banners and informed of the many events this year's Winter Carnival will offer. In addition, Miss Kenneally was presented with a bouquet of roses and a gold University charm. Senate President Donahue, speaking on behalf of the legislators, commended the growth of the University, both academically and extra-curricularly, and expressed their confidence of a most successful weekend.

Council members received an unexpected visit from Governor Volpe, who took time from a full schedule to extend his personal greetings and assurances that "come heck or high water" he would be present to crown the Winter Carnival Queen at the Friday evening Ball, Feb. 19.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, and at the personal invitation of Rep. Bartley, Council members were transported to the State House, so that they might meet other state officials interested in the University. Here they were welcomed by former Speaker of the House John F. Thompson and Special Assistant to the Attorney General Martin. Again, the University was praised for the progress it has made toward becoming one of the finest institutions in the East.

The members were ushered into the House gallery to witness a joint session of the State Legislature. As an index of the high esteem of the University held by the lawmakers, the proceedings were disrupted so that Bernie Dallas, president of the Class '66, could be called to the speaker's rostrum to introduce the queen contestants and to address the legislators.

Dallas expressed the thanks of the entire UMass community for the loyal support and continuous efforts to reach new levels of excellence demonstrated by so many Senators and Representatives.

For the remainder of the afternoon, the students toured the State House and were given the opportunity to speak informally with Representatives of State Departments.

It was generally felt by Council members that the formal and informal exchanges between students and state officials successfully drew attention not only to the Winter Carnival but also to the expanding activities of a growing and dynamic university. President Dallas voiced his satisfaction in the image of the University being created in Boston and felt that yesterday's trip to the capitol served to create increased goodwill among the policy-makers, many of whom, he observed, were quite impressed by the quality of the UMass student as exemplified by Council members.

Dean Hopkins Views Cheating on Campus

by Joe Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Dean of Men Robert S. Hopkins told the Massachusetts Collegian Friday that he did not consider cheating to be a serious problem on the campus of the University of Massachusetts.

The disclosure last week of organized cheating at the United States Air Force Academy has raised serious questions concerning the academic integrity of the nations youth.

'While basing his view in part on the fact that only 12 cases of cheating have been recorded in the past three semesters, Dean Hopkins noted: "In an institution of this size, a distinction must be made between known instances of cheating, and those which occur without the knowledge of university authorities . . . "However," said Dean Hopkins, "It is my belief that an atmosphere conducive to cheating is by no means extant on this campus."

A recent survey, conducted by Columbia's William J. Bowers, and released in the wake of the Air Force cabal, revealed that even student body members—often the most well-informed concerning a situation of this nature—underestimated the problem by one-half.

The survey, with conclusions based on questionnaires returned by more than 600 college deans, 500 student body presidents, and some 5,422 students in colleges and universities across the country, said that perhaps the "most alarming finding' concerned the prevalence of academic dishonest'y on American college campuses. The report "conservatively" estimated that half the students in the sample have engaged in some form of academic dishonesty since coming to College.

The report stated further that only a small portion of those who cheat are caught and punished.

According to the Bowers survey, schools with honor systems are less apt to have a high level of cheating than those with other arrangements for control—an alarming implication in view of the size of the organization exposed at the academy.

As a result of the Air Force scandal, the ramrod version of the honor code practiced at the Academy has come under considerable fire.

Asked if he regarded the Academy's code too stringent or impractical, Dean Hopkins replied: "Certainly as applied to the campus of this or any other comparable university, the code would be impractical. "However," he continued, "military justice is traditionally, and of necessity, harsh. It cannot be otherwise."

Stimulating Courses Available To Entice University Students

Beta Chi

With the establishment of a Boston branch and a medical school both imminent, progress here on the home campus has unfortunately gone unnoticed—especially by students.

The University's academic departments have taken up the challenge, however. This semester they are offering an array of courses calculated to shock the complacent senior out of academic apathy.

Because of the great amount of confusion customary in the interval between final exams and registration day, a great many of these new courses have not been adequately publicized.

Collegian space does not permit a complete listing. What follows is merely a representative sample of some of the more interesting new courses available. More detailed information is posted in departmental office.

Perhaps the leading news on campus is that guest lecturer Hugh Hefner will conduct a philosophy seminar on contemporary ethical problems.

Entomology 98, Insects and the Fraternity Man, is scheduled as a intensive study of cockroaches, bedbugs, and public parasites. Classes will be expanded in size to fit student demand for the course.

In the English department, Dr. Vernon P. Helming will teach a course, as yet unnumbered, on the philosophy of the footnote.

Dr. Helming says his lectures will cover the footnote's origins, development, and contemporary importance in English literatrue. Attention will also be paid to literary figures noted for their imaginative use of annotation.

Art 81, Introduction to Engraving, is aimed at students from culturally deprived backgrounds. Emphasis will be on the art as it is practiced in the design of currency, stock certificates, and United States Savings Bonds. The instructor, currently artist in residence at Ossining, New York, is an expert in the field.

An advanced zoology course, Surgery for Liberal Arts Students, will be offered for the first, and possibly last, time this semester. Dr. Ferdinand DeMara will be in charge.

Comparative Literature 99, Fairy Tales and Freud, is an interdepartmental offering. The course will concentrate on sexual imagery in Jack and the Beanstalk and implicit bestiality in Peter and the Wolf. Little Red Riding Hood will be studied briefly for its political meaning.

Agronomy 43, Nightsoil and Its Uses, will be taught by Dr. Yoshe Mitsubishi, whose besmirched reputation is no reflection whatsoever on his competence in the subject area.

Lastly, the departments of military and air science are cooperatively sponsoring a course on diplomacy for the junior officer. The course will be taught by a former ambassador to Cuba.

Humanities Chairman Named To UMass-Boston by Pres. Lederle

The head of the department of English at Notre Dame University, Dr. Alvan S. Ryan, has been named Chairman of Humanities and Professor of English at the University of Massachusetts-Boston, it was announced by President John W. Lederle.

A cum laude graduate of UMass in 1934, Dr. Ryan received his M.A. from Harvard University and his Ph.D. degree from the State University of Iowa. A native of Needham Heights, he will take up his new post on Sept. 1.

In making the appointment, Pres. Lederle said, "As a first-rate scholar and a proven administrator at Notre Dame, Dr. Ryan is well suited to the challenging task of establishing a vigorous program in the humanities in Boston. His experience as professor of English at the University of Massachusetts at Fort Devens, established for veterans at the end of World War II, will be invaluable in coordinating programs between the Amherst and Boston campuses."

Of his new position, Dr. Ryan said, "I have great confidence in the future of the University of Massachusetts-Boston. I am delighted at the opportunity to share in the development of UMass-Boston and in the great educational rewards this new public institution can bring to the young men and women of Metropolitan Boston."

Dr. Ryan has taught at the University of Iowa, UMass at Fort Devens, Marlboro College in Vermont, and Wellesley College. He joined the faculty of Notre Dame as an associate professor in the General Program of Liberal Education in 1951. He became an associate of English there in 1954, and then professor and head of the department of English in 1962.

A member of the Modern Language Association, the College English Association and the American Association of University Professors, Dr. Ryan has served as an officer in several of these and other academic groups.

Dr. Ryan attended Needham High School, where he was class president for four years. As a UMass undergraduate, he was class treasurer for four years, a student senator, and a member of Phi Kappa Phi, honorary scholastic fraternity. He played varsity football for three years and was captain of the track team in his senior year. Dr. Ryan belonged to the men's honorary society, Adelphia.

University Students Honored for Kind Services

Some 5,400 high school and college students from the Greater Boston area recently received "Certificates of Commendation" for their voluntary service at the 8th Annual Recognition Week of "Operation Kindness."

The University was represented by Lois Mogel, Doris Mogel, and Harriet Levine, all of Newton.

"Operation Kindness" jointly sponsored by the School Bureau of United Community Services and the Massachusetts Division of Civic Education, is a program of youth service in which 5,400 volunteers gave some 520,000 hours of services to some 85 health and social welfare agencies.

Dr. Thomas J. Curtin, Chairman of the U.C.S. School Bureau and Massachusetts Deputy Commissioner of Education, has called the youth volunteer program "Greater Boston's Volunteer Service Corps which promotes a true image of American youth."

Winter Carni Ball Hosts Bobby Kaye

Come to the Ice Palace and dance to one of the country's finest ballroom orchestras. Bobby Kaye and his orchestra will play at the annual Winter Carnival Ball to be held Friday, Feb. 19, from 8:30 to 12 p.m.

Bobby Kaye plays the clarinet, saxophone and trombone and during the early years of the war he toured the country with some of the top instrumentalists. It is easy to understand why he is considered one of the most verstatile bandleaders in the country.

The orchestra features Conni Vignone, who is thought to be one of the East's finest female big band singers. The Bobby Kaye Orchestra is as listensible as it is danceable. It is more commonly referred to as the most danced to orchestra in New England.

CIVIL RIGHTS BUS SCHEDULE FROM UMASS

The Civil Rights bus to Mt. Holyoke College will leave UMass at 6:15 P.M. Friday, Feb. 12. Registrants may obtain their registration packets beginning 5:30 that day. Curfew on Friday night for registered women delegates will be extended until the return of the busses from Mt. Holyoke, probably around 12:30.

Educ. Dept. Offers New Courses

Special late afternoon, evening, and Saturday graduate courses for teachers-in-service and others will be offered by the University School of Education this spring.

Teachers-in-service may take no more than two courses. Classes are in session from Feb. 3 through the week of June 5.

Courses to be offered include: principles of school guidance, administering elementary schools, case studies in educational administration, internship in educational administration, history of educational thought, clinical studies in guidance, current developments in theory and research, research design and analysis, adjustment counseling, and educational tests and measurements.

Also, secondary school administration, guidance seminar, principles of school law, history of American education, remedial reading, audio visual aids, school personnel administration, administering school guidance, school counseling, personnel services for higher education, social case work and others.

APO Brothers Initiate Programs for Spring

The brothers of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity have commenced their activities for the spring semester. In the Student Union, the semi-annual Used Book Exchange is being conducted, while the brothers who returned from the APO National Convention in Denver are arranging the program for the rest of the semester, injecting new ideas for projects and activities into an already copious program.

Rushing for the new semester will be initiated by a "get acquainted" smoker in Memorial Hall tonight. All interested in Alpha Phi Omega are invited to come and learn of its three fold program of service and meet the brothers.

Winter Carni To Offer Speed Skating

The pond has been cleared and people from all over the Connecticut Valley will come to see the Speed Skating Competition on Saturday, Feb. 20 from 1 to 3 p.m.

Who are the participants? That is what we are looking for. All men and women interested in participating should come to the meeting to be held Wednesday, Feb. 10 in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union. Remember there is no entrance fee and trophies will be awarded. This competition is open to members of all classes at the University. Help make Winter Carnival the greatest ever!

American Legion Speaks Out

Civil Disobedience Decried At Berkeley

The national commander of the American Legion has said that the recent student demonstrations on the University of California's Berkeley campus indicate a need for a ban on Communists speaking at educational institutions.

The commander, Donald Johnson, told 250 Legionnaires in Lodi, California that the Berkeley demonstrations were "an example of defiance of our laws and abusive actions against our peace officers."

POLICE ARRESTED 801 demonstrators on Dec. 2, following a sit-in in the university's administration building as a climax to months of student protests against the school's regulations governing political activity on campus.

"I think the recent events at the University of California are new evidence of the need for the (Communist speaker) ban," Johnson said.

"WHO IS TO DENY that young minds are impressionable, and who would knowingly submit his own children to the teachings of a known Communist or one who is thoroughly indoctrinated in Communist ideology?"

The student demonstrations are closely tied to a drive by the American Communist Party to speak before high school, college, and university groups, he said.

THE COMMUNISTS consider their effort worthwhile if they convert but a single student to their cause," he said. "It was Gus Hall himself, the general secretary of the American Communist Party, who said the youth program of the party is so important that he would go anywhere to meet with young students even if but one student were met."

Johnson said he was confident that the vast majority of American youth was not gullible enough to swallow Communist ideology. "Yet," he said, "we know there are some who are susceptible, and this was proved at Berkeley.

"Some 800 out of a total of 27,500 students doesn't seem like much, but it is too many."

The American Legion opposes the appearance of "spokesmen for the Communist conspiracy on tax-supported properties," Johnson said, "thus using these facilities for sounding boards for Communist propagnada."

Johnson said the American taxpayer has no legal or moral obligation to aid and abet a cause which, "is dedicated to the overthrow of our system of government and the destruction of the American way of life.

"There are all too many other forums and facilities available to Red-oriented speakers," he said.

The Berkeley demonstrations are another example of the increased civil disobedience and disregard for law and order, according to Johnson.

"The American Legion deplores and opposes the action of any groups or individuals who would try to dictate our way of life by taking the law into their own hands or by acting lawlessly," he said.

"Recent stories about police brutality on the Berkeley campus have been used as a rallying point by people who advocate civil disobedience," Johnson continued. "Those involved in the demonstrations showed absolutely no respect for the law, but at the same time demanded full sanction of their actions."

Johnson said that although he did not visit the Berkeley campus, he had talked with many of the university's faculty members, students, and administrators.

"The students I talked to had very little reaction of any sort to the demonstrations," Johnson said. "They seemed far more concerned about their studies, but they were very disturbed by the fact that many of their classes had been canceled during the demonstrations."

MANY CLASSES WERE canceled when the university faculty held an "emergency" meeting to decide what its stand would be toward the Free Speech Movement.

"I found that the recent graduates of the University were the ones who were most disturbed by the events on the Berkeley campus," Johnson said. "These young people are just entering the professional world, where good images are so important, and they are realizing it for the first time in their lives."

The students who participated in the demonstrations "will live to regret it," he said.

"The students now realize that their arrest will be on their records for life. It will be particularly harmful to them when they apply for jobs—especially civil service." (CPS)

Mushrooming Enrollment Forces Drastic Action

by Pat Petow, Staff Reporter

The third annual report of the Advisory Board of Higher Education predicted enrollment at Massachusetts public institutions of higher learning will reach 100,000 by 1973. This year alone, the state's facilities will serve 36,000.

The Advisory Board stated that despite major improvements in the last decade, continued development of the 22 institutions will require increased state aid. The Board, including University of Massachusetts President Lederle, recommended several measures to meet the needs of Bay State students, dealing with a shortage of qualified teachers and reduced costs. Specifically, it supported establishment of the trimester plan at Boston State College.

The report stressed the importance of closer coordination between the state's college and university admissions and guidance programs in secondary schools.

Cooperation on a higher level has been successful at the University in the Four College Program with Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith.

With pressures of increased enrollment, faculty shortages, a desire to avoid course duplication, and a striving for quality, the state University has taken advantage of an old academic idea.

The phenomenon of campus hopping is the most evident feature of the union which includes a common Hampshire-Inter-Library; students at any of the four colleges may attend classes at another, providing the course is not offered at the student's own. The Connecticut Valley arrangement has evolved to allow more than 200 students to participate in almost 100 cooperative courses.

In Florida five colleges neighboring each other have united their resources in a move similar to the western Massachusetts program.

Coordination of efforts is being experimented with now by 360 schools in 47 different ways.

With honest evaluations, this opportunity may be incorporated in the state among its own institutions, as outlined in the Willis report, as well as with private institutions as at the University.

Recent Need For Pesticides Recognized

Although the public has recently become greatly concerned about the use of pesticides, these chemicals are still the main line of defense against plant - destroying insects and diseases.

Recognizing the need for a central agency to act as a clearing house and library for pesticide information, UMass aided by Federal funds, has recently established a Pesticide Chemicals Information Center.

STUDIES INVOLVING PESTICIDES will be conducted at Amherst and the UMass Waltham Field Station. Research will be carried out on the use of biological controls to eliminate or reduce insect pests and diseases without the use of chemicals potentially harmful to humans, and other useful living things.

Heading this new center is Dr. Ellsworth Wheeler, professor of entomology in the UMass department of entomology and plant pathology. Under his guidance, the center will provide technical information to regulatory bodies, private businesses, governmental purchasing agents, pest control agencies and University research and extension staffs.

In addition, the Center's staff members will plan and support expanded pesticide safety education programs for professional users as well as homeowners and housewives. Radio, television, press, and exhibits will be used in the mass media education program.

Among the biological weapons to be explored and evaluated are harmless bugs that eat harmful ones, and microscopic life forms that wipe out not only insect pests but also fungus and virus diseases. Insect birth control through irradiation and chemical sterilization techniques has also shown promise of being an effective pest control.

Although biological control has already proven effective in certain cases and promises greater use in the future, heavy reliance must still be placed on pesticide chemicals for some time to come. These are toxic and dangerous if misused. But, proper timing, application, and attention to the elements of safety reduce this danger to an acceptable minimum.

UM Gets Six NASA Traineeships

UMass has received $118,000 grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to provide six three - year NASA Traineeships in graduate space-related sciences.

Purpose of the NASA program is to increase the number of Ph.D.'s in space-related disciplines. The UMass program will be administered by Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the Graduate School.

The fellowships consist of a basic $2400, renewable annually with a $200 increment, and dependency allowances. Applicants will be selected by a Graduate School Screening Committee, headed by Dr. E. E. Lindsey.

Applications for admission as a NASA Trainee are available from the Graduate School, University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Deadline for application for the next academic year is March 1, 1965.

Credit for Learning

Extra Curricular Academics

There are at present many "extra curricular" activities on the UMASS campus. These range from the well known athletic teams, to the office that publishes what you are now reading.

Many of these activities offer only enjoyment to participants, but many more offer an education.

Nothing, at present, is received for participation in these activities, except the pleasure or sense of achievement one obtains through his contribution to the campus.

Nothing, that is, in most cases. In some instances however, the University has seen fit to give some form of remuneration. For its athletic teams, there are scholarships, for example.

But what about the countless other organizations that offer so much to the campus community? Are they to be forgotten?

Apparently so.

At this time, only the University Band is considered to be on a high enough educational plane to deserve credit for its members.

But is this the only activity which is truly educational on the campus other than classes? To say so would be absurd!

Yet, this is what the University says in recognizing only this activity as worthy of credit.

Classes may be the primary source of education at a university, but they certainly can not be considered the only source. Theoretically, credit toward graduation is given as a result of knowledge gained by a student.

Why then, is credit not given for knowledge gained in extra-curricular activities?

A person may learn a lot of theory in apolitical science course, but by being President of the Student Senate he will obviously learn an equal or greater amount of the practical aspects of politics. Is this not education?

To be a "Campus Leader" takes time . . . . a great amount of time. The more educational and constructive the activity, the more time it requires. Yet, the University has failed to adjust to this fact in not granting academic credit to participants of these activities.

As the University grows, leadership positions will require more and more time. Simultaneously, their educational value will increase even more.

How long will it take for UMASS to adjust to its size and start giving credit for knowledge gained instead of hours logged sitting in a class?

NON-COMMITMENT

To the Editor,

Your review of "In White America" left me flat. Although many of the fine points of the play were well reported, your conclusion is weak and, considering the strength of the play itself, quite inappropriate. The writer ignored the challenge presented by the play and refused to commit himself on a subject which, as vividly demonstrated both on the stage and in the streets of Selma, Alabama, last week, requires commitment now. The injustice depicted in the play was not artificial—it was documented. Perhaps there are other incidents which offer a better picture of the Aemrican white man. Can we not face the horrors of the race problem for once without trying to dull their effect with "nice" stories of white-negro relations? Must we always try to justify inaction and lack of commitment by bringing up the "moderate," "middle of the road" attitude that "time will solve all," or "you don't have to be for the Negro in order to avoid being against him"?

"In White America"showed us a horrible side of our heritage as white men and Americans. Do we have the courage to face this raw truth by itself, or must we become nervous and snatch at the nearest panacea which will weaken the impact of these ugly facts?

When we have the courage to face the truth alone and not armed with the standard excuses for neutrality, then perhaps, the words of the play, "Whose side are you on?," will gain real meaning.

Hatch Rats Split Into Packs

There is a mild form of racial segregation in Alabama. There are the Untouchables in India and there is aparatheid in South Africa. But UMass has its own form of discrimination—Hatch segregation.

As one enters the doors, near the juke box on the west side, one observes the rock 'n roll set. Their dress consists of sweaters, skirts, and bobby sox for the girls, and slacks, colorful shirts, and bobby sox for the boys. Their sole hint of life is noticed by their snapping fingers and tapping feet which keep time to the incessant beat of the latest 'pop' tunes.

As one picks up a tray and enters the serving line he stands in the only place in the Hatch where there is no trace of segregation. Behind the counter can be observed "les miserables" who have to work in the Hatch. They are characterized by their soiled white uniforms and their weary facial expressions.

As one pays at the cash register one notices men dressed in white shirts, ties, and suitcoats. These are the lobby counter employees.

As one walks towards the northeast corner facing the quad one observes the Hatch employees on their coffee break. At the table directly adjacent to the Hatch employees, one observes a group of older men balding slightly and drinking innumerable cups of coffee. They are well dressed but their clothing shows signs of wear and they cringe whenever a student approaches them. These are the profs on their office hour coffee break.

At the tables near the center of the windows one observes a group of neat, conservatively dressed students. They are either reading a text book or engaging in an animated conservation discussing the merits of existentialism. These are the intellectuals.

Towards the "do not exit" door one observes a table of students with long hair, dungarees, beards, sweatshirts, shifts, long black stockings, and a variety of footwear. These are the beats, both male and female.

Directly adjacent to the "do not exit" door one observes a table of girls wearing bright colored clothes, smoking cigarettes, and trying to act as if theyre having a g'ood time. These are the sophisticates.

Along the south wall, facing Amherst, one observes a series of tables for two. At these tables are invariably seated one boy and one girl. They may be observed to be whispering softly across the table while the ice in their "Coke" melts into oblivion. These are the Romeos and Juliets.

At the long tables along the west and the north side, one observes alternate tables of fellows and girls. Their dress is ordinary but they enter and leave as a group. They allow no outsiders to join them. These are the Greeks.

Provided for the hatch Neophyte are the entrance requirements of each clique:

The rock 'n roll group: Besides the style of dress given earlier one must also be familiar with the latest singers male, female, and groups. A good sense of rhythm is also necessary.

The beats: One must be able to discuss religion, Marx, and Nietzche with equal alarcity.

The couples: Obviously a member of the opposite sex.

The intellectuals: One must be able to discuss the relative merits of courses and instructors. A 3.4 cume is also a fair basis for admittance to this group.

The sophisticates: For girls only. A desire to kill time with small talk while pretending to be seriously interested in hygiene.

Hatch employees: Open to hatch employees only.

The profs: Open to instructors only. The time of the meeting is scheduled for any office hour.

The Greeks: For sororities and fraternities only, but is also open to pledges. Open to pledges on the basis of running to the serving line to get goodies for either sisters or brothers.

The lobby counter employees: For lobby counter employees only. Meetings scheduled five minutes before they are paged to report to the lobby counter.

If you find that you do not fit in any of these categories do not despair. There is always the Newman Center or the "Little Hatch."

Art Prof's Drawing Wins Sloane Award

Jack Coughlin, assistant professor of art at the University of Massachusetts, has been awarded the E. K. Sloane Purchase Award for his drawing "Dog Standing."

Coughlin's drawing was included in the 31st American Drawing Annual Exhibition at the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences in January.

The award was made by Miss Agnes Mongan, curator of of prints and drawings at Harvard University's Fogg Museum and sole juror at the exhibition.

Coughlin's award-winning drawing will be included in the Smithsonian Institute's traveling exhibitions and will then go into the Norfolk Museum's permanent collection.

A member of the UMass staff since 1957, Coughlin teaches courses in drawing and printmaking. He holds a master's degree from Rhode Island School of Design and is a member of the Boston Printmakers and the Print Council of America.

Coughlin's prints and drawings have previously been shown and have received awards in several national exhibitions.

An attempt will be made to appraise the significance of these critiques for Christian faith. Room 9, Memorial Hall, Mondays at 4:30. First class Feb. 15. Mr. Ferrell.

THE COVENANT COMMUNITY The purpose of the Covenant Community is to consider the meaning of human existence through reading in and conversation about theological and cultural writings of our time, and, furthermore, to examine the life of faith through actual participation in a communal discipline.

University Star Cast Plans Shakespearian Production

It's Shakespeare again this winter for the University Theatre. This time it will be JULIUS CAESAR with a student cast of 40.

Rehearsals are underway, directed by Prof. Harry Mahnken of the Speech Department. Opening night is scheduled for March 4 at Bowker Auditorium.

The title role of Julius Caesar will be played by David Blaisdell, a sophomore English major from Winthrop. New to the University Theatre, he will have the support of one of the most experienced actresses on campus, Sheila Ferrini, who will play his wife Calpurnia. Sheila is a senior speech-theatre major who is well known for leading roles in Ibsen's GHOSTS and Raymond Kennedy's THE BOAT.

Walter Radulski, a senior government major, will take the part of Brutus. Here on campus he is known for his oral interpretation of poetry. This is his first role in a University Theatre production. Brutus' wife, Portia, will be played by freshman Jane Lavin.

Other major roles will be played by Les Titcomb as Antony, George Dimock as Cassius, Tony Francis as Decius and Francis Foley as Casca.

Other members of the cast: Donald Westhall, Don Johnson, Charles Bradshaw, Sted Howard, Marshall Goldberg, Ken Bordner, Bruce MacCombie, Chuck Interlandi, Robert Emerson, Bill Segal, Dave Ludlam, Walter Buckley, John Gumula, Lew Luchans, Karen Kidder, Frances Holliday, June Murphy, Carolyn Miller, Linnie Butts and Martha Wiggins.

Designer will be Dale Amlund, a member of the Speech Department faculty. Technical director is Terry Wells, also of that department.

Graduation was only the beginning of Jim Brown's education

Because he joined Western Electric

Jim Brown, Northwestern University, '62, came with Western Electric because he had heard about the Company's concern for the continued development of its engineers after college graduation.

Jim has his degree in industrial engineering and is continuing to learn and grow in professional stature through Western Electric's Graduate Engineering Training Program. The objectives and educational philosophy of this Program are in the best of academic traditions, designed for both experienced and new engineers.

Like other Western Electric engineers, Jim started out in this Program with a six-week course to help in the transition from the classroom to industry. Since then, Jim Brown has continued to take courses that will help him keep up with the newest engineering techniques in communications.

This training, together with formal college engineering studies, has given Jim the ability to develop his talents to the fullest extent. His present responsibilities include the solution of engineering problems in the manufacture of moly-permalloy core rings, a component used to improve the quality of voice transmission.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for — we want to talk to you! Opportunities exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. And be sure to arrange for an interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Wayne Estes, Utah State Star Killed In Tragic Accident

The basketball world was shaken Tuesday by the death of one of its leading lights on the collegiate scene.

Wayne Estes, second team All-American from Utah State, died as he attempted to aid the victim of an accident. He went to the car of the victim and as he attempted to open the door, he was electrocuted by a live wire touching the vehicle.

Earlier in the evening, Estes had set a school record by scoring 48 points against the University of Denver. He was considered as one of the finest prospects for professional basketball from the area.

The 6'6" star was the second leading scorer in the country behind Rick Barry of Miami with a 33 per game average.

Estes had played against Boston College in the Hawaii tournament and Utah was downed by the Eagles 120-118 in overtime as Estes scored 44 points. He earned the raves of nearly every opposing coach who had seen him.

The most recent top ten poll in the country shows little change from the week before. Michigan held the top slot despite the fact it did not play. However, on Monday night they proved the experts were right by easily downing dangerous Iowa, 81-66.

UCLA remained second after a pair of games over the weekend. They beat Washington State 93-41, then had to struggle past a Washington team that had only a 4-10 record, 78-75.

Third ranked St. Joseph's, who looms as the likely opponent for the Yankee Conference champ, ran its record to 19-1 by sweeping past Georgetown and Wake Forest. Team balance is the forte of the Hawks.

Another well balanced team was fourth. Undefeated Providence with sixteen straight wins got seven first place ballots and enough total points to keep close on the heels of St. Joe's.

Fifth again this week was Davidson, the power of the Southern conference, with a 19-1 record also. Close behind was Duke at 13-2, the same as Michigan. However, both of these teams must play in their respective league tourneys for berths in the NCAA tourney. Michigan if it sweeps the Big Ten is an automatic choice.

Vanderbilt, the leader in the Southeastern Conference, long Kentucky's patsy, moved up to seventh with a 16-2 record. They beat Tulane and Louisiana State to continue their drive for a tourney berth.

Indiana fell to eighth not through any bad performance. The other teams were just more impressive. Indiana defeated Chicago Loyola, 109-82 and Michigan State 112-94.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

The independent basketball league shapes as the league that will give Lambda Chi their toughest competition in the latter's quest for a second straight campus championship.

The P.E. Majors lead the American loop with an 8-0 record and are tied with Eagles. In the National loop the Inn Keepers and Vicky's 202's are tied with similar 8-0 records.

Charlie Fohlin of Vicky's leads the rebounders with 82. The amazing part of the success of Vicky's is that they do not show one man in the top ten scorers of the league.

In the dorm leagues the Chadbourne Maroons have clinched first place in the Eastern division and the Webster Hawks have clinched the title in the North. In the Western division the Elms and the Trojans will most likely battle in a playoff for first place.

The leading scorer in the dorm leagues is Thomas of the Aces, with 218 points. The leading rebounder is Flint of the Buffaloes with 114 off the rim.

In the IFC league LCA and KS are currently tied with 9-0 records. Shea of LCA is the leading rebounder with 163. He is also the leading scorer with 266 points or a 29.5 points per game record.

Tonight Terry Swanson will meet Al Caruso for the IM handball championship. The place is at Boyden at 7:00. Spectators are expected to witness the final match of this long double elimination tournament.

The intramural squash tournament will begin Tuesday. All-star teams for basketball are now being determined and team captains are requested to get their ballots in to Mr. Gladchuck's office as soon as possible. The game is scheduled for March 11 with dorms meeting the fraternities. As a preliminary one independent league's All-star team will meet the other's.

In the bowling loop Grayson finished the regular season with a fantastic 72-0 record. The fraternities will be finishing their play in the next few weeks and All-star bowling teams will be formulated according to high averages. The IFC bowling champ will be decided from either TEP with a 62-10, AEPi 56-16 and PSD 52-20.

Intramural Basketball season in Boyden Gym is coming to a close with close races in all leagues.

TRACKMEN . . .

Ramsey. Terry finished fourth, only five seconds behind the winner in 4:34. Bob Ramsey was fifth with 4:40, and Panke ran 4:50.

Junior Bob Larson finished fifth in the 100 yard dash in 2:26, only four seconds behind the victor.

BOB RAMSEY AND TERRY CARPENTER ran the three mile not long after finishing the mile and finished eighth and ninth respectively. But frosh Dick Stevens finished fifth and broke the frosh record with a 15:45 clocking. The old record was set by Carpenter last year at the same meet.

Coach Footrick and the Track Team now look forward to next Saturday's meet against Bowdoin at Bowdoin.

Garber Named North Coach

Dick Garber, University of Massachusetts varsity lacrosse coach, has been named head coach of the North for the North-South All Star Lacrosse Game to be played Saturday, June 12 in Syracuse University's Archbold Stadium.

George L. Shiebler, President of the U.S. Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association made the announcement this week. Albert B. Heagy, University of Maryland coach, will handle the South All Star squad.

Garber has been Massachusetts lacrosse coach for 10 years and has compiled a 66-37-2 record, that includes only one losing season. The Redmen were Northeast Division "B" champions in 1961, were ranked 22nd nationally in 1962, and captured the New England Championship in 1963 with a 12-2 record. That Spring, Massachusetts moved up to 18th in the nation. Those three seasons, the high point of UMass lacrosse, saw the Redmen win 29, lose six and tie one.

Assistant Coaches for the North team will be Ed Jontos of R.P.I. and Bob Naso of Rutgers. The South assistants will be Paul Hartman of Ohio State and Donaldson Kelly of Washington College of Maryland.

This will be the 24th Annual Senior All Star game since 1940. The game has been played every year except 1944 and 1945. The 1966 game, the 25th in the series, will be played at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland. the site where the first game was played.

UConn Hustle Tells Tale As Orrmen Drop Tight One

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts made a top flight effort at Curry Hicks Cage last night and nearly pulled a major upset, but in the end bowed to the hustling Huskies of the University of Connecticut, 70-63.

Clarence Hill was magnificent in defeat for the Redmen and got support from three other players but couldn't overcome an early 11 point deficit.

The Huskies were far more impressive with their hustle than their overall polish, but had enough to stave off every Redman threat.

Dan Hesford sparked the UConns as they scored the first 11 points of the game. He had eight of these points and sank his first five field goal attempts without missing. The Redmen never overcame this lead.

With the Huskies on top by 11, 25-14, the Redmen began the uphill climb. They cut the lead to four at 27-23 behind the ever present Hill who scored five of these points.

The Redmen had a chance to cut the margin even more but Hill's hoop hung on the rim before bouncing away. The margin at the break was four points at 33-29 favor of Connecticut.

Hesford by the half had produced 14 points and big Toby Kimball had 12 with 10 rebounds. Charlie Kingston and Mike Meola did a great defensive job on the UConn's Sophomore sensation, Wes Bialosuknia holding him to a single point.

Hill had 11 for the Redmen and Chuck O'Rourke contributed 9.

Massachusetts hit another slump during the midway segment of the second half as the Huskies ran 8 points while Mass had only a hoop from Tim Edwards, who did not start this contest. This put the visitors on top 53-42 with less than nine minutes left in the game.

John Lisack got a hoop before Dick Thompson hit a foul shot for the Huskies. O'Rourke followed with a hoop and Bialosuknia countered for Connecticut. Then the Redmen began to roll.

Clarence Hill had a three point play, then stole the ball and got another hoop. Hesford sank a foul shot, but UMass came back down the court. Both teams then missed with John Lisack clearing for the Redmen. Hesford scrambled after the ball but tripped Lisack at the same time.

The referees missed this bit of action, but did call a technical foul on Coach John Orr who tried to protest. Bialosuknia sank the free throw to make the score 58-51, with about five minutes left.

Edwards scored on a tap-in after a Lisack miss and then sank two foul shots to narrow the gap to 3. Bialosuknia, who can hit in the clutch, sank a long bomb to put the Huskies back on top by five.

Lisack hit in close before Hill sank a jump shot with about three minutes left. Despite Coach Fred Shabel's plea for his club to freeze, they kept right on shooting and it paid off.

Tom Penders drove and missed a layup, but Edwards was called for goaltending. Penders then came back again to sink the second of his only two baskets for the night.

He then succeeded in dribbling out a greater portion of the clock. A basket by Lisack and two foul shots for Hill were to no avail as Kimball got two hoops and the soph Bialosuknia added two foul shots.

Kimball led the victors with 21 and 18 rebounds while Hesford added 17 and Bialosuknia 15. The club now is 16-2 on the season and 8-0 in the conference. The victory clinches a tie for the club and they only have to beat either New Hampshire or Rhode Island to wrap up their second conference title.

Not enough can be said for Hill who scored 26 points and played a great game. He sank 10 of 11 foul shots and had to work for every point because of tight guarding by the Huskies. O'Rourke added 11 with 10 rebounds while Edwards and Lisack had 10 each with Tim getting 10 rebounds. Soph Frank Stewart added quite a rebounding spark in his first major effort.

Neither team had outstanding shooting, both around 40% from the floor, but this can be attributed to the tightness of the game and the good defense.

Maintain 3:1 Win-Loss Ratio

Skiers Finish Fourth

The University ski team raced at Glen Ellen in Vermont Sunday defeating seven of the eleven competing colleges to maintain a 3:1 win-loss ratio.

The meet, sponsored by Brown Univ., was won by New England College. Amherst was third and the Redmen followed Amherst by 3.6 seconds in total team time.

Tom Pittendreigh, racing for the first time for the University placed eighth out of the field with a time of 56.6 seconds—only three seconds from the winning time. Co-Capt. Tom Clark had a time of 57 seconds, Bob Bibby 57.7, and Walt Swiatek 61 seconds. Co-Capt. Dick "Dilon" Woods started the race with one foot in the grave as he raced 13th on the Black Watch trail wearing a black racing outfit and pall bearer's gloves. He had trouble and fell mid-way through the course. Pete Plasteridge had difficulties in the same gate as did Woods and also fell.

The University "B" team led by Don Piegza again placed first of the "B" teams racing. The "B" team now has three consecutive wins.

Next weekend the University team will travel to Woodstock, Vt. on Sat. and Ludlow, Vt. on Sunday to complete in slalom and downhill events.

Trackmen Perform Well In BAA & AAU Meets

by Terry Carpenter

In the B.A.A. games at Boston Garden on Jan. 30, the track team entered several individuals as well as the 2-mile relay. John Medeiros placed second in the Broad jump in the afternoon activity, and came back during the evening to get as far as the semi-finals in the dash. The event was eventually won by Sam Perry, world record holder in the 60-yard dash.

DAMIAN GAFFNEY ran the fastest quarter-mile of his life to place third in this event. The winning time was 51.3 seconds and Damian was 51.5.

The 2-mile relay team placed fourth in their heat, yet set a new school record with a clocking of 8:05.5. Terry Carpenter led the relay off and ran a 2:00.5 first leg. He gave the baton to Bob Larson who rambled off a 2:01.5. Tom Panke took over and did a 2:01.0. Anchorman Bob Ramsey, hampered with a cold, ran a 2:02.5.

Then on Feb. 3, the team went to M.I.T. for the New England A. A. U. Indoor Championships. Junior John Medeiros decided to concentrate only on his two specialties, broad jump, and dash. John leaped 21'10" to place third in the event. After qualifying in both the trials and semi-finals, John ran a 5.7 to place third in the fifty yard dash.

Young Independents March For Viet Nam Protest

Young Indpendents banded together Wednesday for a march to Amherst center in protest against U. S. policy in Vietnam. UMass students, faculty members, representatives of the Society of Friends, and Amherst students carried placards, calling for an end to the Vietnamese War. Despite a sleet storm, there were 23 participants.

The general peaceful demeanor of the march was disturbed only by slight harrassment from members of three UMass fraternities. In addition to marching, the demonstrators picketed the ROTC building beginning at 10:00 a.m. and lodged a formal protest with ROTC commanders.

SEVERAL YOUNG Independents distributed literature in Amherst and in an information booth in the Student Union lobby, which has been the scene of heated debates for the past two days.

In a policy statement on Vietnam, the Young Independents argued the question "Is there any morally valid reason for the deaths of hundreds of Americans and thousands of Vietnamese?"

This statement went on to cite the political consequences of the Vietnam situation, pointing out the rural population's lack of support for the United States and South Vietnam government forces and the fact that the majority of the Vietcong are South Vietnamese.

In light of these facts, the Young Independents group "advocates negotiations for a neutral settlement of the Vietnam problem as the only morally and politically valid solution."

Reactions Varied On Grade Change Issue

by Richard Danca
Staff Reporter

Student reaction to the recent suspension of a UMass student and the resignation of a second on grounds of alleged alteration of grades was mixed. Comments ranged from shocked to almost bored.

"I'm very surprised" said Marjory Flowers '66. "I'm sure there's not going to be any more now that they've caught the persons changing grades."

"It happens at every university," claimed grad student Steven Curtis. "Shocking," was another grad student's opinion, who also said that it "does happen where schools are involved in atheletics."

Athletics took the brunt of criticism in the Hatch. Paul Donahue '67 called the cheating "a logical conclusion of the athletic program we have here at the University."

"Typical of big-time football schools where athletes are given special privileges" was the reaction of one freshman. "What the hell's the difference — it's done all over. It's a product of the attitudes of society today," said Charles Morin '68.

The students are "A perfect example of too many UMass students who go to school to get marks in order to go out and make a buck," said another student.

One girl "didn't think it's something that ought to be played up. This grade point system, these cumes are ridiculous anyhow. This (cheating exposure) is a minor thing; there's lots more important things to write about."

"I'm not particularly shocked," reported Susan Gately '68, "I'm nor disillusioned."

"The system is such that it causes a lot of students to cheat when ordinarily they wouldn't," observed one sophomore.

Many students felt that the information was too scanty. "It doesn't sound official, but if it's true, the person should have been suspended," said Joyce Hagstrom '68.

"It's kinda lousy I guess. I'm glad they got caught—it's kind of a raw deal that football players are getting special treatment," said David Daisy '65.

Boss Tweeds Mess Up In Commons

by Ellen Levine
Staff Reporter

The familiar blue card which admits a student to the new Dining Commons became a ticket to a concert last night when The Boss Tweeds entertained during the evening meal.

Although the presence of this popular campus group was anticipated, the results of their musical addition to the meal were not expected.

The housemothers and precentors of the Orchard Hill dorms watched with amazement as students crowded into the Commons. Chairs and tables were shoved to the side as students began to dance.

The dancing attracted students who were waiting to be served and confusion reigned as the lines backed up and traffic halted the lines for 20 minutes.

Perhaps for the first time, students refused to leave the Commons and the increasing number of students forced some to dance on top of the tables and chairs. As a result, trays were pushed to the corners or left on the chairs that were not occupied by student feet.

Although no serious damage occurred, Dr. Barron asked that the students depart. And depart they did—leaving everything in a mess.

Grade Changes Found; Two Students Involved

Extensive Dean's Investigation Reveals No Other Changes

by Norman Trump
Staff Reporter

A resignation and an indefinite suspension are the results so far of irregularities discovered in the grades of two UMass students on Wednesday.

News of the incident was revealed by a student who resides in the same dorm as the student who was suspended.

The suspended student was apparently boasting of his grade change and his dorm mate reported it to the Dean of Students office.

The student has been placed on indefinite suspension for conduct unbecoming a student pending action by a disciplinary board composed of faculty members.

The performance of a second student involved is currently under investigation.

The grades were reportedly changed by a woman member of the records handling staff, who has since resigned.

Prior to an official release from the University News Office, it had been erroneously reported that several football players were involved in the probe.

On the basis of present evidence, this allegation is without substance.

President Lederle was unavailable for comment concerning the investigation.

Dean Hopkins said he had no statement to make, but a psychology professor called the affair "shocking and deplorable".

Extensive investigation by the Dean of Students has revealed no irregularities other than those of the two students presently under investigation.

Major Rights Leaders To Speak At Conference

Hectically working in preparation for the Civil Rights Conference, students help stuff envelopes for Conferences delegates.

Leaders of the major civil rights movements and African nationalist organizations–among them Malcolm X, Rev. Milton A. Galamison of New York, and Lawrence T. Guyot, executive director of the Mississipp! Freedom Democratic Party--will take part in a three-day Civil Rights Conference organized by students of the Four College area this weekend.

The Conference — "The Civil Rights Movement: Reform or Revolution?"—is sponsored and directed by students at Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke Colleges and the University, and will take place on the Amherst, Mount Holyoke and University campuses.

Undergraduate organizers of the Conference call it "an educational endeavor by students." In addition to students from the four-college area, about 300 are expected from other schools in the northeast.

In a statement outlining the Conference, the sponsors say:

"There is no question that everyone working on this conference is committed to civil rights as a fighting cause. Nevertheless, we feel that the political, economic, and social areas into which the civil rights movement has expanded and in which it has raised problems are so complex that it is necessary for people actively committed to civil rights to hear what some of the leaders in these newly opened areas have to say.

"The conference is not intended to convert or recruit or mobilize workers out of students. But the purpose of the conference is to increase familiarity with the expanded nature of the Civil Rights Movement."

Most of the Conference participants wil take part as seminar leaders. The concluding address—by Noel Day—is scheduled at 10 a.m., Feb. 14 in Johnson Chapel at Amherst College.

WWLP-TV Mgr. Views Television AS a Media For Editorializing

by Bob Murphy
Staff Reporter

A geology professor turned television editorialist is somewhat of a phenomenon.

Such is the position, though, that William L. Putnam, Editorialist for Channel 22 in Springfield, finds himself in. Not that he minds...he wouldn't have it any other way.

Speaking of freedom and responsibility of the press, Putnam — president, chief stockholder and chief editorialist of the NBC - affiliated Springfield station—caustically remarked to a UMass journalism seminar Wednesday, "We are perhaps unique." He also spoke on the moral, ethical and public service responsibilities of the television media.

Known throughout the area for his acid - laden comments about any and all issues of basic concern to the public, Putnam has become somewhat of a controversial figure himself. Some of the toes he has stepped on have belonged to some pretty big feet, not the least of which includes both the present and former governors of Massachusetts.

He has been accused of, and freely admits to being, "The most controversial person in New England, perhaps in the country." Not all agree with his attempts to create a place for television editorializing, never mind his manner of presentation and truthfulness.

At the same time, Putnam is quick to defend his position. "There is nothing more irresponsible in the field of journalism than controversy for the sake of controversy," he declared. In support of this, he cites several axioms which are basic and essential to voicing one's opinions on issues of public concern.

Primarily, his goal is "....to say something worth saying — otherwise you deliver pap, and pap is worthless. Often the public is better served by saying nothing, or ventillating slowly." The comment on ventillating was a reference to the trend in modern news reporting "...feel that the solution is ventillation", when an item of public concern seems to have no apparently better way of being solved.

Again on the subject of television editorializing, he cited three things he felt were primary prerequisites for the job:

First, "It's not something (the actual presentation) you shove off on someone else. You have to want to do it yourself.

Second, "Whoever is to do the editorializing must have the ability to research, compose and deliver. (He was quick to point out, though, that without meeting the first requirement the second was hopeless. But the second is considerably easier to acquire, according to Putnam, who cites his flunking English A at Harvard: "I just couldn't compose. The interest in the subject material wasn't there.")

And third, "Whoever is doing the editorializing must have a strong sense of job security. As for myself, I never go into a stockholders' meeting without the votes to adjourn it."

As to his audience reaction, Putnam admits that there is no way of verifying his range of coverage in terms of who listens and how many actually react to what he has to say. He cites the example of the voter going into the polling booth with a newspaper containing a list of one party's candidates. "Some people are using the list as a frame of reference for who they will vote against. You just can't be certain." At the same time, there's the listener who you hear from immediately after delivering a particularly sharp viewpoint in a particularly sharp area (the shows are videotaped but often the show is over before he has left the studio).

"You must be prepared to live with phone calls warning you not to cross the South-side bridge in Springfield. The bridge may be wide but it's a long way down," said Putnam.

As an aspiring graduate student, Putnam pursued his avocation for geology but soon learned that his superior, who spent 14 years getting his doctorate, was not about to see anyone get the Ph.D. in any less time, not, at least, in geology. Why had he chosen geology? "I always did have rocks in my head," he smiled.

Claiming to have been born "in a log cabin in Springfield in 1924", he entered television after his grandmother, "who lived in a log cabin on Beacon Hill in Boston", left him the funds, $12,000). At the time, it cost about $400,000 to get a franchise.

Anyone is welcome to "equal time" if he has a rebuttal that meets the standards William L. Putnam has set for himself. So far, no one has taken him up on the offer.

TW3 Show Not Always Predictable

For the first time in America, the TV show that rocked the Empire, That Was The Week That Was with the original cast will appear at the UM Cage on Sunday, Feb. 21, 8 p.m.

America has its own version of TW3, and although differing from its English counterpart in some respects, it quickly became the most popular TV program among U. S. college audiences. Now you can meet the sire in a special concert presentation of the original, exciting, uncensored British version featuring members of the London cast.

Jean Hart

The show is the biggest hit in the history of European television. The program comments on the news of the world in general. It provides the funniest — most biting — comment on the news.

What the cast will say, none can predict. One thing is certain. Whatever they say will be communicated to us in a way that is both hilarious and exhilarating—a way that will keep college students talking and chuckling for weeks after they have gone.

Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union Lobby at $1.50 per person.

Improved Quality Prompts Senate to Cease Boycott

At the Feb. 10 meeting of the Student Senate, the boycott of fifteen cent items was officially called off. This action was taken as a result of improved quality of ten cent items and a reduction in the number of fifteen cent items from two to one.

Mr. Robert W. O'Connell, Financial Manager of the Athletics Department, stated that since the start of the Senate supported boycott, Automatique Company has felt financial repercussions. The company also cooperated by putting a variety of better quality items in their pastry machines. They have continued to sell only one fifteen cent item which they have shown to be impossible to market for less than fifteen cents.

Senator Betty Chambers (Van Meter So.) stated that she felt that the boycott has been a complete success. "This success is indicated by the widespread student support of the Senate's action as reflected in the financial losses of the Automatique Company during the time of the boycott," she said.

A bill was also passed for the formation of a committee to study the distribution of the profits of the vending machines found in the dormitories, fraternities and sororities on campus.

Zeta Nu To Become National

Zeta Nu Fraternity, founded locally here at the University in the fall of 1961, was granted a charter by Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity at its annual Governing Committee meeting held in New York City in December.

The Brothers of Zeta Nu will be initiated into Phi Kappa Psi on April 10th in a column ceremony based on the traditions developed through the years since Phi Kappa Psi's foundation in 1852 at Jefferson College in Pennsylvania.

Massachusetts will be the 65th chapter of Phi Kappa Psi. Chapters in this area include Dartmouth and Trinity colleges as well as Brown, Colgate, Cornell, and Columbia universities.

Although its life as a colorful local fraternity was short lived, Zeta Nu looks forward to a challenging and rewarding future as Massachusetts Beta of Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity.

Contraceptives Banned At Keel

Stoke, England—Authorities at Keel University have forbidden students to sell contraceptives in a university store.

H. M. Taylor, vice-chancellor of the school, said he has told the president of the Student's Union "that the proposal must be abandoned."

The president, Ray Moore, 20, said the students had decided to sell contraceptives because the wanted "to deal with modern problems in a modern way, and we don't want to impose a morality ban."

"Not only are contraceptives to be sold, but we are trying to arrange for a family planning concern to give sex guidance lectures to the students," he said.

Moore said student leaders had polled 1,000 students and professors before deciding to sell the birth control devices.

He said he had found no objection from religious organizations on campus, but the university's Church of England Chaplain, George Youell, said he was "violently opposed to it."

"So far, as I am aware, religious organizations have not been consulted. A facility of this kind is quite out of place on the university campus," he said.

Beatrice is 17 years old. She has had nine girls, four boys, thirteen husbands, and in her spare time she gives milk.

After a 9-month pregnancy, she and her latest husband, an ambassador, became the proud parents of a 35-pound baby girl at 5 p.m. yesterday. Mother and daughter are doing fine.

When asked to comment on her recurring parenthood, she said simply, "Mooooooo!" Beatrice is a cow.

The sire of her latest offspring, Etta's Ambassador, had no comment at the Dairy Barn last night.

Bred and raised at Ohio State, Beatrice (her full name is Ohio Wonderful Beatrice) has lived three years longer than the expected life span of a cow. She is equivalent in age to a 119-year-old human.

The normal age limit for bearing calves is 10 to 12 cow years.

Beatrice is the oldest registered Jersey in the United States, according to the official milk test of the Dairy Herd Improvement Registry, an organization which records the amount of milk cows give between each calf.

Beatrice averages 450 lbs. of butter fat and 1200 gals. of milk between each visit by the stork.

According to Prof. Harold Kaeser, University herdsman, an attempt will be made to breed Beatrice again. He said her general health is good.

Reprinted from Dalhousie Gazette

"There must be one interested student here," muses the professor, as he recites his hour of yellowed notes to two hundred yellowing faces.

"There must be more school spirit than this,"' grunts the indignant football fan, as he washes down another potato chip with cavlier slug of "Golden Glow."

"There must be something that'll shake them up," repeats the student leader, eagerly awaiting inspiration.

Without that panaceal of failure, the all inclusive word "apathy", how else could so much boredom be acceptably explained.

We have no "school spirit" because we have no school. A university is no more than a collection of creative elements—and when a single component fails to regenerate then the whole is destroyed —and apathy becomes not the preclusion of a poor university, but the result of a university's failure to create.

"Spirit" is more than wearing a black felt jacket, with a gaudy Bengal tiger pasted between padded shoulders—and more than cursing at a football referee. A university spirit is nothing but the intellectual imaginative and emotional expression of its minds.

We rightly deny the presence of this spirit—and thus we rightly admit the absence of this expression.

Dalhousie has become flabby and lethargic with students—not "investing" in the creation of expression of their intellect—but rather, investing in the world of tomorrows suburban houses and PTA dues.

It has become farcical to describe Dalhousie as an opportunity for assimilation and experimentation—as an inspiration of creative freedom. It has become a brothel—preparing for a functional service—offering a saleable commodity—without regeneration, and rushing inevitable self-destruction. The fact-pickers enter, pay their money—and extract their due without feeling—satisfying a temporary pleasure, and are rushed by the management of an ecstatic climax of ninety dollars a week and a rolled piece of sheepskin.

Advocated here is no idealistic philosophy of bongo drums and Portuguese wine—of "rugged individuality". It is merely a plea for beliefs — for creative thoughts.

Students are too busy memorizing combinations of letters, copied within the four walls of a classroom, to consider that these facts gain significance only when assimilated to produce original thoughts and concepts.

Ninety-two percent of books taken from the library are for prescribed reading—perhaps the professor is as much at fault as the student—perhaps it is his responsibility, in his own creativity, to stimulate further creative elements. The end result, however, remains that the dangers of automation by fact-fed, data-processing machines is far less terrifying than the danger of fact-fed, and merely data-processing minds.

Perhaps it is too late for the students — for those "leaders of tomorrow" — to believe in the university as a living organism—and to believe in its "spirit" as the creative expression of that organ existing for the development of every component. Until that time, however, surely we cannot expect a pride in and respect for that spirit. Who has ever heard of spirit in an underwear factory?

J is for JAZZ

What's New?

by Rez

It's a new semester and we're back news from the world of modern JAZZ. This week feature a complete look at all the new albums being released thru February.

From COLUMBIA arrived three new pressings. Andre Previn, with orchestra conducted by Mary Paich, strolls through today's big hits. In "The Popular Previn" Andre plays Steve Allen's "Gravy Waltz" and the theme from "Kiss Me Stupid" in a "commercial" album, almost pop, but a fine performance.

Thelonious Monk returns with "Monk", personnel unidentified. The album, reminiscent to "Monk's Dream", features some fine standards done up in good form. Monk's latest performance finds his long pianistic phrasing is gone. No longer do we hear Monk ramble away to some distant chord. Finer selections include "April in Paris," and Berlin's "I Love You".

From the CAPITOL folks arrives the latest offering by Miss Nancy Wilson. In her first "Live" recording, sweet Nancy is heard at Hollywood's Cocoanut Grove. The musicianship is under the direction of Ronnell Bright, who, if my memory is correct, used to give vocal lessons to Gloria Lynne. We saw the Nancy Wilson Show in Boston and this album is a copy of the performance. To say it was great would be an understatement. Her biggest hits are repeated in new form with such sounds as "Don't Take Your Love From Me," "Guess Who I Saw Today," and "I'm Beginning To See The Light."

MU Text Books Sold at List Price Price Fixing Investigation Shows

Books in the Maryland Book Exchange are sold at the suggested publishers' list price according to price information obtained from a wholesale and retail store in Washington, D.C., American University, George Washington University "Textbooks in Print," the "Cumulative Book Index," and the Book Exchange.

Textbooks are bought from the publisher to be sold at a set price with the buyer given a twenty per cent discount on them. If a new textbook sells for five dollars, this book costs the Book Exchange four dollars plus the charges of postage and employees to unpack and shelve the books. Textbook paperbacks are on the same discount scale. Other paperbacks cost a little more depending on the quantity ordered.

Mrs. Irene Robling, textbook secretary, said sometimes the publisher would change the price of a book by pasting a sticker over the old price when they sell the book and that the book store pays the twenty per cent discount price of the new price. She added that the Exchange only puts their name stickers on books, and that all other stickers are put on by the publisher before they arrive at the Exchange.

An example of this is an English 3 book, "The Bible Selections," which sold for 95 cents until the publisher changed the price to $1.25 by placing a new cost sticker over the old price on the cover. Mrs. Robling said a change in price may result from the printing of more jackets than pages for a book the first time, or a revision in the book, or the quantity printed.

Some People Don't Like Us!

"You Can't Please All . . ."

"You Can't Please all the people all the time"

Alfred E. '65

by Sherry Spear

Tabulating Collegian poll surveys, we found six persons claiming they don't like to read the Collegian. Perhaps the remaining 90% of our readers would be interested in the total results of the pre-vacation poll.

News is the number one department, followed by editorial, feature, sports and photography. More campus and national news was requested while international and state news even received "no's" which were not even included in the survey.

The majority of students received their copies at their dormitories, most others at the SU. Of the six students not liking the Collegian, all were boys who picked up their copies at the Student Union.

A majority voiced the opinion that the Collegian should not appear daily. For this, overworked staff and editors presently agree but the future seems to indicate a four to five issue a week paper with expanded faculties. Many who would like to see the Collegian appear every day would not consider paying 2¢ per issue to cover costs.

On overall quality and presentation of the newspaper, the rating were: good (44), excellent (8), fair (13) and poor (3).

The Collegian is always interested in student opinion whether through a poll of this sort or direct letters to the editor. The future sees larger issues, specials, increased depth reports and projects to better serve a growing University.

In a split vote, editorials were rated as student expression in a 36-27 divide with six middle-of-the-roaders adding sometimes. The extent of the influence of these editorials on students varied from "much" (9), "little" (51) to "no" (6).

In an almost unanimous vote (65 to 1) students registered their approval of permitting faculty members to contribute their thoughts to the pages of the Collegian. Any faculty members who are interested are asked to contact the Collegian office. We'd be especially glad to receive short precis of the different departments, and descriptions of the requirements of the majors.

Forgery Raises Question Of Grade System:
Wait For the Facts

Unfortunately, the University has been added to a growing list of colleges on which dishonesty has been revealed. In the case of UMass, it turned out to be records forgery.

What is even more disheartening is that it involves much more than just the violators themselves. Cheaters not only jeopardize their own future, but by their actions they also throw light on the system of higher education as a whole, and on the college in which they are enrolled in particular.

All students should wait until all details about the case are in before making any judgments. Accusing innocent parties on insufficient evidence is just as blameable as changing marks.

The Collegian is reporting this unfortunate incident, not for the sake of scandal and sensationalism but rather on the journalistic principle that our readers are entitled to the facts. Moreover, by bringing this happening into the open and studying the issues involved, the Collegian hopes to minimize the probability of such dishonestry occurring in the future.

Overemphasis on Grades

The University community became aware yesterday of a grade-changing disclosure on campus. There is no question in our minds as to the immorality of changing a grade whether for a student who is an athlete or for a student who has no activities. The system that causes examination cheating or grade changing is rotten to the core.

American higher education must come to grips with itself. Students are becoming increasingly involved in forms of academic dishonesty at our universities and colleges. The system drove a University student or students to grade-changing and cadets at the Air Force Academy to purchase stolen exams. The grade as the key to a degree, graduate school, and hoped-for job security has replaced education as a desired and sought after objective.

The full scope of the University case may not be known for some time or may never be known. The question remains: what kind of an educational system fosters academic dishonesty among students and others on this campus? Any members of the University community involved in cheating, whether students, faculty, or administration, must be removed just as the over-emphasis on grades must be erased.

Scott Freedland
Editor-in-Chief

The Student or The System

An oft-raised moral question has finally been brought to home at the University with the disclosure of the present grade changing debacle. Perhaps the proximity of the issue will do more to awaken those in the community to the ever-growing rift between educational achievement and grade making than any number of lectures, statements or admonitions. It is a harsh, shock treatment way of learning, particularly for those involved, but it would seem an effective way.

The issue raised is an ethical one on two counts. One relates to the myriad individuals involved in similar cases on hundreds of campuses. The other is resultant of the academic system concerned, and its intrinsic quality of grademania.

While dishonesty is a phenomenon encompassing all of society, it is not an inherent trait of the individuals who turn to it. When one goal is stressed above all others, various means may be resorted to for its attainment. One may yield to normal means, or perhaps when he considers it an easy way out. The former is a product of pressure, the latter of a lack of incentive.

Both reflect degrees of integrity, and both can be held accountable for cases of academic dishonesty. The first, however, shows the grade system at its nadir. Pressures are great—not to learn, but to achieve grades indicative of what one supposedly learned. If the system forces the students to cheat, or to get grades changed to 'beat it,' then it is wrong. Emphasis is not truly on education, but on a figure that is supposedly an accurate reflection of this education.

If the figure can be doctored, then, if it is indicative of one's education, so can the education. Obviously, this is not the case. An eraser cannot be the determinant, yet it can change the grade.

I do not attempt a solution, and cannot think of any panacea. I merely hope that I have raised the question of which is more responsible, the student who falters under the system, or the system itself.

UNIVERSITY IMAGE

To the Editor

Tangerine Bowl or no Tangerine Bowl, I am glad I go to the University of Massachusetts. In addition to, or perhaps in spite of, all the talk about the University's new "image" I feel there is definite progress being made, in the area where it really counts—the academic. Shining, antiseptic, window-dressing dorms aside, it is evident that many new and exciting things are happening within this institution of learning.

I think such improvements should be given all possible publicity, so everyone will be glad he goes to the University of Massachusetts. Consequently, I was sincerely pleased to note the dead-center front-page headline in Wednesday's Collegian, "STIMULATIIG COURSES AVAILABLE TO ENTICE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS." Presumably this means that some of our fellow learners are not sufficiently enthusiastic about the University to be stimulated by their mere presence here; they need to be "enticed" by new and stimulating courses.

Fine, I thought; it's about time recent additions to the curriculum like Speech 65 (History of the Film) and English 91 (Folklore) and Dr. Leonard's History 97 (Caribbean history) were more "adequately publicized," as the Collegian article states it intends to do.

Unfortunately, after four perfectly straightforward paragraphs, the anonymous author abruptly changes his expository tone to that of satirical humor, and proceeds to list several quasi-courses in parody of existing deficiencies in the curriculum.

What offended me so strongly as I read the article was not the idea of making fun of the curriculum, but its ambiguous concealment in a prominent article on the first page, resplendent with positive, constructive, shining headline. The feature page is already full of campus humor and far wittier parodies; a misleading presentation of the state of the curriculum in space precious to genuine news is simply in bad taste.

Perhaps the response to last semester's eloquent plea (in the Collegian) for more use of the Four-College-Courses was so disappointing that "Beta Chi" felt he had to save face. I submit that Wednesday's article is a disturbing indicator of the feeling behind (and about) the new "image" of UMass.

The high cost of higher education, reflected in the semester bill, manifests itself to every college student with the purchase of a semester's textbooks and supplies. In this matter, those of us at the University are fortunate in having a student-orientated book store.

Unknown and unseen, the managers of the book store strive to keep student costs down to a minimum, while maximizing their contribution to the support of the Student Union.

The book store is treating University students to a five per cent discount off the retail price of each and every hard-cover textbook used in any University course.

In the area of educational supplies, the book store offers a 20%-30% discount off the retail price of many items. This discount is so significant that students come from as far as Pittsfield to buy their supplies at our book store.

Operating in a market situation very close to monopoly conditions, the book store refuses to take advantage of their position, and, quite to the contrary, seeks out every available opportunity to provide University students with financial relief.

The book store, almost in spite of itself, does show a profit. The profit, of course, belongs to the students, and is used in several ways. With the University's enrollment rising every year by leaps and bounds, the book store must use some of its profits to buy the increased inventory necessary to supply the increased student population. Also, with the inadequacy of the Student Union growing more apparent each year, the book store profits have helped to create an expansion fund.

Here at UMASS we are far ahead of other campuses, where students have had to petition, boycott, and rabble-rouse, often in vain, in order to receive smaller discounts than our book store provides. By this time, having bought most of our books and supplies for the semester, a vote of appreciation should go to the Student Union book store policy-makers for their thoughtfulness.

The UMass Student

To The Editor:

I have recently completed a survey on student consumption expenditures, and have uncovered some facts in which your readers might be interested. The investigation was based on statistical principles using a two-page questionnaire, distributed to a random sample of the university undergraduate population, then collected, analyzed, and interpreted. Here are some of the results:

1. Family Income. The mean annual family income is about $7,800.

2. Summer earnings. The average student earned $658 last summer, with the range from 0 to $2,500. Males earned $150 more than females.

3. School Expenditures. School costs averaged $1,451 per student last year. This includes tuition, room and board, books and supplies, clothing, transportation, and recreation. The range extended from $1,140 to $2,180. Or in statistical terms, the results are: mean — $1,451; medium — $1,403; mode —.

As freshmen progress to seniors, their standing increases. People living at home spend least ($650), with dorms higher ($1,473), and frat-sorority houses even higher ($1,621), and highest of all are people living in apartments ($1,745). Surprisingly, females spend more than males—$1473 to $1430. An interesting correlation exists between summer earnings and spending. Students who earn the least spend the most, and as earnings increase, spending decreases. However, there reaches a point as the student continues to earn more, he spends more, but never as much as the student earning the least.

4. Quality Point Averages. The mean all-university cume (QPA) is 2.3. Grades vary according to majors, as shown below:

Engineering	2.5 (average QPA)
Liberal Arts	2.4
Other	2.2
Business	2.2
Education	2.0

The grades increase from freshman to seniors—1.9 for freshman to a senior 2.5. The popular conception of a higher frat-sorority cume is, in reality, a misconception, as frat-sorority averages 2.16 and nonfrats 2.36.

There is always the risk of error in the designing and compilation of facts in any statistical project, but here are the facts as found.

Back to Pasture

To the Editor:

It is consistent with our academic and political freedoms that any organization be permitted to express their views on the world situation, or on any other situation for that matter, so long as they do not violate the rules of good taste or public safety.

But it seems that when a student group sets up a booth in the lobby of the Student Union, ostensibly to "protest" the fighting in Vietnam, there should be some sort of official agency representing the many adult and mature individuals on campus that could step in to prevent these children from making fools of themselves.

Sane behavior is consequential as well as situational, and our country's actions regarding Vietnam must reflect this sort of sanity. It is indeed shameful the way people with enough intelligence to be accepted by this university can be so easily swayed by factions representing ideologies opposed to those of the United States. And it is a paradox that the particular non-violence that they advocate will only promote the cause of the militant ideology that could eventually engulf the free world. South Vietnam is a stepping stone, to be sure.

I realize that "protesting" is fashionable these days, but when this protest betrays our country and our freedom, then both the booth and its protestors should be prudently and officially removed to, say, the pasture out behind the livestock barn.

Yours truly,
Robert W. Topp

Hoo-Hoo Says Hoo-Hah To UMass with $11,000

Shown presenting the check to President Lederle is N. Carl Locascio, Chairman of the Donald B. Hyde Memorial Fund, with Walter Webb, fund treasurer looking on.

The Boston chapter of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, one of the most remarkable fraternal orders in the world, recently presented U-Mass with an $11,000 scholarship fund check.

The check, from the Donald B. Hyde Memorial Fund of the Harry L. Folsom Hoo-Hoo Club of Boston, was given to UMass President John W. Lederle at a meeting of the University Board of Trustees.

Interest from the fund will be used for scholarships to aid students majoring in wood technology in the department of forestry and wildlife management.

Hoo-Hoo, an international organization dedicated to furthering the interests of the lumber industry, made the presentation because of the increasing demand for qualified wood technologists, a demand that is being partly met by the graduates of the UMass school.

When Hoo-Hoo was founded in 1892 by a group of lumbermen and manufacturers stranded in a hotel by a blizzard, the wood industry was largely a rule-of-thumb business learned on the job. But with the increased application of science to ever-expanding uses for wood, it became necessary to offer advanced schooling in this specialty.

The wood technology programs at UMass are a combination of a strong liberal arts background and distinctive professional training in such fields as economics, engineering, and production, with special emphasis on wood products, manufacture, and marketing.

Few schools in the nation have facilities and a placement service comparable to those at UMass, and the new scholarship fund will aid some of the more worthy and needy of its students in this booming area.

Student Senate Debates New Elections Proposal

The appointment of a new vice-president of the Student Senate will be made by Senate President William Landis next Wednesday. The appointment, subject to a two-thirds vote by the Senate, will create a Senate officer with full responsibilities except that of succession in case of absence or resignation.

This decision, as well as a measure to control Senate "cuts", and several amendments to the Student Government By-Laws, evolved from a stormy four-hour sesion.

The problem of a vice-presidential successor broke over the question of method; that is, whether the Senate should elect a new vice-president, or if the decision should lie in the hands of President Landis.

Proposing a bill favoring the elections method, Senator Bombardier declared that the Senate's ability to "govern itself is the democratic process. . .is not a Senate election better than a clean appointment?"

Opposing the decision of the Executive Committeee, Senator Ken Feinberg defended the elections bill.

Viewing it in the light of world history, he stressed the "evolving trend of representative government", and considered other methods as a "breaking down of the democratic system."

The aceptance of the presidential choice proposal was partially due to its two major advantages: it assures Landis of a vice-president with whom he can work and prevents an election which would divide the Senate as it has done in the past.

Senator Ross Jones, relying on experience, emphasized that "an election for vice-president would split the Senate wide open and ruin any chance of making this a successful Senate."

Concerned with the growth of the Student Senate into a cumbersome and unmanageable assembly, the Constitutional Convention, consisting of the Senate and class officers, voted to abolish 8 of the 12 senator-at-large seats leaving each class with one representative at-large.

Effective with the Spring elections, the bill was supported by Junior Class President Bernie Dallas who explained that the class executive council and the senator-at-large task of being a "liaison betwen the class executive council and the Student Senate does not exist."

Dallas said that the class officers are "well aware of what goes on in the Senate," but cautioned the Senate to "maintain adequate representation" despite necessary membership reductions in the future.

Realizing this need for "adequate representation", the Constitutional Convention passed a measure adding one senator to represent the Stockbridge School of Agriculture. The senator will be selected from the Stockbridge Senate and will be an ex-officio, non-voting member of the Student Senate.

Josh White, Judy Collins Highlight TW3 Concert

Two of America's most versatile folk artists, Josh White and Judy Collins, will be featured at the Winter Carni TW3 Concert Sunday, Feb. 21.

JOSH WHITE

JUDY COLLINS

Josh White, who began his professional career more than 30 years ago, has gained international fame for his distinctive styling of folk and blues tunes. Originally a gospel singer, his sensual arrangements have brought him honors from presidents and kings throughout the world. He is the only American performer to be heard on all three classes of the BBC in England: the Light (low brow), Home (medium), and Third Programme (high brow).

Josh's recordings have thrilled two generations of music lover and his recording of "One Meat Ball" ranks among all-time great. His albums have been preserved for posterity in the Hall of Fame of the Library of Congress.

Much more recent on the folk scene is Judy Collins, who

U.N. — Peace Corps Cooperation Urged

The importance of the work of the United Nations and the Peace Corps was stressed in a talk given in Eugene Field House Tuesday night by Paul Edwards, acting director for the Public Information Division of UNICEF.

Edwards, who been responsible for the development of a close working relationsship between the Peace Corps and UNICEF, stressed the need for both organizations.

Acting director for the Public Information Division of UNICEF, Paul Edwards, discussed the Peace Corp and the U.S. system of foreign aid at Eugene Field House Tuesday night.

In discussing the Peace Corp, Edwards expressed his disapproved of the U.S. federal system of foreign aid. In his opinion the way toward peace cannot be bought with material goods. He credits the success of the Corps to the fact that "the only thing volunteers have to give is themselves".

Edwards feel that the volunteer's willingness to serve and to become part of the community gains respect for the United States. This view of the American is serving to correct the belief that all Americans are wealthy. According to Edwards, the underprivileged of foreign countries, looking at affluent travelers, are tired of asking, "Why not me?"

Continuing on this topic, Edwards discussed the many career opportunities aavilable in United Nations and Peace Corp work. He said professional preparation is necessary before an individual enters either field.

Winter Carni Rock & Roll Show Presents Well Known Groups

Rock 'n' Roll is here to stay. On Saturday, Feb. 20, at 4 p.m., four of the biggest rock 'n' roll stars will be at UMass.

Bo Diddley began his musical career when he took violin lessons as a young lad. He went on to teach himself the guitar and trombone. After trying his hand at many jobs, Bo went back to his first love, music.

BO FORMED A GROUP and they played their first engagements under the stars in the streets of Chicago. From there on the "Langley Avenue Jazz Cats" appeared on a number of amateur shows and then at small clubs. This is where Bo developed his distinctive, hard-driving guitar style. "The Man with the organ-like sound," Broadcast Music Industry called him when he was awarded a gold record for his "Gunslinger" album.

Among his network TV appearances have been the Ed Sullivan show and the The Big Beat Show.

THE SHIRELLES ARE an outstanding exception to the rule that the rock 'n' roll era is a young man's world. Whether the Shireeles are heard on records or seen at their many personal appearances, the welcome mat is always out for them.

The Shirelles offer unique

presentation of original songs. With their outstanding style and versatility one can see why today they are the country's most popular female vocal group.

Among their past hits are "Tonight's The Night," "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," Dedicated To The One I Love," and "Mama Said."

The Isley Brothers, will also appear in the same show. They have appeared on the famous TV program, "Shindig." Their recording of "Twist and Shout" was a million record seller.

Hank Ballard and the Midnighters wil wind up the all star cast. Some of their past hits include the original version of "The Twist" and "Finger Popping Time."

Jefferson Kaye of WBZ, one of New England's most talented, versatile, and popular personalities will be the host for the afternoon.

Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union Lobby at $2.00 per person.

WMUA Interaction

A proposal to end the student voice in the Concert Association will be discussed on WMUA on Sunday at 7 p.m.

Appearing on Interaction will be student senators Don Haynes and Ross Jones, Paul Rodman of the Collegian and Dr. Henry A. Lea.

In a report submitted to the Faculty Senate Jan. 7, Dr. Henry A. Lea of the music department called for a transfer of control of the Concert Association from students to the faculty.

The purpose of the report was stated to 1) inform the Senate "on how the concerts are currently selected and managed," 2) to examine "some educational and administrative aspects of the present procedure," and 3) to recommend "possible improvements."

Lea reported that since $16,710 of the Concert Association's budget of $19,210 comes from student tax funds, "ultimate control of the series rests with the students."

After outlining the specific procedure employed in selecting performers and in running the concerts, Lea asked, "Is this the best method of running a concert?"

In a move to curtail Senate absences, Senator Bombardier proposed and secured passage of a bill which limits the number of absences to five per year.

The bill makes no distinction between excused or unexcused absences as the dismissal is subject to the review by Executive Council and the Senate.

Bombardier hopes the legislation will give "teeth to the obvious problem of controlling Senate absenteeism," and called the measure "necessary to the proper functioning of the Senate.

JOSH WHITE . . .

has already established herself as one of the most popular artists in the country. With a voice that has been described as angelic, she leaves her audiences spell-bound as she runs through a repertoire ranging from tender ballads to bl ues to protest songs. Critics have unanimously agreed that Judy ranks with the top of the 'new wave' of folk artists.

These performers, along with the British cast of "That Was The Week That Was", promise to provide one of the highlights of Winter Carnival weekend.

Women Gymnasts Prepare For Intensive Season

The Women's Gymnastics team is all set for an intensive six week season. Despite the loss of three promising gymnasts due to grades and a badly sprained ankle, they are looking forward to good competition and hope to end up with a winning record for the first full season.

The first meet of the season was held last Saturday against selected competitors from Western Mass. High Schools. Since most members of the team have never competed before, the meet was mostly used as testing ground for performances under pressure. No team score was kept.

The results proved encouraging. Marianne Davis '67 took three first places (floor exercise, vaulting, and uneven bars). Captain Charlyn Webster '66 won the balance beam event. Margie Smith '67, came in third in floor exercise, Lucille Riddle '68 captured second place in vaulting and Diane Lizotte '67, took fourth place on the balance beam. Other members of the team placed with the top six in their respective events.

This weekend the team will travel to Southern Conn. State College for their first intercollegiate meet of the season. On Feb. 20 at 1 p.m. they will meet girls from the three best high school teams in the state (Wellesley, King Philip and Brain-tree) at Boyden Auxiliary Gymnasium for what seems to be a very exciting four-way meet.

On Tuesday, Feb. 23 the girls will face their toughest opponents of the season—the girl's team from Springfield College, including a 1964 Olympic team member, Kathy Corrigan. The meet will be held at 6 p.m. in Boyden.

Feb. 27 the team will travel to Boston to face the girl's team from Sargent College, and on March 6, UMass plays host to the biggest intercollegiate women's gymnastic meet in the East —the Northeast Invitational, including 12 colleges from New England, New York, and Penn.

It is a full season for the young team, but coach Mrs. Kitty Kjeldsen is quite optimistic as to its outcome. The girls have worked very hard for the past three months, and it is certainly starting to show in their performances.

Members of the 1965 team are: Captain, Charlyn Webster '66, Competing manager, Jennifer Cripen '67, Members: Marianne Davis '67, Margie Smith '67, Louise Oczkowski '67, Diane Lizotte '67, Mary Burne '67, Phyllis Lieberman '68, Marie Ruket '68, Lucille Riddle '68, Linda Crist '68. Elaine Bello '67, who is temporarily out of competition due to a sprained ankle.

Pistol Team Scuttled

In a surprise upset the Mariners of Kings Point drubbed the Redmen Pistol Team at Kings Point on Sat. by a 2141 to 2069 score. Eager for revenge for the two defeats they suffered at the hands of the Redmen last year, the Midshipmen dumped the UMass squad into undisputed fourth place in the Northeast Intercollegiate Pistol Conference breaking the third place tie which both clubs enjoyed. This makes the Redmen 15 and 4 for the season and 2 and 3 in conference competition.

Showing little effects of the semester vacation the UMass squad turned one of the best team efforts of the year, but they just couldn't outshoot the Middies. Paced by George Wietecha the teams leading scorer with a 536 the other starters all fired over 500. Rog Yee was second with a 512, followed by Senior Phil Reed in his first team appearance with a 511 and the anchor man Eric Mussen with a 510.

The Redmen face the heavy end of the schedule from now through the sixth of March with trips to Army, last years national champion, Coast Guard the top New England Team and the NRA Sectional Tournament, also to be held at Coast Guard.

neys to determine the entrants. Nonetheless, the likely winners will be Davidson and Duke. The Wildcats are 19-1 and undefeated in the league being paced by Fred Hetzel. They have a well balanced squad that is necessary to stand up under constant tourney.

Duke has a few veterans but many sophomores who have developed rapidly. With a 14-2 record, the Blue Devils have lost to North Carolina in the league and Michigan. The Devils have, however, beaten its nearest foe, North Carolina State, twice.

That leaves two independent berths open. Villanova has another good squad and might like another shot at the NCAA spectacular. This club has plenty of veterans on hand from last year's great club.

The other berth is wide open. Providence College can probably take its choice of tourneys NCAA or NIT). If the Friars want to redeem themselves for last year's first round loss, they could probably get the bid. If not, it is really wide open.

LITTLE REDMAN . . .

The second half started with more action than the first. Alberico and Steinburg for the visitors traded baskets. McNeese hit a three pointer. Gasperack put in a couple of three throws, and Greg Rand hit twice. The lead seesawed back and forth at the all the score was minute mark 39-39 at the seven minute mark 41-41. Tindall who had an off night scoring hit 3 foul shots in row.

With four minutes left, UConn was on top 47-46. After the break Steinburg hit from the floor, Corley missed a foul shot, but Caffaretti put in the rebound. Tindall put in a layup, and UMass had the ball after a UConn missed shot. Anderson brought it up but travelled. Corley hit and then young was fouled and hit. Anderson brought the ball up again and was fouled. He made them both. It was too late, however. The game ended with two foul shots by McNeese.

Lambda Chi Tourney This Weekend Feature

By Howie Davis

Kappa Sig and Lambda Chi kept their hopes alive for the IFC championship by each recording victories Tuesday night.

KS had the tougher time but came on strong to beat BKP 49-39. LCA, led by scoring and rebounding leader, Steve Shea, manhandled ATG 95-27. Shea hauled in 44 points and 30 rebounds in that contest.

A real battle looms for second place in the IFC league. Theta Chi has a 9-2 record closely followed by SPE 8-2 and TKE 7-2.

All eyes will be focussed on Court No. 1 Monday night when KS and LCA meet. The winner of this affair will undoubtedly go on to win the IFC championship. Court No. 5 will also have a game to be noted with TKE taking on SPE.

The Western division of the dormitory league wound up in a tie for first place with the Gorman Elms and the Wheeler Trojans in the deadlock. There will be a playoff Tuesday night at 7:30 to determine that division's champ.

The intramural handball champ is Al Caruso. He defeated Terry Swanson two games to one Wednesday night to achieve that honor. He was forced to come from behind to take the championship as Swanson opened with the initial victory.

The first Annual IM squash tournament gets under way Tuesday. As the handball tournament, this affair will also be double elimination. That is a contestant is not eliminated until he has lost two matches.

The success story of the year is Grayson No. 1. As a bowling team they seem to be invincible. Any time a team in any sport can go through a 72 game season undefeated it is a remarkable accomplishment. This eliminates any possibilities of upsets, poor games from illness, and the possibility of human error. Congratulations are in store for the four men who made up this team: Tlberio with an average of 164, Banks — 183, Lipman 172, and Hinton 173. As a team they had the second highest single game on campus with a 767, the highest three game total, 2270 and the high three game average, 693.

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity will present the first annual Northeastern Basketball Tournament this weekend. Teams participating in the tournament will be from Bucknell, Clark, Drexel Institute of Technology, Colgate, Gettysburg, U.R.I., Worcester Tech and UMass.

Action will be Saturday at 11:30 in the morning and 3:30

UConn Frosh Defeat Little Redmen 54-45

by Rick Curwin

Last Tuesday in Curry Hicks Gymnasium the spirited UConn frsehmen handed the Little Redmen their second straight defeat, as a well fought defensive battle seesawed the wrong way for the home team. The game started off slowly as the UConns missed their first four shots. UMass, however, could not take advantage for Conn. did not permit the Redmen to move the ball anywhere near the basket.

PLAYING a tough one, two, two zone and waving their hands up and down Conn. didn't permit a shot for over three minutes. Conn finally broke the ice at the fifteen minute mark as Corley hit. Gasperack put in a foul shot for UMass and then UConn streaked to a 12 to 8 point lead as Corley scored 8. UMass didn't get a field-goal until the 13 minute mark when Gasperack hit a short jumper. Corley gave Vittallo a hard time as the former was fouled time after time. He was at the line seven times in the first half. Vitallo fouled out with about 8 minutes left. This hurt the little redmen considerably because Vitallo was very strong under the boards and hit 3 clutch baskets against the Conn tight defense. This game and last, he has proven to be a valuable rebounder and scorer in the starting role.

Aberico, a sub, came in and settled the team down with fine defensive play, breaking up a sure basket on a rare Conn fast break. Greg Rand also was a tremendous help at this stage of the game. Center Billy Tindall cooled off the hot Corley, and the Redmen pulled out in front at the end of the half 27-26.

Tourney Prospects

With the victory of the University of Connecticut over the Redmen, the Huskies are virtually assured of a trip to Philadelphia and the NCAA eastern regional tourney.

UConn is well remembered for their trip to the finals of the regional before bowing to national runnerup, Duke by some 50 points. Even the staunchest of Huskies would have to admit ney had the soft half of the draw, with only Temple and Princeton in the way of the finals berth.

The other half had such fine teams as Providence and Villanova meeting in the first round with the winner facing Duke.

This year the field shapes up as one of the best in a long time. UConn with its present 16-2 mark will have a tough time with their probable first round foe, St. Joseph's of Philadelphia, currently the leader in their league, with a 20-1 record and the number 3 rating in the country. They are virtually unbeatable in the Palestra.

Other clubs likely to be in the field include Cornell, already a victim of the Huskies, but by clinching the Ivy Crown gets an automatic bid. Princeton is still very much in the running.

Two other leagues get berths automatically in the seven team field. They are the Southern Conference and the Atlantic Coast Conference. However, the regular season winners could conceivably lose out since both leagues hold post season tour-

UMass — URI Battle To Keep Conference Hopes Alive

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts basketball team will attempt to rebound from a tough loss to the University of Connecticut and keep its flickering Yankee Conference hopes alive when it meets the University of Rhode Island tonight at the cage.

Early in the season, the Redmen stamped themselves as Conference threats be downing the Rams in Kingston, 79-67. Highlight of that performance was the effort by Clarence Hill who came off the bench to score 24 points in the second half.

He has been in the starting lineup ever since, and currently leads the conference in scoring with a 23 point plus average. He increased his lead over runnerup Wes Bialosuknia by outscoring him 26 to 15 in the Tuesday game.

The Redmen can still tie for the crown if New Hampshire and Rhode Island can beat the Huskies. The Rams have a good chance, but it is unlikely that the Wildcats will even give the UConns much of a game since their contest is at Storrs.

TIM EDWARDS played a fine game against the Huskies as he scored 10 points and had 10 rebounds. Charlie O'Rourke had 12 points and 10 rebounds as he hit well from the outside during the first half. John Lisack, who has been hitting well from the outside recently is one of the most improved players on the squad.

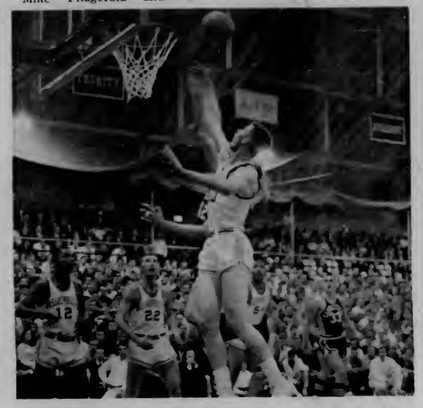
The other guard along with Hill will likely be Charlie Kingston. This position has not been a very high scoring one since the fine play of Hill has relegated the player to the role of playmaker.

In the first game with Rhody, one of the highlights was the great defensive job that Mike Meola did on high scoring Dennis McGovern. He held the Rams star to 3 points in the first half as the Redmen gained a margin they never relinquished.

McGovern currently has a 23.8 average ranking slightly above Hill, as far as the national scoring race goes. He is about 20th while Hill has moved to about the 23rd position with his 22.8 mark.

Frank Nightingale, senior center, has been a steady performer for the Rams. Bob Boem is a transfer from West Point that has had several big scoring nights, including one against Boston College, during this latter segment of the year.

Mike Fitzgerald and Jim Cymbals are the starting guards for the Rams and both rank as dangerous scorers.



Charlie O'Rourke scores as Clarence Hill (12) John Lisack (22), and Tim Edwards (54) look on.

THE THREAT the Rams pose is quite obvious when one examines their field goal mark for the year. They rank very high nationally with an overall mark of .491. The Redmen also have been shooting well with a .454 mark.

Rhody stands 11-8 overall with a 3-2 conference mark. Massachusetts has a 9-7 record and a 5-2 conference mark.

One of the sad things about this year is the fact that Clarence Hill probably will not even make the first two all-New England teams. John Austin and Jim Walker are shoo-ins for the first team berths. Bialosuknia, because he has sparked the Huskies to their current 16-2 mark, will be selected. The last berth is a tossup between Hill and John Wendelken of Holy Cross with the Crusader likely to get the edge because of the better press he gets.

Without the support of local newspaper, Hill has little chance for honors. Pete Bernard made it last year, but being from the Eastern Massachusetts area helped because he was already well known when he got here. Hill from Washington, D.C. is an outsider. Austin is also from D-C., but plays for BC which is enough. Walker is from Boston. Bialosuknia will make it for reasons stated above. Wendelken gets a good spread in the Worcester papers besides being closer to Boston.

How Hill can be overlooked is almost impossible to believe. He has had better than 20 points in every game but four and in two of these he made 19. Compared to his 28 at Evansville, 21 vs. Boston College, or his 26 and 27 against Connecticut, Hill has good reason to receive all the honors he can.

Swimmers Down UConn 57-38 For Third Straight

by Bud Pratt

Joe Rogers varsity swimmers jumped off to an early lead and were never headed as they downed UConn at Storrs, Wed. afternoon. The victory evened the team's season at 3-3.

The medley relay team of Orzak, Monnier, Levy, and Wilson won the opening relay to put UM ahead to stay. Dick Daniels won the 200 freestyle in a fast 2:00.7, and later the 500 freestyle as well. Dick has a lengthy winning streak going in both these events. Dick Lennon won his specialty, the individual medley, in 2:22.2, and later took a second place in the backstroke.

Senior Dan O'Mara placed in three events, taking a second in the diving in the absence of Tom Hoffman, and thirds in both the individual medley and breaststroke. Levy missed his own UMass butterfly record by just a few seconds as he won the event in 3:39.5, Hoffman taking third.

Co-capt. Charlie Monnier, whose pace is extraordinarily consistent, won the breastroke in 2:35.0. All season long, Charlie has been swimming very close to his record of 2:33.5, which he set last year and has exactly tied once.

Sophomore sprinter Chip Wyser took seconds in the 50 and 100 freestyle events. Third place points were picked up by Beal in the diving and Shamekis in the 500 freestyle. The freestyle relay team of Lennon, Wilseon, Wyser, and Daniels closed out the meet with a victory.

UConn's depth kept the meet close, and victories in both relays were the big difference for the Mermen. After losing their first three meets, the Redmen have rebounded to even up the season; Joe Rogers is hoping for a repeat performance of last year when his team lost three, then went on to win all the rest. Tomorrow the swimming team faces Vermont (Sat., 4:00 p.m., Boyden) in what promises to be a tough contest.

Gymnasts Take on Navy

The UMass Gymnastic team will meet the United States Naval Academy team on Saturday, Feb. 13 at 1 p.m. in a battle to stay out of the cellar of the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastic League.

UMass and Navy have yet to meet and on the basis on comparative scores this should be an extremely close meet, Navy was defeated by Pittsburgh by a 65-54 score and the University lost to Pitt 66-51.

The University will be led by standout gymnasts Al Carver, Stan Bralluc, and Dave Lizotte. Sophomore Peter Grosso will represent UMass in the all-around. Al Cohen presently-sporting a 9.1 average in vaulting with a fourth place overall rating in the league will be trying to keep his average.

Davis Talk Defines Main Rights Factions

Ossie Davis, civil rights leader and Broadway actor, keynoted the rights conference at Mt. Holyoke Friday night.

by Tom Donovan
Staff Reporter

The civil rights movement needs an alliance between the "house servant" philosophy of Martin Luther King and the "field hand" philosophy of Malcolm X, movie star and playwright Ossie Davis said Friday night before 1,300 students at Mount Holyoke College.

Prefaced by an address by Mount Holyoke President Richard Glenn Gettell who called Mount Holyoke a college that "stands for freedom of inquiry and individual responsibility", Davis began his speech in which he explained the isolation of two predominent factions in the civil rights struggle.

Before a primarily young female audience attending the intercollegiate student Civil Rights Conference, Davis went on to trace the civil rights division back to slavery days when there were two camps of Negroes.

THE HOUSE SERVANTS were intimately connected with their white masters and identified with them rather than with their field hand brothers. On the other hand, the field hands were a desperate majority who scorned the house servants and, through the hopelessness of their station, initiated numerous slave revolts before the Civil War.

Davis continued, saying, "Today, Malcolm X, Robert Williams and some others seem to me to represent the field hand school of thought; while Martin Luther King, represents all that's best in the house servant tradition."

The crux of the problem, according to Davis, is that with the intensification of the civil rights struggle and the resultant growth of resistance, the field hands could end up fighting the house servants with no progress at all.

The only solution is for the Malcolm X's, Jesse Grays and the Martin Luther Kings to interact. They must "work out a joint program of action, in which each will agree to form an alliance" said Davis.

Martin Luther King's part would be to function as a moral rallying point for white liberals and the Negro Middle Class, Davis stated. They would advocate integration as the other end and non-violence as the means. They would continue to be the alternative to Malcolm X's tactics.

On the other hand, stated Mr. Davis, Malcolm X should continue to forward "Justice for the Black man as the end, and whatever it takes to get it—as the means."

Rights Weekend Hits On Need For Political Power

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

"Non-violence has become a tactic and is no longer being considered a principle," said Victor Aronow of UMass, citing one of the main points of the Civil Rights conference held this weekend to discuss the question of "Civil Rights: Reform or Revolution?"

Aronow termed the weekend "very successful" and said that there were about 150 more outside delegates than planned on. He estimated that about 1,300 attended the discussions and speeches at Mt. Holyoke, Amherst and UMass.

The civil rights movement has been characterized by sit-ins and Martin Luther Kings' general quest for reform. It appears that the trend is toward an effort to build political power, not merely compromise with the existing power structure.

Many of the speakers felt the concept of non-violence as a Christian moral principle will not win reforms. Jesse Gray, leader of the rent strike in New York, said, "White Students are no longer useful in some phases of the civil rights movement. We have gone past the stage where six-week revolutions are effective," referring to the summer vacation campaigns of students.

For many of those attending, this convocation will serve as a strategy session for tactics of future civil rights activities. Aronow announced that there is to be a follow-up conference at Dartmouth in April to evaluate this conference and plan future actions.

Aronow also learned of a graduate school for community organizers to be started in New York next year. He said that four years of undergraduate work would be required for acceptance to the school.

Organization of Community Discussed

by Norm Trump
Staff Reporter

"America is becoming a vast Federal plantation," says Jesse Gray, outspoken Negro director of the Community Council on Housing (CCH) in New York City.

Gray was one of three speakers on "Community Organization" in Bowker Auditorium on Saturday, in conjuction with the Civil Rights weekend.

The "plantation" Gray refers to is the system of housing developments built on slum-cleared land under the Federal Government-sponsored Urban Renewal program.

He feels that most of the heads of community organizations are either "Uncle Toms" or lackeys, who support the conservative whites.

Kermit Bailey, first speaker on the agenda, said that, "You must identify the true enemy."

Bailey is assistant administrator for community property of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Bailey stated that with the Urban Renewal program, the Federal Government gives loans and grants for neighborhood rehabilitation and related works, leaving the planning to local

Economic Experts Panel Featured at Conference

by Paul Rodman
Staff Reporter

Three noted economic experts called for the establishment of "Department of Peace" in the United States to combat effectively the Negro's economic problems in contemporary society.

The moderator of the panel was Prof. Tom Yost of Amherst college.

Panelists included Nelson Jackson, Executive Director of the Urban League; Sumner Rosen, Professor of Economics at Simmons College, and Tom Kahn, Executive Secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy.

Jackson spoke first and noted that prejudice is an age-old problem and that the most significant factor in the perpetuation of prejudice was an inherent "resistance to change" that has made recent Negro efforts more difficult.

"Disenchantment with life compels us to act," he said. The remaining question is the method by which action must be implemented.

The basic tenant of the civil rights movement must be "not to injure America, but to purify it."

Jackson concluded "Twenty-two million Negroes are confined, but they are not resigned."

Sumner Rosen confined his remarks to economics and dealt specifically with factors that impede Negro progress.

He called the current Negro situation only a "visible reality," a mere "tip of an iceberg visible symptoms of a vast problem of economic change."

Although the complexion of economic America has changed from a "good oriented to a service oriented culture," said Rosen, "the pattern of income distribution in the United States has not changed perceptibly in the last half century."

Rosen said that methods presently employed are the results of the 1930's and 1940's and as such are not at all commensurate with the demands of today.

The Simmons professor proposed three factors that he deemed necessary to the attainment of full Negro employment:

1) A National commitment to the public sector at least as large as the military establishment, 2) A policy for manpower similar to that in Sweden, where those who profit most by change must bear some of the cost of change, 3) A more comprehensive world orientation on the part of the United States regarding the relationships between the rich and the poor nations.

"Assimilation and the Authentic Jew"

Prof Addresses Hillel

by Linda Perlstein
Staff Reporter

Approximately 75 people gathered in the SU Ballroom on Sunday, Feb. 14 for a Bagel Brunch and a talk by Dr. Harry Schumer, Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and Professor of Psychology.

The topic of the lecture was "Assimilation and the Authentic Jew." Prof. Schumer addressed his first remarks to the problem of authenticity, describing three different kinds of authentic Jew. The first is the Orthodox Jew who keeps all the traditions and practically cuts himself off from the rest of society. The second is the Reform Jew who keeps part of the traditions but still practices his religion; and the third is the assimilated Jew who may not believe but still identifies with his Jewishness.

Therefore Dr. Schumer felt the problem of authenticity was one that was much too complicated and spent the rest of his talk on the question of assimilation, speaking of it mostly from a social-psychological view-point.

He stated that an individual cannot long remain in a state of conflict and seeks to reduce it in some manner.

One of the ways for a Jew to do this, Prof. Schumer suggested, would be to return to the ghetto, to cut oneself off completely from the rest of society; another milder form would be to bring up one's children to know and understand the rituals and customs of the Jewish religion, and a third way would be to assimilate.

Yet Dr. Schumer also distinquished between kinds of assimiliation, stating that one culture did not have to be swallowed up completely by the dominant culture, but that the combining of two cultures could have an affect on both of them.

Dr. Schumer closed his talk by giving his own opinion of what he feels is the fate of the Jewish people in the future. He said, "as long as there is freedom of movement and interraction there is an increased probability that there will be more assimilation."

UNITED CHRISTIAN FOUNDATION LECTURE

On Monday, Feb. 22, Miss Judy Nicholson, acting New England Executive for World University Service, will be on the campus to discuss summer overseas work with W. U. S. If you are interested in speaking with Miss Nicholson or wish information about other summer service opportunities see Chaplain Cooper, Old Chapel 13.

Jesuit Father from New York City To Discuss Church Position in Asia

Father Robert C. Dressman, a Jesuit with a background in radio publicity and public relations will speak on "Encounter in Asia" at 8 p.m. Tuesday evening in the lounge of the Newman Center.

Father Dressman joined the Society of Jesus in 1942 after spending several years in Cincinnati as a publicity and continuing writer for radio. His work for the Jesuits has taken him to Japan where he was Director of Public Relations at the Japanese university. Presently his headquarters are in New York City where he is serving as director of Sophia University Associates.

In accepting the offer to speak at the Newman Center, Father Dressman, who holds graduate degrees in English and Journalism expressed his hope that he could "provide a few perspectives on the Church's challenge and commitment in Asia". This will be very timely as the commitment of our country in Asia is being questioned by campus groups such as the Young Independents.

Tonight the Chamber of Commerce in Northampton is sponsoring a talk on Viet Nam.

Thursday night in Bartlett Auditorium there will be a panel discussion with members of the history and gov't. depts on the panel to discuss Viet Nam.

Kingsmen at Kettle

Plans for Saturday night's "Kingsmen At The Kettle" were announced by John R. Mullen, Sophomore Class Vice-President.

Mullen, who will be Master of Ceremonies at the event, described the evening as one of the highlights of the 1965 Winter Carnival.

According to Mullen, the Kingsmen will play in a nightclub atmosphere. Half the commons will be reserved for dancing, and the other half will be decorated as a cabaret,complete with 40 foot bar, cigarette girls, and cheese dips.

The Kingsmen, of Louie, Louie and Jolly Green Giant fame, will play in three one-hour segments starting at 8:00. During the first intermission, Mullen will introduce the Queen and her court. During the second intermission, Bill Tindall, Freshman basketball star, will provide music for dancing.

For a truly great evening, on behalf of the Class of 1967, John Mullen invites you to see the Kingsmen at the Kettle. Tickets are $1.50 and can be bought at the Student Union Lobby Counter.

Metawampee's Men-The Revelers

Reveler applications are now available for all interested Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. The deadline is Wednesday, Feb. 24. The only qualifications are enthusiasm, a willingness to work, and a concern for one of the greatest phases of University life—spirit.

A brief sketch of Reveler—sponsored activities during the present year indicates how active the group has been and will continue to be in future years.

Their work begins in the summer when several members edited a handbook of traditional songs and cheers to be presented to the freshmen when they arrived in September. "Freshman" was the watchword of the Fall, as twenty-five Reveler upperclassmen arrived early on campus to greet the newcomers, and invite them to their first class activity—Freshman Ball.

The first Reveler-Adelphia sponsored Pep Rally was planned especially for the new '68'ers. They displayed the spirit to marching in full force behind the parade. A few weeks later, over a 100 campus organizations helped make Activities Night a success. Thousands toured the Ballroom becoming acquainted with the extra-curricular aspect of the University. Closing the first semester's activities was Scholarship Night to obtain profits for a scholarship this spring.

A second semester activities cook off is the Pancake Breakfast on Saturday morning of Winter Carnival. Members of the University community and their guests will enjoy the newly-discovered culinary talents of the Revelers.

Activities continue through the Spring leading to the event of the year Campus Varieties. This production has been the focal point of careful planning for many months including three one-act plays written by undergraduates of the university. Names to be announced in coming weeks.

This year the members of Revelers have shown they are a hard-working organization, vital to the spirit which must grow and expand with the University. Capable people are needed to carry on the activities of the organization which was founded expressly for this purpose.

All interested freshmen, sophomores, and juniors are urged to apply now — before Wednesday, Feb. 24th. Applications are available in all dorms, houses and in the RSO office today.

Cinema Critic

One for "8½"

by Alice R. Wishart

Federico Fellini's "8½" was shown at Smith's Sage Hall on Saturday. Fellini chronicles exactly the vagaries of a confused, disjointed self, and thereby, adds another perception to the inventory of Tragedy.

Guido, played politely by Marcello Mastroianni, leads us through a montage of scenes developed on four levels of consciousness. Without transitional clues, the film flits between the daily problems of a film director at the height of his powers, to his present entanglements and emotional confusion, then on to dreamlike scenes where wish becomes real, and finally to reenactments of childhood traumas.

A RICH DISPLAY OF RIPE and overripe women parade through Mastroianni's life and across the screen; each displays her forte before advancing the scenario. All the women Guido has ever noticed assemble in one scene. Here, in a personal dream-harem, he beats and humiliates them while they return maternal love and forgiveness.

The camera explores the elegant contrasts of white and black everywhere. Sober priests, black-swathed peasant women, and dark, Renaissance portraits all pose before white-washed plaster. Black cypresses rise before the spa's marble. In a hotel room, classic columns of drapery disguise dark corners where the dreams are poised. The tower, Guido's creation, traces its skeleton pointlessly on the sky. All this sustains the bleak view of self enjoyed by Guido.

When efforts to produce a film, "which tells the truth without hurting anyone," prove futile, the artist escapes both promises and problems. A mass of loose ends flows symbolically from the great, empty tower (for symbolism is generously employed) now disgorging a flow of snowy spirits.

FELLINI REMARKS, via his prize-winning film, "I have nothing to say, but I want to say it anyway."

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

EXCERPT FROM THE

MINUTES OF MEETING OF THE

UNIVERSITY ATHLETIC COUNCIL

January 18, 165, 7:30 p.m., Student Union

Present: Chairman Levine, Mr. Chambers, Dean Conlon, Mr. Galanie, Dean Lindsey, Dean McGuirk, Mr. Michaels, Mr. Noymer, Mr. Richason, Dean Tunis. Also present were Mr. Lorden, Mr. O'Connell.

A lengthy discussion of VENDING POLICY and particularly as it relates to the 15-CENT DANISH, was led by Mr. O'Connell and Mr. Michaels. Several points became rather clearly defined:

(1) that to yield in all matters where pressure is exerted would lead to a catastrophic condition;

(2) that if student leaders could be encouraged to seek out the facts and consider them objectively, most "issues" would resolve themselves (it was suggested that Council members are available to Mr. Michaels to provide background information as his judgment warrants it desirable);

(3) that it was highly desirable from point of view of the vending program that Chief Blasko initiate a car-towing epidemic (quite fortuitously this seems to have come to pass).

An interim report from the Ad Hoc Committee on Ticket Policy was presented by Dean Conlon in the absence of Mr. Johnston. Policy guidelines were informally approved and the Committee was asked to further develop implementation.

Recent NCAA action establishing prediction factor criteria for admission of student-athletes and participation eligibility was reviewed. It was the general feeling that the plan was unworkable because of the variance in methods of computing the prediction factor.

The meeting adjourned at 11:00 p.m.

Hardly Worthy

It has been brought to my attention that certain members of the Administration, namely the Athletic Council, have expressed their opinions as to the current activity of some student leaders. They spoke in regard to the recent vending maching boycott which was carried out in the various residence halls and was sponsored and controlled by the Student Senate.

In an obvious attempt to pressure the student leaders, these members of the Athletic Council suggested that the Police Department could be directed to enforce the regulations concerning the towing of automobiles more strictly. The following quotation is taken from the January 18, 1965 published minutes of the Athletic Council:

"that it was highly desirable from the point of view of the vending program that Chief Blasko initiate a car-towing epidemic (quite fortuitously this seems to have come to pass)."

Since the Council received more than $53,000 in fiscal year 1962-1963 from these vending machines, the proceeds of which in the past reverted to the various residence halls, one can see where any attempt to rock their nice, little boat would cause them concern. It certainly should not have to be pointed out to the Administration that there are some student leaders who reflect student opinion, in addition to those who act as tools of the Administration. Apparently the Athletic Council would prefer the latter.

Pressuring the students won't lead to capitulation, gentlemen, but to re-enforced entrenchment. This is the lesson of Berkeley, and you should be aware of it. Your action was trite and hardly worthy of the institution you represent.

Student Senate Services Comm.

William R. Donovan, Chairman

A Question Of Attitude

The recent statement by the University Athletic Council "that it was highly desirable from the point of view of the vending program that Chief Blasko initiate a car-towing epidemic" throws an impediment in the way of sound student-administration relationships. Student feelings in the matter appear to be entirely ignored.

The issue at stake involves more than the "15¢ Danish." Nor is the problem merely a question of students' rights versus the administration's authority. The important thing is whether the administration, and the athletic council in particular, approaches student requests with the proper attitude. Are students considered as would be scholars entitled to an honest evaluation of their opinions or merely as cogs in a well oiled administrative wheel?

Wrapped up in money making endeavors, administrative officials often forget the supreme goal of the University—the education of the students. Regardless of how much money a particular department succeeds in harvesting from the students, the revenue is only good to the extent to which it can be transformed into scholarships and other funds furthering and rewarding academic performance.

UMass is a state university and as such has an obligation to offer a qualified student of the commonwealth the least expensive education possible. When the University neglects this obligation and regards the undergraduate as a customer rather than a student, then it defeats its own purpose for being, and undermines the ideals of education as a whole. Let us hope that such an attitude never predominates at the University.

Number, Please

"I'm sorry, the number you have called is out of service right now, if . . . Hello . . . Hello . . . is this Brooks? . . . what, Knowlton . . . Gorman too . . . but I'm trying to get . . ."

Sound familiar?

It happens nearly every night to hundreds of University students who are trying to use that familiar commodity, the inter-dorm phone.

Of course, it can only happen until 12:00 o'clock midnight that magic hour when, for some mysterious reason, they are all turned off. One may ask why the University has seen fit to turn these phones off, when doing so does not in the least eliminate telephone calls, or even discourage late calls.

To the contrary, it creates only the inconvenience of waiting in line to use a pay phone, and staying up even later to make the call.

This is not to imply that waiting in line is not normal, or that it only occurs when the inter-dorm phones are not working. For these waiting lines are everpresent, and are only accentuated by the only too common foul-ups in the inter-dorm phone lines.

The plain fact is, WE NEED MORE PHONES!!

But, Ah, these cost money. And, it seems that this is one commodity that ol' UMASS is very reluctant to part with. It sounds like a very perplexing problem does it not?

Actually, it is not as hard to solve as it may appear to be. The solution is even a bit obvious. There is no reason why there cannot be more pay phones in all the dorms.

Not only would they do away with the long lines of students waiting to use the present telephones, but they would also pay for themselves, and, they would cost the University nothing.

The problem is immediate, and it can be solved. Maybe soon when we dial a number, we will hear the good old sound of . . . "rrrring . . . rrrring . . ."

RIGHT TO SPEAK

To the Editor:

I would like to reply to Mr Topp, who expressed in Friday's Collegian his views of the Young Independents' Demonstration. I was in the Union several times that day, and did not see then, nor did I hear later of any violation of public safety. Nor was the Demonstration necessarily in bad taste; in this particular situation, taste is an individual decision.

More important, Mr. Topp says that "there should be some sort of official agency representing the many adult and mature individuals on campus that could step in to prevent these children from making fools of themselves." I am not presuming to judge the maturity or immaturity of the individuals involved, but how is any student to learn, if he does not experience on his own, and make his own mistakes? If Mr. Topp thinks this behavior was insane, or at least not intelligent, (as he infers) perhaps he has forgotten his own mistakes of "childhood!"

Mr. Topp goes on to infer that this group is opposed to the ideology of the United States. He should say that he thinks we ought to remain in Vietnam, instead of intimating that the Young Independents are a "faction representing ideologies opposed to those of the United States." Whether or not the policy of non-violence is beneficial for the United States is a matter of personal opinion for those of us not working in the State Department.

I will not say that the Young Independents' method was the best action, but I do not think that a statement of opinion, as this undoubtedly was, "betrays our country and our freedom." Perhaps Mr. Topp thinks that the opinions of the Young Independents are contrary to the good of the United States, but this feeling does not mean that the group should not be allowed to state their viewpoint. As a final parting shot: (The parentheses are mine.) "I may disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." And, I add, (your right to say it) in a place where you will be heard!

Leader of Harlem Strike Speaks At Conference

by Pat Petow
Staff Reporter

Mr. Jessie Gray, leader of the Harlem rent strike, spoke at Phi Gamma Chi, Amherst College, to about 100 students from the four colleges and other institutions.

Pointing out "that rent strikes aren't that easy," he emphasized that the impact of the 5,000 family action in 1963 "gave a certain amount of confidence" to the people of Harlem in united movement.

He said that the militancy of the black people is exaggerated; before a march on City Hall could be made, his group had to go to every city agency and then publicize the unsuccessful result.

In addition to being where the action is, he attributed confidence from nationally-reported protests to the gains of the 1963 move.

Among the concessions received by the black people was consultation for the first time with the local organizers by the several federal planning agencies.

Gray stated that wherever impoverishment exists, organization can produce progress.

In New York, a 1930 law empowers the courts to prohibit collection of rents when necessary repairs or maintenance are not carried out. But Gray expressed the feeling that whether there was a precedent or not, a movement could force a law upon the city.

Due to the pressures in 1963, New York City adopted an emergency-repairs law (with the philosophy of fire department services) meeting immediate needs and dealing with the building owner later.

The city installed and/or repaired heating and hot water facilities; a million dollars was found "when pressure grew" in the anti-poverty funds to kill rats: in his opinion, not a million dollars worth have since been exterminated.

Having foreseen a housing crisis for more than ten years, Gray identified it as "immediate needs," and a basis from which to "move beyond" into education, et cetera.

He speculated that a massive rent strike, for example, in Harlem, could force Alabama to insure freedom of voting to its Negroes with pressure from property owners who would be unable to meet their mortgage obligations on which the nation's economy, in part, is based.

Closing his prepared remarks, Gray told the students that in working in the ghetto you cannot mix dedications with the good life. He said today that we need the healthy ideological struggles of the 1930's.

Gray expressed throughout his remarks, the philosophy that unity and effectiveness by the people in a specific demonstration secures a specific goal and makes possible future achievements.

OAU Delegate Accuses U.S. Of Violence

by Roxana Adams
Staff Reporter

The head of the Organization for Afro-American Unity (OAU), James Shabazz, spoke before a seminar of about 100 Conference delegates at Phi Psi in Amherst College on Saturday.

Previously scheduled were Malcolm X and Andrew Young, deputy to Martin Luther King. Both were detained and unable to appear.

Shabazz outlined the principles of the OAU. He stressed the main goals of the organization: the rehabilitation of the Negro and freedom from oppression.

JAME SHEBAZZ

The rehabilitation, Shabazz asserted, will only be realized when the American Negro recognizes his ethnic and cultural bonds with the African Negro. Freedom from oppression will soon follow.

Shabazz accused the U.S. Government of supporting the Ku Klux Klan and many other acts of violence against the Negro. The only solution, according to Shabazz, is to re-establish contact with Africa and resolve differences on a world-wide scale.

These statements were followed by a question-and-answer session. Various points were raised, and Shabazz was called upon to defend his stands.

Ques: "Malcolm X once advocated complete separation of races. Has he changed his position, and how do you feel about this?"

Ans: "Separation is not a solution, but a method. It is the solution we are concerned with, not the methodology. We are interested in freedom from oppression, no matter how we get it."

Ques: "Malcolm X was very vague about the future plans of the OAU. What are they?"

Ans: "He (Malcolm X) would be, because he is wise. We have made tactical errors in telling people what we were going to do, and then we could not do it."

Shabazz concluded by saying: "If you think you are right, die fighting. Am I supposed to stand up and be murdered when I am right?"

Supporter Of Freedom Movement Voices Opinions On Civil Rights

by Raymond Abott
Staff Reporter

One of the few white lawyers who has given support to the freedom movement in Mississippi and who is presently barred from practice in Mississippi as a result of his civil rights work, spoke Saturday, Feb. 13, at a Civil Rights Conference seminar at Amherst College, entitled "Mississippi: Closed Society."

William Higgs, member of the Council of Federated Organization (COFO) and a worker for the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party (MFDP), spoke to approximately 35 delegates. He subtitled his talk "An Analysis of Strategy to Break Down the Closed Society, Past, Present, Future."

"The most promising and immediate way to trample the barriers in Mississippi is in the works today," said Higgs. That is, there is presently a "challenge" before the Congress of the United States to unseat the state delegation from Mississippi.

Since the Houses of Congress have the power to decide who is to be considered duly elected, it is possible that the delegation from Mississippi could be unseated. Higgs explained that this "challenge" came to a vote in the House of Representatives early in the session of Congress.

The "challenge" was opposed by the major labor unions and also the N.A.A.C.P.; 149 Congressmen went on record as also opposed to seating the Mississippi delegation. The final vote was 276 to 149; a 75 vote margin kept the delegation on the floor.

The vote "shook the people of Mississippi greatly," said Higgs, and consequently he thinks the threat is terrorizing the leadership of Mississippi and making them try to change their image.

Higgs explained that according to the rules of the House of Representatives this vote must come up again in this session. He thinks the vote will probably be held some time in early July.

This is a "very hopeful picture," and it is the time for civil rights workers to act, reasons Higgs, since Mississippi officials will be under instruction not to further damage the image of Mississippi before this matter comes to a vote in Washington. If this is the condition, Higgs believes Civil Rights workers will have nearly half the summer to get much work done in voter registration with little harrassment.

"Because of the challenge," said Higgs, "a political revolution could be brought about this summer." Negroes could get to vote because the barriers may be lowered.

Higgs also discussed the new voting bills being introduced in Congress. He explained that there will probably be a total of three or four bills. He favors a bill that is sweeping, providing for the whole nation and not only applicable to Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Higgs discussed the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party (MFDP) which he said did not just happen but actually took much planning and work. Since it was thought political means was the best way to fight the closed society, the Freedom Party was the logical choice.

Higgs hopes that the MFDP will have a summer project, a political organization of teams, and units to take on duties of news instead of just voter registration as in the past.

8,000 Students Each Day Strain "Hatch" Facilities

by Harold Gushue

According to R. W. Colvin, Foods Manager of the Student Union, "About 7,500-8,000 students a day use the Hatch." About 1,000 students use the Hatch between 12 noon and 1 p.m., "and these figures do not include the walk-in service upstairs, Colvin further stated.

Since the Hatch was originally a snack-bar, even with the present arrangement enabling a seating capacity of 500, it is "overly crowded" according to Colvin.

Dr. Knofsinger, director of the S.U., said the immediate plans for relieving the situation are the walk-in service on the main floor of the S.U. and the opening of the snack - bar in the North Commons. Dr. Knofsinger stressed that the walk-in service is, "open to the entire University community,, not just faculty members."

Dr. Knofsinger further stated that, "Plans are being considered to use the meeting rooms in the mezzanine of the S.U.," to facilitate food service. Also being considered is a mobile kitchen unit to serve hot meals on the ground floor of the S.U.

Future plans for enlarging the S.U., according to Dr. Knofsinger, include a snack-bar, enlarging the Hatch, and an informal room with dining facilities.

The construction will take 2-2½ years and is based on an enrollment of 20,000 students.

governments.

Under this program, cities have to prove on an annual basis that they are engaging in a complete planning process, enforcing code tools and setting up citizens' advisory committees, or risk being taken off aid.

"Code enforcement is practically impossible," said Tom Hayden, head of "Students for a Democratic Society."

In an attempt to force city-wide planning, the government instituted the "workable program for community improvement."

Hayden said that if tenants complain about slum landlords to the city, the landlord insists on his property rights and evicts the tenant.

Hayden feels that major requirements in community programs are leadership and democracy.

Roman Past Presented In U.T. Plays

Two views of Rome's history will be presented by the University Theatre this spring.

Rehearsals for "Julius Caesar" are moving into Bowker Auditorium for the final phases of rehearsal, Director Harry E. Mahnken announced. The production is scheduled for March 4, 5 and 6. This is the familiar view of Rome at the peak of its power, when the Ides of March herald a momentous event.

Try-outs for "Romulus," to be directed by Miss Doris Abramson, will take place on four days this week: Monday, Feb. 15, from 7:30 to 10 p.m.; Tuesday and Thursday from 3 to 5 p.m. and on Friday, Feb. 19, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in Bartlett 125. In Gore Vidal's adaptation of Rome's declining years, there is a comical parody of Rome's peak, including the vital Ides of March.

ty, said that a myth has been created about last year's civil rights bill. Many people believe, said Kahn, that "we can look forward to more or less automatic integration and assimilation" now.

In reality, said Kahn, we could not have chosen a worse time to move for Negroes' righ's because the country is not now expanding as it once was.

The problem as presented by the panelists is: Negroes will never be able to achieve equality until the economy is operating at full steam, because they are now on the bottom of the economic ladder.

The consensus appeared to be that government must take the lead in instituting measures to make it possible for Negro ascendancy to become a fact rather than a myth.

Chorale Opens Season

The University Chorale opened its last semester under Dr. King on registration day. Due to an increasingly heavy academic schedule, Dr. King has resigned effective as of June. The Music Department has not yet found the new Choral Director.

Because of this change, the format of this semester is an emphasis on reading a wide selection of music in preparation for next year. Aaron Copeland, Randall Thompson, and Scarlatti are among the composers being sampled.

Both a credit course and an R. S. Organization, the Chorale consists of about 75 persons at the present time. Membership is open to any qualified person. Dr. King aims for a closely-knit atmosphere with enough flexibility to admit new members and keep pace with the growth of the University. Matmen Prevail Over Williams, WPI

Following the strong examples of Dave Balanoff and Boris Chevone the UMass matmen defeated a powerful William's College team 22-18. It was the Redmen's first victory in four starts. The fastest fall of the meet was scored by Dave Kelly in the 177 lb. class as he put away his opponent, Casselman, in 1:32. In the match which won the meet for UMass Milt Morin adeptly pinned Hyler in 4:40. George Darling and Captain Jesse Brogan also scored wins for the Redmen.

The UMass grapplers scored their second win in a row by downing WPI by a score of 17-13. Dave Balanoff wrestled a strong match in the 123 lb. class to defeat Koski of WPI 4-0, giving UMass an edge in this close dual meet. Jacobson of WPI decisioned Chevone 6-5 to tie the meet 3-3.

Locke of WPI pinned Ritche of UMass in 2:00, after which Redman Captain Jesse Brogan evened the score by pinning Turrick in 4:56. George Darling wrestled a fast match, decisioning Wilson of WPI 9-2.

Dick Howe wrestled well before succumbin to Tata (WPI) in the third period. After Dave Kelley's (M) decision over Herrman the Redmen led 14-13. Milt Morin insured the victory by trouncing Trask 11-4.

The matmen have compiled a 2-2-1 record. On Tuesday, Feb. 16, Coach John Douglas will put a strong team on the mats against UConn in Boydens Auxilliary Gym at 4:30 (Frosh at 2:30).

LCA Hosts Tourney

Lambda Chi, UMass, defeats Worcester rival for title.

Lambda Chi of Univ. of Mass. defeated Lambda Chi of Worcester Tech 90-59 in a tourney final on Sunday afternoon at the Cage. The game climaxed a strenuous weekend of activities for the seven Lambda Chi teams from Bucknell, Drexel, Wor. Tech, U.R.I., Gettysburg, Clark, and Univ. of Mass. This was the first regional tournament at the University for Lambda Chi.

The fraternities on this campus cooperated by offering the visiting teams housing facilities for the weekend. The opening ceremonies were attended by Mr. William Barnard, Ass't to the Dean of Men, Mr. Warren McGuirk, Dean of Physical Educatio and Father Quigley, Newman Center. The trophies were presented by Msgr. Powers and Mr. Chester Gladchuk, advisor of Lambda Chi and Director of Intramurals at Univ. of Mass.

Rourke for game honors. Charlie had a fine game with 19 rebounds to go with his 27 points, which included 13 of 18 foul shots.

Tim Edwards had 22 points with 12 rebounds and contributed seven assists. Kingston had nine points, and Frank Stewart came off of the bench in the last five minutes to score eight which played a big part in keeping the margin at 10.

The Rams got 19 from Fitzgerald, 16 from Jim Cymbala, and 11 from the quick Henry Carey.

Mass hit on 39 of 75 shots and 25 of 34 from the line. Rhody had a 40% mark on 37 of 92 and 16 of 25 from the foul stripe.

In the second period action Feldhoff drew out the Vermont goalie, putting the puck in an open net at 10:10. Bill Skowyra put the Redmen two goals ahead as he soloed at 18:16. Vermont's lone goal of the period came on a face-off at 19:48 as Swett got credit for the shot which bounced off two Mass. skaters and skidded past Bowen's outstretched glove.

The third period saw Vermont come roaring back with goals by Semden at 3:04 and Worth at 6:08. But UMass was not to be denied as Feldhoff soloed at 7:42 and Skowyra polished off the victory at 10:56 by tipping in a slapshot by Dick Callahan.

Redmen Five Vanquishes Rhode Island Rams, Takes Control Of Second Place In Yan-Con

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts grabbed second place in the Yankee Conference race by downing Rhode Island, 103-90, Friday night. It was the second victory of the year for the Redmen over the Rams and dropped the visitors to third place in the conference.

Massachusetts now has a 6-2 conference record while Rhody stands 3-3, with the first place Connecticut Huskies left on the slate.

The Rams gave a good account of themselves as it took a 52% shooting mark by the Redmen to hold off the Rams. Charlie O'-Rourke, Tim Edwards, and Clarence Hill combined to score 76 points for UMass as they rolled up a twenty point lead, only to see it shaved in the closing minutes.

The lead stayed around a 10 point margin until a final basket by Hill at the end of the half made it 47-35 for the Redmen. O'Rourke had 15 points in the first half. Hill had 10 and Edwards 12 for the UMass club. An unusual facet about the first half was that the Redmen made 11 of 12 foul shots, Edwards had all six of his while O'Rourke had 5 of 6.

The second half was the reverse of the first. It was close with the Redmen winning out 56-55 for total points as they made 21 of 34 shots and the Rams hit on 23 of 45.

With UMass on top 61-49 and about 13:50 left on the clock, Hill personally took charge. In the next two minutes he sank four baskets without a miss while the Rams were shut out. That upped the spread to 20 points.

The Redmen did reach a 22 point span several times after that, but the Rams kept pecking away at the lead. Mike Fitzgerald made eight points to cut it to 11 at 85-74, and with about five minutes to go in the game, it was at the 10 point margin.

The clubs traded basket for basket down the stretch with the Rams never getting closer than that 10 point difference. Charlie O'Rourke pushed the Redmen over the century mark for the second time this year as he sank two foul shots with less than a minute left.

The crowd livened up somewhat in the second half, but somehow the interest just wasn't there. It was a good game once the shooting improved.

Hill came up with 17 points in the second half to finish with 27, but this only tied him with O'-

Charlie O'Rourke sparkled last Friday night making him top scorer with Clarence Hill.

With gravity on the side of Hill, the earth-bound Rams were unable to stop Clarence from getting 27 points.

Pucksters Down Vt.

Coach Steve Kosakowski's hockey team staged a brilliant 5-4 come-from-behind win over a powerful Vermont team Saturday night at Orr Rink. An all-out team effort sparked by Co-captain Skip Bowen's superb net minding performance with 39 saves, a hat trick by Dick Feldhoff, and two goals by Bill Skowyra led the Redmen to victory.

The scoring was started by Vermont as Ed Roy drew first blood on a face-off to the right of the UMass net at 6:03. Dick Feldhoff came back to get the first of his three goals on a rebound at 17:08.

In second period action Feldhoff drew out the Vermont goal-

UMass-Boston Site Selected

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company Building will be the home of UMass-Boston when the new educational facility opens its doors to 1,000 students next September, it was announced today by UMass President John W. Lederle.

A clash has developed between Boston's Mayor Collins and University officials. "We are welcoming them there in rented space," said Collins, "but we don't want them to go into the real estate business."

Collins added that any possible thought of the University staying permanently in the downtown area would be "devastating" to traffic. He estimated that 65 to 70 percent of the students will drive to class.

UMass-Boston will occupy the building located at the corner of Stuart, Arlington and Piedmont Streets on a lease with option to buy basis. The structure has 13 floors, a basement and sub-basement, and comprises an area of 153,000 square feet.

Tuesday's decision by the Board of Trustees came after extensive investigation by the University's task force, management consulants, and an architectural and engineering firm. Last summer, the task force identified more than 60 site possibilities. Many of these were eliminated because of location, limited size, and other factors. Nineteen site possibilities were then more carefully examined by task force members.

The University next engaged Robert Heller Associates, management survey consultants, to evaluate the sites identified and make recommendations based on accessibility, students needs, faculty requirements, estimated cost, adequate space, appearance and availability.

President Lederle said, "The Board of Trustees is convinced that this location comes the closest to meeting all of our requirements. It will take care of our needs for approximately five years. It is convenient to rapid transit, bus and parking facilities. It has adequate floor space for both classrooms and faculty offices. There are five passenger elevators, all in good condition. The building is in good repair and will be relatively easy to remodel."

Provost Oswald Tippo stated, "We have received many applications from faculty members interested in teaching at UMass-Boston next year, and several outstanding professors have already been appointed. Our first year's curriculum is complete. And, we will be prepared to bring a progress report to the Legislature shortly to obtain operating funds for this new facility."

UMass Professors Sign Open Letter On Viet Nam

An "Open Letter to President Johnson on Vietnam" went to Washington this week, accompanied by the signatures of 400 New England faculty and staff members, including the names of 33 UMass members.

The letter also ran as a paid advertisement in the N. Y. Times.

"UNLESS THE SITUATION is very different from what it appears to be, we have lost the political initiative in Vietnam and are attempting to substitute military actions for political ones," the letter emphasises.

The professors asked the President for an explanation of "Our goals in Vietnam", whether or not they are just and can be accomplished.

The letter continues, "Are they (our goals) truly worth what they are bound to cost in dollars and human lives?"

In addition, the letter requests the President to answer the following questions:

"With whom are we allied in Vietnam?", "Why are we fighting in Vietnam?", "Can we win in Vietnam?", and, "Is it worth the cost?".

FROM THE PROFESSORS' POINT OF VIEW, the war in Vietnam represents ". . . a seemingly endless series of demonstrations and riots in Saigon and Hue, of threats and challenges to the dignity of our Ambassador and our other representatives by the very men we seek to sustain in power."

Univ. Scholar-Athlete Goal of McGuirk

by Howie Davis
Staff Reporter

(Ed. note: This is the first in a series of articles explaining to the student the manner in which high school students are scouted and recruited by the University for Varsity athletics. This introductory article will aid in formulating a general idea of the requirements of the University for Varsity athletes.)

Dean Warren P. McGuirk of the Physical Education Department stressed the fact that over the past few years the University of Massachusetts has stepped up their recruitment of Varsity-scholars.

Dean McGuirk said that the University places heavy stress on the scholar-athlete and will attempt to have a person of high quality attend the University by showing him what the University offers in academics.

The example he gave was the competition the University has with an established Ivy League school for the scholar-athelete. It was brought up that the Ivy League schools have active Alumni branches throughout the country who continually report the best scholar athletes back to the colleges.

DEAN McGUIRK said the University has no such active organization and therefore finds it difficult to obtain these highly qualified young men.

He added that the University is only interested in obtaining scholar-athletes who want to attend the school and who will be best for what we have to offer. The Varsity sports program has greatly expanded in recent years and Dean McGuirk hopes to get contracts to play Inter Collegiate Athletics with Universities that have been recognized for many years. He feels that this will give the UMass student an idea of what other campuses look like and how they operate.

THE STRESS still falls on the scholar athlete and the impression they will make for the University. Dean McGuirk's dream is to see a Rhode's scholar attend the University before he retires. Before the day arrives that his administrative duties will end at UMass he sincerely believes that this campus will be provided the best possible material to give the University a name as a highly respected college for its combination of the scholar-athlete.

Gov. Volpe To Crown Winter Carnival Queen

One of the major highlights of this year's Winter Carnival Weekend will be the selection of a Carni queen to be crowned Friday night by Governor John A. Volpe.

Governor Volpe will arrive by helicopter on the South Terrace of the S.U. early Friday evening. He will be greeted by President Lederle and Winter Carnival Chairman Bernie Dallas.

After an informal reception, to last until 7:00, Dallas will introduce President Lederle, who will officially open the weekend.

With the torches lit and the lights on, the queen candidates and the Governor will be introduced. Governor Volpe will then crown the queen. The Governor plans to leave the campus as soon as the fireworks display is over.

Another highoint of the weekend will be the Sunday appearance of the English cast of "That Was The Week That Was."

The irreverent and bold humor of the TW3 cast will combine with the talent of folksingers Josh White and Judy Collins to complete the concert program.

Tickets for the Sunday concert are now on sale at the Student Union box office. Tickets for the Kingsmen, however, have been sold out.

Former UMass Official Is Head of UMass-Boston

Arizona State University's chief academic officer, Dr. John W. Ryan, will head the University of Massachusetts-Boston when it opens next Sept., it was announced by President John W. Lederle.

Dr. Ryan will assume the post of Chancellor, a title given the heads of major university units by leading institutions such as the Universities of California and North Carolina.

The new Chancellor will return to UMass after having served two years as Vice President for Academic Affairs at Arizona State University, a school of 17,000 students. Prior to that, Dr. Ryan served as Secretary of the University and Assistant to the President at UMass.

In making the annnouncement, President Lederle said, "In our nation-wide search for a Chancellor, we were looking for a man dedicated to undergraduate teaching of the highest order. In John Ryan we have found a man with an abiding interest in students as individuals and as scholars. His experience as an administrator, his reputation as an excellent teacher, and his imagination and dynamism mark him as eminently qualified to head this important new UMass facility."

U.S. Vietnamese Policy Topic of Faculty Panel

by Joe Sullivan

"Neither hawk nor dove, but water buffalo." These were the words of Prof. Luther Allen of the University govt. dept when asked by the Collegian to state his position with regard to the policy the U.S. should follow in South Vietnam.

With obvious reference to the two Washington camps of thought on the "Vietnamese situation"—the hawks of escalation and the doves of neutralization—Prof. Allen said the U.S. must develop the patience of a water buffalo to fight the bitter, bloody, and undeclared war being waged in Vietnam.

Prof. Allen, along with Drs. David Leonard and Howard Quint, of the history dept., and Col. Albert Aykroyd of the military science dept., will participate in a panel discussion on Vietnam at Bartlett Auditorium Thursday night at 8 p.m. The panel will be moderated by Dr. Peter Rowe of the Smith College govt. dept.

WORLD UNIVERSITY SERVICE

On Monday, Feb. 22, Miss Judy Nicholson, acting New England executive for World University Service, will be on campus to discuss Summer Overseas Work with W.U.S. If you are interested in speaking with Miss Nicholson or wish information about other summer service opportunities see Chaplain Cooper, Old Chapel 13.

Capacity Concert Crowd Hears Buffy Sainte-Marie

by Linda Perlstein and Carolyn Levasky

A capacity audience filled the Main Lounge of Eugene Field Residence Hall last Sunday night to hear one of the University's most famous alumnae, Buffy Sainte-Marie.

Mrs. deKerpely, the Housemother of Eugene Field, said she first heard Buffy giving a concert for her dorm sisters in the basement of the old Abbey. She introduced her as an old friend and praised her success in the folk world, in welcoming her back to the University.

Buffy opened her concert with a tribute to the namesake of the residence hall by singing "Winkin, Blinkin and Nod." The song is one that she and Eugene Field collaborated on a few years ago.

The concert was a perfect example of Buffy's versatility as a folk singer. Her repertoire ranged from hillbilly to protest songs, blues, ballads, and sing-a-longs. Buffy has written most of the songs herself and recorded two albums, "It's My Way," and "Many a Mile." The latter was released Monday on the Vanguard label.

In a Collegian interview after the concert, Buffy said that she does not copy the style of any other performer but likes most of the current popular folk artists.

UMass To Host Blood Bank Session

A blood banking seminar meets tomorrow in Clark Hall from 9 to 4.

Sponsored jointly by UMass and the Pioneer Valley Medical Technologists Association, the seminar is open to all interested persons.

The morning session includes instruction in blood grouping, Rh factoring and blood typing.

Crossmatching and special problems are the subjects for the afternoon session.

Questions may be directed to Mrs. E. Reinmisch at the University Department of Public Health.

ATTENTION: FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORE WOMEN

Nomination papers for the Women's Judiciary election are available in the R.S.O. office and are due in the R.S.O. office Tues., Feb. 23. These papers may be signed by any woman who is a member of the Freshman, Sophomore, or Junior class. The primary election will be held on March 4 and the final election on March 11. One Freshman and one Sophomore will be elected.

Harold Watts Assumes New Role

Harold W. Watts of Amherst, former director of the UMass program office, has been appointed assistant coordinator of student activities.

Dr. Mark G. Noffsinger, student activities coordinator at UMass, said Mr. Watts will assume overall supervisory responsibility for day-to-day administration of student activities and assist the coordinator in planning and special assignments.

Mr. Watts has been on the University's staff since 1959 in several positions involving the administration and supervision of student activities.

In almost six years at UMass, he has been a helpful advisor to student groups.

Foreign Films Review

Nazi Germany Viewed In Contrasting Lights

On Sunday evening, if your footwork was fast, you could race between the foreign film offerings at the University's Student Union and Amherst's Kirby Theater for a contrasting double-bill: Nazi-German bullying satirized on the one hand, and, on the other, viewed seriously as the ultimate oppression.

"Roses for the Prosecution," a prize-winning satire written and directed by Wolfgang Staudte, replaced the promised "Confessions of Felix Krull" at the S.U. He underwrites the ludicrous death sentence meted out to a man who has stolen two packages of chocolates by blaring open the route to the firing squad with a gay, triumphal march. Staudte defines the military prosecutor as a posturing bully both when the death sentence is demanded and when Schramm signs the death certificate commenting, "I like music in the morning."

A timely air-raid frees Rudi, played by Martin Held, who then dimples his way through the next fifteen years, living off the certified proof that he is indeed a dead man. Meanwhile Schramm has denied his Nazi affiliations and risen to the post of public prosecutor. When the two men find themselves in the same town, the action becomes frantic.

Class-bound levels of taste are delightfully revealed in the settings for the action: garish wallpapers in the lower class boarding house, monastic severity in the halls of justice and rustic utility in a roadside eating place.

Staudte skillfully contrasts the two opposite personalities along with their backgrounds by the visual clues available. He successfully shows that when a little man and a big man clash, it isn't always the big man who wins. When the pompous prosecutor stoops to crush the flea, he loses his balance and falls.

"The Four Days of Naples" is a monumental documentary of the four days endured by the Neapolitans between the announcement of Italy's surrender and the arrival of Allied troops.

A succession of shocks, each event more forceful than the last, builds this staggering tragedy. Beginning with the shame of Naples, when a population knelt in submission to watch their own youth heartlessly shot, the camera goes from long, dispassionate views to the ravaged faces of helpless people.

The painful scenes pile on one another. The men of Naples being impounded for shipment to labor camps. The women rioting to protect their homes. Men held hostage at the stadium to prevent further riots. But it is the faces—dull and drawn with hunger, deprivation and, finally, desperation—that stand out.

This monument to desperate courage is held together by the tale of a small boy who, himself, earns a hero's peace: death as he turns a battle into victory.

The production crews and performers refused credits and acknowledgments; their expression of respect is starkly appropriate to their chronicle.

A REVIEW

Crossing The Ravine

The January issue of the University of Massachusetts Engineering Journal represents an obvious try by liberal minded engineering students to "cross the ravine" between cut and dry technical presentation and the compilation of an artistic, attractive literary form. By and large this try is a success.

The bold use of color and white space make-up in headline designs for article and feature stories is imaginative and eye catching. It does, however, lack the standardization, conservative format which characterize technical publications. The effects of journal layouts should not approach that of scientific comic books, as this UMass issue tends to do.

Articles included generally offer a good variety of technical and pertinent interest material for engineers and others scientifically orientated. One exception to this is "English, Exactness and Engineering", which says nothing new or original about the necessity for liberally educated engineers. Another is the "Meet the Faculty" feature. It fails to provide a very imaginative meeting with Professor George Higgins of the Civil Engineering department. There must have been an interesting angle about Prof. Higgins to add color to the sequence of experience listings given.

"The Operation and Maintenance of the Massachusetts Turnpike..." article is especially informative and detailed even for non-engineering interests. "Insecurity is a Number System to the Base Six" provides food for the mathematical or flare-for-numbers mind. And "The Design Engineer" and "An Alumnus At Work" serve to give the graduating engineer a working glimse of the expectations and opportunities he will soon encounter.

Information on the strength of glass products, the Centaur rocket, and the Charger warplane round out the technical articles under "Engineering Developments".

Not to be forgotten as of primary importance is the Engineers' Girl section, admirably illustrated this month by the person of Miss Anne Creedon.

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Misleading Story

To the Editor:

As Faculty Resident of Grayson House and an intimately implicated participant in the dinnertime activities on Thursday last at the South Commons, I must record my amazement at the distortions and inaccuracies of your account printed in the Collegian of Feb. 12, 1965.

It is true that some students forgot to clear their tables, apparently so carried away by the excellence of the entertainment that they confused the Copper Kettle with The Sands; nevertheless, the resultant "mass" was removed in a very short time. Grayson House regrets, of course, even this amount of inconvenience and will work to prevent it in the future.

The rest of the report, however, is rife with even greater distortion. The Boss Tweeds, who so generously lent their considerable talents to the conviviality of the Grayson dinner, proved to be so great an attraction that the reserved area was soon invaded by students from other locations. I deny, however, that these students, crowded though they were, caused the confusion implied in your article. Your statement that "students refused to leave the Commons,' I find entirely misleading. At no time were students asked to leave. Those who enjoyed the music—and evidently most did—remained to listen; but there was never a hint of rebellion or discourtesy in their manner. If, toward the end of the session, a few students indulged in a form of physical activity currently classified as dancing, no one, to the best of my knowledge, was so dissatisfied with the floor that he resorted to the smoother surface of a table top.

In the ambiguity and inaccuracy of your pen—ultimate sentence I can't help sensing a note of regret: "Although no serious damage occurred, Dr. Barron asked that the students depart." Actually there was no damage of any kind, nor, as I have indicated, did I ask anyone to leave. I did pass on to the musicians a request from Mr. Bongiovanni of the Commons that the concert be concluded so that the kitchen personnel could finish work within the time agreed on last fall when the Orchard Hill residences arranged to hold weekly dinners. The Boss Tweeds ended their program naturally and with grace; the students departed quietly and quickly, if not in all cases tidily.

Gaiety is not rebellion. Far from being disturbed by Thursday's experience, I wish to express my thanks to the Boss Tweeds and to the personnel of the Commons for a most enjoyable occasion.

Grayson House

Editor's Note: The News Department would like to apologize for the apparent distortion of facts in the account of the dinnertime activities at the South Commons which appeared in the Collegian of Feb. 12, 1965.

The article was written not by an observer of these activities but rather by a reporter who drew his information from another student who had been present at the Commons on Thursday night. Unfortunately, exaggeration led to inaccuracy.

We thank Dr. Barron for his letter and agree with him that "there was never a hint of rebellion or discourtesy". Apparently it was the success of the appearance of the Boss Tweeds that generated the over-exhuberant account of the event and in turn became responible for the inaccuracy of the article.

WORD OF THANKS

To the Editor:

This past weekend the University was host to one of the largest civil rights conferences ever held. We would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who participated, and who helped to make this conference the success that it was. Particularly, we would like to thank those staff workers who put in long and often grueling hours.

Heartfelt thanks are extended to the staffs of the RSO Office and the Union Food Services, who were always available when unforseen difficulties arose. We thank those who opened their homes for delegates and for those who volunteered housing which was not utilized. The arrival of one hundred and fifty totally unexpected delegates brought a certain degree of confusion, and may have caused otherwise avoidable errors.

The financial situation often looked a little uncertain. We extend our thanks to the Student Senate, faculty contributors, and students, who made this conference financially solvent.

Finally, a special note of appreciation to Dr. Soltysik, advisor to the Young Independents, who led his organization through the intricacies of convention planning.

Hatch Disruption

To the Editor:

Those who had the great misfortune to stumble into the Hatch last Monday evening were treated to a demonstration of the Greek sorority system on our compus at its worst. I refer, of course, to the girls who had invaded the quarters, disrupting the furnishings, and began carrying on in a way all to typical, unfortunately, of the inanity which is the sorority system. The actions of these (college students?) were wholly without justification or redeeming grace in a university community.

The girls, or rather infants, engaged in those endless rounds of monotonous and meaningless jungle songs could find nothing better to do with their time and energy than to disrupt the normal functioning of our community. The display was wholly without parallel in the four years that I have known this school.

Let it not be said that I'm intolerant—I'm far from it. I'm willing to allow anybody their beliefs, and the practice thereof; until it becomes a public nuisance—obscene, in fact—and infringes upon my rights to lead my own life. When this happens, and the public tranquility is subverted by such rites, then I complain.

To the girls involved, I can only say that I hope you're proud of the performance—little of the rest of the campus was.

Cume Investigation

To the Editor:

An AdHoc Committee for the Student Senate is investigating the feasibility of establishing a cumulative average requirement to participate in and/or hold office in certain student organizations. We are interested in any suggestions which students might have concerning this matter. If you have any ideas we would appreciate it, if you would attend the next meeting of the Committee to be held on Thursday, Feb. 18, at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Senate Office.

President Lederle added, "Less than 10 months have gone by since Senate President Maurice A. Donahue first proposed a Uniersity of Massachusetts - Boston. During that time, the Legislature and the Governor have taken swift action to authorize this new facility. Committees have been formed to select faculty, administration and site, and to prepare admissions procedures and formulate curricula.

"In Dr. John W. Ryan, who will head UMass-Boston, we have found a Chancellor who is an outstanding teacher-administrator, and one who knows Massachusetts. We have admitted close to 200 students and have appointed several faculty members. To accomplish all this in a short time has required the cooperation of government, business and university leaders. This," he concluded, "is but the first step in a great opportunity to give metropolitan Boston a great urban public university."

After receiving the Governor's approval of the site selection, the University's next step will be to submit a supplementary budget to the Legislature to obtain operating funds for UMass-Boston.

Sen. Graham Advocates Sales Tax For Massachusetts

by Pat Petow

Senator Philip A. Graham of Hamilton, the Republican Floor-Leader in the Massachusetts Senate, presented a lecture, "You and Your Government" last night, before a large crowd.

Robert J. Peoples of the Political Science Association and David Mayhew of the government department introduced him to the S.B.A. audience which included his daughter, Sandra, a junior at the University.

Answering his own question, why a government cannot be run as a business, he explains that press scrutiny and regard for the "all-important" people, necessary in government, would not allow a sizable corporation "to last a month."

Sen. Graham then turned his attention to Massachusetts state government and pointed out several economic facts-of-life. The state has, in the past, followed a policy of delaying payment of bond issues. For example, the Minority Leader cited a 1950 bond issue, processed for sale in 1952, in the amount of $32 million on which was paid $256,000 interest for several successive years until finally recent payments on the principal in the amount of $5,330,000 were begun as well.

In his own experience, the Senator found one million dollar bond issues for highway construction in 1951, 1952, 1953, and 1954 had after ten years no payment on their principals. He said, "This is why Massachusetts government is in trouble today." The Senator proposed a bill which would require a series of equal payments to begin on the principal of a bond not less than one year from its date.

In 1965 the state's expenditures will exceed by $55 million, the revenue available. Noting "there is not another gimick left," and that the Commonwealth's treasury will be empty in 12 months (as happened in Michigan), he voiced approval of Gov. Volpe's proposed additional $240 million in taxes.

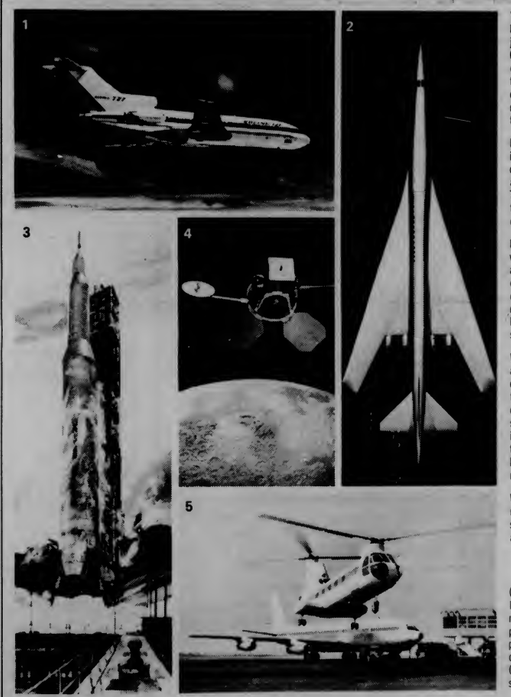
The Republican legislation would take in $150 million from the sales tax and from a change in the state income tax law, both allowing a greater dependancy deduction and taxing more gross income, the balance. The exemptions of food, children's clothing, utilities et cetera from the sales tax and the "soak - the-rich," graduated features of the income tax adjustment will result, he asserted, "So we have given some protection" to lower income families.

The immediate objectives, Sen. Graham spelled out are (1) pay the bills; (2) take advantage of one of the finest educational reports, the Willis Commission study; and (3) aid the homeowners, who pay the highest per capita tax in the country.

The Big Question is whether, "The people of Massachusetts, in this time of crisis, are willing to assume their responsibilities in this republic of ours."

Let's talk about engineering, mathematics and science careers in a dynamic, diversified company

Campus Interviews Thursday and Friday, February 25 and 26



Young men of ability can get to the top fast at Boeing. Today, Boeing's business backlog is just under two billion dollars, of which some 60 per cent is in commercial jetliner and helicopter product areas. The remainder is in military programs and government space flight contracts. This gives the company one of the most stable and diversified business bases in the aerospace industry.

No matter where your career interests lie—in the commercial jet airliners of the future or in space-flight technology—you can find an opening of genuine opportunity at Boeing. The company's world leadership in the jet transport field is an indication of the calibre of people you'd work with at Boeing.

Boeing is now pioneering evolutionary advances in the research, design, development and manufacture of civilian and military aircraft of the future, as well as space programs of such historic importance as America's first moon landing. Gas turbine engines, transport helicopters, marine vehicles and basic research are other areas of Boeing activity.

Whether your career interests lie in basic or applied research, design, test, manufacturing or administration, there's a spot where your talents are needed at Boeing. Engineers, mathematicians and scientists at Boeing work in small groups, so initiative and ability get maximum exposure. Boeing encourages participation in the company-paid Graduate Study Program at leading colleges and universities near company installations.

We're looking forward to meeting engineering, mathematics and science seniors and graduate students during our visit to your campus. Make an appointment now at your placement office.

B.A., Physics, Pomona College
M.A., Physics, Univ. of Ill.
Ph.D., Calif. Institute of Tech.

What does it take to "spark" a man to his very best . . . to bring out the fullest expression of his ability and training? At Ford Motor Company we are convinced that an invigorating business and professional climate is one essential. A prime ingredient of this climate is the stimulation that comes from working with the top people in a field . . . such as Dr. James Mercereau.

Jim Mercereau joined our Scientific Laboratory in 1962. Recently, he headed a team of physicists who verified aspects of the Quantum Theory by creating a giant, observable quantum effect in superconductors. This outstanding achievement was the major reason the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce selected Dr. Mercereau as one of "America's Ten Outstanding Young Men of 1964." Your area of interest may be far different from Dr. Mercereau's; however, you will come in contact with outstanding men in all fields at Ford Motor Company.

We believe the coupling of top experience and talent with youth and enthusiasm is stimulating to all concerned. College graduates who join Ford Motor Company find themselves very much a part of this kind of team. If you are interested in a career that provides the stimulation of working with the best, see our representative when he visits your campus. We think you'll be impressed by the things he can tell you about working at Ford Motor Company.

Skiers Top Seven Colleges

The University of Massachusetts Ski Team downed seven colleges Saturday in a long, icy slalom race, held at Suicide Six in Woodstock, Vermont. Good runs by Dick Woods, who placed seventh; Tom Clark, twelfth; and Peter Plasteridge, fourteenth, led the University to a fourth position overall. These men had times of 117.3, 120.8, and 122.7 respectively for the two races. Bob Bibby had trouble in his run but finished fourth for the University racers, placing thirty-third.

Don Plezga, Walt Swiatek, and Tom Pittendreigh had difficulties on the icy terrain and were disqualified. In the two runs twenty-five racers out of eighty were disqualified for missing gates on the steep course.

The University "B" Team maintained a first place season's standing finishing two men in the top five. Brian Hendricks easily captured first and Hanns Fontain placed fifth. A down hil race scheduled for Sunday was cancelled due to lack of snow.

B-Ball Bonus

By Mr. D.

After UMass' big loss to U-Conn, the Redmen are virtually eliminated from the Yankee Conference race. The Huskies are now 8-0 in the conference while the Redmen are 6-2. Both teams have two conference games left, and in order for UMass to tie for the conference lead, they have to win their remaining games while UConn loses both of theirs. While the Huskies have a tough one against URI, they also have an easy encounter with the Wildcats of New Hampshire. So unless there is a tremendous upset the Redmen will finish in second place.

New England Basketball

1. Providence
2. UConn
3. B.C.
4. UMass
5. Holy Cross

This week, Providence remained no. 1 with wins over Niagra and Duquesne. UConn with its big win overUMass remains in the no. 2 position. B.C., idle last week holds spot no. 3, while U-Mass, splitting its two games, remains fourth. Holy Cross, led by John Wendelkin, replaces U-RI in the fifth spot after an impresive win over Assumption. The battle between UMass and Holy Cross Thursday night looms as a fight for the fourth spot.

Redmen Five Look For Prestige vs. Army & H. C.

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts seeks to enhance its prestage as it faces a pair of independent foes that it has beaten a total of two times in 22 meetings.

This afternoon the club will face Army, a team it has not beaten in five attempts, and tomorrow night the Redmen play Holy Cross which holds a 15-2 all time record against UMass.

IN ARMY, the Redmen will be facing one of the fine teams in the East. Lsat year's club had a 19-7 record, including a third place finish in the NIT. This year the club is loaded with veterans, seven lettermen to be exact.

The club is almost the same as the one that played in the NIT, losing in the semifinals to eventual champ, Bradley. 6'6" Mike Silliman is the junior that leads the Cadets in their ball control game. Te averaged 20.5 last year and is close to that mark again this season.

Joe Kosciuko from Grafton and Dennis Shantz are two veteran backcourt players for Taylor Locke, the young Cadet coach. The forecourt has John Ritch and Bill Helkie as the key operatives. The two top subs are Dick Murray, a starter last year, and Bob Seigle.

HOLY CROSS will be no easy shot for the Redmen either. Despite the fact they bowed by 11 to Connecticut Saturday, the club still has an 11-6 record. They are a well disciplined club that work around their outstanding shooter, John Wendelken, who had 30 against the Huskies.

Wendelken is another of the guards that Clarence Hill of the Redmen will have to contend with if he is to earn any New England honors.

Cross is not a tall team, with their biggest starter being Greg Hockstein at 6'5". Rick Murphy is 6'4", while Bud Knittel is 6'3". The Crusaders will be at an obvious height disadvantage in the game, but that is seldom new to them. 6'8" Jim Curran and 6'6" John Sullivan are both at the disposal of Coach Frank Oftring. Both won letters last year, as the Crusaders have nine men in that category.

While the big three of the Redmen, Clarence Hill, 23.1, Tim Edwards, 17.1, and Charlie O'Rourke, 15.4, have been receiving much of the praise, the lesser lights of the clubs have been coming in with key performances.

RHODE ISLAND is a case in point. During that contest, Charlie Kingston scored on several fast breaks to spark the Redmen, and Frank Stewart came off the bench after Tim Edwards had picked up his fourth foul to score eight quick points and maintain the ten point lead for UMass.

John Lisack and Mike Meola are two more men that have proved their value to Coach John Orr of late. Lisack had only two points against Rhody, but this was the first time in the last six games he was held out of double figures. He has provided good rebounding strength to go with his ability to score from the outside.

Meola has not been much of a scorer, but has proved his worth on defense. Against Connecticut, he held Wes Bialosuknia to just one point in the first half, and then grudgingly surrendered 14 in the second half. He had shut off Dennis McGovern early in the year, so this performance was no surprise to Redman followers.

One of the few good things to come out of the UConn game for Massachusetts was a comment made by Coach Fred Shabel after the game. He called Clarence Hill, "The finest ball player we faced all year. We had a defense all set for him, but it just didn't do any good at all"

HILL SCORED 26 against the Huskies and followed that up with a 27 point performance against Rhody. O'Rourke with his 27 points and 19 rebounds had his best game since the New Hampshire contest when he scored 29 points and had 25 rebounds. Edwards had 22 in a steady performance for the team.

A pair of wins in these games would place the Redmen is a fairly lofty position in New England.

Mermen Crush Vermont, Win Fourth Straight

by Bud Pratt

Joe Rogers' varsity swimming team extended its winning streak to four meets in handing Vermont a one-sided loss at Boyden PE Sat. before a large and enthusiastic crowd.

Co-capt. Charlie Monnier and sophomore Steve Levy each set a UMass Varsity record enroute to the win. Charlie's 2:33.0 shaved two tenths of a second off his own previous breaststroke record, and Steve's 2:30.1 represents the fastest 200-yard butterfly ever turned in by a UM swimmer.

Dick Daniels continued his unbeaten string in both the 200 and 500 free styles, winning the first in 1:59.8 and the second in 5:39.0. Since Dick has yet to be really pressed in the five hundred it is as yet unknown what his best time in this event could be.

Sophomore Chip Weiser was outstanding, winning the 50 free style in 23.8 and the 100 in 54.3. Dick Lennon won the individual medley in 2:19.2, roughly a half second off his own record pace, and later took second in the backstroke, which was won by Walt Orak, one of the most remarkably improved swimmers Joe Rogers has ever seen.

Second place points were picked up by Hanley in the diving, O'Mara in the individual medley, Lovitich in the 50 free style, and Wilson in the 500. Shamekiis was third in the 200.

It was a fine all-around meet for the Redmen, who are cur-

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

by Howie Davis

Tuesday night Lambda Chi Alpha took a giant step in their quest for a second straight Intramural championship in basketball by defeating Kappa Sigma 62-37. Steve Shea from LCA led all scorers with 22 points and was the leading rebounder with 16.

Karl Kamena of KS had 15 rebounds and 16 points to lead Kappa Sig, but it was not enough to hold LCA. The latter remained undefeated and posted an 11-0 record as compared to KS's 10-1.

In the dorm league the Webster Hawks beat the Thatcher Hemlocks 54-34 to win the North championship.

Vickey's 202's remained undefeated and post a 10-0 record as a result of their 45-36 win over the Globetrotters. In the strong Independent League, the battle for the championship looks like

Josh White, Judy Collins In Concert

Josh White, who began his professional career more than 30 years ago, has gained international fame for his distinctive styling of folk and blues tunes. Originally a gospel singer, his sensual arrangements have brought him honors from presidents and kings throughout the world. He is the only American performer to be heard on all three classes of the BBC in England: the Light (low brow), Home (medium), and Third Programme (high brow).

Josh's recordings have thrilled two generations of music lovers and his recording of "One Meat Ball" ranks among all - time greats. His albums have been preserved for posterity in the Hall of Fame of the Library of Congress.

Much more recent on the folk scene is Judy Collins, who has already established herself as one of the most popular artists in the country. With a voice that has been described as angelic, she leaves her audiences spellbound as she runs through a repertoire ranging from tender ballads to blues to protest songs. Critics have unanimously agreed that Judy ranks with the top of the "new wave" of folk artists.

These performers, along with the British cast of "That Was The Week That Was", promise to provide one of the highlights of Winter Carnival weekend.

Kingsmen at the Kettle

Plans for Saturday night's "Kingsmen At The Kettle" were announced by John R. Mullen, Sophomore Class Vice-President.

Mullen, who will be Master of Ceremonies at the event, described the evening as one of the highlights of the 1965 Winter Carnival.

According to Mullen, the Kingsmen will play in a nite-club atmosphere. Half the commons will be reserved for dancing, and the other half will be decorated as a cabaret, complete with 40 foot bar, cigarette girls, and cheese dips.

The Kingsmen, of Louie, Louie and Jolly Green Giant fame, will play in three one-hour segments starting at 8:00. During the first intermission, Mullen will introduce the Queen and her court. During the second intermission, Bill Tindall, Freshman basketball star, will provide music for dancing.

Busy Days for Ski Team

To help start the Winter Carnival weekend, the Varsity Ski team will sponsor a race for all University students at 3:00 p.m. today. The race will be held on the slope east of Thatcher House.

A Slalom course, especially designed for novice and intermediate skiers, will be set up by co-captains Tom Clark and Dick Woods. Registration for the race will take place shortly before the race at the slope. Trophies will be awarded in both the men's and women's classes.

The University ski team competes in a league of college racing teams which demands a constantly increasing caliber of racers each year. This Winter Carnival weekend the Redmen will race both Saturday and Sunday in Giant Slalom and Downhill events at Thunder Mountain in Charlemont. The races will start at 10 o'clock on both days.

Bobby Kaye, Connie Vignone For Ball

"Ice Palace" will be presented by the Junior class as their theme for this year's Winter Carnival Ball, tonight from 8:30 p.m. to 12:00 midnight. The Student Union Ballroom and Commonwealth Room will provide the setting for carved ice figures and fountains, in keeping with the theme. Dancing will be to the music of Bobby Kaye and his orchestra featuring Conni Vignone. Also, punch will be served.

The chimes of Old Chapel will be played before the Ball. and an organist will provide entertainment in the Cape Cod Lounge. Tickets may be purchased from 9:00 - 4:00 at the ticket window in the Student Union.

1500 Fill State House For Education Hearing

President Joseph Driscoll of SMTI spoke against House Bill 3300.

State House, Boston, — More than 1,500 legislators, students and educators jammed the Massachusettes State House on Wednesday for the first hearing on the major bill to come out of the much-criticized and much-heralded Willis Commission report.

Southeastern Massachusetts residents appeared en masse to make certain that their voice would be heard and their educational needs fulfilled.

The Willis report was the result of more than two and a half years work on the part of the commission at a cost of a quarter million dollars to Massachusetts taxpayers.

The recommendations of the commission, whose estimated implementation cost is $120-million, include establishment of three boards of control: 1) a Board of Public Education which would have the power to revitalize and revamp the entire educational system of the state; 2) a Board of Higher Education to control the 11 state colleges; seven community colleges, U-Mass and technological institutes; 3) an Advisory Council which would submit names of qualified persons to the governor to fill positions at the institutions.

DR. OWEN B. KIERNAN, state education commissioner, expressed general favor with the provisions of the bill but was wary of accepting "lay" people on the boards, rather than professional educators. The commission reports calls for only a small professional representation.

Dr. Kiernan told the Collegian that "without a doubt, the department should remain under the Board of Education."

University President John W. Lederle, who was unavailable for comment to the Collegian, told the Committee on State Administration which held the hearing, that "it is a pleasure to support the report" and added that a university system was desirable.

Lederle said that because the name of SMTI was restrictive in its nature it should remain a technological institution. Senator Jones then asked the University president, "When you were the Mass. School of Agriculture, you taught more than animal husbandry, didn't you?" This remark was accompanied by a long round of applause, which caused obvious consternation to cross the face of committee Chairman James A. Kelly (D-Oxford).

LT. GOVERNOR ELLIOT RICHARDSON, representing the governor, told the hearing the administration was in "fundamental support" of the bill, but deferred further comment until a special message which the governor later told a news conference would be forthcoming.

Lt. Governor Elliot Richardson spoke in favor of the policy behind House Bill 3300 on education.

Richardson told the Collegian he believes higher education in the state should not be under supervision of the University of Massachusetts.

Opposition to the bill was led by the president of Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute (SMTI), Dr. Joseph L. Driscoll, who told the Collegian that the bill before the committee "wipes out the biggest program of SMTI—Business Administration and Liberal Arts."

The threatened loss of the liberal arts program at SMTI spurred more than 1,000 students, some of them running a torch marathon-style, to come to the State House to record their protests.

Pioneer Valley Association Gets Research Center Briefing

Pioneer Valley industrialists, businessmen and legislators received a briefing on the proposed UMass Graduate Research Center last night at the 26th anniversary meeting of the Pioneer Valley Association on the University campus.

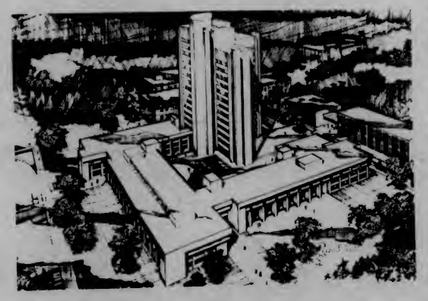
UMass officials explained the University's readiness to provide Massachusetts industries with research and development facilities at the new Graduate Research Center.

Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the UMass Graduate School, presented preliminary plans for a two-phase $19 million Research Center for the Physical Sciences. Following Dean Moore's presentation, graduate department heads explained various research now being conducted at UMass in their fields of endeavor. Guided tours of present UMass facilities were conducted following the program.

Plans for the center will be presented to the Legislature this spring to obtain funds for the first phase on which construction is scheduled to begin in Sept.

The complex is scheduled for completion in Sept. 1968, and is designed to become a "center of excellence" for the physical sciences in the Commonwealth.

It will contain three high-rise chemistry towers, a research computer center, the departments of computer science, statistics, astronomy a graduate student center, and a library to house all volumes for physical science departments



Members of the Pioneer Valley Association were shown plans last night for the proposed $18 million Graduate Research Center at the UMass Facilities at the ultra-modern center will be made available to Massachusetts industries

Southwest Complex Saved

The southwest dormitory complex, now under construction, was threatened by fire Wednesday afternoon but serious damage was prevented by a passerby who reported it after early discovery.

Amherst Fire Department Chief Cavanaugh reported that the only damage was to plastic coverings and lumber used for staging. Chief Cavanaugh said that the probable cause of the fire was some smouldering material left near the staging. The fire reached the second-story level by the time the firemen arrived.

The entire department answered the alarm from a fire box that was rung at 5:49 p.m. The fire fighters returned to headquarters at 6:20.

Med School Locations Narrowed

University of Massachusetts trustees have been busy lately narrowing their sights on a site for the new UMass Medical School, and one of the issues that has continuously confronted the selection committee has been the metropolitan center versus the campus center.

While proponents of the metropolitan center favor such a site as Boston for the new medical school because of its large population from which to draw patients and its medical reputation, supporters of Amherst as the site for the school have been pointing to Dartmouth Medical school, at Hanover, N. H., and University of Vermont Medical school building in Burlington.

One of the strong arguments in favor of Amherst as the site for the Medical school is the desirability and advantage of a rich exchange between the university and the medical school.

Dr. Mudge said Dartmouth has had no trouble, in fact it has been very successful, in attracting top medical specialists and researchers to its faculty, that the immediate population of less than 20,000 in Hanover has provided a thriving and rewarding number of patient referrals from the rural area surrounding Hanover, and that a high calibre of interns and resident physicians have been attracted to Dartmouth because of the quality of the training program.

County Circle Residents Seek Sanitation Control

by Terry Stock
Senior Reporter

"When you wake up in the morning and there are silver fish crawling on you, it's time to do something about sanitation conditions," said Eugene Wesson, secretary-treasurer of the Men's Interdormitory Forum.

A statement presented before Christmas to William Burkhardt, assistant dean of men, and Dr. Jerome Peterson, regional health director, stated that silver fish had become a serious problem in the men's rooms and faculty resident's apartment of Middlesex dormitory.

"Nothing was done about the silver fish until last week, almost two months after the complaint was made," Wesson said.

The residents of the County Circle dorms—Middlesex, Berkshire, Plymouth, Hampshire and Suffolk—have been seeking sanitation control and improved living conditions for several years.

"We were unable to get clean shower curtains until I took one of the filthy curtains to John Wells, director of housing," said Wesson. "The curtains were replaced the same day."

Ramps in the men's bathrooms of Middlesex are one of the improvements being sought. The purpose of these is to provide a path through the pools of urine that students are now forced to walk through to get into and out of the showers.

Falling ceilings in the bathrooms are also a problem, he said.

"It looks as if we're getting a run-around. I went to maintenance yesterday and was told that work orders for repairs had not yet been received. Wells

New UT Play Is Product of Research and Rehearsal

The University Theater will see the culmination of its research and planning as rehearsals begin for the upcoming production of Julius Caesar, reports Director Harry Mahnken.

In an interview on Tuesday Mahnken discussed the production. His concern to fashion a show that would reflect "twentieth century theatricalism" rather than "Elizabethan realism" has guided his direction. Said he, "I don't like Elizabethan productions of Shakespeare. What I want in this production is a group of American actors going straight to the thing, not imitating British actors imitating Elizabethans imitating Romans as it were."

HE WENT ON to explain that all too often American productions of Shakespeare get bogged down in this "imitation" and thus stifle any creativity that might reflect the twentieth century.

"Why," he says, "should we try to produce Shakespeare as it was done in the seventeenth century when we are working with a twentieth century audience which recognizes little if anything that is authentically seventeenth century?"

MAHNKEN AGREED that the production would have some Elizabethan characteristics. Of prime consideration here is the unit set designed by Dale Amlund also of the University Theatre Staff. To the extent that the set is built out into the orchestra pit and that the large apron of Bowker Auditorium is thus utilized to its maximum potential—in total bringing the production very close to the audience—the staging and setting is Elizabethan in nature.

As in the playhouses of Bankside London, the vertical line will be stressed with a proscenium

Physician Evaluates the Merit Of Medical Profession's Code

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

"In medicine we are tougher on ourselves than anyone else is," a surgeon told a UMass journalism class Wednesday.

Dr. R. C. Charron, a Greenfield physician and vice-president of the Franklin District Medical Society, addressed Prof. Arthur Musgrave's students to help them probe the nature of medical professionalism and ethics so they might relate his views to journalism practices.

The students are considering journalism's future in a society faced with ever increasing federal supervision. Many journalists fear that unless they initiate internal control, legislation will emerge to supervise the profession, the students were told in preparation for the class.

Charron suggested that journalists, who are faced with the problem of controlling the standards in their profession, should do their own housecleaning.

He said, "You would never want to see federal regulations to take over the newspapers. Don't let arbitrary and uniformed government workers get in control. They wouldn't get the top men to handle it, but rather the men who haven't been able to find jobs."

Charron was asked how the medical profession controls the ethics of its members.

He replied: "We do our own housecleaning."

The doctor explained that the AMA and other medical societies set forth rules of ethical practice that "serve as standards to determine the propriety of our own conduct. He stressed that these standards are not "immutable laws" but that each physician must rely on his judgment and his own conscience to determine what is right and wrong.

Charron said "the physician is asked to contribute to his medical society "time, energy and means so that it will represent the ideal of the profession."

Asked about the powers of societies, Dr. Charron replied, "Either you abide by the rules of the society or you're thrown out." He pointed out that admission to the society is strictly voluntary and is not a right. The courts may not encroach upon the internal workings of the society.

He cited the case of a doctor acquitted by the courts but who had to face his medical society and answer a claim of breach of medical ethics. The decision of the society was binding and the doctor could not go back to the courts, Dr. Charron said.

Dr. Charron stated that he opposes Medicare because he believes the doctor-patient relationship would be injured. He considers Medicare to be an intervening party.

He emphasized that the physician must "place service to society ahead of financial gain." He told the class what his father, also a doctor, told him when he first started to practice after graduating from Tufts Medical School.

His father leaned over the young doctor's new desk, pulled his goatee and said, "Son, if you're going to practice medicine for a buck, now is the time to close the door of this new office and get out."

Dennis Moffatt sought a job with responsibility

He found it at Western Electric

Dennis Moffatt, B.A., Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, '57, joined Western Electric in 1961 after two years of graduate work at the State University of Iowa and two years with the Army. Most important to Dennis was the fact that WE offered him the chance to move ahead . . . fast. Dennis started at Western Electric's Hawthorne Works in Chicago as a Staff Trainee in Industrial Relations.

After only a year with the Company and the completion of one of WE's training programs for college graduates, Dennis became a Personnel Placement Analyst. Advancing rapidly, Dennis was recently promoted to Section Chief, Employment and Placement, Systems Equipment Engineering.

If you, like Dennis Moffatt, want a career with a company that will recognize your skills and abilities, and have the qualifications we seek — let's talk! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for liberal arts, physical science and business majors, and for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers. Meet the McPeakes

The McPeake Family of Ireland will share the stage with Pete Seeger at a folk music concert at the Pittsfield Boys' Club Sunday, Feb. 21 at 8:30.

Long favorites in England and Ireland, the musical McPeakes include 80-year-old Francis McPeake, his two sons Francey and James; and Francey's two children "Young Francey" and daughter Catlin. A nephew Tommy McCruden makes the sixth member of the group.

The McPeakes turn back the clock to the Ireland of 200 years ago with their renditions of Irish traditional music and song. They sing both unaccompanied and with Uilleann bag-pipes, Irish harp, tin whistles and the guitar.

The Seeger concert featuring the McPeake Family is being presented by the Berkshire Music Barn. Tickets will be available at the Boys' Club the night of the concert as well as at local ticket outlets.

YOUR COUNTRY

The American Indian Teen Today

It's time to back away from your T.V. view of the cowboys and Indians and take a look at them now. Their death rate is four times that of non-Indian children. Nearly two thirds of all Indian children drop out of school, facing premature adulthood with no job training.

Most American boys and girls are presented with a variety of play experiences to choose from in their leisure hours. To an Indian child, leisure means listless hours shuffling through the dust with nothing to do . . . nothing to learn . . . no resources to tap for the future.

Since 1948, Save the Children Federation, international child welfare organization of Norwalk, Connecticut, has worked among American Indians. From experience their counselors know that Indians are a proud people, too proud for charity and handouts.

Yavapai Indian teenagers remodel an old building into a community center at a save the Children Federation Summer Work Camp, Fort McDowell, Arizona.

Many American Indian boys and girls are working for their communities, learning new skills and earning money for back-to-school expenses at SCF summer work camps. The Federation conducts these summer camp programs in cooperation with tribal leaders and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Because the tribal leaders on the Salt River Pima Reservation near Phoenix, Arizona, realize that poor home conditions are responsible for many of the behavior problems of their teenage children, summer programs there center around the homes of the young campers. Girls are given money for simple purchases and learn to sew curtains and bedspreads and paint their houses inside and out. Boys rebuild and repair their homes.

This summer, children on the Colorado River Reservation, Parker, Arizona, will again pour their youthful energies into work projects, recreational activities and educational field trips. They will take part in crafts projects and art classes. In 1964 these youngsters donated over 5000 hours of time to improvements on the reservations, earning their sponsorship aid through their own efforts. A survey conducted at the end of the 1964 camp season showed that about 90% of the students wanted to enroll in college after high school graduation, a good measure of the effectiveness of these Summer work camps in controlling the enormous drop-out rate among American Indian youngsters (now 60%).

Summer camp will be conducted again this year for young Yavapai Indians at Fort McDowell outside of Phoenix, Arizona. Even more unfamiliar with non-Indian customs than other Indian tribes, the Yavapai youngster speaks little English and has difficulty with school adjustment and later in finding a job.

It is hoped that the tasks these boys perform and the experiences they gain together will help them to build the confidence and resources they must have if they are to become part of the mainstream of American life.

Where's Zeebe?

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE girl that lived in the ZBT fraternity house last year?

The beady, black-eyed, ridged female, is now in a pet shop, a zoo, or in someone's soup. Nobody is quite sure.

ZEEBE, a 30-lb. turtle adopted by ZBT, was originally supposed to be a present to the University, but the University wouldn't accept her. So the ZBT's decided to keep her for themselves.

She was the size of ten normal turtles and her appetite was insatiable. Besides her regular diet of lettuce, celery and carrots, the boys used to save her their dinner salad. She ate it, French dressing and all.

Not only was she a conversation piece, but she was also friendly. According to Howard Simons, ZBT member, "She got used to being surrounded by men all the time. She was friendly as long as you kept your feet off the floor of the television room, where she spent most of her time."

The boys finally decided to give her away because, as Barry Silberg, president of ZBT, said, "You just don't know what to do with a 30-lb. turtle after a while, especially when she's not housetrained."—Diamondback

Hmmm . . .

The recent rash of thefts and other various disturbances on our campus should not result in rumors (especially those referring to rape).

There is no need for mass hysteria on the part of concerned students (especially coeds). There is, however, a need for alert and cautious behavior from the student populace.—Eastern Echo

"Students with suicidal tendencies were, as a group, good or very good students," reported the College Press Service recently. Some 550 young people between 15 and 19 succumbed to such tendencies in 1962, the National Education Association Journal finds. Why? Dr. Leif Braeton, former Cornell psychologist, believes that there is (a) a desire to destroy the self because of discrepancy between what we are and what we would like to be, (b) a need to punish others, and (c) an urge to repent.

Movie Heads Out From Union

— Whose Union —

Last night, the movie "All The Young Men" was scheduled to be shown in the Student Union Ballroom. As every Thursday night, students came to the Union for the regularly scheduled show. This time, however, they were greeted by signs directing them to Mahar Auditorium.

It seems that the movie was pre-empted in favor of a conference of the Pioneer Valley Society.

This is the first time that a student sponsored event has been rescheduled to make room for a non-University program. It was accomplished thrcugh highly questionable administrative pressure.

The Student Union was created to fill the needs of the students of the University, not the general community. Hence, the name STUDENT Union appears on the ediface, not the words Community Center.

In accordance with the Student Union Governing Board (SUG) constitution, the Union facilities may only be opened for outside use when there is no student function scheduled.

This clearly was not the case.

Should a conflict in scheduling arise, there is a specific procedure which is to be followed. This entails both parties submitting reasons for needing the facility to the Dean of Students and the Provost of the University. No one is to pre-empt use of any facility before this appeal. Final decision remains with them.

In the previously mentioned case, however, Kenneth Johnson, Treasurer of the University, decided unilaterally to reschedule the movie for Bowker Auditorium. He did this without the approval of the SUG Board and without the knowledge of the Dean and Provost. Due to another conflict it was finally shown at Mahar Auditorium.

The point in question is not whether it is right or wrong for the students to have to watch the movie in Mahar Aud. It is whether any one person on the Administration has the right to deny students the use of THEIR Union in order to allow its use by outside organizations.

Viet Nam: A Moral Battle

The United States has become entangled in a briar patch in South Viet Nam—no matter which way it turns, it is certain to get a thorn in its side. If the United States pulls out of South Viet Nam, then it will give a green light to communist domination of Southeast Asia. On the other hand, if U. S. planes continue bombing North Viet Nam, this could lead to a "second Korea," and even to a full scale world war.

What the United States must inject into its Viet Nam policy is a sense of calmness and perseverance. There is a danger that the American air strikes against North Viet Nam, which up to present have been generally retaliatory in nature, will expand to an aggressive stage, causing the United States to lose sight of its real purpose in South Viet Nam—protection of the country from invasion by its north communist neighbor.

On the other hand, it would be a grave mistake for the U.S. not to react firmly against increased Viet Cong killings of American troops. Undoubtedly, (like an octopus) Peking and Honoi are stretching out their tentacles to feel and test American willingness to defend South Viet Nam. At the least sign of U.S. weakness Ho Chi Minh will not hesitate to push his advantage to the farthest degree. The communists will not sit down at the conference table as long as they have hope that they can win a victory in the field. It remains the obligation of the United States to force the communists to the conference table by depriving them of their upper hand in the field of battle.

However, the American air strikes against North Viet Nam are not the real answer. Air strikes may kill many North Vietnamese, destroy railroads and military installations, and cause Ho Chi Minh to scratch his head in worry and hurl epithets against Washington; but they will not stop Viet Cong invasions of South Viet Nam. Air and sea preponderance will not win the battle for the U.S. in the jungle. It still remains for U.S. advisors to equip and train a South Viet Nam ground force not only capable of warding off the Viet Cong, but also capable of pushing them back into the north.

Yet, even military superiority is not enough for victory in Southeast Asia. If democratic principles are to gain a stronghold in South Asia, the battle will be won in the minds and hearts of men, rather than in the rice fields and jungles. No amount of military or financial aid will save the Vietnamese people if they favor communism over democratic freedom.

Before the situation in Viet Nam becomes even more grave, the U.S. must examine and re-evaluate its position in South-

Car Towing Epidemic ?

To the Editor:

In the February 15 edition of the Massachusetts Collegian, an excerpt from the minutes of the University Athletic Council meeting on January 18, 1965, was printed, and was subject to much discussion. The excerpt read:

"that it was highly desirable from the point of view of the vending program that Chief Blasko initiate a car-towing epidemic."

At this time, I would like to explain the meaning of this excerpt which was definitely misunderstood.

As former President of the Student Senate, I served as the student representative (by virtue of my position) on the Athletic Council from May, 1964 to February, 1965. During these nine months, the Council members were eager and understanding in helping me to solve the immediate problems of the students at the University of Massachusetts. Because the Council demonstrated a sincere will to help, I gained tremendous respect for their efforts to make significant contributions to a growing University. With this working relationship in mind, I approached the Athletic Council to discuss an apparent price increase in pastry products.

While President of the Senate, one of my fellow senators brought to my attention that certain pastry items had increased in price from 10 cents during the 1963-64 school year to 15 cents starting in September, 1964. On January 18, 1965, I presented this fact to the Council.

I learned that the vending machine people had asked to sell similar, but higher quality pastry items during the spring semester, 1964. The Athletic Council felt that the new higher quality item should be sold in the vending machines starting with the fall semester, 1964, instead of changing quality and prices half way through a semester.

Therefore, in September, 1964, a higher quality item was being sold in the vending machines for 15 cents.

I was completely satisfied with the Council's actions and the reasons behind the pastry price increase.

Because of the logic supporting the price increase, the Council agreed that no problem with prices truly existed.

At this point of the discussion, a facetious statement (the above excerpt) was made. One of the Council members, in jest, alluded to a potentially big problem (a car towing epidemic) to contrast the vending price increase misunderstanding.

Before the meeting was adjourned, it was agreed that with all future problems involving the Athletic Council and the student body, that the Council and the Executive Committee of the Student Senate meet to take the right course of action.

I am sure, that the Athletic Council will continue to look upon the students' welfare as its primary responsibility.

Student Senate Arranges Parking At Orchard Lots

On the initiative of Student Senator Donovan, parking facilities for cars belonging to the Orchard Hill residents have been increased. Donovan brought to the attention of the Dean of Men's Office the fact that Chief Blasko was ticketing cars parked in the two paved visitors lots last week. Upon study of the problem, Mr. Barnard of the Dean of Men's office received permission from Chief Blasko to allow Orchard Hill residents to park their cars in the North Visitors Lot from late Sunday nights through approximately 6 p.m. on Fridays.

SENATOR MARY L. FONSECA (D-Fall River) said she was "tired" of having the residents of her area "treated as second class citizens".

Because the bill would give UMass power to determine what SMTI could teach and what degrees it could grant, certain persons in southeastern Mass. were violently opposed. Some carried signs reading "U-Mass be damned," "UMass NO" and "SMTI wants liberal arts without UMass".

MRS. PHILIP FORTIN, chairman of the Friends of SMTI and a longtime educational leader in that area, told the Collegian that if the bill was passed, "The school (SMTI) could not keep pace with community needs."

The many persons wishing to testify before the committee led Chairman Kelly to declare that opponents of the bill would have further opportunity to present their views March 4. Under State House procedure, proponents of a bill are given first opportunity to speak.

Senators Approve Larry Rutstein; Session Ends In Heated Debate

by Jim Foudy
Senate Reporter

Voting by secret ballot, the Student Senate approved President William Landis' selection of Larry Rutstein (Commuter) as the new vice-president of the senate.

Elected senator in Sept. '64, Vice-president Rutstein thanked the assembly for their consideration and hopes "to work with Bill Landis in making it a good, legislative spring session."

Wednesday's session was also the first for ten newly elected senators and the recently appointed non-voting senator from the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, Charles Wheeler.

The new members were introduced to senate procedure by a 2½ hour session which passed little legislation and ended in a heated debate over the question of senate-stature designation on election ballots.

Precipitated by the removal of eight senator-at-large seats, the proposal will have the words "former senator" on the ballots beside the name of the present senators-at-large.

Contrary to the present policy of designating only incumbent senators, the approved bill will, as explained by Senator Ross Jones (Commuter), "show that they (senators-at-large) have had experience in the Senate, but were removed by a legislative flat."

In an interview with the Collegian, the newly elected senator from Brett House, Richard Wimberly, called the Senate meeting "confusing . . . I feel like an old senator having been a member of several Senate Committees, but things have changed."

Planning Board Seeks Campus Zone Enlargement

Prof. Theodore S. Bacon, chairman of the Planning Board, conducted three public hearings Wednesday night in Town Hall.

The second hearing was on the article asking for an enlargement of the present campus residence zone located south of the University of Massachusetts. It seeks to extend the zone westerly along the northerly side of Fearing St. to Lincoln Ave. and northerly along Lincoln Ave. to the campus.

Several residents in this area said the traffic is unbearable now. They feared what would happen if more traffic developed. Two home owners said they cannot let their dogs out alone because of heavy traffic.

UMass Dean William Field said there has been no great influx of fraternities and sororities and the restrictions by the university, in regard to houses for them, are very strict, even after the Zoning Board of Appeals has granted a permit.

Bacon explained that the Planning Board seeks the enlargement of this campus zone because in a short time, 5000 more students will be living to the west of the present campus zone.

Realistic Art Evaluated By Art Historian

by Gordon Davidson
Staff Reporter

"American realist painters are faced with the problem of creating an illusion", stated Professor Oliver Larkin at a lecture Wednesday night in the S.U.

Professor Larkin, a renowned art historian, now retired from the Smith College faculty, feels that Andrew Wyeth, one of the great modern realists, has created this illusion by choosing to describe something familiar in realistic terms, with a depth of pentration achieved by a feeling for the subject.

Wyeth's craft has been greatly admired, but his aim is not craft for the sake of itself, but to make craft the hand-maiden of beauty, power and emotional content.

A realist creates an illusion by injecting into a seemingly exact reproduction of nature his own special talent to show us some aspect of nature that we hadn't perceived before. The realist painter is faithful to nature only as far as she supplies the materials he nteds, but he then must wrench it out of position to give it his own special insight, throught and feeling.

Using slides to illustrate his lecture, Professor Larkin showed paintings of Homer, Eakins, Hopper and Wyeth. Of the three earlier realists, Homer projected little of his own colorings into his pictures, but instead tried only to reproduce nature as nearly as possible.

Eakins used only men of great stature and intelligence for his realistic portraits, but he captured the essence of his model's life, reveled on his face, for he had ability to respond to people and their suffering, courage, and endurance.

Urinals were fixed so that they no longer leak, he noted, and adequate trash cans were finally provided last week. Trash had previously been a problem, he noted.

Other requests include soap, paper towels, soap dispensers and towel dispersers for the ladies' room in Middlesex, an interdormitory phone (only one has been provided thus far), hooks for clothes and towels around the shower room and someone to clean the floors and walls in the shower room.

"The herdsmen at the University barns are cleaner about the animals and barn conditions than the University is about the County Circle dorms," Wesson said.

When asked why he chose Julius Caesar instead of another Shakespearean play, Mahnken replied, "Why not? The thing is extremely well known as literature, but as a play it is never done. Summer Program Planned For U.M. Language Institute

For the second summer in a row, the University of Massachusetts has received a contract, which is in the process of being completed, from the U. S. Office of Education to conduct an overseas summer language institute for 60 teachers of secdary school French.

Dr. Stowell C. Goding, professor of Romance languages at UMass and director of last summer's institute, will again be in charge.

The institute will run from June 17 to Aug. 19. Participants will travel from New York to Paris, spend six days in the French capital, and then journey to the Lycee d'Arcachon on the Atlantic coast, for eight weeks of concentrated study.

This year's institute is intended primarily for teacher of third- and fourth-year French classes.

The curriculum is aimed at improving participants' language skills, knowledge of French culture and civilization, and general professional preparation.

Applicants for the University of Massachusetts-Lycee d'Arcachon institute will be selected on the basis of work in previous NDEA institutes, recommendations, teaching experience, and academic records, as well as other factors.

No tuition will be charged for the institute, but applicants selected will pay costs of round-trip transportation and subsistence.

Stipends of $75 weekly for the full nine weeks, plus dependency allowances, will be available upon application by teachers selected for the institute.

Those interested in applying for attendance at this year's institute should write for further information and applications to Dr. Stowell C. Goding, 257 Bartlett Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass.

Completed applications should be postmarked not later than March 1. Notification of acceptance will be sent out by April 15.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

It's playoff time again! Playoffs for the Intramural basketball tournament have commenced for the dormitories, and the IFC and Independents will follow shortly. The Gorman Elms are the western division champion after their 58-39 conquest of the Wheeler Trojans. They will meet the Webster Hawks February 24 to decide the opponent for the Chadbourne Maroons. This latter game, to be played on March 1 will decide the dormitory champion.

Predictions in the Dorm leagues: The Chadbourne Maroons led by Dick Stewart will meet the Webster Hawks in the finals. The Maroons will come out on top by nine points. (These predictions are based on intense mathematical calculations.)

In the IFC league Lambda Chi Alpha maintained a clean slate as they dumped PMD Wednesday night. With only two games left on the schedule it looks like a good bet to pick LCA as the 1965 IFC champ. Since the top four teams in this league make it into the playoffs a battle looms for that all important fourth position. TKE and SPE have 9-2 and 9-3 records respectively in the quest for this playoff position.

In the Inaependent League the PE Majors and the Eagles are tied for first place in the American division and the Inn Keepers and Vicky's 202's are tied for the lead in the National division. These teams will be playing each other next week to determine the probable independent champion. The way it looks now it will be the PE Majors in the American and Vicky's in the National. The mathematical machine broke down before the independent league champ could be figured out, but it's a toss up between these two teams.

The IM office requests All-star ballots to be turned in as quickly as possible. The game is scheduled for March 11 and Mr. Gladchuck is attempting to line up some Broadway acts for halftime.

The volleyball tournament will get underway March 9 but all team rosters are due March 1.

The squash tournament began Tuesday and first round results show B. Greenberg defeating F. Cenedella 3-0; Professor R. Drew-Bear over Dr. H. Schoenberger 3-2 in a hard fought contest; M. Bjornholm over M. Rose 3-2 in another close one.

Don't forget, anyone interested in speedskating comptition, male and female, have your entries into the RSO office by 4:00 today.

stayed close until the 16 minute mark. Then Cross ran 12 straight points to go from a two point lead to a 14 point margin. They continued along their merry way until the margin reached 18, but the Redmen caught some fire down the stretch and cut the lead to 8 with three minutes left. Cross made six straight points to ice the game and hand the Redmen their ninth loss in 19 decisions. Cross stands 12-6 on the year.

Massachusetts was led by Hill with 15 points despite a disastrous shooting night. Edwards had 14 with 17 rebounds, while Stewart and Lisack had 12 and O'Rourke 11. Greeley had 19 to aid the Crusader cause while Greg Hochstein had 15, John Hayes 13 and Bud Knittel 10.

Redmen Drop Two More; Army 82-67, H. C. 100-84

The University of Massachusetts dropped a pair of independent games in two days to a pair of strong opponents. Army triumphed, 82-67, and Holy Cross bumped the Redmen, 100-84.

The Cadets were just too much for the Redmen. They sprinted to a 17-4 lead after nine minutes of the game. While the UMass shooting was far from impressive, one cannot forget that the club's low score might have been due to the fact that the West Pointers are number seven in the nation defensively.

After the early lead, however, the Cadets received a scare from UMass which effectively combined their fast break with a tough man-to-man defense. This bit of action saw the score cut to 29-27 and, seconds later, it was 32-29 with UMass still trailing, but very much in the game.

However, Mike Silliman sank two free throws and John Mikula got a gift hoop to make it 36-29 at intermission. The Redmen got a big assist from Frank Stewart who perked up the attack of the team as well as holding down Dick Murray of the Cadets.

The second half saw the Redmen never getting any closer than five points, but remaining in contention throughout the first ten minutes of the half. With 11 minutes left, it was 57-45, but Stewart was called on an offensive foul and fouled out of the game. In the next two minutes, Murray had 9 points and the Cadets had a 69-51 lead.

Clarence Hill led the Redmen with 25 points and Tim Edwards had 13. Army, which kept its NT hopes alive with its 17-6 record, had five men in double figures paced by Silliman's 18. They have not lost at home in two years. UMass shot nearly 50 per cent from the floor but their 11 for 20 from the foul line didn't help their cause.

Against the Crusaders, the Redmen stayed close for the first half, but the superior shooting visitors rolled up the score in the second session as UMass suffered a shooting slump and committed numerous floor errors.

Massachusetts kept within five points of the Cross in the first half as the whole team got into the scoring act. There was not a single UMass player that stood above the rest, and that goes for the entire game. Holy Cross had the best of the shooting, primarily in the form of John Wendelken who had 29 points including 15 foul shots without a miss. The half-time score was 42-40 for HC.

In the second half, Wendelken made the first five points for the Cross, but the Redmen

Gymnasts Set For Double - Headers

by Al Rice

The University's ever improving gymnastics teams have a pair of double headers scheduled on campus in the next few days. The Varsity team has an important meet tomorrow afternoon at the Auxiliary Gym against the Naval Academy in a battle to stay out of the Eastern Gymnastics League cellar. Earlier in the afternoon the women's team engages in its third meet of the season.

An even bigger show will be on tap Tuesday night starting at 6 p.m. when Springfield College brings both its men's and women's teams to campus for a double meet. The Maroons have faced everybody in the league with only a single loss at the hands of Penn State.

Tomorrow's attraction against Navy will pit two teams with identical 0-5 marks in the league. Navy is 2-5 overall and the Redmen have a 1-5 mark. The meet was originally scheduled for last Saturday, but travel problems forced cancellation.

The teams are evenly matched and the meet is expected to be close all the way. Against one common opponent the scores are nearly identical. Navy lost to Pitt 65-54 and the Redmen lost to the Panthers 66-51.

Both men in the all around competition tomorrow will be entered for only the second time this season. Pete Grosso represented the UMass team in this capacity against Temple. To be eligible for the extra all around points, a team must enter one of its members in every one of the events except trampoline.

Trampoline, has been Navy's weakest event in their past meets, while their strengths have been on the rings and parallel bars. Their best individual performer has been Durham in the high bar events.

The Redmen were weak on the trampoline two weeks ago in their Friday-Saturday back to back home meets against Syracuse and Temple, but Coach Erik Kjeldsen reports that his men have been working on that event in the past two weeks of practice with noticeable results. Both Dave Lizotte and Al Carver have recently been doing double sommersaults.

Tuesday night Springfield will present their best team in a great number of years, possibly their best ever. They have three men averaging in the nines in every event but the high bar, which is still better than the UMass team. The Maroons are a senior team for the most part and most of their top members will be appearing in their final dual meet.

The Springfield girls team features Olympian Kathy Corrigan of South Weymouth. They will be appearing in their second competitive meet of the year, while the Massachusetts girls will be appearing in their fourth.

Grapplers Trounce U Conn

by Dave Kelly

Wednesday, the University grapplers trounced the Huskies of UConn for first Yankee Conference victory of the season. Last year, the matmen were the unofficial champions of the conference and need only a victory over URI Friday for a repeat.

Dave Balanoff (121), and Boris Chevone (130) were awarded defaults in the first two matches because the UConn wrestlers failed to make the weight. The action began as Bill Ritche outpointed his man 6-4 in a well wrestled match. Capt. Jesse Brogan, who is among the three undefeated members of the squad, took little time in pinning his man (2:37 of the first period). He used a reverse grapevine and reverse nelson for the pin, a move which is not seen very often. Jesse has shown that he has the quality to take a first in the New Englands, which will be held here at the University on March 5 and 6.

One of the real surprises of the year has been the tremendous improvement of George Darling in the 159 lb. class. George spent most of the summer and all autumn practicing and perfecting his "moves" and has turned himself into a potential top seed in the New Englands. He pinned his opponent in 4:58 of the second period.

IN THE 167 LB. CLASS, Dick Howe met Lee Havis of UConn, the number two boy in New England. Havis showed why by pinning the scrambling Howe in the second period. Dick has been laboring under adverse conditions, wrestling nearly 10 lbs under his class. In the 177 lb. match, Dave Kelly pinned his man in 3:58 of the second period using a chicken wing and nelson. Kelly did not look sharp in the first period as he missed take downs three or four times. If he is to continue unbeaten, he will have to get his timing down.

MILT MORIN, ALSO UNBEATEN, won by default. Big Milt has been improving with each match and will probably be the number one seed in the New Englands. If he makes the finals of the tourney, he probably will be facing Lorin McKenzie of Wesleyan, who is 6'5" and weighs in at close to 250 lbs. making Morin the smaller man by one inch and five lbs.

The next home meet will be against Boston College on March 1.

Gov. Volpe To Crown Winter Carni Queen

The beginning of the 1965 Winter Carnival will come at 6:30 tonight with the arrival of the Governor of Massachusetts by helicopter. This will be immediately followed by a reception in the Student Union.

At 6:40 flares will be lit all around the Campus Pond, and at 7:00 Opening Ceremonies will take place to officially initiate the three days of festivities. The ceremonies will include an introduction by the Junior Class President Bernie Dallas and a speech by President Lederle.

The Torch, symbol of Winter Carnival, will be lit at 7:10 by Metawampe, and, simultaniously, colored lights will be switched on all around the Union.

The highlight of the ceremonies will be at 7:15, when Governor Volpe crowns the 1965 Winter Carnival Queen, This will be followed by a fireworks display which will act as the finale for the initiation of this year's Winter Carnival.

Which One Will Be Queen?

Who is to reign over Winter Carni Weekend? The finalists have been chosen and everyone is anxiously awaiting the crowning of the Queen at the annual Winter Carni opening ceremonies.

The finalists are: Sandy Olson, sophomore microbiology major from Worcester. Sandy is a Chi Omega sister who aspires to be a medical researcher.

Joanie Ford, a member of the Class of '66, is a physical education major from Bristol, Conn. Cheerleading and Class of '66 executive council keep Joanie busy. Her plans for the future include a career in either teaching or physical therapy.

Ruth Rubin hails from Great Neck, N.Y., and is a sophomore government major. She is a member of Chi Omega sorority and treasurer of Alpha Lambda Delta honorary society. Ruth hopes to attend law school and practice corporate law.

Sue Platt is a freshman elementary education major from Framingham, Mass., and a member of the Newman Club. Sue's future promises traveling and teaching.

Afternoon Events Need SNOW!

If the "powers that be" are willing, there'll be snow for the many Winter Carni events planned for Saturday morning and afternoon, and Sunday afternoon.

From 10-11:30 a.m., the Class of '68 is sponsoring Toboggan Races with competition between dorms, fraternities and sororities. Trophies will be awarded.

Horse-drawn sleigh rides are offered from 1-2 p.m. in the afternoon. Participants from all over campus will vie for trophies offered for the Speed Skating Competition to be held from 1-3 p.m.

UMass co-eds should provide some exciting — and interesting —competition from 3-4 p.m. as they compete in the Powder Puff Hockey Game.

Sunday afternoon there will be an amateur skating show at the pond from 2:00 to 3:00 p.m. Following will be a ski demonstration on basic pointers presented by the ski team.

If that white stuff comes down, Saturday and Sunday will certainly be highlights of this year's Winter Carni.

McLaughry Award: Five Finalists Named

The five senior scholar-athlete finalists for the third annual DeOrmond (Tuss) McLaughry Western Masachusetts college awards have been announced by Frank X. Keating, chairman of the Western Massachusetts Chapter of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame. Paul Majeski of the University of Massachusetts and Robert Cobb of Springfield College have been the first two recipients of the coveted award.

The award, honoring the one-time football coach at Brown and Dartmouth, will be presented at the local chapter's third annual awards banquet March 10 at Williston Academy. McLaughry is currently secretary-treasurer of the American Football Coaches Association and a 1962 inductee into the National Fotball Foundation and Hall of Fame.

The Western Massachusetts college finalists are Wayne Snowman of American International College, Kenneth Cousens of Amherst College, John Schroeder of the University of Masachusetts, Thomas Ryan of Springfield College, and Jerry Jones of Williams College.

Snowman, a native of Southington, Conn., has maintained a B average while majoring in sociology, has been a varsity football letter-winner for three seasons, averaged better than 50 minutes a game playing both offense and defense, and has gained All New England recognition during his junior and senior years.

Cousens, a resident of Highland Park, Ill., was cocaptain and a guard on the undefeated Jeff squad during the past season.

Schroeder, a senior physical education major who hails from Brooklyn, has been an outstanding performer at quarterback for Massachusetts while winning letters during his sophomore, junior, and senior years. He has been a dean's list student and maintains a B average. He led the Redmen in pass interceptions during the past season and also is a member of the varsity lacrosse team.

Ryan, a resident of Gardner, is a senior physical education major at Springfield who also has maintained a B average during his college career. He led the Maroons in scoring with 38 points during the past season, was the leading rusher with 438 yards for a 4.2 average, and also caught 12 passes for 126 yards.

Jones, the regular quarterback of the Williams team, is a resident of San Francisco and plans to do premedical studies at the University of California next year.

John Yovcsin, head coach at Harvard University, will be the main speaker at the banquet, which is open to the general public. Chairman Frank Keating has announced that the next meeting of the awards banquet committee wil be held at Hotel Northampton tomorrow at 6:30 p.m.

TW 3

For the first time in America, the TV show that rocked the Empire, THAT WAS THE WEEK THAT WAS with the original English cast will appear at the UM Cage on Sunday, February 21, at 8 p.m.

America has its own version of TW3, and although differing from its English counterpart in some respects, it quickly became the most popular TV program among U.S. college audiences. Now you can meet the sire in a special concert presentation of the original, exciting, uncensored British version featuring members of the London cast.

The show is the biggest hit in the history of European television. The program comments on the news of the world in general. It provides the funniest—most biting—comment on the news.

What the cast will say, none of us can predict. One thing is certain. Whatever they say will be communicated to us in a way that will be both hilarious and exhilarating—a way that will keep college students talking and chuckling for weeks after they have gone.

Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union Lobby at $1.50 per person. Don't miss this great concert.

Rock 'n' Roll

Rock 'n' Roll is here to stay. On Saturday, February 20, at 4 p.m., four of the biggest rock 'n' roll stars will be at UMass.

Bo Diddley began his musical career when he took violin lessons as a young lad. Bo went on to teach himself the guitar and trombone. After trying his hand at many jobs, Bo went back to his first love, Music.

Bo formed a group and they played their first engagements under the stars in the streets of Chicago. From there on the "Langley Avenue Jazz Cats" appeared on a number of amateur shows and then at small clubs. This is where Bo developed his distinctive, hard-driving guitar style. "The man with the organ-like sound," Broadcast Music Industry called him when he was awarded a gold-record for his "Gunslinger" album.

Among his network appearances have been the Ed Sullivan show and The Big Boat Show.

The Shirelles are an outstanding exception to the rule that the rock 'n' roll era is a young man's world. Whether the Shirelles are being heard on records or seen at their many personal appearances, the welcome mat is always out for them.

The Shirelles offer unique presentations of original songs. With their outstanding style and versatility one can see why today they are the country's most popular female vocal group.

Among their past hits are "Tonight's The Night," "Will You Love Me Tomorrow," "Dedicated To The One I Love," and "Mama Said."

Another group, the Isley Brothers, will also appear in the same show. They have performed on the famous TV program, "Shindig." Their recording of "Twist and Shout" was a million record seller.

Hank Ballard and The Midnighters will wind up the all star cast. Some of their past hits include the original version of "The Twist" and "Finger Popping Time."

Jefferson Kaye of WBZ, one of New England's most talented, versatile, and popular personalities will be the host for the afternoon.

Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union Lobby at $2.00 per person. Tickets are going fast, so hurry and get yours today.

Viet Nam Panelists Show Strong Dichotomy of Opinion

by Joe Sullivan
Staff Reporter

A vociferous panel of hawks and doves met in Bartlett Hall last Thursday to decide if the Eagle should drop the olive branch or hurl the arrows into the troubled plains and jungles of South Viet Nam.

South Viet Nam — the strife-torn little country where many are killed and more are dying every day fighting a war that is not a war for a cause that — according to many — is not a cause, but an excuse.

The panel, composed of Dr. Luther Allen, Col. Albert Aykroyd, and Dr. David Leonard, argued their views for more than two hours before an equally argumentive student faculty audience.

American military function in the area was explained by Col. Aykroyd, who pointed out that the Military Assistance Program (MAP) now being implemented in Viet Nam is a closely supervised and carefully directed part of our foreign aid program. MAP, he said, is headed up by the Secretary of Defense, who is immediately responsible for it to the Secretary of State.

"THE PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM" said Col. Aykroyd, "is to furnish training and hardware to native armies for the maintenance of world peace. One of its immediate objectives, however, is to provide a substitute for a purely military answer to the problems faced by its host country."

Col. Aykroyd then noted that the MAAGS (Military Assistance Advisory Groups) stationed in South Viet Nam have built schools and orphanages, begun civic action programs, expanded Vietnamese military hospital care to include civilians, and have, in general, attempted to help the military identify with the people.

Dr. Allen, who has spent considerable time in Viet Nam, called on the American government to internalize a measure of the

by Alan Grigsby
Staff Reporter

Classes at the Orchard Hill Complex, a new experiment in college teaching, have sparked the opinions of both teachers and students.

The informal atmosphere, where student and teacher can lower uncomfortable classroom barriers, has proven the most favorable aspect of this new plan.

The change of atmosphere has, in turn, enlarged student participation and interest in the class.

Convenience for both professor and student seems to also be one of the plan's outstanding features. The student is able to roll out of bed and down the hall to class, while the professors drive to the Complex instead of to Bartlett.

Dud Siswick, of Webster House, however, expressed the feelings of many students when he commented on the inconvenience of having alternating classes off and on the hill. He added that he liked the plan, but would prefer all his classes on the hill.

Dr. Leon Baron of the English department, felt that the new experiment had improved the atmosphere and that students were no longer intimidated by the classroom atmosphere.

The professors, when asked to note distractions, mentioned passing students, music in the background and the loudspeaker system in the dorm. Dr. Richard Haven, of the English department, declared that this situation would soon be remedied by the installation of partitions between the class areas and the hallway.

Mr. Efroymson, of the math department, who changed his class from the hill to Hasbrook, claimed that the classroom situation was not suitable for math classes.

He pointed out that due to distractions and the lack of blackboards, desks to write on, and the organized class background, he found it unpractical to teach math on the hill.

He stated that if classes were to be held in the dormitories, proper classrooms should have been built in the building instead of taking the study and lounge areas from the students.

With the installation of the partitions, many of these problems should be solved, isolating the class from the distracting dormitory life.

Under the present plan, only lounges on floors three, five and six are used for class two or three times a day. This allows students to study in the other areas.

Nigerian Trip Set For University History Major

by Marilyn Rosner
Associate News Editor

How many of you have heard of the Experiment in International Living? Not too many? Then speak to Ralph Lennon, a senior history major who will be spending his summer in Nigeria — if you're willing to help him financially.

Ralph is planning to live with a Nigerian family which has volunteered to accomodate him for a month and a half of his stay in their country. He will live and work with them, and their son, who is Ralph's age, will be his companion.

The next month Ralph and his fellow Americans in the group will travel around the country to further their knowledge of the unique cultural and geographical aspects of Nigeria.

This Experiment in International Living, a forerunner of the Peace Corps, is designed to give young Americans an intimate knowledge of one particular country.

All this will be possible if UMass students and faculty are willing to contribute $400 to sup-

Automobile Strikes UM Girl

by Bob Murphy
Staff Reporter

Patricia Garrett, of Emily Dickinson residence hall, a freshman, is recovering in Cooley Dickinson Hospital today from injuries sustained while crossing North Pleasant Street Monday night.

Returning to her dorm, Miss Garrett was struck by a car heading north on Pleasant Street. She suffered a mild concussion, a scalp laceration and a fractured right pelvic bone.

Miss Garrett's doctor advised the Collegian that she is resting comfortably and will be transferred this week to the school infirmary.

Police identified the driver as Clarence R. Holt, 23, a student at American International College in Springfield.

Both town and campus police are investigating the accident which occurred at 7:10 Monday night.

Giant Scuttled

The Giant, one of the main attractions of the Saturday night Kingsmen concert, was felled after vandals severed the support wires. The figure, valued at over one thousand dollars, suffered damage estimated at more than several hundred dollars when its two feet and a hand were shattered. Two students apprehended by authorities for the act will be facing charges in the near future.

Students Are More Costly At UMass

Figures before the Massachusetts House Ways and Means Committee reveal the annual cost of maintaining a student at the University of Massachusetts is substantially greater than at the 21 other state institutions and more than double that of the 11 state colleges.

With a projected enrollment at UMass of 11,525 in 1965, a budget of $26,130,515 was presented the governor—who reduced it to $21,631,152. The latter amount, if approved, would make per/student costs $1,876.

For Lowell Technological Institute, the appropriation would result in per/student costs of $1,071, although it must support a large, expensive physical plant.

The state colleges, seven resident and three commuter, are recommended to receive $864 per student; the all-commuter community colleges, $562.

The state colleges, with 25 per cent more students than UMass, are being offered a budget only 59 per cent as large.

Some members of the legislature have already questioned where the hidden costs, if any, are that cause such a large difference between UMass and the others, particularly Lowell Technological Institute. Also at issue is the restraint of the governor in cutting the UMass budget as opposed to his meat-axing the others.

Censorship Issue Rages At Boston U.

Autonomy became the issue last week on the BU campus as a struggle developed between the president of the university and the Student Congress over the publishing rights of the BU News. Last Tuesday, Feb. 17, a small core of protestors passed around a petition which asked that the Student Congress rather than the university president be designated legal publisher of the BU News and that the budget be transferred to the congress account.

On Monday BU's president, Dr. Harold C. Case, had acceded to a Student Congress demand that he withdraw his request that the News adviser review all copy prior to publication.

In an emergency meeting Sunday, Feb. 14, the Student Congress had adopted an ultimatum for the president to withdraw his demand and had given Dr. Case until 5 p.m. Monday to reply to their demands.

In their meeting the Congress resolved that it could not condone the president's demands, asserting that such action would violate freedom of the press and the principles of the Committee for Academic Freedom of the American Assoc.

News Editor Werner Bunschuh said that he considers the school president's plan as censorship. While the controversy raged the Student Congress voted $300 for the news editor to publish a congress newspaper.

The controversy now centers around legal issues. The legal question of the president's right to see copy is written into a trustee's ruling, said Dr. Case, and could only be altered at a trustee's meeting, scheduled for March. Some students, however, do not want to wait that long.

Stephen Smith, treasurer of the Student Congress and one of the most articulate speakers at the Tuesday rally, said that students would make their views known to him.

"We will take action if the students want us to," he said.

Abolish The Draft Says Senator

Senator Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.) has disclosed that he will introduce a Concurrent Resolution expressing the sense of Congress that the draft should be replaced by a voluntary system if national security can be fully maintained.

He also said his conclusion that the draft can be safely ended has been confirmed by representatives of the Department of Defense who have told him that the main question is not any danger to the nation but simply the cost of added incentives for enlistment.

In a speech before a meeting of representatives of religious, farm, labor, and voter groups, called by the National Council of Churches, Nelson said his resolution would give the public and Congress a voice in the decision which is approaching on the future of the draft.

NELSON'S RESOLUTION will be the boldest Congressional action thus far in the movement to replace the present Selective Service System with a voluntary plan to fill military manpower requirements. Last year Senator Kenneth Keating (R-N.Y.), who has since been defeated, proposed a Presidential Commission to study the problem in depth. The Executive, however, spurned the idea in favor of an expansion of the Department of Defense's already existing study of military manpower.

Nelson himself introduced a bill in June, 1964 which would have directed the Secretary of Defense to present alternatives to the draft to Congress by 1967. His new resolution will be phrased so as to invite support from Senators who might have some doubt that manpower requirements could be fulfilled without the draft but who would

UM Nursery Given Check For Work

In recognition of its contributions to Bay State nurserymen, UMass recently was awarded a second check for $1,000 by the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association.

According to UMass plant and soil sciences department professor John R. Havis, the award, first given to UMass last year, is to be used to investigate problems of ornamental nursery crops.

One of the current projects that the money helps support is investigation of winter injury to plants, a serious problem in the Northeast. The studies are being conducted in the UMass department of plant and soil sciences.

Have you heard about the Jolly Green Giant?

Soviet Jewry—Talk Topic

Dr. Louis Greenbaum, of the UMass History Department, will speak on the problem of Soviet Jewry, March 1, at 8 p.m., in the S.U. Commonwealth Room.

Sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization, the meeting is open to students and faculty.

Russian Judaism is slowly dying due to government-sponsored discrimination and religious and cultural deprivation.

Ten years ago, almost 500 synagogues existed in Soviet Russia; today there are 90 due to harassment of observance of the religion.

Interfaith Panel Tomorrow Night In SBA Aud.

The Campus Religious Council is presenting a panel discussion moderated by Dr. Havens, university psychiatrist, on "Inter-Faith Marriage—The Moral and Pratcical Aspects of Interfaith Dating."

Open to all students, the forum will be held Thursday, Feb. 25, at 8 p.m. in SBA Aud.

The theme is of a special interest today because of the great increase in intermarriage between all faiths and races which is taking place in American society and because of the strong opinions expressed concerning this trend.

The participants, in addition to Dr. Havens, will be Father Quigley, assistant chaplain to Catholic students, Rev. Scott, chaplain to Protestant students, and Rabbi Ruchames, chaplain to Jewish students.

"Naughty Lady" Coming to Campus - She Is Only $1.50

If March 17 brings to mind the images of shamrocks and the wearin' o' the green, perhaps you better not plan to attend the Sophomore Banquet. For once you have passed through the portals of the "Naughty Lady Club" that Wednesday evening, any future mention of this date will whisk you back to the hush hush world of the speak-easy.

For the first time on the U. of Mass. campus, the Student Union ballroom will be transformed into the gay and soaring era called the "Roaring Twenties." Should you decide to take a chance and come to recapture some of the color and excitement of those good old days of flappers and prohibition, the club's management guarantees almost complete protection from injury resulting from any lightning raid by the Keystone Cops.

To all its patrons the "Naughty Lady" will offer its full facilities between the hours of 6:30 and 10:00 p.m. Included in the evening's program will be famed delicacies to delight any palate, a unique favor to always remind you of your "night on the sly," and an unprecedented mid-week presentation of the ' "Naughty Lady' floor show.

To begin the night of fun and frolic the club will offer its renowned bill of fare. Following an entree of fruit cocktail, the main course of fried chicken and spaghetti will be served with tossed salad and Italian bread and ice cream for dessert. Unfortunately the 18th amendment prohibits use of the club's extensive wine cellar.

In a recent interview Miss Helen "Honey" Cassoll, attractive hostess of the "Naughty Lady," described the favors which will be offered to each patron. Serving as both a momento and a bar accessory, this little figureine has the harmless appearance of a Keystone Cop, but ingeniously hidden within are a measured shot glass and a church key.

To really catch the mood of those wild and restless "Roaring Twenties" anyone wishing to dress in the style of flapper dresses, raccoon coats, striped blazers, tank suits, etc., is invited to do so. Certainly, you will say, such an evening is beyond the reach of your benumbed billfold after Winter Carni. However, the "Naughty Lady" is bringing you this event for the moderate sum of $1.50. But the limited number of tickets will be sold quickly so get yours early. Tickets go on sale Wednesday, March 3, in the union lobby and in the dorms.

See you at the "Naughty Lady" (and tell them '67 sent you)!

Winter Carnival Concerts in Review

Rock 'n' Roll Concert Kingsmen

by Sherry Spear
Feature Editor

The highest point on the rock n' roll show came when one of the Isley brothers danced on top of a piano in the Cage last Saturday afternoon. From there it went straight down—to the audience where he monkeyed through the aisles. Unwinding, brandishing their jackets above their heads the brothers of "Twist and Shout" fame were joined by two male enthusiasts from the audience. At no time was the audience out of hand—just alive as they jumped up and then down on top of chairs and benches to see the show and demand two encores.

Jefferson Kaye of WBZ didn't come but instead came a jolly Dave Hoy who seemed to be at home and made the capacity audience feel the same. The intermission was waived, the show went on.

THE SHIRELLES in satin and fringe chartreuse stole the show. Shirley, the head singer, had an ardent admirer up front, while Mickey Mouse squeaked as they sang their golden oldies "Dedicated to the One I Love," "Soldier Boy," "Tonight's the Night" and showed why they are one of the top female groups.

The sound of the music, singing and audience enthusiasm echoed throughout the Cage. It was difficult to hear the introductory remarks of the performers even after the P.A. system was turned higher. An afternoon of good carny fun hearing in person the groups who made the records. I was disappointed in Bo Diddley. He was good, put on a professional show, but his final number seemed to be a stall for time. He gave a medley of "Bo Diddley" sings with teaser introductions that had many rock n' roll fans practically monkeying in their seats.

An unknown group, Barry

Sunday's Concert - TW 3, Josh White, Judy Collins

by Dave Gitelson

A standing room only crowd packed the Cage Sunday evening for three hours of solid enjoyment, as Judy Collins, Josh White and the British cast of "That Week That Was" climaxed the activities of the 1965 Winter Carnival weekend.

At 8:15 the house lights dimmed and a little girl with a big Martin Drednaught guitar climbed to the stage. What Judy Collins lacked in size seemed only to accentuate her enormous talent. From quiet ballads to lilting singalongs, her selections excited both folk buffs and non-music lovers. At one point the Cage fairly rocked as 4,000 voices lent their enthusiastic support of Judy's arrangement of the popular "Bottle of Wine." To the regret of most of those in the audience, Judy's travel schedule did not permit her to take the encores she so richly deserved.

FOLLOWING JUDY COLLINS, the six members of the original British cast of "TW3" took to the stage and the hilarity began. No topic appeared to be immune from the biting satire that for the better part of an hour broached every subject from the Bible to virginity —or lack of it. The versatility of each member was obvious as they sang, impersonated and clowned their way through a program that filled the Cage with laughter.

The last artist of the evening was Josh White, one of the finest, and most respected performers in this country. It is a shame that it was at this point in the program that many students made the worst display of rudeness I have ever seen accorded a performer. I am referring to those who, for a number of reasons, found it necessary to leave while the concert was still in progress.

Certainly it was their privilege, but to do so in the middle of a number was not only disturbing to those who remained, but distracting to the performer as well. On several occasions Josh was clearly annoyed when large groups of people nosily descended the wooden bleachers.

The result was a performance not up to the usual excellence of White, a great disappointment to those who had looked forward to his appearance, and the only dark spot in an otherwise delightful evening.

event of the 1965 Winter Carnival, the Sophomore Class' Saturday night presentation of the Kingsmen at the Kettle provided an exciting time for all those attending.

The entrance to the Kettle was highlighted with a canopy-covered walk, two 800 million candlepower searchlights, and a giant man, standing 40 feet high.

The Kingsmen played three one-hour shows, divided by 30 minute intermissions. During the first of these, the Queen and her court were introduced by Master of Ceremonies, John Mullen.

During the second intermission, Bill Tindall and his group provided dance music for an appreciative audience.

While the Kingsmen played in one half of the commons; a nightclub atmosphere prevailed in the other. This cabaret was complete with a 40 foot bar, serving exotic drinks and numerous hostesses serving canapes.

Well-planned though it was, the event suffered from the waiting lines and over-crowding that plagued the entire weekend. The Sophomore Class worked under the added handicap of planning the first social function in the new dining commons.

The Man of Campbell Soup and Coke

The ever-growing Andy Warhol Fan club is pleased to announce the recent formation of a New York chapter to be managed by June Crasco '62.

The activities of the club have included Coke and Campbell's Suppers, visits to Warhol and a Valentine Day Presentation.

Ivan Karp at the Castelli Gallery said that the club is the first of its kind. An enthusiastic friend of the club he has been helpful in arranging meetings with Andy.

At a meeting in his studio last weekend, Andy said, "I think the club is terrific!" Warhol, who shows his Campbell Soup, Coke and neon flower paintings at the Castelli Gallery, is the reigning king of Pop in the art world.

HIS MOST RECENT paintings, which include Elvis, Liz and Jackie, are soon to be seen in one-man shows in Canada, London and Paris. In addition to his painting activities Andy is making films at the rate of one per week, including an eight-hour film entitled "Sleep." At a past visit to his tin-foiled studio, members saw his latest film, "Screen-test #2."

Announcements of future activities will appear in the Collegian. Membership is open to all Warhol fans.

The Copper Kettle Affair

Responsibility is a trite expression at America's colleges and universities; student editors must be responsible, student leaders must take responsibility and on and on. However, it is time that students realized they have a responsibility to act like the future community leaders that they will be. Members of the University community and, undoubtedly, some outsiders failed to do so at the Winter Carnival appearance of the Kingsmen at the Kopper Kettle.

The malicious damage and general actions at last Sunday night's concert are not those of members of an academic community. The University students caused several hundred dollars worth of damage to the giant on display in front of the Commons, coats, and various articles loaned to the sophomore class were taken, and minor damage was done to the Commons itself. Such actions seem hard to place in a University environment.

Admittedly misjudgments were made by the committee running the affair, but that does not vindicate the actions of others. Members of the University community must realize that as students and future leaders the events at the Copper Kettle are not those of responsible members of the community.

The Authority To Judge

This is, at present, an Ad Hoc committee in the Student Senate that is studying that perennial nuisance, the "cume bill."

The proponents of this bill feel that no member of the student body who has a cumulative average below the requirement which the committee sets, should be permitted to hold a prominent office in any student organization.

There are several reasons why they support this bill, all of which reflect an obviously "Holie than thou" attitude.

The most important of these reasons, they say, is that a person with a low cume is not able to give the mental leadership needed to run an efficient organization.

This is obviously absurd.

There are many reasons for a poor cume, one of which is spending too much time doing a good job in an extra curricular activity. If a person is not fulfilling the duties of his position in such an activity, he will obviously be relieved of it.

The authority to judge whether or not a student is responsible enough to hold his position MUST be left to the students in that organization.

The other principal argument in favor of this bill is that, in the interest of the individual student, if his cume is low, he should be discouraged from taking time away from his studies.

The question here is not whether or not he will do a good job, but whether or not a group of students have the right to pass judgment as to what another student's cume should be.

If the Student Senate passes this bill, it can only mean that this body has become so presumptuous that it feels that it is in a better position to assign cumulaive average, and social probaion requirements than the administration.

This is so foolhardy a proposition that it is almost inconceivable that many senators are actually in favor of the measure.

A cumulative average is the business of no one except the individual student and the University Administration, and only the administration has the right to take ANY action on the basis of one's cume.

The Devil At 1 o'clock

The time may be 11:45 on Friday, 12:45 on Saturday, or 1:45 on a special weekend. At any event, all is quiet. A few couples may be seen strolling back to a co-ed's dorm, groups huddle under the window of Joe's Grinder wagon, and the Amherst Tower truck grinds up Van Meter hill to the Orchard. Except for the last disturbing noise of a fraternity party or an occasional dorm catcall, the campus is generally peaceful.

Yet by 11:55, 12:55 or 1:55 all serenity has disappeared, and the night calm succumbs to absolute chaos.

Frenzied couples run skeltering back to women's residences, where a curfew countdown has already been initiated with all the exactness of a Cape Kennedy missile launching. It seems in many cases that prudent timing has bowed to human nature, a condition not allowed for on the recovery plan of "Project Control" counselors.

But by far the greatest evening madness is occurring on campus roads. Rt. 116 north and south, Butterfield Terrace, and Van Meter Hill are at once filled with sounds of screaming tires and racing engines.

A conservative estimate might set the average vehicle speed at 50 miles an hour, well above normal campus speed limits. Add to this the probable condition of many after-partying drivers, and there is nothing short of a menacing situation.

If the pedestrian escort and his date survive for the good night kiss (and many admittedly do each weekend) it requires faster foot-work to survive the return trip to men's housing.

The seeming infrequency of "official" vehicles at these rampant hours is surprising, especially in light of so vehement an auto crackdown this year. One can only conclude that our police force is overly exhausted from affixing tickets to illegally parked cars during the day to get out at night.

Parked vehicles do not ordinarily constitute a danger to one's life as curfew hour driving does. One injury during this time of night is already a matter of record. If the horse gets out again before someone closes the garage door, the accounting will be heavy.

Dining Commons Responsibility

To the Editor,

How, and by whom, is it decided whether or not a dining commons will remain open on a weekend or a holiday? The particular instance this time is that of the North Commons remaining open this Monday, the 22nd. In their newsletter the Dining Commons authorities stated that the Dining Commons would be closed Feb. 22. I would like to know why the Dining Commons was open this Monday, who made the decision, and, above all, who was responsible for dispensing the information that the Commons was, indeed, open.

Once Upon A Time

Once upon a time the Kingsmen came to the Kopper Kettle. There was much fun and merriment. Organization was the highlight of the evening.

Tickets were sold for more than a capacity crowd, a very considerate gesture of thanks to those people who had paid good money to be able to see the Kingsmen. Those who organized this wonderful fabrication displayed even more foresight by allowing people who had gone to the first of the three shows to remain after its conclusion and stay through through the other two, greatly enhancing the flow of people into the building who had paid the same amount of money for their tickets, but who had yet to even check their coats.

The coat-checking service was also phenomenal. Coats were checked with discriminating care—mixing tickets, piling coats in haphazard fashion, etc.—to make certain that there would absolutely be an orderly system of re-claiming them after the show. There was much fun and merriment for all.

The University's own inimitable law enforcement agency came in full force to guard the unpredictable and dangerous radiators inside while numerous students cut those waiting patiently in an unsupervised line which extended for more than a block. It was a heartwarming display of fair play, on the part of so many "upstanding" UMass students, to witness such respect for those hundreds of others who had already been waiting for more than an hour in ten-degree weather.

Indeed, organization, proper supervision, and a sense of fair play highlighted that wonderful evening when the Kingsmen came to the Kopper Kettle. Those responsible for oranizing the event, those responsible for supervising it, and those who participated in it contributed each their own efforts to make the evening one of fun and merriment...for all.

Faculty Symposium

Editor's Note:

The Collegian hopes that this column will encourage faculty and administration to express their opinions, and thereby create an atmosphere conducive to creative and critic thinking. If enough interest is shown, the editors will feature a weekly page for faculty opinion.

The following articles by two UMass professors are printed in the hope that they will make the campus community better informed about the situation in Viet Nam.

Dr. Leonard of the history dept., is well known for his participation in political discussions and debates on campus. Dr. Allen of the government dept., has taught in South Viet Nam and is familiar with Southeast Asia.

Conditions For Peace in Viet Nam

Neither escalation nor withdrawal provides an honorable or realistic peace policy in South Viet Nam today. The primary question raised by our intervention there was, from the start ten years ago, and remains today whether we have the patience and skill to seek out and support a viable popular, and reasonably free alternative to the Communist regime in the North.

The United States, due to the predominance of the military and the C.I.A. in our policy out there, has made many mistakes in sustaining this complex, uphill but not impossible commitment. We tried to make Diem into a Magsaysay and, more recently, to make Khanh into a Nasser. We have too long neglected the principal element upon which our policy should be based, the Vietnamese nationalist tradition as a nucleus for the bringing together of Viet Nam's diverse religious and ethnic groups. Let us look briefly at this nationalist tradition. In 1930 the V.N.Q.D.D. (Vietnamese Nationalist Revolutionary Party) challenged French colonialism. Due to faulty organization it failed, crushed by French colonialism and outmaneuvered by the budding Vietnamese Communist party with its superior organization. Yet nationalism rose up again from its ashes. In this tradition merged the Dai Viet party (Greater Viet Nam Nationalist Party) which, since 1947, has been led by a moderate southerner, Dr. Nguyen Ton Hoan. In 1950, Dr. Hoan trained young Vietnamese officers for political and military struggle both against the French and the Communists. In 1954-1955, Dai Viet leaders conducted serious counter-guerilla action against both Communists and Diemists. While Dr. Hoan kept this secret organization alive from his headquarters abroad (most of his followers in Viet Nam were locked in Diemist jails), key Dai Viet officers planned the coup which brought Diem down. In late January of 1964 they forestalled what probably would have been a neutralist coup and brougnt General Khanh to power on the assumption that he would cooperate in a Dai Viet coalition government which brought together diverse nationalists and religious groups. Ambassador Lodge and Secretary of Defense MacNamara, however, refused to support this arrangement, preferring to rely on the vain, theatrical military leader whose shifting political base was oiled with at least 500,000,000 piasters of C.I.A. funds. We have since paid the price for this shortsighted policy in dangerous instability. Only during the past two months have the Embassy in Saigon and the State Department in Washington had second thoughts about our second "strong man" Will they let the C.I.A. move in once more behind a moustached "potential Nasser" among the Young Turk Generals? This could be disastrous. On the other hand, the events of this past weekend in Saigon do appear to have removed General Khanh from his key position and thus can open up, in time, a more constructive alternative. Such an alternative is the nucleus provided by the strongest nationalist party for a broad political and religious front.

What is the Dai Viet program today? First it seeks political and military reorganization that would give it a leading role in the army. The army in turn would be subordinated to a civilian government that could count on organized labor and peasant support. In domestic policy, Dai Viet places primary emphasis on the weeding out of corruption, especially in high places. Next comes the development of a domestic peace corps—the recruitment of young Vietnamese students from the cities to go out and live in the villages, protecting them by night, and in the daytime helping in constructive projects and in setting the stage for village self-government. The Vietnamese term for this procedure is pacification, and it has been applied brilliantly by a civilian Dai Viet province chief up in Quang Tri. Another major item is land reform, essential to win over the peasants in the Mekong delta area. One proposal which Dr. Hoan did his best to get across a year ago is a new deal for the ethnic minorities (the mountain people) of South Viet Nam. This would be inaugurated by setting up a Ministry in Saigon which one of their leaders would be invited to head. Religious cooperation is an essential item in the Dai Viet program. Dr. Hoan kept on good terms both with Roman Catholic Archbishop Binh and with the Buddhist leader, Thich Tam Chau, when he was in office. The original Khanh government included representatives of the Hoa Hoa and Cao Dai sects as well as leaders of Buddhist persuasion from Central Viet Nam. Another item in the program is the rallying of talented people from abroad and their appointment to appropriate jobs in South Viet Nam. Last but not least comes gradual, realistic steps toward permanent representative political institutions.

What this program adds up to is long-range patient pacification of South Viet Nam through the development of honest, dedicated, and tolerant leadership to rally the vast majority of Vietnamese who are neither pro-Communist nor completely cynical. The military and C.I.A. dominance over our policy in Viet Nam has allowed a serious political vacuum to develop. Into this the Vietcong moves. The first task of the United States is to reverse the tide in this political conflict by political means in South Viet Nam. We must ally ourselves with the strongest elements of Vietnamese nationalist and religious traditions and stop trying to buy support (agents, clients) with C.I.A. funds. From such a policy, patiently pursued over a period of time (perhaps five years), we may be able to get decent peace terms.

What are decent peace terms? Dai Viet will insist that the Vietcong agree to a cease fire in return for massive economic assistance to North Viet Nam. Leading up to these terms would be such policies as political amnesty ("open arms" for Vietcong cares who give up their arms freely). They would be rehabilitated. This policy was instituted when Dr. Hoan was Vice Premier for Pacification a year ago. For those Vietcong who do not give up, there must be a new agreement (analagous to the Geneva Accords of 1954) under which those Vietcong who do not lay down their arms freely are shipped to North Viet Nam in a phased withdrawal that is coordinated with the phased withdrawal of American military advisers. This "neutralization" should be accompanied by an international guarantee of the Two Viet Nams, both free to accept economic aid from any country and both encouraged to develop economic and cultural relations with one another. In the long run, unification would be possible when Communists are prepared to tolerate Nationalist parties in the North in return for a legal Communist party in the South.

Working for peace in Viet Nam requires constancy and coolness on our part, patience with an unstable but relatively free and open political situation in South Viet Nam. It will demand more American money and some American lives. It is cheaper and wiser than the cataclysmic "victory" policy of further escalation and the neo-colonialist implications of the commitment of American ground forces in full fghting capacity in South Viet Nam. It is wiser and less expensive than an immediate negotiation that would deliver in short order Vietnamese nationalists to heavy, totalitarian and ruthless Communist rule. Such negotiation would condone the Chinese Communist tactics of pushing wars of national liberation as a key part of Chinese expansion in Southeast Asia. The idea of Communist Viet Nam going "Titoist" as a result of negotiation today is probably a mirage. China is an immediate neighbor and the revolutionary ties are strong. Let us therefore seek out and support a serious alternative to the Communist capture of the Vietnamese nationalist tradition. Our ability to do so is a test of American leadership in international politics.

Crisis in US Policy

The present crisis in Viet Nam is not only the result of very special local circumstances but is also the most dramatic symptom of a massive paralysis in American foreign policy. There is little likelihood of the resolution of the problem in Viet Nam until the more general difficulty has been removed by a fresh approach to the major problems in the world. Most Americans believe that the troubles in the world since 1945 have been caused by the relentless determination of "World Communism" to conquer the entire world by military might and subversion. To counter the military threat, the USA built up a huge stock-pile of atomic weapons and erected a series of military alliances to contain Russia and, after 1950, Communist China. To counter subversion the USA launched the Marshall Plan for the economic reconstruction of Europe which, by 1954 had attained remarkable success. The "Free World" against the "Communist world" became the orthodox terms of world polarization. Unfortunately, for this view of the world, the newly emerging peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America have not subscribed to this bipolar vision. For them the great problems are national integrity and human dignity after centuries of humiliating subservience to European imperialism and development of modern societies by the application of science, technology, and capital. Against surging increases in population the most desperate needs of these new nations is for education, technical, social, and political development; in short, a revolution of their entire social and economic fabric. To these peoples the bitter dialogue of the Cold War appears as a vast and sterile distraction from their acute needs for modernization. They have sought to avoid becoming imbroiled in this struggle by declaring themselves neutral. But the USA, convinced that neutralism is both naive and irresponsible, has sought to enlist all countries, new and old, in its crusade against communism, and has put the fundamental issue as that of freedom. In terms of American civilization and that of Europe this makes sense, although it is difficult to show how communism is in any direct way a serious threat to these highly developed, prosperous and stable societies of the West.

But wherever communism has been able to identify itselff with emergent national revolution, as it did in China and in Viet Nam, it has forged a dynamic that channelizes great energy. Revolutionary guerilla warfare cannot be defeated by conventional land and aerial war or by counter insurgency, above all when that is led by the USA as the world's most powerful and prosperous Western country. Only a program supported by the peoples of Asia which leads directly to their improved well-being and self-determination, even though it be of an authoritarian, centralized dictatorship, has any chance of success. This is also true of Africa and Latin America. The USA cannot hope to influence the future of Asia or Africa by putting the struggle in military terms. While it has the sheer power to hold in Viet Nam, it cannot win there or anywhere else by this negative approach. Nor can there be any stability in Asia which ignores the interests of Communist China. American policy toward China has reached a dangerous dead-end. Only a thorough change of attitude can hope to extricate the U.S. from a desperate impasse largely of our own making. No settlement in Asia will be viable which does not recognize China and offer reasonable accommodation in terms of trade and aid in exchange for an independent Viet Nam and neutralization of the entire area of South East Asia.

As it is now, American effort in Viet Nam aids China and weakens the USA. The only sane course of action in Viet Nam is to work immediately for an international conference convened to hammer out a settlement through neutralization and a major shift of American and European effort from essentially military to essentially positive aid. Nothing prevents the USA and Europe from cooperating in the development of the Mekong River Valley for the benefit of all countries concerned. Nothing prevents the USA from reactivating the dying UN through massive utilization of its spcial agencies for economic and social development of all peoples in need. Nothing, that is, but the blindness of America to the real issues before the world, and a fear that loss of prestige by a shift in policy would amount to a great victory for communism.

It should be America's policy, consistent with the angels of our better nature and finer American traditions, of willing aid and cooperation with all peoples, regardless of race, creed, or political system. The USA has aided Yugoslavia and Poland, as well as Spain and Egypt; Israel and Germany, as well as Venezuela and Nigeria. Let it now offer to aid a reunited Viet Nam, guaranteed by all the great powers, even if it be a Communist Viet Nam, and to aid China in its immense tasks of development. Let it henceforth work only through the UN to aid the new countries of the world. And let it, finally, secure in its nuclear armamant, trust that national sentiment and identity is the strongest defense against Russian and Chinese communist imperialism. Let it recognize that it cannot, singlehandedly, police the world or persuade it to copy its unique form of life. There is no question of American retreat to its own shores in hurt defeat, and there is no question of threatening nuclear desolation. Neither communism nor Americanism is the wave of the human future. No one can predict that; but if history and human nature be any guide, it will be a richly heterogeneous pattern, of more than100 different nations cooperating together for the common wellfare of this one world of mankind. If we will change the glasses of the cold war for this positive vision, we will surmount the crisis in Viet Nam and may be surprised, even at this late hour, at the growth of peace and comity among nations.

Swing Shift Frosh Help Raise Enrollment Quota

Part II of a Three-Part Story
by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

The doors to UMass are closing in the face of many qualified applicants, yet every effort is being made to keep them open to as many students as is possible.

The "swing shift scholars" of the class of 1968 are one example of the University's attempt to provide an education to those who might have been neglected except for the administration's imagination and willingness to experiment.

"New England," said Pres. Lederle in U.S. News & World Report, "has been notorious for its failure to support higher education. We tended to export many of our college students to other States, and we depended on our prestigious private schools to take in others."

Lederle noted that we are very close to a year-round school but are still unable to give some qualified high-school graduates a college education.

The "swing shift scholars" did very well in the novel program, taking regular first-year courses in the humanities, sciences and social sciences during the two summer school sessions. R.O.T.C. and Physical Education were also offered to the Freshmen.

Statistics show the special freshmen to be of approximately the same ability as last year's freshmen. Their scholastic aptitude scores were a few points lower in Math and a few higher in English; their overall QP average for the summer was 2.03, compared with 1.94 for the class of '67 at the end of their first semester.

A report compiled by the provost's office suggested that the reason the class surpassed the class of '67 by .09 in cumulative average is that summer school may provide an easier transition from high school to college. The daily class pattern is much closer to what students were accustomed to in high school than that of the fall or spring term.

The majority of the faculty had favorable reactions to the work done by the students. They were called "hard working", "strongly motivated", and "earnest." The minority opinion classified them as "inferior, not emotionally prepared for college" and even "hostile and sullen."

A difficult adjustment is anticipated by some administrators as the frosh will be competing with like a voluntary system if enough enlistees can be attracted with new incentives.

The Senator is known to feel that Conservative thinking in the military and cost-conscious ness in Congress may be obstacles to a recommendation that the draft be ended, and that a Congressional vote of confidence for its elimination would strengthen the hand of those in the Executive who agree with him.

He is now beginning to collect co-sponsors for the resolution, which may come before the Senate within the next month. The public decision which it is hoped the resolution will affect is due to be announced by the President following completion of the Defense Department study in April. (CPS)

New AFROTC Program Offered — Only 2 Years — Salaried Summer Camp

A new two-year Air Force ROTC program, authorized under the ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964, has opened the door for many four-year college students to enter the officer training program.

This program is designed to permit male students, having two academic years remaining to be commissioned in the United States Air Force upon graduation. Transfer students and those having previously dropped out of the program are included.

Interested students should contact Colonel Roy Simmons, professor of air science. Arrangements will be made to take the Air Force officer qualifying test. Upon completion, students will be advised when to report for the Air Force medical examination and interview.

Selected applicants will attend a Field Training Course, designed to provide a first hand look at Air Force life and to evaluate the reactions and potentials as leaders. This six week program, salaried at $120, is the only summer camp for which attendance is required, prior to commissioning.

Those interested in joining should have applications in before the end of February.

plement Ralph's hoped for scholarship. Ralph, who has been personally soliciting contributions on campus, has received permission from the Administration to place these contributions in the now empty University Arts and Sciences Service Fund. All money placed in this fund will be used for Ralph's trip to Nigeria, or, if this trip becomes impossible, a scholarship for future University students.

Since Ralph is the first UMass student to be accepted for this program, it would be both an honor for the University and a valuable experience for Ralph if he should go. The outcome depends on your generosity. Contributions should be sent to the University Arts and Sciences Services Fund.

Honors Program Called Reward For High Scholastic Standing

by Dave Moore
Staff Reporter

Would the high calibre format of the University Honors Colloquia be a good substitute for present class discussions? "No comment" was the grinning reply from the director of the UMass honors program, Arthur Elkins.

Elkins outlined the University's two honors programs Friday before Journalism 96 seminar. He covered some of the little known theories and purposes behind the Honors Colloquia and Senior Honors. The J-96 used the interview with Elkins as class project leading to a special Collegian issue on University honors.

Outlining the Honors Colloquia, Elkins said 150 students are working in 12 sections of informal discussion groups each with 10 to 15 members.

The students, he said, are divided by classes. To be eligible a student must have either a 3.0 average or a strong recommendation from a faculty member. Freshmen are recruited on the basis of their high school class ranking and various test scores.

Elkins admitted some students with averages below 3.0 might well handle honors work and benefit from it. "We do go as low as 2.6 on 2.7," he said, "but never below this. The honors program is really a reward for those maintaining high scholastic standing."

The two faculty directors and participating students of each group are taken from mixed disciplines, Elkins reported.

"You might think at first that this would be a disadvantage to covering each topic in depth," he said. However, he explained, the advantages of tackling "typically general" subjects, of having the "Mature and scholarly attention" of faculty, and of "getting out of one's field and into a common intellectual atmosphere," more than compensate for any disadvantages.

Turning to Senior Honors, Elkins said "The Colloquia are really training periods for this work."

Recruits for Senior Honors are selected in the second semester of their junior year. Students must have at least a 3.0 average and must show a special aptitude for written work and a high probability for success. Fifty-four students are working now toward an April 15 deadline for a written piece.

Three faculty members are chosen to work with participants. The department head in whose field the student works appoints his advisor. Another department member and a faculty member from an allied department are appointed to complete the committee.

"The advisor is the one who prods the student," said Elkins, "although he may go to any of the three on his committee."

The committee reads the papers, conducts an oral examination and awards a grade. The first semester senior grade is given on the basis of progress. Students receive three credits for each semester.

Let's talk about engineering, mathematics and science careers in a dynamic, diversified company

Campus Interviews Thursday and Friday, February 25 and 26

Young men of ability can get to the top fast at Boeing. Today, Boeing's business backlog is just under two billion dollars, of which some 60 per cent is in commercial jetliner and helicopter product areas. The remainder is in military programs and government space flight contracts. This gives the company one of the most stable and diversified business bases in the aerospace industry.

No matter where your career interests lie — in the commercial jet airliners of the future or in space-flight technology — you can find an opening of genuine opportunity at Boeing. The company's world leadership in the jet transport field is an indication of the calibre of people you'd work with at Boeing.

Boeing is now pioneering evolutionary advances in the research, design, development and manufacture of civilian and military aircraft of the future, as well as space programs of such historic importance as America's first moon landing. Gas turbine engines, transport helicopters, marine vehicles and basic research are other areas of Boeing activity.

Whether your career interests lie in basic or applied research, design, test, manufacturing or administration, there's a spot where your talents are needed at Boeing. Engineers, mathematicians and scientists at Boeing work in small groups, so initiative and ability get maximum exposure. Boeing encourages participation in the company-paid Graduate Study Program at leading colleges and universities near company installations.

We're looking forward to meeting engineering, mathematics and science seniors and graduate students during our visit to your campus. Make an appointment now at your placement office.

Mt. Everest At Ballroom

"The Mount Everest Story"—an in-person graphic and narrative account of the conquest of Mt. Everest—features Dr. Maynard Malcolm Miller, tomorrow at 11:15 a.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Dr. Miller was one of the expeditionary team to successfully complete the scientific trip to the world's highest point.

The geologist's account of the trip includes the psychological aspects of man against nature as well as the scientific function of studying the high glaciers and geological structure of the high, remote border of Tibet.

patience which characterized Asiatic peoples.

He thus characterized his own position as "neither hawk nor dove, but water buffalo."

Dr. Allen lamented the unerring accuracy of America in its inevitable support of the wrong faction when the situation dictates—as in Viet Nam. He said that we mix in the internal affairs of another country.

He laid a good deal of the blame for these failures at the door of the CIA, which, he said, seems to regard bribery as the universal panacea for all the ills that might beset a nation on the internal political front.

"THE STRUGGLE IN SOUTH VIET NAM" said Dr. Allen, "is a matter of life and death. It now presents us with three possible alternatives: 1. Patience and tenacity in the face of adverse conditions; 2. Win a decisive victory now; 3. Complete withdrawal from Viet Nam with the knowledge that the whole of Southeastern Asia will fall as surely as night follows setting sun."

Diametrically opposed to Dr. Allen's Viet Nam philosophy was Dr. David Leonard, who called on Americans to perceive themselves and their foreign policy in the light of "reality".

"WE MUST PERCEIVE" he said, "that we are neither omniscent nor omnipotent; that things are not always either black or white; and that we are not always, by virtue of being American, on the side of right."

Dr. Leonard was pessimistic of both the possibility of victory in Viet Nam, and of the benefits which might be reaped as the result of such a victory.

"I am not at all sure that defeat in a limited war is something we do not need" said Dr. Leonard. He continued that perhaps "...it's time we realized we've intervened in a civil war and lost."

Press Club Inovations

by Tom Donovan
Staff Reporter

At the first meeting of the semester last Wednesday evening, the University Press Club initiated an amended constitution, made plans for weekend tours and talked over a series of luncheon seminars to feature important news personalities living in Western Massachusetts.

Assistant Faculty Advisor Alvin Oickle of the Greenfield Recorder said that the luncheon seminars originated at Boston University as "Brown Bag Seminars." Press club members hosted lunches with Boston area news personalities. Oickle said the informal atmosphere of the lunches stimulated conversation.

and the Remains from BU, played the most "recent" music and lent an informal, friendly air to the show as they sat in the radio observers' seats, used during broadcasts, and signed autographs for the girls that formed a steady line to their outpost.

Dave Gardner's group made an unpublicized appearance that let the lively tempo slow down a little. Unfortunately, Hank Ballard and the Midnighters at 7 p.m., found themselves contending with a bottom-sore group on their way to the Kopper Kettle that was deserting en masse.

BERNIE DALLAS had said the class of '66 wanted to have something different. They truly succeeded with this concert that will be remembered as one of the best of the '65 Winter Carnival at UMass. We would like to recommend making a rock n' roll concert a traditional event for the Saturday afternoon of Winter Carny.

a more heterogeonous group of students than they were in the summer.

Refering to the students who fared poorly, the Provost's report continued, "The compressed nature of the course work may have proved a liability for some." To flounder in the first few weeks of the summer school may have proved disasterous to some, as they had little opportunity to recover in the short semesters.

A host of student recommendations arose from the experimental summer program. The following changes were proposed:

Replace the two six week sessions with one 12 week session.

Set up a more adequate guidance and counseling program to facilitate the rapid adjustment that is necessary.

Abolish the all-freshman dormitory as it only lengthens the time required to adjust to the University.

Schedule more activities of a social nature.

Some found that History 5 and 6 and Math 9 were too concentrated for the brief semesters.

This sampling of the majority opinion omits responses that are counter to them and fails to account for such gripes as:

"Don't drain the pond." "Stricter quiet hours." "More intellectual life."

Trackmen Split Pair; Down Tufts, Lose to N.U.

by Terry Carpenter

At Tufts on Feb. 17, the Varsity Track Team completely overwhelmed the Jumbos, despite the absence of Junior John Medeiros, the teams top scorer.

Tufts won the opening event, the 35 lb. weight, and that was the only time they led in the meet. Doug Renwick and Paul Freedman quickly retaliated by taking one, two in the shot put. Art Larvey and Doug Sloane also took the top two spots in the broad jump, and John Hall led a sweep in the high jump. Bob Larson and Dave Sadowsky tied for second in this event. Co-capt. Sadowsky then led another sweep in the pole vault.

In the running events, Soph. Terry Carpenter continued his undefeated string in the mile run. He was followed closely by Co-Capt. Tom Panke and Bob Ramsey. The 50-yard dash was won by Art Larvey, and Doug Sloane was second. In the hurdles, Danny O'Leary took a third in the highs, and a second in the lows. Sophs Damian Goffney and Bill Thorns took one, two in the 600 meter run. Mike Sheely placed second in the 1000. Then Bob Ramsey and Bob Craigin placed one, two in the two mile event. Tufts won the relay as Coach Footrick entered his distance runners in this event. The final score was 78-35.

The tables were turned, however, at Northeastern on Feb. 20, as the Huskies won ten of thirteen events. This meet was highlighted by four broken records and two tied.

In the broad jump, Art Larvey took second and the injured John Medieros third. This was to be the only place the handicapped junior would take. Northeastern swept both the 35 lb. weight and the shot put. Carl Wallin set a meet record in this event with a mighty throw of 55'2". The Huskies then swept the high jump, but Co-Capt. Dave Sadowsky came back to win the pole vault for the Redmen with a record vault of 12'6".

In the running events Art Larvey was third in the dash as NU's Cater tied the record at 5.1 seconds. Cater then led a Northeastern sweep in the high and low hurdles. Terry Carpenter remained undefeated in the mile, while he was pushed to his own personal best time and a meet record of 4:22. Bob Ramsey placed third in this event.

Coach Footrick's trackmen, now with a 2-2 record so far this year, looks forward to the final dual meet of the year against UConn on March 3rd.

Redmen Pistol Team Pounded By Army

The mighty Army from West Point displayed all the power that made them national champs last year and the current number one team as they swamped the Redmen at West Point on Saturday by a one-sided score of 1422 to 1235. The Knights of the Hudson came within two points of their all time range record while the hapless UMass gunners rendered their poorest showing in three years. With regulars George Wietecha and Pete Thomas missing, the top shooter for U-Mass was junior Eric Mussen with 260, followed by soph Charlie Seavey with 258. Bruce Fifield also turned in a 258 and another sophomore Gordon LaChance whipped up a 238 in his first team appearance. The squad's only senior closed out the team scoring with a 221. The team averaged only 247 for the match where their average going into the match had been a fairly impressive 260.

Army showing tremendous ability didn't have a firer with les than a 280 score. Paced by senior cadet Olmsted with a 289 and All-American Jim Dickins with a 286, the other firers, all candidates for All-American honors were Kahara with 287, and Carpenter and Sendak with 280 each.

The Redmen have two matches left; the NRA Sectional Tourney at Coast Guard on February 27 and MIT and Coast Guard at New London on the 6th of March. This gives the Redmen a 15 and 5 season and a three year won-lost record of 27 and 15.

UConn Tourney Bound; Face Manhattan

NIT—hopeful Manhattan and NCAA-bound Connecticut clash in a blue ribbon basketball attraction at Madison Square Garden, Wednesday night at 7. Connecticut hopes to make it 20 wins in 22 games and 12 in a row.

Manhattan has a very respectable 12-5 record, winning seven of the last eight games. A streak of three straight losses to Army, Michigan and Syracuse at the turn of the year spoiled what might have been an outstanding season for the Jaspers.

Connecticut jaunts to Gotham with a well-balanced team that boasts of 6-8 senior Capt. Toby Kimball of Sudbury, Mass., the nation's third leading rebounder, and 6-2 sophomore Wes Bialosuknia of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., whose very fine assortment of shots nets him an average of 22 points per game. Kimball averages 19.7 rebounds and 19.3 points. Complementing this pair is a group of hustling, quick and agile ball hawks who are capable of coming up with defensive gems as well as sparks of offensive brilliance. Six-two junior Dan Hesford (10.9) of North Arlington, N.J., and 6-3 sophomore Ron Ritter (8.7) of Cranford, N.J., start up front with Kimball; while 6-0 sophomore P. J. Curran (3.7) of Elwood, Ind., and 5-11 sophomore Tommy Penders (8.3) of Stratford are considered "starters" in the backcourt with Bialosuknia.

Manhattan boasts of a solid senior lineup with an extra cast in a utility role. Six-four Larry Lembo (24.8) tops his team in scoring and his mark placed him 15th in the nation's scoring race. The other starters are 6-3 Matty Link (13-1), 6-9 Henry Chlupsa (4.6), 6-0 Len Schnappauf (12.5) and 6-2 Gary Flanagan (5.6). John Crews who stands 6-3 is also a senior. Other top spares are 6-7 sophomore Bob Shlupsa (10.6) and 6-0 junior George Bruns (8.7).

wards had 18 for UMass and Hill 11, while Chuck O'Rourke had 12 rebounds.

NIT hopeful St. John's now has a 16-6 mark while UM stands 11-10.

The last home game will be Thursday against Boston University in a rematch of the season's opener. It will be Chuck O'Rourke night, as the senior star will be honored at half time. He needs only three rebounds to set an all-time UM record and he ranks among the top five scorers in the history of the school.

Women Downed

Navy Gymnasts Upend Redmen

The United States Naval Academy gymnasts upended the U-Mass team in a tight meet held Saturday before a large Winter Carnival crowd by a 63-55 score that sunk the Redmen into last place in the Eastern Gymnastics League.

Erik Kjeldsen's squad started out like a ball of fire taking 11 points with a first, second, and fifth in the floor exercises, but was downed nine points to seven in the side horse event and then was bombed in the third event as Navy won 12 of the 16 points on the trampoline. The only two men with scores in the eights in the opening event were Dave Lizotte and Joe Parnar, both of Mass. Lizotte won with an 8.55. Steve Delesie was the highest Navy finished with a third.

THE TIDE BEGAN TO TURN in the second event when Dave Gentile won the side horse with an 8.5, way ahead of second place Dan St. John's 7.6 who came in third but Navy picked up three more points with a fourth and fifth. The Academy went ahead in the meet for good at the end of the trampoline competition. The first man up, Ron Rinker, registered an 8.3 and nobody else came very close. John Hiltabidle of Navy edged Lizotte of Mass. for second by the margin of 7.50 to 7.45. Gordon Sloat of Navy finished fourth for two points.

The Navy team boosted their slim 26 - 22 lead into ten full points after captain Wayne Durham won the high bar with a 9.25, the first of only three nines all afternoon. They also picked up the four second place markers when Butch Ziddies scored with an 8.85. Massachusetts captain Stan Brailler came in third ahead of teammate Al Carver.

The fifth event of the meet, long horse vaulting, went to Massachusetts when Al Cohen had a 9.3 score on his first vault, a hecht from the neck. His second attempt went awry, and Cohen had to sweat through two vaults by the last man up, Paul Robertson of Navy, hoping the lead would stand. Robertson had an 8.6 first time and then improved it up to a 9.05 on his second try. That was good enough for second behind Cohen. Carver took third and Gordon Pettus of Navy was fifth with an 8.80 just a whisker ahead of Pete Grosso's 8.75.

Pettus was the first competitor in the parallel bars event and his mark of 8.55 stood all the way. Delesie was second followed by St. John and Lizotte of UMass. Navy took ten points to the Redmen's six in that event to boost their overall lead to 53-43 after Cohen's long horse win had cut it back. The Midshipmen also won another ten points in the rings, the last event of the day. Mass. placed Dusenbury, Grosso, and St. John third, fourth and fifth.

GROSSO WON an additional six points for his team in the all-around competition since Navy didn't enter a man. That brought the final margin from 49 to 55.

Earlier in the afternoon the girl's team hosted a meet with teams from Braintree High, Wellesley High, and King Phillip High in Wrentham. The host team started off in good shape by placing two in a tie for second in the floor exercises, but Braintree won the side horse vaulting to take the overall team lead at the half way mark. King Phillip began to rally when they moved from fourth to third by way of a first and third on the balance beam. Charlyn Webster kept the Mass girls close with a second place finish, but King Phillip pulled past Braintree by taking the first two places in the uneven Parallel bars event. Mass. was shut out of the scoring column in that event which dropped the team into third place with a total of 19 points. King Phillip finished with 28.5 and Braintree with 24.0

UMass Skiers Down Jeffs

by Walt Swiatek

The University of Massachusetts ski team competed in two slalom events at Thunder Mountain last weekend. Due to insufficient snow cover, the originally scheduled Amherst giant slalom and the University downhill were changed to slalom events.

On Saturday the Amherst slalom course was set and forerun by Hans Forstner, a noted European racer. The 54-gate course was tight and icy and both forerunners had difficulties at times.

Amherst College carried home the honors for the first race finishing ahead of the competing teams with a total time of 461.6 seconds. Following very closely in second place was New England College with a time of 462.2 seconds. The Redmen placed third ahead of Keene, Northeastern, Tufts, Boston Univ., Boston College, Brown, and Bowdoin.

Amherst also won the first place among the individual racers as Rubenstein entered a time of 103.5 seconds.

Tom Pittendreigh came in first for the University and 5th in overall standings as he turned in two fine runs totalling 111.4 seconds. Co-capt. Tom Clark followed closely, placing 9th. Pete Plastridge finished 12th and Co-capt. Dick Woods 23rd. Walt Swiatek slipped and fell on the ice finishing 35th, and Bob Bibby fell and was unable to finish.

On Sunday the Massachusetts sponsored race was won by New England College with a very respectable time of 367.7 seconds. Keene State College placed 2nd and Northeastern, having a very good day, came in third for the event.

The University racers were seriously hampered when Co-capt. Dick Woods was unable to race and Co-capt. Tom Clark the team's first racer missed a gate and was disqualified. However good runs by Tom Pittendreigh, Pete Plasteridge, Bob Bibby, Walt Swiatek, and Don Piezga enabled the team to take fourth position defeating the seven remaining college including Amherst. It was the first time in twenty-five years that the University was able to finish ahead of the Jeffs. In previous races, Amherst defeated UMass by as little as one-half seconds out of a team time of 347 seconds.

The "B" team competed in both events finishing well. On Saturday, Brian Hendricks easily captured first turning in a time of 118.8 seconds. On Sunday, John Schmelzer finished third with 121.8 seconds.

Next Saturday promises to be a test of skill and endurance as the Redmen travel to New Hampshire for a New England College sponsored slalom.

UMass Skaters Split, Down MIT; Dropped by UNH

by Steve Ezer

In action this past week, the UMass skaters split. On Wednesday they beat MIT 8-1 and Saturday dropped a 5-1 decision to UNH.

Wednesday the team traveled to Cambridge and saw the Redmen's top scorer, Ed Pochlopek, net the "Hat Trick" in the first period. Also scoring in the first frame for UMass was Ken Palm and Jack Braim, with his first goal of the year.

In the second period Dick Feldhoff, Pete Celi, and Dick Callahan added to the Redmen lead. The lone MIT goal came at 13 minutes of the third frame on a deflection which caught netminder Bowen going the wrong way.

In addition to his three goals Pochlopek had two assists as did Rick Molander, Bill Skowyra, and Dick Feldhoff.

Saturday saw the Redmen and the UNH Wildcats tangle for the Yancon. "Beanpot." It was also the dedication of the "Whoop" Snively Arena. Snively, who died of a heart attack last April, was the UNH Hockey and Lacrosse coach as well as a football line coach. The University was reperesented at the dedication by Assistant Director of Athletics, Mr. Earl Lorden. With the dedication of the New Hampshire $600,00 Arena, this leaves the University of Massachusetts as the only Yankee Conference school without its own ice facilities. The puckmen must journey to Amherst's Orr Rink for practices and home games.

In the game which followed the dedication, the Wildcats came one fast and furious pressing, the play in the UMass end for most of the period, but scoring only twice.

Second period action saw UNH tally twice more before the Redmen's Bob Edmonston lit the redlight as he banged in a rebound for his fourth goal of the year. The second New Hampshire goal came as the Redmen were two men down.

The third period was full of rugged play and hard checking. It saw UNH score its final goal at the seven minute mark on a pile up in front of the UMass net.

Netminder Bowen played another fine game, coming up with 43 saves including 5 in situations where he was the only man to beat on breakaways. It can be said without any doubt he is one of the finest goalies in New England and when selection time comes it is hoped that he will not be passed over in balloting as in previous years.

The team next plays this Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. at home against Norwich. The Redmen wil be in a spoiler's role as they hope to nullify Norwich's bid for a spot in the ECAC Tournament. The Redmen wind up the season March 3, in the annual Town of Amherst Trophy game against Amherst College. This always proves to be an exciting game as both teams go all out to capture the large silver trophy symbolic of hockey supremacy in the Pioneer Valley.

THE NEXT HOME MEET will be on Monday, March 1, against Boston College. It will be in Boyden's Auxiliary Gym at 7:30 p.m. The Redmen meet Dartmouth at Hanover on February 24 and Wesleyan, at Wesleyan, on February 27.

Redmen Split A Pair; Assure Yan-Con Second

by John Goodrich
Sports Reporter

The University of Massachusetts split a pair of games over the last four days, downing New Hampshire 78-63, to clinch a tie for second in the Yankee Conference, and bowing to independent power, St. John's of New York, 76-58.

Against the Wildcats, the Redmen were hampered by the loss of Tim Edwards and Clarence Hill who were sitting out the game for what Coach Johnny Orr termed, "disciplinary action". Nonetheless, Co-captains Charlie O'Rourke and Charlie Kingston took charge to pull the Redmen to victory after a tight first half.

Frank Stewart and Jim Babyak were in the lineup at the start of the game as they replaced the two stars. The combination of the fresh talent and poor condtions at the field house in Durham got the club off on the wrong foot. The gym is currently being renovated, so there was very little heat in the building, and a lot of dust.

The UM players were given sweat pants for the game, and they needed them. There was no clock or scoreboard, so all reports had to be given over the microphone.

The Redmen responded to these conditions by making only three of their first 21 shots in the game. They trailed by as much as six in the early going before catching the Cats as Mike Meola and O'Rourke sank hoops to put the visitors on top, 30-27. The lead was cut to two at the half, 32-30. O'Rourke had nine points and 13 rebounds while Frank Stewart had eight for the club. Jack Zyla had 11 for the Wildcats.

The second half saw the Redmen take charge as O'Rourke continued to dominate the boards and Kingston scored 15 points.

The lead reached as much as 17 on several occasions with Kingston leading the surge. It was 62-45 with less than 10 minutes left and the Redmen coasted to their seventh win against two losses in conference action.

Kingston totaled 19 points and O'Rourke 16 along with 26 rebounds. John Lisack had 14 and Stewart finished with 12. Joe Drynon was the top scorer with 16 for the Wildcats with Zyla contributing 13 and Jim Ball 14.

The two top scorers got back into action against the New York Redmen but it was to little avail as the home forces rolled to an impressive win. The combination of Bob MacIntyre and Lloyd Dove was more than the Redmen from Mass could handle.

Massachusetts actually led through most of the first ten minutes of the game. They ran six points around the ten minute mark to move from a four point deficit to a two point lead, their last of the night, 17-15. Edwards had nine of these points, but it was Meola's hoop that put them ahead.

St. John's responded with a six point chain of their own to go on top to stay. UM stayed within six points the rest of the half, until a last second hoop put the home forces on top, 34-26.

Edwards had 13 for Massachusetts at this point, but the next high man had only five. Hill was held to two as his shooting was off in the game.

Bob MacIntyre, the younger of the brother act, had 16 points for St. John's.

The second half was just plain bad news for UMass. The club scored only six points over the first seven minutes while the home forces, celebrating the last home appearance of famed Coach Joe Lapchick, pushed through 13. That gave them a 13 point lead which was upped to as much as 22 with 10 minutes left, 59-37. The Redmen began to score again, but it was too late and only served to make the margin more respectable.

It was down to 14 but ended at 18 as the subs finished the action in a few hectic minutes.

MacIntyre finished with 26 points and Dove added 16 as well as control of the boards. Ed-

Wrestlers Down URI

by Art Keown
Sports Reporter

The UMass matmen traveled to Kingston, Rhode Island, to meet the URI Rams in an effort to win the unofficial wrestling "Beanpot" Title. After a grueling meet with the strong Rhody team the Redmen continued their record of wins by defeating the Rams 32-8.

GARY LEFORT registered the first win for UMass by downing Boren 6-3 in the 123 lb. class. Dave Balanoff received 5 team points due to a URI forfeit at the 130 lb. class. In the 137 lb. class Boris Chevone registered the fastest fall of the meet by pinning Link (URI) in 1:30. Captain Jesse Brogan, wrestling at 147 lbs., decisioned URI's Labutti 11-7 after a lively contest.

Art Keown dropped an 11-1 decision to the stronger Carlsten (URI) in the 152 lb. class, giving the Rams' their first win of the meet. In the 157 lb. class George Darling again demonstrated his ever improving wrestling by gaining a fall over Short (URI) in 8:30. Dick Howe wrestled a good match in the 167 lb. class before being pinned by Rapp (URI) in 5:15.

Dave Kelley dominated URI's Nordstrom in the 177 lb. class but was unable to register a fall. He won 9-3. Without even breaking a sweat Ralph Caisse

Gov. Volpe Appoints Two New University Trustees

by Paul Rodman
Staff Reporter

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON: Governor Volpe announced yesterday that he would not reappoint two current members of the University Board of Trustees when their terms expire this year.

They are Judge John Fox of Boston and Miss Victoria Schuck of South Hadley.

THE GOVERNOR did not announce immediately his choices to succeed the pair. Later during the day information became available to the Collegian regarding the new appointees. One is General John Maginnis, president of the Associate Alumni of the University.

"The General," as he is frequently called, is a retired Major General of the Army and a former faculty member of the University. The failure of the Governor to reappoint Fox caused some consternation in Boston, but no specific action was reported taken. Maginnis was chosen to replace Fox.

The other new trustee is Mrs. George P. Rowland of Beacon Street in Boston. Mrs. Rowland is a 1937 graduate of Bennington College and is currently a Board Member and Vice-President of the Family Service Association of Greater Boston. She is also on the Advisory Committee of the School of Social Work at Boston University.

GENERAL MAGINNIS, whose appointment was recommended by the 20,000 member Associated Alumni of the University is a 1918 graduate of the University and was on the University Faculty in the economics department from 1920-23. He is 69 years old.

Judge Fox is generally credited by legislators as being the instrumental force behind the growth of the University and UMass Boston.

Legislators of both parties expressed anger and shock at the firing of Fox.

Speaker John F. X. Davoren, Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, and former Governor Peabody chastised Volpe for firing Fox.

Pairing the failure to re-appoint Judge Fox to the Board of Trustees with the dismissal of Correction Commissioner George F. McGrath, Speaker Davoren interpreted the changes as the beginning of a "purge" of Democratic officeholders.

Senate President Donahue said he was "deeply disturbed" by the firing of Judge Fox whom he called "the most dedicated public servant in a non-paying position that I have come in contact with."

N.H. Legislature Debates Speaker - Censorship Bill

The New Hampshire Legislature is currently in hot debate over a bill which would prohibit "subversives" from speaking at state institutions.

The bill had its first public hearing Wednesday, when 14 persons spoke against it, and an equal number for it, in a four and one-half hour session before the Senate and House Education Committee.

Among those speaking against the bill was former New Hampshire governor and presidential assistant to Dwight Eisenhower, Sherman Adams.

Adams, in a rare public appearance, urged that the decision to speak at the state universities be left in the hands of the trustees.

Dr. John W. McConnell, U.N.H. president, also came out against the bill. He maintained that the bill ran counter to the practice of the best universities and was an insult to the intelligence of the university students.

Arrayed against the bill are several of the university's trustees, other educators, clergymen, and nearly all the state's daily newspapers.

Major supporters of the bill were Thomas Power, administrative assistant to Gov. John W. King, and Rep. Saul Feldman, the Manchester Republican who introduced the bill.

Power read a statement from King in which the governor described as "silly" any notion that a student must entertain a Communist on campus if he is to learn about Communism.

"It is the governor's position that the bill does not deny in any way the fundamental rights of free assembly, or free speech at U.N.H.", Power said.

Feldman, whose testimony opened the hearing, stated that the purpose of the bill is not to restrict academic freedom any-

Members of Young Independents and students from Amherst and Smith Colleges participated in a demonstration protesting American policy concerning Vietnam in Northampton on Wednesday. This was the second demonstration by students in the Four College area within the past two weeks. The Young Independents sponsored the last demonstration in which about twenty students and faculty members of the University and Amherst College participated. In the more recent march over fifty students and adults participated.

Former University Provost Named New UVM President

A former provost of the University, Dr. Shannon McCune, has been named president of the Univeristy of Vermont, effective next June.

Dr. McCune, 51, currently assistant to the president of the University of Illinois, succeeds Dr. John T. Fey who resigned last July.

As provost at UMass from 1955-1960, Dr. McCune served as chief academic officer and second in authority to then President Jean Paul Mather.

With Mather, Dr. McCune helped in the rapid development of the University in the late 1950's, particularly in the successful faculty pay raise fight in the Legislature in 1959, which marked a turning point for the institution.

Dr. McCune left UMass in 1960 when he was appointed education director of the United Nations Education Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

At Amherst, one of Dr. McCune's chief accomplishments was as chairman of the Four College Plan, which joined UMass, Amherst, Smith and Mt. Holyoke Colleges in a number of joint academic and library programs.

Poultry Grant Announced

$127,375 National Science Foundation facilities grant has been awarded to the University, Dean Arless A. Spielman, of the College of Agriculture announced.

The grant, supplied on a matching fund basis, is to be used by the department of veterinary and animal sciences to provide financial support for those portions of a new Poultry Research Center concerned with basic scientific research and for graduate training in avian biology. According to Dr. Thomas W. Fox, head of veterinary and animal sciences, these facilities will provide excellent support for basic research and graduate studies in avian genetics, physiology and nutrition.

Dr. Fox emphasized that this grant will aid in the accumulation of new knowledge in avian biology and this information will eventually be of value to the entire poultry industry. The poultry industry, with 30 million dollars in annual sales in Massachusetts, is receiving increasing emphasis as a potential source of animal protein for the developing nations of the world.

Court Reporter Cites Newspaper Influence In Criminal Cases

By Douglas Headlund

An articulate young newsman —once charged with prejudicing a jury—voiced strong convictions Wednesday on the topic, "Pre-Trial Publicity."

Don Ebbeling, court reporter for the Daily Hampshire Gazette of Northampton, told a U-Mass journalism seminar that "newspaper influence in criminal cases has been blown completely out of proportion."

"The safeguard for an unbiased jury," he said, "is the law which requires all jurors to state they have not formed an opinion on guilt or innocence before the trial begins."

Citing the reporter's difficulties in covering trials, Ebbeling said: "Some judges will not allow much of anything beyond the courtroom, while others leave you free to print everything connected with a case. The court reporter is forced to play it by ear, and hope that what he writes will be acceptable."

Ebbeling discussed many proposed news controls inspired by the controversial press coverage of the Kennedy assassination. He termed "assinine" the Philadelphia Bar Assn.'s suggestion that "press information should include only the name of the offender and the nature of the charge." This is the limit placed on British newsmen.

"But," he noted, "after a British trial has been concluded, some of their papers blow it up so big that they would make our worst tabloids read like Sunday school books."

Ebbeling suggested that much of the blame for unfair crime publicity rests with the law enforcement authorities. He quoted Harvard's Dean Griswold in substantiating the charge:

"The fault lies in police statements to the press. What is needed is a law which could hold police in contempt."

The reporter went on to give general approval to one suggestion made by the Warren Commission: "Lawyers and newsmen should combine in committee to ensure a fair trial."

"But this still leaves us with no concrete suggestion that fully satisfies both newsmen and the bar associations."

Such a rule will be hard to find, he admits. As Ebbeling said, "I knew a month ago that I would be speaking to you, and I wanted to come in with the one big answer to this problem. As much as I tried, though, I couldn't come up with it."

"The only way a definite limit will be set," he continued, "is by taking a journalistic offense to a high court."

Federal or state control of the court release would be a poor solution, concluded Ebbeling.

Said he: "The press could help by living up to a set of canons which would allow them to police themselves."

Candidate Selected For "Little Colonel" Contest

Miss Janice Ferry has been selected to represent the John Granville Squadron of Arnold Air Society in the "Little Colonel Contest" at Boston University on March 20. Here, she will compete with other candidates from New England to be the candidate from Area A-1 in the National contest to be held in Washington, D. C. Miss Ferry was selected from a field of candidates from Angel Flight of the John Granville Squadron.

Miss Ferry is a sophomore honor student at the University and an Elementary Education major. She hopes to teach the second grade upon graduation. A pert brown . eyed blonde from Arlington, she is a member of the Sigma Kappa Sorority, Angel Flight and a Junior Pan-Hel Representative.

Problems Caused By Shakespeare's Plans

"Julius Caesar," the University Theatre's next production on March 4, 5, and 6, has posed a number of problems for the technical crew. The stage must be enlarged to carry the large cast and Shakespeare's heroic action. A spectacular apron will extend the stage to the first row of Bowker Auditorium.

Jim Stockman is presiding over the magician's hat from which he expects to pull the set, lights and props for "Caesar."

The title of Technical Director gives Jim many hats to wear, but he has worn them before, and others as well.

One of Jim's hats is labelled "Safety Monitor," and he never takes that one off entirely, because it is a constant responsibility. From simply using good shop practice when driving a nail, to making sure that electrical circuits for stage lights are safely complete, to making sure that a platform can safely carry the load to be placed on it, safety is a constant concern.

Another cap says "Time and Motion Study." Actually, this is scheduling (programming to automation buffs) work in the most efficient sequence. This one is not as easy to wear as it seems for there are some frustratingly inflexible facts that Jim must consider. Flats (the units from which sets are assembled) are made by gluing muslin to lath frames. These are joined and "Dutchmanned" (a way of gluing a disguise over the gap between two pieces). Finally the set must be painted and decorated. Each of these phases involves long waits: first, for a phase to be completely dry before going on to the next step; second, for all pieces of a set to be built so that paint can be put on at one time to avoid color variances.

Plainly, Jim's two hats encompass others: Overseer of Assisting Personnel, Lighting Execution and Set Construction.

He pointed out that theatre can be a form of recreation, and the University Theatre encourages any student to participate in a production. In the backstage shop at Bartlett Auditorium, many assistants assemble who are not directly associated with the Speech Department, to work on set and props every day and most evenings.

Jim has had an energetic background in theatre. He had a half-interest in founding the Windham College Theatre. He and his classmate took over a carriage barn, and in eight incredible weeks, converted it into a 60-seat theatre. Foundations were rebuilt, beams and subflooring installed, the floor replaced, a heating plant and seats added . . . all this, for sixty dollars and gifts. After that small miracle, Jim went on to direct their first play, "Our Town."

Jim Stockman is doing Graduate work with the Speech Department, holding an A.A. from Paul Smith's College, Paul Smith, N. Y., and a B.A. with an Art major from Windham College, Putney, Vermont. Summers, he has worked with the University of Connecticut Summer Theatre, the Saranac Lake Summer Theatre, and the Colony Summer Theatre, Latham, N. Y. His principal interest is in the design and technical execution aspects of Theatre. He hopes to teach Theatre at the college level.

George Dimmock (Cassius), responds in surprise to Director Harry Mahnken's instructions in this rehearsal scene from Julius Caesar.

The University Theatre will present Shakespeare's Julius Caesar on March 4, 5, and 6 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. There will be a special matinee on March 6 at 2:15 p.m. Student tickets are $1.00 and are on sale now at the S.U. Box Office.

Behind the Scenes

UT Crew Sets Stage

by Tom Kerrigan

The University Theatre has released the names of those students who will form the technical staff of the Theatre's upcoming production of Julius Caesar.

Technical Director Terry Wells has named graduate student Ken Bordner as Stage Manager. Ken, an M.F.A. candidate from Massillon, Ohio, has also served as assistant director. He was most recently seen as the evil Gideon Bloodgood in the University Theatre's pre-Christmas show Streets of New York.

Lighting design is being done by Senior Larry Wilker who also appeared in Streets and will be seen soon in Romulus. Wilker has worked closely with Director Wells and with Master Electrician Anne Baker. Anne served in this same capacity for the Roister Doister One Act Plays in addition to doing the lighting design.

Master Carpenter is Jim Stockman, graduate student in technical and design. Sophomore Betty Corea will handle properties and Juniors Lorene Walley and David Ludlam are in charge of costume.

Director Wells commended the staff on the work already accomplished, especially in special lighting effects and in costuming. The costumes for Julius Caesar have been newly designed and constructed for this production. Designer Dale Amlund has guided the technical staff in this area.

This work that the students are now engaged in is part of the University Theatre's class room-laboratory approach to the art of the theatre. By working in the theatre and in rehearsals students complete the laboratory commitment of their Speech-Theatre courses. Under the careful instruction of staff members, students of the University learn fully that the theatre art is in the last analysis a performing art.

Their efforts and those of the entire staff will be culminated next weekend when the curtain goes up on Julius Caesar. Opening night is Thursday, March 4, with performances repeated on the fifth and sixth. Evening performances begin at 8:15 p.m. The Saturday matinee is at 2:15 p.m. Tickets are on sale from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the SU. Box Office, at $1.00 and $1.50.

China Night

International Dinner Planned

Chinese food, music, costumes, dances and art will be the attraction at the University of Massachusetts on Saturday, Feb. 27 at 8 p.m. when the UMass International Club presents its third annual international dinner.

"China Night," to be held in the Student Union ballroom, will feature an address by Ting fiu Tsiang, Nationalist Chinese Ambassador to the United States.

The International Club, in previous years has put on similar events featuring the Philippines and Arabian countries. The Club draws its members, mostly graduate students and scholars, from 42 foreign countries represented at UMass.

Help, Where Are They?

by Tom Donovan
Staff Reporter

When was the last time you went to the clothing store to buy some ordinary, run of the mill dungarees . . . and couldn't find any?

You ask the salesman for some dungarees and get the reply, "Well, over here we have some real nice Levis, Tapered, stretchy, pegged, 'hip-hugging'—real Continental."

You tell him you just want some regular dungarees you can wear to fix the car, when you go fishing, when you clean out the cellar or put up the storm windows. "Yes sir. Over here are our own Knockabouts. As you see, they're tapered to fit the trim outdoor man. They are also genuine imitation corduroy in the smart new thin rib design. They're advertised in Playboy."

You tell him that you are overweight and just want some dungarees. You don't really care if they don't fit well. He looks puzzled. He shows you more of the same and as you leave he says he is sorry he doesn't have quite what you are looking for.

Doubts gather. Is there a conspiracy in the clothing industry? Some powerful force has . . . but no. That's just wool-gathering. It's probably just the heat today, or the long drive into town, or staying up late to balance the budget. What an idea for a grown man to entertain. The next store will have just what I want.

A short time later you walk into another store. Beltless Slim Jims. You are assailed by Desert beige, chestnut brown, coconut tan, Caribbean blue, powder blue, Jungle green, olive green, muted plaid. No plain, everyday dungarees.

More doubts gather. That is odd, isn't it? Wouldn't it be something if there were some kind of unknown conspiracy to do away with something as simple and somehow necessary as good old dungarees. Well, there is bound to be a store here somewhere that has my dungarees.

Late that afternoon you drive from the city, without your dungarees. Yes, there is a quiet, pervading lack of those old-style dungarees around.

It's got to be a big city thing. All dungarees just couldn't have vanished, disappeared. I'll swing down through the country on my drive home. It's a nice relaxing drive and, besides, I can, well, assure myself. The farmers out there always wear those old dungarees . . .

The drive is relaxing you. The broken white lines flutter by; the tires drone like summer bees. What a beautiful day; it almost makes you forget those dungarees. Those dungarees. Wait, you see a farmer standing beside his tractor close by the road. His dungarees will be torn, patched, paint-spattered.

As you drive by he is picking up some highway trash, and his wash-and-wear Hip Huggers are desert beige.

After a while, you turn the car around and drive back to town. Jungle green doesn't look all that bad.

IBM Plans Orchard Hill Date Night

by Mike Shuman

Well, the Great God IBM has been scheduling your classes, telling you where to live and eat, and telling you how poorly your grades are going. The Coup de Grace is close at hand! It has been announced that the Orchard Hill Complex (you know, those dorms way up in East Elephant Breath) is going to hold a Four dorm mixer . . . and guess who's going to make the dates for this event! Right, that flashing, blinking bane of the college student—the IBM Machine.

This electronic fiasco will operate thusly: standard forms will be handed out to all interested on the hill. The forms will ask leading questions about such things as how you like to dance, what kind of music you prefer, the extent of your introvertedness, and (get this) how liberal your dating views are. Students will choose a number from 1 to 9, telling the strength of their opinions. Then, that good old mass of wires and components will select the "perfect" match for each anxious little UMie.

Finally, on the day of the mixer, men will be issued cards telling them which dorm to report to for the mixer (it will be in two sections), where to pick up their date, and the number of their date (no names). The now shaking fellow will then go to the dorm, and order his date, Tastee Tower Style.

With two good bands playing, it promises to be a swinging, compatible time for one and all. Orchard Hill Residents, don't miss what promises to be the biggest success since Secret Santas!

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Of Thieves and Vandals

Theft and vandalism are problems which plague every college campus. UMass is no exception to the rule. However, it is high time that many University students develop a sense of decency and respect for the property of others.

Last week a valuable pot was stolen from the ceramic display in the counter of Bartlett Hall. What is tragic about the theft is the fact that the pot did not belong to the art department but was borrowed for the purpose of the ceramic display.

Undoubtedly, many students would be quick to suggest tighter security as a solution to the problem of theft and vandalism. However, it would be virtually impossible to have police watch art exhibits day and night. Nor would it be possible to relocate the exhibits without losing much of the audience in the process.

The best remedy to the problem is for students to do their own house cleaning by immediately reporting vandals and thieves. Art exhibits are displayed for the benefit of the entire student body. If they are damaged or stolen the entire student body suffers. First of all, thefts and vandalism tend to discourage future attempts at art exhibits. Secondly, theft and vandalism soil the reputation of the University as a whole.

Since the irresponsible acts of a few individuals can besmirch the good standing of the entire student body, it is up to the student to take an active interest in the apprehension of offenders. To this suggestion many students will cry out that they don't want to resort to being "squealers" and "stool pigeons."

Yet, the essence of community policing is not to dig up dirt for the sake of dirt, but rather to protect the rights of all. Moreover, a student who sees theft and vandalism committed and does nothing to prevent it is just as quilty as the offender himself.

Before theft and vandalism spread on this campus, students should unite in a combined house cleaning effort. A conscientious student body would prove to be the University's best security force.

Subject - Object Dichotomy

"Man soars the comprehensive in the medium of the determinate object." So you have it — Truth with a capital "T". The so called campus intellectuals exhibit their inflated "egoes" by defining vague terms in even more vague terms and deriving a different meaning for the same terms in the separate works of different philosophers. The 100 IQ average American gets the same sense of achievement solving TV guide crossword puzzles. Yet, the campus intellectuals would have the average students hold him in awe — his achievement being his ability to explain lack of meaning in terms of the meaningless.

Truth need not only be philosophical. There are other forms of abstractions which distinguish the elite from the non-elite. The ability to appreciate classical music and the recognition that all other forms of "music" are infectious is another form of "closed Truth".

Let me direct the attention of the "intellectual" and the "cultural elite" to the campus' less blessed. In Greenough, there is a 3.4 business major who fails to meet the set standards because he is concerned with truth other than the Truth. Believing college should teach one perseverence in light of tasks one would rather not do, he studies constantly. His only extracurricular activity while on campus is reading John D. Rockefeller, The Affluent Society, or a book of simiiar interest and occasionally discussing labor satisfaction through a better working environment. He arranges to visit successful businesses on consecutive days when off campus for one-week vacations. During the summer, he runs his own "small" business which he financed himself and which employs other college students. During the summer months, he acquires an income which the average non-skill Union man would be glad to make. Thus, he has his own truth in place of the intellectual's "subject - object dichotomy of the comprehensive".

There is another student on campus who can play a piano and direct an orchestra at the same time. He began playing when he was about eight. He is now, in his free time, directing a musical show at a near-by college and one in Boston, in addition to giving music and voice lessons, providing an orchestra for the shows which he directs and playing the piano during each show.

One can find a method of less false ego building in the abilities and successes of such students. One cannot be a Jack-of-all-trades if he wishes to be the best in one. Let the campus intellectuals ask themselves what they have accomplished in terms of meaning to themselves or anyone else. Let them try to answer in the comprehensive words of a concrete language.

— Longer Library Hours —

The University library proved an inconvenience to many faculty and students over the holiday weekend. The library closed its doors for an "academic holiday" at 5:00 on Saturday, remaining closed all day Sunday and Sunday night, closed until 2:15 Monday, and closed again at 10 a.m. Monday night.

Thus, the library demonstrates its fairly "closed" concept of its place in an academic community. It was only two years ago that library hours were grudgingly extended from 10 to 12 p.m., first on a trial basis, and then regularly when the need was proved.

Now, with 10,000 students, plus faculty on campus, it is time to make further revisions of library hours. Although it may only be a small percentage of people who would use the library during the hours it is now closed, a small percentage of 10,000 would still constitute substantial need for extended hours.

The library should stay open Saturday night (at least until 10), and open Sunday morning. Extended holidays (as the Sunday off this weekend) must go!

It is paradoxical that of all the facilities on campus, the library, so indicative of the quality and standards of a university, should be closed with so little excuse.

The Collegian will gladly poll students and faculty to demonstrate the need for improved library hours. It is hoped that this comment and others that are sure to come, will soon prompt the changes that have been suggested.

CUME EDITORIAL EVALUATED

To the Editor,

I should like to briefly respond to an editorial which appeared in the February 24 issue of the Collegian. The editorial in question was entitled "The Authority to Judge".

The author of this editorial, in my opinion, failed to give a fair hearing to the "cume" bill, those who are inclined to favor it, or to the Senate. I respect his right to take a position on this matter if he so desires. However, I do believe that he showed an immature attitude by not consulting with those on the Ad-Hoc committee who disagree with his view or are inclined to disagree with it. If the author had been sincere in his desire to hear the case for a "cume" bill, he should have consulted those who disagree with him. In this case, however, he stooped from the level of an editorial writer to that of a mere propagandist uninterested in giving the opposition a fair hearing. For this reason alone, his opinion should be discarded as mere bias.

The Ad-Hoc committee was set up to look into the case for and against a required cumulative average for officers of certain organizations. The Senate was completely within its authority in setting up this committee. I do not believe that any member of the committee has arrived at a decision in this matter. When all of the arguments have been heard, we shall then make a decision which we have the power and the right to do. Before anyone points his finger in an accusing manner, it would be appreciated if he would wait until the facts are in.

Senator Gary Bombardier, Member
Ad-Hoc Committee on Cumulative Average Requirement

Editor's Note: The Collegian is very much opposed to any form of cumulative average requirements being imposed upon a candidate for any student leadership position. It is felt that such a measure would not reflect the wishes of the student community. It is suggested that the issue be decided by a general referendum on the April ballot. Incidentally, the author consulted with Mr. Ross Jones, the Chairman of the committee, prior to publication.

Spring Track Meets In Question

To the Editor:

There is a situation regarding one of the athletic teams which should be brought to the attention of the University community. The track team does not have a track!

In the past, the student body has evidenced consistent interest in the team's performance. The team's home meets had always been well attended. Seemingly, however, administration policy has arbitrated against the continuation of home track meets.

The indoor track team has had no home meets since early 1963 and this will continue as long as nothing is done to alleviate the present circumstances. Also, there are no home meets on the schedule for this year's outdoor track team.

When the new basketball floor was installed in Curry Hicks to expand the Cage's capacity to its present size, no provision was made for the track team who had regularly been holding their meets there. The main reason the team could no longer have its meets in the Cage was that the new floor was not large enough to contest the dash and hurdle events upon. Prior to the discontinuation of the meets, the team had been holding part of its meets at the Amherst College Cage, notably the pole vault and broad jump events. In any case, the "renovation" of the Cage resulted in the ending of home meets indoors.

Now that the football team is to tenant the new stadium, presently under construction, Alumni Field will be torn up for a new administration building. Consequently no more track meets will be held there. What is more, there will not be any home meets at all this outdoor season because there has been no provision made for a track in the plans for our costly new stadium. There was also no provision made for the team in the ultra-modern, multi-million dollar Boyden Gymnasium, purported to be one of the finest and largest physical educational and athletic plants in the country. It has been brought to our attention that the master plan for the University includes a new cage (presumably with track facilities) and an outdoor track. However, no specific dates as to the completion of these facilities has been mentioned. The stock answer is "soon". How soon? Certainly not this year, probably not the next. The year after that?

Probably no one is personally responsibie, certainly this situation has not been intentionally brought about. However it has happened, the results are bad for the team. With no home meets to look forward to, the team has had the demoralizing experience of being constantly on the road for all of their meets. While we, the undersigned, have no objection to the expansion of the University, we do feel that a more concientious evaluation of the effects of this expansion should be made.

Art Theft

To the Editor:

On Wednesday evening of last week a work of art was stolen from the exhibition of Paul Berube's ceramics in the lobby of Bartlett Hall. The exhibit was arranged for the faculty, staff, area residents—and especially for the students—in good good faith that it would be accepted for its aesthetic value as well as for its educational function.

The gravity of this theft leads members of the art department to question the wisdom of continuing our series of exhibitions, in spite of the fact that we consider them essential to the training of our students and of value to anyone wishing to broaden his perspective. We find it unfortunate that something important to the majority should be sacrificed because of the dishonesty of the minority. At the same time we will now hesitate before asking an artist to show his works here.

Mr. Berube, of the University faculty, has been extraordinarily patient in regard to the theft. Nevertheless, he finds the loss of this particular work embarrassing, as he had borrowed it from a private collection for his one-man show. Whether or not one respects the works of art placed on exhibit, we believe, he should at least respect other people's property.

We should be grateful if anyone knowing the whereabouts of this pot (described and illustrated on page 1) would take action to see that it is returned.

Geologist Offers Advice For Prospective Mountain Climbers

by Ray Abbott
Staff Reporter

"Wait until you're thirty to come to Everest." These were the words of advice given by Dr. Maynard Malcolm Miller, Professor of geology at Michigan State University and a member of the 18-man team that tackled Mt. Everest in 1963.

Speaking Thursday before a gathering of about seventy-five students in the Commonwealth Room, Dr. Miller said that a twenty-five year old man is too young for Everest. He explained that his twenty-five year old assistant almost died on the mountain. The cause, said Miller, was a lack of oxygen which strangely seems to strike younger men. It seems that younger men think they are invincible and push themselves too hard and fast and consequently their bodies cannot adjust properly.

"For the same reason," said Dr. Miller, "A man under thirty is too young to land on the moon." He explained that by the time this decade ends man will be probing the surface of the moon. He said the National Space Agency helped support the efforts of the Everest team because NASA is interested in insights of man under stress. The Everest journey provided such insights, said Miller.

He explained that as they approached the mountain after a difficult 200 mile journey, the environment became hostile. But as difficult as conditions were at that time, said Miller, what we remembered most was the compassion of the native people. "They have learned something about humility," he said.

Miller found climbing most difficult low on the mountain—18,000-20,000 feet, "But this was not a normal mountain or a normal expedition," he expained.

Tragedy struck on March 23, 1963, when a block of ice rolled over three men, killing one. This accident reinforced their determination, for they had to climb the mountain, if only for a memorial to their fallen member.

At 27,200 feet the high camp was established. At this altitude winds reached 80-100 miles per hour, he explained, but still a small group pushed on to the summit.

After reaching the summit, the party decided to assault the West Ridge of the summit previously labeled unreachable. Here winds were gusting at 140 miles per hour, but still at 4:00 p.m. on May 23 part of the expedition conquered to the top.

Use of Drugs at Cornell Under Investigation Again

For the second time in less than two years, an investigation of the use of marijuana by Cornell University students has been undertaken.

No arrests have been made yet, but James A. Perkins, Cornell President, said that "several" students were using marijuana and that the university viewed with "utmost concern" its availability and use by "even a few students."

Recent reports have indicated an increasing use of marijuana among college students throughout the nation. One leading educator has commented that, "Undoubtedly more students are smoking marijuana than there were five years ago." Specific instances in the Massachusetts area have been reported from Brandeis University and the University of Massachusetts. Two students were convicted at UM last year, one for possession and the other for sale of narcotics.

Cornell began the investigation when they were notified that a student at Connecticut College for Women in New London had allegedly obtained marijuana from a Cornell campus source. The Connecticut student became ill and a preliminary investigation by her college traced the drug to Cornell.

In 1963, on the same day that Perkins was inaugurated as president, an earlier marijuana scandal swept the Cornell campus. That investiagtion, however, resulted in no convictions and cases against two students were dropped because of insufficient evidence.

During the past two years, 13 young people, including students at Cornell and Ithaca College, have been arrested in a continuing investigation of marijuana traffic in the college community.

College spokesmen declined further comment until the district attorney reported findings from his investigation.

Elsewhere, three men were convicted recently on charges of peddling narcotics in the neighborhood of Harvard Square in Cambridge, Mass.

Officials at Harvard have privately expressed moral and civic concern about student use of marijuana, but they are understood to believe that the use of the drug is more a matter of youthful experimentation.

Harvard students estimate that from one-fifth to one-half of the 12,500 students studying at the university have tried marijuana while in Cambridge. Administration spokesmen state privately that they have no idea how many students might be involved.—(CPS)

vitality

Robert Bowen
B.S., Southwestern Univ.
M.B.A., Harvard Univ.

Critical importance and vigor are fused into this one meaningful word, vitality. What does this mean to you?—a graduate about to make the major decision of career selection. By selecting a company with vitality, you'll find more challenging and rewarding work. Ford Motor Company is such a firm.

At our Company, you'll have the advantages and resources of a large corporation, along with the high degree of personal responsibility you'd expect in a small one. For our Company is composed of many small management teams, each with responsibility for a specific activity. Activities so vital, they can affect hundreds of jobs and involve millions of dollars. You play in the big leagues—early—at Ford Motor Company. An example: Bob Bowen's experiences in marketing.

Early in Bob's career, he helped prepare comprehensive reviews of our current and planned marketing activities. He also studied special problems in market representation. Later, he was assigned to one of our Product Planning Offices. Here, future vehicle concepts are explored with accompanying financial, marketing and production factors. Market research is conducted to determine trends in customer preferences. Critical data like this led to the design and development of the highly successful Mustang.

Maybe vitality is what you've been seeking in a position—and in an employer, too. We also offer the opportunity for early responsibility and the pay that goes with it. See our representative for the complete story when he visits your campus.

Amherst, Mass. — Dr. Thomas R. Stengle of the University of Massachusetts chemistry department inspects a vial of water that is formed from a special isotope of oxygen.

Water Now Costs $12,000 For Researcher's Work

Water more expensive than the costliest perfume?—Yes, but not for romance, only for research.

That's what two scientists, one from UMass, the other from Amherst College, have to work with—water that costs $12,000 an ounce.

Dr. Thomas R. Stengle of the UMass chemistry department and his collaborator, Dr. Cooper H. Langford of the Amherst College chemistry department, are using the water to investigate the interaction between metal salts and solvents.

THEY ARE SUPPORTED by a $25,000 grant recently awarded to UMass by the Air Force Office of Scientific Research.

As might be expected, this special water doesn't flow from a tap. In fact, it is available from only one place in the world—the Weisman Institute in Israel.

What makes the water special is that it contains an oxygen isotope that differs slightly from regular oxygen. Thus when a molecule of oxygen isotope is added to two molecules of hydrogen, the result is a slightly different kind of water.

Drs. Stengle and Langford are engaged in "pure" research, with no forseeable practical application. But they hope their work will produce a key to unlock the secrets of the nature of solutions.

UM Student Reaction Varied On Recent Civil Rights Conference

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

The civil rights conference held two weeks ago was billed as "an educational endeavor" by its sponsors; it was not a recruiting movement but a forum of the committed planned to probe the question of "Civil Rights: Reform or Revolution?"

Because the conference was not designed to capture the general interest of the University community, the University reaction died rather quickly after the delegates left campus.

Victor Aronow, one of the UMass student organizers of the conference, reported that there was some unfavorable reaction among the student body. "Some felt that there was not enough Christianity in the conference," he said, adding, "A few felt that it was run by Reds and others sensed that it was being done for publicity."

The Collegian has not received any letters-to-the-editor in the wake of the conference.

There are many conferences held on the campus throughout the year and students may have felt that this was just another one—and just one week before the big event—Winter Carnival Weekend.

There were no demonstrations on the campus but a spirited group of delegates gathered in the Student Union Saturday. While waiting for lunch to be served, they started to sing "freedom songs." Comments from spectators ranged from "It gets me inside to hear them sing to 'Nuts, don't they ever get haircuts?'"

Though the civil rights movement is directed primarily toward the problems of the Negro, there is a program in the 4-college area directed toward the culturally deprived, and another offering tutorial services for the academically deprived.

Junior and senior high school students in culturally deprived sections are reciving the tutorial services of the Northern Educational Service.

Jeff Davidow, president of Adelphia (senior men's honor society), noted that the students who have received this cultural broadening are probably better off than many of their peers, entering college freshmen. He explained that under the cultural program students take field trips to the area's colleges for concerts, plays, athletic events and general tours. "In both programs the association with college students is equally, if not more important, than the actual content of the tutorial session or field trip."

Proposed Tax Bill Would Benefit Student Taxpayers

Parents and students are due to benefit from a proposed bill presented Monday by Rep. Odin Langen (R-Minn.)—if it's passed.

Tuition, books and fees would be exempt and could be claimed as deductions under the bill, which includes a sliding scale to benefit those who can least afford higher education.

At present, students, who earn part of their expenses, get a tax break under the Revenue Act of 1964. They may earn $900 without owing any federal income tax.

The law now allows the usual $600 personal exemption plus a $200 minimum standard deduction plus $100 for each dependent exemption. In the case of a married couple the total would be greater.

A tax return must be filed if earnings are more than $600 however. A return should be filed anyway, the Internal Revenue Service notes, if the student is entitled to a refund on taxes withheld.

"Dining In" Ceremonies To Be Held

The Air Force department at UMass will hold a Dining In ceremony in the SU Ball room, March 1 at 7:00 p.m.

The custom of Dining In, a formal dinner function for members of a military organization or unit, is a very old tradition presumably originating in England early in the nineteenth century. It is always a "stag" function with prescribed procedures, held with the highest military protocol and conduct and is considered a military formation.

The Air Force Dining In provides a situation in which cadets may see how ceremony and tradition play an integral part in the life of personnel in a military unit. It also provides an occasion for the Detachment Staff, Wing Staff, and cadets to meet socially at a military function.

The guest speaker for the evening will be Brigadier General Thomas B. Whitehouse, who is the Vice-Commander of the 26th Air Division, located at Stewart Air Force Base, New York. This organization is responsible for the aerial defense of the entire New England area.

Among the honored guests will be the Commander of the Air National Guard, the officers of the Airborne Early Warning & Control squadron and University officials.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

Key games were played Wednesday night that will probably determine the major opponents in the Intramural basketball playoffs. The Webster Hawks, the leader of the North dormitory league, defeated the Gorman Elms, winners of the West dorm league, by a score of 55-42. The Hawks were lead by Chet Zabek who scored 20 points and pulled in eight rebounds. The Hawks will now go on to play the Chadbourne Maroons Monday night to determine the Dorm championship.

In Independent league action it was a meeting of the undefeateds. Vicky's 202's remained that way as they dumped the Inn Keepers 46-28. However, in a major upset the Eagles led by Dick Hale with 20 points and Greg Landry with 15, beat the PE Majors 65-55. The game was played under tense circumstances and turned out to be a well fought ballgame. The Independent league champ shapes up as a meeting between these two victorious teams with the edge going to the more experienced Vicky's.

The IFC league proved to be a battle for the second, third and fourth playoff spots as Kappa Sig, Theta Chi and TKE are all tied with 12-2 records. Lambda Chi, the fraternity champion through the regular season, will meet Theta Chi, and KS will play TKE in the opening round of the IFC playoff. The winners of these games will play to decide the IFC champion. By the records, a safe bet would see LCA go all the way in this league, but TKE could pull a major upset. The championship game will be played March 8. In all probability it looks like a pairing of LCA and Vicky's.

Wednesday night the dorm champs will play the Independent league champs. The IFC championship will also be held that night. Get the remainder of those All-star ballots into the IM office as quickly as possible.

This past week the Redmen dropped three of four, all their losses coming at the hands of strong foes. Army, with Rhodes scholar Bill Rich at center and high scoring Mike Sillimin at guard, rolled by 20 past UMass, and Holy Cross led by John Wendelikin's 29 points, 15 straight from the line, easily downed the Redmen. Last Saturday night, the Wildcats of New Hampshire fell prey to an inspired but Hillless and Edwards-less UMass five. Led by Charlie O'Rourke and Charlie Kingston, the Redmen walloped UNH 93-78. Wednesday night, UMass traveled to New York to do battle with Joe Lapchick's powerful St. John's unit. Led by Bob McIntyre and Lloyd "Sonny" Dove, 6' 7" sophomore sensation, Lapchick's five clouted the Redmen 76-58 as a tribute to their coach in his last home game.

New England's Top Five
1. Providence
2. UConn
3. B. C.
4. Holy Cross
5. UMass

Despite Providence's big loss to Villanova, the Friars still rank No. 1 in New England. The only change has the Redmen dropped from fourth to fifth place after their loss to the Crusaders.

The East's Top Five
1. St. Joseph's
2. Providence
3. Villanova
4. Army
5. N.Y.U.

St. Joseph's sophomore-studded unit of Cliff Anderson, Matty Gukas, and Billy Oakes with a 22-1 record, ranks first in the East. The Friars of Providence, coached by Joe Mulhaney, still remain second even though they were trounced by Villanova. Led by "The Mayor of Smith Hill", Jamie Walker and cousin Bill Blair, the Friars rolled to 19 straight victories with wins over powerful Iowa, Creighton, and St. Joseph's. Providence's starting unit is composed of two junior's, Jim Benedict and Blair and three sophomores, Walker, 6' 7" Dexter Westbrook, and Mike Riordan. Villanova ranks third mainly due to the efforts of center Jim Washington and Bill Melachioni. The Wildcats are 19-4 on the season now and have accepted a bid to the NIT. Villanova's big win over Providence was largely due to Washington's 21 points and 17 rebounds. Army, after a big win over N.Y.U. last Saturday, ranks fourth and N.Y.U. led by playmaker McKenie and shooter Rich Kaplan rank fifth.

19 points and 12 rebounds, which makes him the number five scorer in the history of UMass.

In the halftime festivities, Bill Rasmussen served as MC and introduced O'Rourk's Amherst Boys' Club coach, Steve Kosakowski, his high school coach, Charlie Abramson, and his two college coaches, Matt Zunic and Johnny Orr. Rasmussen then read wires from Rep. Edward Boland and Senator Ted Kennedy as well as Celtic Coach Red Aurbach. Speaker of the House John Davoren and Maurice Donahue, president of the senate also sent wires. O'Rourke received gifts from the golf team, the basketball team, and the people of the town of Amherst and the University. O'Rourke then made a short speech to thank all those who had helped here in town and at the University.

field placed Jeff Zimmerman first on the rings with a 9.55, the highest score of the meet. Peek scored with a 9.4, and Ross third with an 8.55. Pete Grosso was the only Redman to break eight in the event with an 8.15 for fourth. Dusenbury took the one point for fifth. Grosso added six points to the Mass. total in the all-around event. The Maroons didn't enter a man, although Bob Cargill was in every event but the rings with an overall average of 9.1 and four firsts and a fourth for 26 points.

On Campus with Max Shulman
(By the author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!", "Dobie Gillis," etc.)

ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH

Today I begin my eleventh year of writing this column in your campus newspaper.

I wasn't sure I'd be coming back this year. After a decade of doing this column, I had retreated to my country seat, tired but happy, to enjoy a nice long rest. But last night as I sat on my verandah, peaceful and serene, humming the largo from A Long Day's Night and worming my dog, a stranger suddenly appeared before me.

He was a tall, clean-limbed man, crinkly-eyed and crooked-grinned, stalwart and virile. "How do you do," he said. "My name is Stalwart Virile and I am with the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade people."

"Enchanted," I said. "Take off your homburg and sit down." I clapped my hands sharply. "Norman!" I called. "Another chair for Mr. Virile!"

"Another chair for Mr. Virile!"

Obediently my dog trotted away and returned directly with a fanback chair of Malayan rattan. He is the smartest dog in our block.

"I suppose you're wondering why I am here," said Mr. Virile, seating himself.

"Well, sir," I replied, my old eyes twinkling roguishly, "I'll wager you didn't come to read my meter."

You can imagine how we howled at that one!

"That's a doozy!" cried Mr. Virile, finally catching his breath. "I must remember to tell it to Alice when I get home."

"Your wife?" I said.

"My father," he said.

"Oh," I said.

"But enough of wit and humor," he said. "Let us get down to business. How would you like to write a campus column for Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades?"

"For money?" I said.

"Yes," he said.

"My hand, sir," I said and clasped his. Warmly he returned the pressure, and soft smiles played upon our lips, and our eyes were moist with the hint of tears, and we were silent, not trusting ourselves to speak.

"What will you write about in your campus column?" asked Mr. Virile when he was able to talk again.

"I will take up the burning issues that vex the American undergraduate!" I cried, bounding to my feet. "I will explore, without fear or favor, such explosive questions as 'Are roommates sanitary?' and 'Should proctors be given a saliva test?' and 'Should capital punishment for pledges be abolished?' and 'Can a student of 19 find happiness with an economics professor of 80?'"

"And will you also say a pleasant word from time to time about Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades?" asked Mr. Virile.

"Sir," I said simply, "what other kind of word except pleasant could I possibly say about Personna Blades, which give me more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other blade I might name?"

"Another of my products is Burma Shave," said Mr. Virile. "Can you find it in your heart to mention Burma Shave occasionally?"

"But of course!" I declared. "For is not Burma Shave the whitest wittingest lather in the land?"

"Yes," he admitted.

And then he shook my hand again and smiled bravely and was gone—a tall silhouette moving erectly into the setting sun. "Farewell, good tonsorialist!" I cried after him. "Aloha!"

And turned with a will to my typewriter.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Springfield Tops Gymnasts; Cohen Lone UMass First

Springfield College's superlative gymnastics team swept every second place position and all but one first on Tuesday night when they soundly beat UMass 83-35 in the last dual meet of the season for each team.

The Maroons had tremendous depth in every event. Only a victory by Al Cohen, the most dependable Massachusetts performer all season, in the long horse vaulting, a third by Dave Lizotte on the parallel bars, and a disqualification by Springfield's Jay Otto on the trampoline prevented the Maroons from sweeping the top three spots in all seven events.

Springfield had its two top men in the nines in the floor exercises and Ken Henderson scored an 8.85 that was more than good enough for third. Joe Parnar of the host team came in fourth. The story repeated itself on the side horse when Steve Ross won with a 9.2 over teammate Tom Auchterlonie. Dan St. John's fourth was the highest UMass placing. The Maroons took the trampoline when Bob Cargill, the last man up, scored an 8.75. Rick Black was second with third, fourth, and fifth going to Al Carver, Lizotte, and St. John.

Springfield took another sweep in the horizontal bar competition. Cargill registered a 9.35, Captain Doug Alt a 9.05 and an 8.90 for Black to pick up 13 more points and boost the score to 49-15. Carver was the high Mass. man in that event.

The Redmen broke through the Springfield ranks in the long horse when Al Cohen bested Henderson's 9.1 and Black's 9.2 with a 9.4 score on his second vault. Black was the final contestant in the event and he recorded a 9.2 on each jump. Cargill also scored a nine even for the best overall showing in a single event by the Maroons despite not taking first place.

Lizotte scored an 8.55 as last competitor on the parallel bars to edge Bob Castin of Springfield out of the top three. Cargill won with a 9.2 and Ron Peek took second. Jim Dusenbury was fifth for Mass. The meet ended with another sweep as Spring-

Redmen Down BU In Final Home Game

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts won its final home game of the season on Chuck O'Rourke night by downing Boston U., 87-83. Playing a most unusual game, the Redmen nearly bowed to the Terriers' late surge, but O'Rourke scored the last three points to save the win.

Boston U. managed to get the spread up to three, 42-39 at the half. Clarence Hill broke a scoring slump over the last two games as he hit 14 points in the first half. He had plenty of help from Edwards who had 13 and eight rebounds.

O'Rourke had only a fair first half, but came up with 8 points and four rebounds. The third with 14:26 left in the half gave O'Rourke the all time career record, eclipsing the mark of Doug Grutchfield who had 783.

After the festivities at halftime, the team came out intent on getting a win for Chuck on his last appearance in Amherst. They never took the lead to stay until there was 15:30 left. A basket and foul shot by Edwards put UM on top 5-49. Hoops by Mike Meola and O'Rourke put the home forces on top by five, a lead they managed to maintain most of the way down the stretch.

After two foul shots by Dick Moreshead cut it to three, O'Rourke scored on a jump shot, Hill made two free throws and a basket, and Frank Stewart scored on a foul shot to make the lead 62-52 with 11 minutes left in the contest.

From there the lead ranged from 8 to 12 points until UMass went on top by 14 with just over two minutes left, 83-69. From there, the Terriers began to find the range again. Randy Cross hit a pair of foul shots, and Wally Birchler scored a basket. Edwards countered with a foul shot to put the lead at 11.

Cross had two more foul shots, Ken Ackerman scored on a short jump, Ackerman hit again on a drive, Cross scored on a 20 foot jump shot. This made the lead only three, 84-81, with 30 seconds left.

Charlie Kingston drove for the basket, but fed O'Rourke for the layup. Cross countered again with a jumper, and UM got the ball only to loss it on a steal by Tom Zavorskas, but he missed the shot and O'Rourke was fouled at the buzzer. He made one to finish off his career and the game.

For the game, O'Rourke had

Women Swimmers Victorious

Last Thursday, the UMass women's swim team won their first home meet of the season by defeating Mt. Holyoke 41-35.

It was an exciting meet, with UMass trailing by one point going into the last event, the 200 yd. Freestyle relay. With Sandy Whitehead pulling the teams up even, and Ellen Megill swimming anchor, it was an easy victory, and gave UMass the meet.

Ellen Megill also swam to an easy victory in the 100 yd. individual medley with a time of 1.14:0. Others taking firsts for UMass were Sandy Whitehead in the 50 yd. Freestyle with a time of 30.2, Ellen Megill in the 50 yd. Back, time 33.3, and Barb Leary 50 yd. Breaststroke in 40.5 seconds.

Saturday, the team travels to Wellesley College, looking for another victory.

A stirring book by the Director of the Peace Corps and the War on Poverty

POINT OF THE LANCE by Sargent Shriver

16 pages of illustrations

At all bookstores. Cloth, $4.95. Paper, $1.45

"This book combines the vision and hardheaded, practical touch of its author, one of the ablest new figures in public life of our generation. It is a book to give courage and hope to the anxious and fearful, and to confirm the faith of those who see what a great future lies before mankind. If Sargent Shriver's ringing words could be read by millions — as I hope it will be — it would advance the cause of peace and tell Americans more about their true selves than any book I have seen in many a year. It is a distinguished and thoughtful book by a shining personality." — DAVID E. LILIENTHAL

Governor's Ousting of Fox Arouses Criticism

Reprinted from Boston Herald
by David Farrell

Gov. Volpe didn't hurt Norfolk Probate Judge J. John Fox when he replaced him Thursday as trustee of the University of Massachusetts.

The governor hurt the University which has achieved a tremendous growth in recent years thanks to the untiring and unselfish efforts of leaders like Judge Fox.

And the chief executive hurt himself by giving the appearance of being a small and petty politician who places partisan politics above the interests and needs of the great state university.

Judge Fox is a Democrat and has been close to every Democratic governor since he was chief secretary to the late Paul A. Dever a decade and a half ago.

Because Volpe has remained silent on the reasons why he decided not to reappoint Fox to the non-paying post at UMass, it is generally assumed that the governor removed him for partisan political reasons.

There are also whispers that Volpe succumbed to pressure from some local medical school officials who opposed Fox's position that the new University of Massachusetts Medical School should be constructed in an urban area, possibly Boston.

THESE OFFICIALS and some of the officials at UMass disagreed with Fox and felt that the medical school should be at Amherst for a variety of reasons, including the important factor of local competition in the Boston area.

At any rate, the elimination of the strong-minded probate judge from the U-Mass board is a sure sign that the medical facility will be built at Amherst. There is no one left to wage a convincing battle for the Boston area.

The Fox case has an ironic twist to it. The judge was a supporter of former Gov. Peabody who was one of the prime movers in the successful drive to curb the powers of the Executive Council.

If the heavily Democratic council still had its old powers of confirmation, there is no doubt that the councilors never would have approved a replacement for Judge Fox, or for that matter, former Commissioner of Correction George McGrath who was ousted by Volpe last week.

The governor's decision to get rid of Judge Fox may prove to be one of the costliest errors of his new administration.

Volpe, who has made a habit of calling for a non-partisan approach to all of his legislative recommendations, has given Democratic leaders the excuse — if they needed one — to give him the leg at every turn.

Senate President Maurice A. Donahue of Holyoke and House Speaker John F. X. Davoren of Milford are warm friends of Fox.

AND WHILE THEY are not likely to declare a mourning period over the departure of the judge, they won't forget the incident when the governor comes before them with his hat in hand on a few special bills.

What makes Volpe look bad in the Fox and McGrath ousters is that their removals are so contrary to the governor's announced plan to seek only the most qualified men for public service.

In McGrath and Fox the governor had two devoted public servants who worked zealously for the causes they espoused in the important fields of penology and education.

And while no man in the state service or any other service is indispensable — whether his name is Fox, McGrath or even Volpe — the men whom the governor has named as the successors to Judge Fox and Commr. McGrath, will have a difficult time in filling their shoes.

SZO Talk To Cover Soviet Jews

Dr. Louis Greenbaum of the University history department will lecture on the plight of Jews in the Soviet Union at 8 p.m. tonight in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U.

The reasons for the program, sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization, were discussed by Robert Glickman in a Collegian interview.

"The world is now viewing the strangulation of Soviet Jewry," said Glickman. Dr. Greenbaum's lecture will be concerned with the question of whether Soviet Jewry is being given the protection the Soviet Constitution

Philosophy Lecture Notes Relation of Agent and Thing

by Richard Danca
Staff Reporter

"There is an absolute difference between body motions that are acts and those which are not acts," said philosophy Professor Richard Taylor of Columbia University at a lecture in Bartlett Faculty Lounge Thursday night. Taylor lectured on "Causality by Agents and Causality by Things", the eighth chapter of his soon to be published book.

Taylor used a man and a match to define his distinctions between agents and things. Man as an agent is the only one of the two which could start a forest fire.

The match, "even with the help of other things cannot start the fire, it can only be used to start a fire" and is therefore not an agent.

He then broke down his discussion of acts, saying that there is "no describing minor acts, although minor acts can describe more complex acts."

For example, the simplest way to describe grasping something is to describe the motion of the fingers, not what makes the fingers move.

The "absolute difference" between motions that are and are not acts is that an act requires an agent. A muscle spasm is therefore not an act.

Taylor also discussed Caused and Uncaused Acts and Free Will, saying "If the libertarian thesis is true and if Free Will is true, then human behavior is chaotic."

The final section of his lecture, Reasons and Causes, was followed by questions from the floor dealing mainly with clarification of the professor's final points.

Many of the audience disagreed with the defined differences between the example sentences

Head of M. Eng. To Retire in July

After 17 years at the University, William H. Weaver, head of the mechanical engineering department, will retire effective July 1.

Weaver, who joined the UMass faculty in 1948 and was appointed department head in 1954, has taught industrial engineering on both the undergraduate and graduate level.

Born in Philadelphia, he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees at Pennsylvania State University. He received his professional degree as an industrial engineer there five years later.

Weaver taught industrial engineering for four years at Penn State before embarking on a nineteen-year career as an industrial engineer in hard surface floor coverings, luggage, aircraft, pharmaceuticals, metal containers, and as a consultant.

Author of many management reports based on industrial studies, with two books pending publication, he is listed in "Who's Who in Engineering," "Who's Who in the East," and "American Men of Science."

His professional affiliations include the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Industrial Engineers, the Society for the Advancement of Management, and the American Association for Engineering Education.

A UMass faculty recruiting committee, headed by department of mechanical engineering member Daniel Sobala, is currently engaged in a nation-wide search to find a new department head to replace Weaver when he leaves UMass in July.

grants to minority and ethnic groups.

According to Glickman, the Jews in the Soviet Union are suffering from increasing restrictions on their religious activities. Hebrew education and prayer books have become increasingly scarcer commodities.

The number of synagogues has been steadily declining, until, at this time, there is only one synagogue for every 100,000 Jews. "The facts are many and the defense is limited," said Glickman.

In summing up the lecture's purpose, Glickman said that "the Jewish problem in Soviet Russia is not an act of oppression by a single state towards a particular minority group; it is not an isolated problem, but, rather, a test of conscience involving every member of our society who is not content just to remain silent."

"Start with Human Rights" Suggests Amherst Dean

Eugene S. Wilson, the dean of admission at Amherst College, has asked college students to show their belief in civil rights "by starting with human rights."

In an interview in the Amherst Student, Dean Wilson criticized American college students for tolerating offensive behavior and language on college campuses and in college towns, and then trying to offset this behavior "by going to Mississippi."

Freedom in a democratic society, he said, "depends on self discipline and a regard for other people. Students rush to social action like community activity, working in mental hospitals, cleaning up empty home lots, and so on. But sometimes on their way to and from these activities they steal signs, drop papers and bottles on the street, and use abusive language.

"Students should show their belief in civil rights by starting with human rights, with a concern for other people. The Amherst undergraduate—and this is true of students elsewhere—is often so concerned with the larger, more publicized topic of civil rights, that he overlooks the importance of human rights."

"Ugetsu" Unraveled

by Alice Wishart Feature Staff

Two superior Japanese films, "Ugetsu" and "Street of Shame," were shown at Bartlett Auditorium on Thurs,. Feb. 25, as part of the Four-College program in Afro-Asian Studies, now in progress.

"Ugetsu" won the Venice Film Festival Award in 1954 with a description of 16th Century Japan. It would appeal to the Italian taste because it lingers on sentimental groupings, and dwells on obviously composed transitional scenes. It drains every emotional implication to the last. Yet, melodrama cannot entirely divert attention from the skillful arguments against war.

Expanding the theme that War twists productivity into rapacious greed, the reckless seek heroic eminence at the expense of personal values. This film shows how two men, seduced by the "opportunities" of War, leave their homes and bring about their own downfall. The potter is robbed of his profits ,his home is vandalized, and his wife is murdered by starving deserters for her food supply. This leaves his small son at the mercy of strangers. The other seeks to shine as a hero in the eyes of his wife. During his absence, she is defiled by a passing band of soldiers. In her disillusion, she becomes a prostitute, and there is where the returning hero finds his mate.

The persistently dim illumination supports the morbid theme until one begins to wonder if the sun never shines on war. However, the exquisite fragility of the titles and seemed to be the only time when the screen was not lost in darkness. When they could be seen, the actors subtly evoked whole, growing, living personalities in the best traditional of realistic portrayal.

The second film, "Street of Shame," is a semi-documentary produced to lobby for the anti-

The Night You Were . . .

by Sherry Spear
Feature Editor

You dream of that wonderful night you were crowned "Winter Carni Queen", beseiged by photographers and danced the night away. You wake up to study yesterday's psych assignment in your dorm room. A friend comes in to borrow your English notes but stays an hour. Soon the whole corridor wanders in. Smoke fills the room, your book stays open to the same page for the next hour and the clock ticks relentlessly onward. They leave, you sign, look at the clock as it ways "12". "Should I study a little longer and cut that 8 a.m. class or go to sleep now and study 'tomorrow' " you say. "I'll make it to the libe, I promise," you think.

Wandering through the Hatch you stop to talk to friends you haven't seen since last night and hope that guy you've had your eye on for the last week might jaunt in. The Collegian comes out, you glance at the masthead and put your name next to editor-in-chief. "That would be nice. I used to write a little in High School but now I really don't have the time."

Later you are still lingering over that last cigarette.

"Never enough hours in the day" you mutter as you grab a cat-nap in-between classes. Why not? Organization is why not. The campus leaders have the same 24 hour day you have. Sure they waste time in the Hatch, maybe their grades do suffer a little. They have something. They look back and feel they've accomplished something besides a myriad of nameless beaus and breaks.

We live on a campus run by a clock. The great machinery of classes, curfews that make you run back to the dorm before you'd like, clubs, eating, sleeping. Time is alloted for everything but even so it's hard to "catch up".

This is a college campus not a 9-3 high school. We live here 24 hours a day, seven days a week. There is no escape unless you leave for a weekend when you return to be even more behind.

Time is relative. You can't make it or lose it.

Make your own schedule. Plan your day in advance. Leave yourself time to "hatch it", relax, and catch a nap.

In the Collegian we have a deadline by which our copy must be in, a deadline by which the material must be at the printer. It is almost a tangible thing. You know you have to make it to succeed. Will you succeed this semester if you can't be the master of your own time? But, if you find yourself with an hour or two a week of time "miraculously" reclaimed from the desert of disuse—pay us a visit. You may not be a Carni queen but you can make yourself whatever you want to be if you try.

JAMES BOND

. . . will not be at the Collegian Tuesday night 7-8:30. But if you are interested in joining the Collegian, plan to come in for a few minutes.

The Feature Editor will hold office hours every Wednesday 12-2 p.m.

UT's Caesar Comes to UM

This weekend's production of Julius Caesar by the University Theatre promises to be exciting and bold. Director Harry Mahnken and his cast have spent the last month in preparation for the performances March 4, 5, and 6. Evening performances are at 8:15 p.m. sharp. The matinee on March 6 is at 2:15 p.m.

Heading the cast in the title role is Winthrop Sophomore Dave Blaisdell. Dave was seen earlier last month as Pancras in Moliere's Forced Marriage. This is his first acting role with UT.

Sheila Ferrini, well known for her many fine acting accomplishments in UT's and Roister Doisters, will play the part of Calpurnia, Caesar's wife. Sheila was most recently seen in Bertolt Brecht's Private Life of the Master Race as the Jewish Wife. Sheila is a Senior Speech major from Gloucester.

Mark Antony is played by Les Titcomb. Les has several fine acting roles to his credit. Notable among them are Willie Stark in All the King's Men and Paul Verrall in Born Yesterday.

Supporting players include Walter Radulski as Brutus and George Dimmock as Cassius. Jane Lavin is Brutus's wife Portia.

A total of twenty-nine actors and actresses compose what is one of the largest casts the University Theatre has presented in its three year history.

An experienced cast coupled with spectacular scenic effects and costumes designed by Dale Amlund, a competent technical crew guided by Technical Director Terry Wells, and the excellent direction of Mr. Manhken have made University Theatre's Julius Caesar into a night of theatre not to be missed by students and faculty alike.

The S.U. Box Office will be open from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tickets are still available.

A Time for Unity

Last Saturday, Malcolm Little, better known as Malcolm X, was laid to rest after a peaceful service in New York. The question now is, how much of his fight will live on.

Will the fight continue between the Black Muslim movement, a sect of Negro segregationists lead by Elijah Muhamad, and the Organization of Afro-American Unity, until last week led by Malcolm X and dedicated to the cause of integration? Many people are speculating on the answer.

Both groups are trying to attain a higher standard of living for the American Negro, but they hold completely opposite views regarding how this should be accomplished. As a result, they are displaying a great amount of disunity while they claim to be striving for the same purpose.

If these two groups cannot compromise their differences and present a unified program to the country, they will bring serious harm to the entire cause of equality.

Although both sects comprise only a small percentage of the Negro population, they are immediately called to the minds of most people considering the segregation issue in this country. If this was not true before, it certainly is now after the assassination of Malcolm X brought the inter-sect struggle to the forefront of the segregation problem.

The leaders of these two organizations should realize their resposibility in being representatives of their race. If they continue to show disunity, they will create a very unfavorable impression among people of other races.

Ultimately, it can only cause people to ask, "If they can not get along with themselves, how can they get along with others?" It is very unfortunate when a minority such as these two groups comprise can throw a poor light on an entire race whose total freedom is long overdue.

It is time that these people start expending their effort for the common goal, instead of fighting about the method which should be used to attain it.

Joel Hartstone,
Editorial Associate Chairman

Vacuum in Negro Leadership

The day after Malcolm X was assasinated by a group of conspirators in Harlem, the NEW YORK TIMES quoted the late Malcolm X as having recently stated that he was fearful of the Black Muslims in the United States and that they were conspiring to kill him, a one-time leader of that organization. Malcolm X was no longer the leader of the Black Muslims when he was murdered; he was not the adament Black Supremist that had characterized his public image before. Recently while visiting Mecca, Malcolm X exposed a new and radically different philosophy concerning the Negro in America and in the world. He renounced the Black Muslim organization and its ideas, and claimed his support for the Organization for Afro-American Unity. This reversal of philosophy exemplifies the character of Malcolm X: a bitter, disillusioned, frustrated individual.

To those who saw Malcolm X as an important leader, his death was accompanied by a sense of disbelief and fear of possible reactions of his followers and supporters in the Black Muslim organiation. Many people who had disagreed with the beliefs of Malcolm X viewed his murder as a justifiable act, since they saw this man as a dangerous threat to peace and tranquility in America. Malcolm X was an instigator of much hostility between Negroes and whites in America. This provoker of hostility is now permanently suppressed.

The death of Malcolm X, however, has left vacant a position of influence in the Negro community, which may be a dangerous threat if it is not filled by a capable and intelligent leader. The death of Malcolm X may have harmed the situation in America between Negroes and whites more than the continuation of his leadership of the Black Muslim organization could have done; especially since he had radically changed his philosophy. Malcolm X was a potential negotiator between dissenting factions in the United States, and his death may simply increase the hostile attitudes of both factions. Whereas Malcolm X had accumulated a large number of followers among the Negroes, he was influential enough to convince them of the value of his new philosophy in favor of Afro-American unity.

Now the leaderless supporters of Malcolm X remain strongly in favor of Black Supremacy and are extremely adverse to negotiations since the death of their leader. The murdering of Malcolm X, yet a man capable of reconciling the problems which have prevailed, may lead to an even more dangerous and unsolvable situation than previously existed. But the acts of men such as the murderers of Malcolm X cannot be undone; nor will Malcolm X's recent idealogical conversion be effectively employed to reconcile the problem which now confronts Americans even more strongly than when the impulsive, belligerant Malcolm X ruled the Black Muslims.

WMUA Irreverence

Those who were listening to WMUA late on Friday night, February 26, must agree that whoever was responsible for the final sign-off had a rather unbalanced sense of humor. The beautiful Lord's Prayer setting by Robinson had gone through to the second of the final three Amens when a voice interrupted with "one more time fellas," and a rock and roll chorus of some kind crashed in to finish up. Very funny indeed.

Irreverence is a word that is more often than not laughed at in the modern collegiate atmosphere, but it must be applied to this action. And if the use of that term is objected to, it is sufficient to say that a beautiful and moving piece of music was rudely and childlessly interrupted. The University broadcasting station is not a toy, as it was treated Friday night. The fact that few may have been listening at that late hour does not diminish the childishness and immaturity of the act.

Yes, I am indignant. The image of the University could have been potentially damaged by such stupid and needless behavior. Those operating the station have a heavy responsibility to the student body, which supports WMUA, to the listening public, and to the standards of good taste and good broadcasting practice. That responsibility was violated Friday night.

Blind to Viet Nam Issues

To The Editor:

Are we so blind that we cannot accept the fact that we are vulnerable? If the cartoon on Vietnam printed last Friday implies that the Viet Cong are the cause of the many regimes which have been thrust upon South Vietnam, it is a gross misrepresentation of facts.

These major changes of leadership in South Vietnam did not come about through the actions of the Viet Cong, but through the pressures of many nationalist organizations and the U. S. The student uprisings, Buddhist protests, and the military coups are examples of a general disenchantment with the "system." The military coups have come about through the actions of South Vietnamese military leaders who disapproved of government policies. Diem, at one time the dictator supported by the U. S., fell because of internal pressure, independent of the actions of the Viet Cong. The most recent example, called by leader Col. Pam Ngoc Thao "an internal army purge," was a failure in its efforts to oust the Khan power structure.

Is it worth all this?

Colloquium Discusses Decreasing Interest In Business Careers

At the monthly Colloquium of the School of Business Administration guest speaker, Melvin L. Hurni, vice-president of the A. B. Dick Co., spoke last week on the topic, "Personal Justification in a Business Career."

He expressed concern, widely felt in corporate managerial circles as well as schools of business administration, over some findings, nationally publicized in the Wall Street Journal, Newsweek, the Saturday Review, and newspapers, including the Boston Globe, to the effect that careers in business are losing their attractiveness among increasing numbers of highly competent college students.

Admitting this trend toward increasing choice of careers in such fields as science, law, teaching, and public service, instead of business administration, Hurni stated that, "I am concerned with the implications of these reports which I believe typical of a growing attitude and an insidious one. There appears to be a growing belief that business is no longer suitable for an imaginative and sensitive person to find personal satisfaction and justification—in short, 'it is for the birds'."

Maintaining that this cynical view of business activity is unrealistic, Mr. Hurni noted that those actually engaged in the teaching and practice of business administration "are not getting across the idea that business is a suitable vehicle for obtaining personal satisfaction and justification." Meanwhile, others, in the popular arts, often inexperienced in the actualities of business administration, are getting their ideological message across to the public in fictional form. The result is a distorted popular image of the nature of a business career and the characteristics of corporate management.

Although no serious problem at present was seen by the speaker in this present trend, he stated the view that if the trend continues unchecked the effects might be felt in a decade, when, ". . . we may have weakened the sinews that provide the wherewithal to do the 'good works' (of business administration) simply because the business community is mistakenly viewed generally as being populated by self-seeking individuals."

Pointing to the marked increase in economic growth and level of prosperity under our economic system of widespread private enterprise, the corporate executive showed how this economic base of increasing wealth suported increasing opportunities in the many other fields of activity, stating that, "there is prostitution laws passed in Japan in 1956. It explores the lives and motives of five practiced in the 300-year old Yoshiwara (red light district) of Toyko. The "shame" is expressed in the reactions of the public to the "girls" when they venture out from their house.

The film is, incidentally, a fine insight into the changing culture of modern Japan. The transitions in clothing, manners, family relations, women's independence, and even household furnishings (a western bar in an oriental house) are only corollary, but present.

Both films have some encouragement for the improvement of women's status. Wives scold their husbands, and even deliver blows into the bargain. Women offer homespun, eternal wisdom to counter the follies of their spouses.

Noted Educator Criticizes "Publish or Perish" Rules

Unless an educator has something important to say, it might be better for him to perish than to publish, according to Dr. Perry E. Gresham, president of Bethany College.

Chairman of the Commission on Colleges and Universities of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, Dr. Gresham believes that "publishing for publishing's sake is sheer nonsense. It is stupid for university and college administrators to insist on publication without attention to the significance of the material published.

"Among scholars a reputation is enhanced by honorable and important published material. Trivial and unworthy material may greatly harm the reputation of the scholar. There is something to the old proverb. 'Oh, that mine enemy would write a book.'

"The dedicated scholar has not only need to read and study, but also to converse with his scholarly colleagues and to think accurately about his discipline. This will be accomplished only, in my opinion, if he systematically writes out his ideas whether they find their way into some recondite periodical or not." (I.P.)

First Friday, Mar. 5. Masses will be at 6:50 a.m., 12:15 p.m. and 5 p.m. Confessions are on Thursday at 4 and 7 p.m. Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament all day Friday, Mar. 5.

Sophomores...

Here's what the new 2-year Army ROTC program means to you

A new Reserve Officer Training Corps program permits selected college sophomores to be commissioned as Army Second Lieutenants in two years. You can do this by:

1. Completing a special 6-week summer camp between your sophomore and junior years.
2. Completing the 2-year Advanced Course at any school offering the ROTC program.

What are the benefits of Army ROTC training?

- Management training for success in civilian or military life.
- $40 per month pay while attending the Advanced Course, plus uniforms; pay and paid travel for summer camps.
- Eligibility for free flight instruction at selected schools leading to a private pilot's license.
- A commission as an Army officer, with all of its accompanying benefits, including higher income, greater opportunity for advancement and officer status.
- The personal satisfaction that comes from knowing you're trained to assume leadership responsibilities.

These benefits will put you a step ahead of other college graduates and will pay off for the rest of your life. You owe it to yourself to investigate these new opportunities.

For complete information, see the Professor of Military Science at your school, or send the coupon below.

more competition than there used to be for the energies of educated young people and in areas that must obviously have high appeal to their latent idealism, and the subjects for the application of such idealism have been widely and repeatedly described."

Ironically enough, he indicated, the dynamic innovations and economics of corporate management have "so broadened the opportunities and increased the variety of challenges that it has been a factor, and may of itself, cause a number of people to feel that a career in business is not their first choice."

To attract young men to these challenging and creative careers in business, the corporate vice-president saw the need for clarifying the purposes of both the managerial and entrepreneurial functions of business administration. "What is lacking is an understanding by laymen and professional alike of the unique economic functions of a business—the entrepreneurial part as well as the managerial."

"If our young people are seeking deep personal commitment with the test of achievement, I know no better route. Here is an opportunity for commitment and measurement of results. There are plenty of "Profiles in Courage" to be noted here if one elects to make a literary contribution, and I believe some of us should do so."

In conclusion, the speaker said, "Business is concerned with this bedrock portion of our civilization, and people who enter into it are contributing to this very basic aspect. They may, as a consequence, never write learned papers, nor create pop art, but contribute they do in a most fundamental way with both physical and intellectual energies. In this light, the designing of a machine, the meeting of a production schedule, or the identification of a market segment takes on new significance."

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

It's tournament time once again on the college scene and some of New England's best teams will be going to the post season activities. Providence and Connecticut are bound for the NCAA while Boston College has accepted, and Holy Cross is hopeful, of a bid to the NIT.

Connecticut, the winner of the Yankee Conference, gets an automatic berth in the NCAA. This year, the Huskies have a sophomore studded team that Coach Fred Shabel has rounded into a winner.

Yet the schedule UConn happens to play is relatively weak. The three teams mentioned above along with Massachusetts and Rhode Island all have slates that are at least as strong.

The toughest the Huskies have played have been these other teams, along with possibly Manhattan, Fordham, and Temple. UConn has become so obsessed with the desire to impress fans in the area that every team they play gets an unbeatable reputation. A case in point is the contest at Storrs recently against American University. This club, according to Connecticut people, was given a good chance to upset the Huskies.

They failed to mention the fact that the club had only a 4-16 record, so UConn looked unbelievably strong when they beat this "power." 115-60.

AGAINST MANHATTAN, which had a far more presentable record of 12-5, the Huskies were forced into overtime before winning. The Jaspers had defeated such powers as Southern Connecticut, Wagner, and Farleigh-Dickinson. So any great claims by UConn should be taken with a grain of salt.

The Huskies will get a chance to prove themselves against St. Joseph's in Palestra. There will be on hand one of the most hostile crowds the Huskies have faced this year as well as the fact that St. Joseph's is the third ranked team in the country.

IF UCONN MAKES many mistakes against the smooth working, defense minded Hawks, they will be in real trouble.

The Southern Conference has a post season tournament with a season termination with a dual purpose—to pick a team that will represent the conference in the NCAA and to make money.

As for the second of these, there are only two conferences ... major level that hold such events, the Southern and the Atlantic Coast Conference. Why they feel they need money, while none other, not the Ivy, the Yankee, the Big Ten, or the Missouri Valley, seems to need any, is a problem. The Big Eight does hold a tourney, but it is run in the Christmas recess period.

As for putting anything as important as the NCAA berth as the prize for winning, it seems to put the rest of the schedule in the role of one big warmup. There is a strong possibility that the best team might be upset.

DAVIDSON had mowed down 23 straight opponents and won the league easily over VPI. Their only loss was to St. Joseph's in the Palestra, and they held the number five ranking in the country.

Yet all of this was wiped out as a West Virginia team defeated them in overtime, 74-72, in the semi-finals. The number two team in the conference, VPI also was defeated, so the title was decided when the fourth place Mountaineers met the sixth place William and Mary Indians. WV has a 14-4 record while Wand M has a 12-13 mark.

West Virginia defeated the Indians and will now go to Philadelphia for the NCAA playoffs and must face Providence, while Davidson with a 24-2 record retires for the second year in a row. The defeat of the favorite has almost become a rule in this league. Several years ago, George Washington with a 7-15 record went to the NCAA because they happened to get hot for three games.

The upsets that occur cheat the fans and the NCAA which expect that a league's top team will enter. Without the league's best representatives, the league's prestige suffers as their teams go down to defeat in the early rounds.

This coming weekend, the ACC will hold their version of this tourney and the conference leader, Duke might well be upset by any of four teams. If this occurs, it will still reflect the fact that the best team did not win, but the ACC is much stronger overall so the loss of Duke would not be as serious.

Matmen Lose To Dartmouth, Wesleyan; End Season

by Art Keown

The University matmen, sporting a 4-2-1 record, were defeated 27-11 on Wednesday, Feb. 24, by a strong Dartmouth College team. Scoring wins for the Redmen and remaining undefeated were Captain Jesse Brogen, Dave Kelley, and Milt Morin. Kelley scored the only fall for UMass by pinning Woodworth in 5:20. In the heavyweight class Morin trounced Bushman, last year's 2nd place New England heavyweight, with a score of 6-0.

On Saturday, Feb. 27, the UMass wrestlers met defeat at Wesleyan University with a final score of 24-11. Gary Lefort was pinned by Wiener (Wes.) in 2:41, after he was caught in the middle of an attempted takedown. Dave Balanoff, wrestling over his head in the 130 lb. class, was pinned by Gray (Wes.) in 4:18. Captain Jesse Brogan continued undefeated by decisioning Wesleyan's Arrington 3-2. Brogan dominated the match. In the 147 lb. class Art Keown was defeated by Reed (Wes.) 8-2, after a hard-fought dual in which neither wrestler excelled. Hodge of UMass was pinned by McCague in 3:28 in the 152 lb. class. George Darling met Beers (Wes.) at 157 lbs. and was downed 5-0 in a very close match. Both wrestlers worked well. Dave Caferelli was decisioned 7-0 by Kinberg at 167 lbs.

At 177 lbs. Dave Kelley completely outwrestled Logan (Wes.), defeating him 8-2. At heavyweight Milt Morin overwhelmed McKenzie, last year's New England Champion, until McKenzie defaulted with a sprained ankle late in the second period.

Tonight at 7:15 the Redmen close their season with a home meet against Boston College. The team will then have three days of strenuous practice and drill before hosting the New England Interscholastic Wrestling Tournament on March 5-6. Captain Jesse Brogan will probably be seeded #1 in the 137 lb. class. Dave Kelley and Milt Morin will each be #2 in their respective weight classes. George Darling should also be seeded. The rest of the team will draw places, and none should yet be counted out of the race.

Wendy or Hill

Dear Sir:

I am writing in regard to a recent publication of your newspaper, in which, when discussing the All-New England Basketball team, you stated that Clarence Hill should be alloted the backcourt position before John Wendelken (from Holy Cross), but that Wendelken would probably get it because of better press coverage.

Well Mr. Editor, if you were at the Holy Cross-UMass game, you must eat your words (with a big gulp please) for after that game one basketball expert said that "Wendy" was so far superior, that Hill didn't even deserve to be compared with him.

To answer any comments about Hill having a bad game, believe it or not Wendelken

Redmen Surge Past Maine; Face P. C. In Season Finale

by John Goodrich, Sports Reporter

The University of Massachusetts overcame a 13 point deficit near the end of the first half and went on to beat Maine, 93-86. The win cliniched second place in the Yankee Conference for the Redmen who stand 8-2 in league play.

The Redmen were eliminated from any chance at the title when Connecticut inundated innocent UNH, 109-61. A zone press and the efforts of Chuck O'Rourke and Clarence Hill as well as a big assist from soph Jim Babyak saved the UMass club.

MAINE always features a well drilled team that can shoot with the best of them, and this year's quintet was no exception as they gave the Redmen a tough game.

The Black Bears threatened to turn the contest into a rout as they opened a 39-26 lead before the Redmen unveiled the zone press that forced the home team into some mistakes. This defensive effort helped the Redmen trim the margin to three at the half, 45-42.

O'Rourke was a giant off the boards as he continued to close out his career in fine fashion. There was a definite problem for the Redmen in that Tim Edwards drew his fourth foul in the half, and though he did not foul out, was greatly hampered the rest of the way.

In the second half, the game remained close right down to the wire. UMass took the lead briefly for the first time, 48-47, but it was not until Edwards sank a shot to give Massachusetts a 63-62 lead that the club was on top to stay.

A hoop by Terry Carr tied the game briefly at 79 all, but paced by Jim Babyak, the Redmen went on to outscore Maine 11-2 and then go into a stall to win their 13th game in 23 tries.

O'Rourke took down 19 rebounds to go with his 24 points. Hill had 23 points as he closed in on the single season scoring record for UMass. He needs just 13 points to surpass the 506 total of Doug Grutchfield. He contriuted nine assists as he raised his total in this field to 19 in the last two games.

EDWARDS contributed 13 points while Babyak had 14, all in the second half, as well as being the man in charge of the freeze.

Carr with 22, John Gillette with 20, Dave Svendsen with 18 and Guy Strang with 14 did the bulk of the scoring for Maine.

The Redmen will be trying to regain a little prestige for themselves when they wind up their season against the top ranked team in New England, the Providence College Friars. The Redmen have lost four times to the teams ranked above them in NE without a victory. They would particularly like to redeem themselves for their home court showings against Boston College and Holy Cross.

COACH JOE MULLANEY has blended a unit without a senior into one of the best in the country. Paced by soph star Jim Walker, the club has bowed but once in 21 games, and that to strong Villanova in Philadelphia. Dexter Westerbrook, Bill Blair, Jim Benedict, and Mike Riordan provide the able supporting cast for the spectacular Mr. Walker.

The game will mark the last one for O'Rourke and Kingston the senior co-captains and the only two men that will depart from the UMass ranks this year.

Tim Edwards grabs one of his dozen rebounds against B. U.

Acoustics picketers consult with COLLEGIAN News Editor Hendrickson after his talk with President Lederle.

Orchard Hill Echomen Picket President's House

by Peter Hendrickson News Editor

"Down With Sound . . . Acoustics Not Promises"—these were the pleas of Orchard Hill residents who picketed President Lederle's house yesterday afternoon.

A group of approximately 25 students skipped supper last night in an effort to improve the study conditions in their shiny seven story dorms that are as yet uncompleted.

The dorms were first occupied in September but the water, curtains, carpets, phones and other utilities were only partially installed.

"THEY'RE NICE DORMS, BUT..." read one of the signs. "But," continued a Eugene Field resident, "we were told that the study conditions would be ideal. Instead I found myself trying to study in an echo chamber."

A Webster councilor reported that they must enforce "quiet hours" every night. He said that carpets and accoustical ceiling tile were in the contract but that the contractors had failed to fulfill the terms of the contract.

In a Collegian interview Pres. Lederle reported that the same type of delays that had plagued the University at the beginning of the semester were still being dealt with.

LEDERLE EXPLAINED, "The contractors have let out bids to subcontractors who have simply not completed the contracts on time. He stated that, "A great deal of legal red tape has slowed down the satisfactory completion of study facilities."

"We're trying our hardest to get these things taken care of as soon as possible," Lederle stated.

Dean Field said, "We can't remedy all these grievances overnight. Other dorms have problems, too. The conditions in the County Circle need much improvement."

Field noted that his office works on some aspect of the Administrative Censorship Battle Rages at North Adams State

by Dan Glosband Managing Editor

In a heated meeting at North Adams State College, Student Council forces engaged College President Eugene Freel, in a battle over Administrative censorship of the college newspaper, The Student Voice.

Two weeks ago the editor of the paper, Don Wilkinson, was removed from his position for publishing a spoof of "Sex and the Single Girl."

Earlier in the year, the paper's advisor, John McNulty, had warned Wilkinson not to publish the often reprinted "Sex and the Single Boy". When the satire appeared in print, the advisor-history instructor promptly called Wilkinson and accused him of a direct violation of authority Wilkinson was fired on the spot.

The lanky former editor appealed to the student council, after having a deaf ear turned to him by the school's president, and claimed that the Voice's right to free speech had been violated.

College President Eugene Freel expressed the feeling that the issue had been blown completely out of proportion, but Wilkinson stood his ground and will appear before a newly formed committee on student grievances tomorrow. The student committee is the only tangible result of yesterday afternoon's open meeting.

Student feeling seems to be running strongly in favor of an "end censorship" policy, as 2/5 of the student body turned out for yesterday's meeting, and many others expressed support. President Freel made a belated appearance and noted that as a state school, North Adams was always "in the public eye", and that "everything had to be closely watched."

Wilkinson believes that the students are themselves capable of determining what is clean and decent, and should have the responsibility thereof.

China Confrontation Presents Short and Long Term Crises

by Gordon Davidson, Staff Reporter

The U. S. is faced with both short and long term crises in its current confrontation with China. John K. Fairbank, guest lecturer from Harvard University, explained Monday night in a lecture in the School of Business Administration building.

The short term crisis is the clash in Viet Nam over control of the government there and the overall control of Asia, while the long term crisis pits a giant population, struggling to modernize under a totalitarian system, while again opposing an attacking nation trying to protect its established interests, while at the same time avoiding a nuclear war.

Fairbank said that the Chinese Communists have been able to use the traditional elements of Asian life to mobilize support for their subversive movements, while the U. S. ideology (more or less) prohibits initiative action in organizing people to a U. S. oriented point of view.

The Communists have given the Chinese man a different place in socley, with better possibilities and prospects. They have used a combination of hope and fear or idealism and terrorism to mold their state.

He concluded by saying that china is a nation which considers the U. S. an enemy and it has an overwhelming confidence in its own abilities. Its political system is different from ours because its tradition is different.

Fairbank, at Harvard since 1936, is chairman of its East Asia Research Center. He was with the Office of Strategic Services from 1940 to 1942, special assistant to the U. S. ambassador to China the following year, and a deputy director of the Office of War Information.

Author of many books and articles on China, Fairbank was a trustee of the Institute for Pacific Relatioins, 1947-51, and was one of the founders and presidents of the Association for Asian Studies.

In 1960, he received an award from the American Council of Learned Societies for his teaching and research contributions.

Robert Welch To Speak At Amherst

Robert Welch, founder and president of the John Birch Society, will be at Amherst College Thursday to discuss "The Role of the John Birch Society." The talk, scheduled in Johnson Chapel at 8 p.m., is sponsored by Forum, the Student Lecture Committee.

The society, devoted to right-wing political activities, was founded by Mr. Welch in the late 1950's and claims to have grown considerably in recent years. Chapters have been organized in all parts of the United States.

Officers of Forum said Mr. Welch was invited to the campus in an effort "to provide Amherst students with a first hand knowledge of the current operations of the American right wing."

History Professor Louis Greenbaum addressed the SZO on the plight of Soviet jewry Monday night.

Religious Restrictions Hurt Practice of Soviet Jewry

by Steve Gordon Staff Reporter

A crowd of 60 students and faculty filled the Commonwealth Room of the S. U. Monday night to hear Dr. Louis Greenbaum speak on the plight of Soviet Jewry, in a program sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization.

The program, coordinated by Master of Ceremonies, Al Belsky, included a talk by Dr. Greenbaum, followed by a question and answer period and a 30 minute documentary film.

Dr. Greenbaum began by giving a history of the Jewish people in Russia and concluded with a few observations from his own recent trip to Russia.

He emphasized the severe religious restrictions placed upon Soviet Jews, and the social pressures against the practice of Judaism found in Soviet society.

"I left Russia with both an extraordinary gratefulness for being an American and a definite element of hope for the future," said Dr. Greenbaum.

The program concluded with a moving documentary film entitled The Price of Silence. The film was narrated by Edward G. Robinson and included statements by eminent jurists, clergymen, and newsmen.

The topic was timely and the program was fast-moving. It was a rewarding experience for all those interested in social involvement and concern.

Rapid Growth Tests Quality On Campus

by Marilyn Rozner
Assoc. News Editor

Educators are trying to conjure an illusion—they're attempting to make universities seem smaller as they grow bigger.

Students at the University of Massachusetts are constantly reminded of the efforts of the faculty and administration to make the University experience a personal one. However the problems encountered because of size are many.

In a non-partisan effort to bring this situation to the attention of the UMass campus, the Young Independents, Young Democrats and Young Republicans, collectively known as the Free University Forum, and an invited group, Young Americans for Freedom, have planned a conference on the problems of a large university.

As stated by Sid Finehirsh, president of the Young Independents, the purpose of the conference is "to acquaint students here at this University with problems of a large university and to suggest possible solutions to these problems, showing how they can deal with them. We hope to improve the direction of the University and to better inform the academic community through the conference."

The conference schedule is as follows:

March 5—Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College. Keynote address: Multiversity vs. Student

March 9—Panel discussion on Quantity vs. Quality. Dean Hunsberger, College of Arts and Sciences. Prof. William Ross, recipient University Teaching Award, Dr. Joseph D. Havens, University Mental Health Service, Mr. Kenneth Suid, Staff Assistant, Provost Office

March 11 — Panel discussion— "The University Image" Prof. Marcus, University Athletic Council, Mr. Daniel Melley, University News Office, Prof. Howard O. Brogan, Head of English dept., Prof. Paul Gagnon of UMass/Boston

March 16—Panel discussion on "Undergraduate vs. Graduate" Dean Moore, University Graduate College, Dean Field, Dean of Students, Prof. David P. Leonard, History dept., Prof. Jules Chametzsky, English dept.

March 17—Paul Booth, Students for a Democratic Society East Coast Coordinator of Berkeley Free Speech Movement "Berkeley, Student vs. Multiversity"

Yesterday will soon be tomorrow.

UMass Professor Returns From African College of Agriculture

by Richard Danca
Staff Reporter

Professor Denzel Hankinson, professor of dairy technology, has recently returned from Malawi, Africa, where he was curriculum advisor for a college of agriculture being founded there.

Sent as part of a UMass contract with the U. S. government Agency for International Development (AID), Hankinson worked on the Bunda College of Agriculture from mid-November to mid-February.

Prof. Hankinson was very optimistic about prospects for success of the school. "Everyone is committed to a strong program," he said.

He called the college "a great need and a credit to Malawi."

Curriculum at Bunda will consist of three years of agriculture, leading to a diploma. The three-year program is expected to be integrated in the proposed University of Malawi.

Another visit by the curriculum advisor is planned within a year. Three UMass teachers are still there.

The three are C. H. Parsons, K. E. Boyden and Charles Turner.

UMass will provide about half of the instructors at first, but they and the AID project will be phased out by 1970.

Plans now call for three groups of Malawi students to be taught at UMass, with completion of their education to coincide with the elimination of American instructors at Bunda.

The two Malawi students presently at the University, Enock Ntokotma and Peter Makhambera, are now at the freshman level working toward four-year degrees in plant and soil science and animal science, respectively.

Work will soon begin on the school itself and plans call for it to be completed by June 1966. Enrollment at Bunda will reach its full complement three years later.

The first graduates of Bunda will go into government service as employees of the Ministry of Agriculture. These men, to be called "Technical Officers," will perform a similar function to county extension workers in this country.

The country, however, is "well adapted for agriculture, with desirable rainfall, good soil and a growing season of four to five months." Some 80 per cent of the families in Malawi live on farms of five to ten acres.

"The attitude for self-improvement is very good," says Prof. Hankinson. "The agriculture should improve as well as the standard of living" as the college progresses.

Professor Hankinson estimates that there are over one hundred similar AID contract projects in other countries with other U. S. universities.

UConn is working in Zambia, another former portion of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. Michigan State is in Ghana.

UM Trustees Endorse Willis Report

The Board of Trustees of UMass, after considerable study of the Harrington-Willis Study Commission Report, has resolved to place itself on record as "firmly endorsing the general recommendations of the report dealing with public higher education."

The trustees' action was announced by UMass President John W. Lederle.

Lederle said the trustees endorsed the report because "its implementation represents an historic opportunity."

The trustees, said Lederle, cited five major achievements that would follow adoption of the study commission's report:

1) The proposed system of the Harington-Willis Commission would properly define existing parts of the Bay State's higher education enterprise as a single University with branch centers, a state college system, a system of community colleges, and two technological institutes.

2) The proposed educational effort would be the"most economic and viable system" to cope with the mushrooming demand for public higher education.

3) The proposed review and coordination of institutions and their programs would permit growth without waste and duplication of effort, but not impose rigid controls that might stifle educational initiative.

4) The report's recommendations would give state colleges and technological institutes the opportunity for more fruitful cooperation with the University, including the development of Ph.D. programs, through the University's Board of Trustees and the proposed state board of public higher education.

5) Finally, the recommendations of the report would offer Massachusetts and its people the chance to restore public higher education in the Commonwealth "to a position of leadership in the nation."

Last Chance For 65'ers

The Senior week committee has been hard at work trying to give a new direction to the Class of 65's Senior week. The committee has looked seriously into the possibility of having the activities centralized in a resort area with a beach and other facilities. Mt. Snow, Lake Sunapee, N. H., Swampscott, Mass., and Watch Hill R. I. have been considered for the three days (June 9-11) which would include a banquet, a mix and a picnic. The problem has arisen over finding a place big enough to accommodate a large percentage of the senior class. The committee wishes to interest as many people as possible since Senior Class funds will be spent.

On the possibility that a resort can't be found, the alternate plan will be to have de-centralized activities off campus and on Cape Cod. Any suggestions will be gladly received by John Murphy, Hills North. There will be a meeting concerning this on Tuesday at 11:15 in the SU.

AFROTC Dining In

by Tom Donovan
News Staff

Dining In was the occasion this Monday night when the Air Force ROTC provided a steak dinner for the cadets.

Highlight of the evening was the presence of guest speaker Brig. General Thomas B. Whitehouse.

The Dining-In, a formal military function, dates back to the early nineteenth century in England. The late General "Hap" Arnold was the force behind the initiation of the Dining-In in the U. S. military by establishing his famous "Wing Dings".

Consibered not only valuable regarding tradition, patriotism, and ceremony, the event is also considered an excellent opportunity for the staff and cadets to meet socially at a military function.

One of the more pleasant features is the proposal of toasts during the event. The vice-president of the evening, Cadet Officer Jack Singer, followed tradition by proposing toasts throughout the evening.

Shortly after proposing a toast to the President of Viet Nam, Singer proposed a second toast to the new President of Viet Nam.

General Whitehouse, Vice Commander of the 26th Air Division of the Air Defense Command addressed the gathering on the mission of his command in the Arctic Regions.

The General stressed that the division's mission was one of the most fascinating and difficult in the Air Force because of the harsh climate, long distances, and other inconveniences.

General Whitehouse cited the active air defense which is instrumental in supporting the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEW). Also, he spoke of the support and maintainance function of the Distant Early Warning Line (DEW Line) which protects North America from polar attack.

"The effects of climate and terrain are unique in the Arctic", he said. "The temperature ranges from 70 below zero to a summer high of 38 above. Days and nights are measured in months."

With an annual snowfall of 200 inches and winds exceeding 250 miles per hour, the snow has been known to drift more than 50 feet deep.

Wind plus cold are serious considerations: At times a man cannot stand unsupported and temperatures are low enough to freeze exposed flesh solid in less than 30 seconds.

The last problem cited by the General was that of construction. Costs run from five to six times higher.

In spite of all the difficulties, the General said, he considered his job particularly rewarding and interesting.

Other guests included Professor of Air Science Lt. Colonel Roy D. Simmons, Jr., Lt. Colonel Robert V. Mitchell, and Assistant to the Provost Doctor William Venman.

Partisan Politics

With the failure of Governor Volpe to re-appoint Trustees Fox and Schuck, the political aspect of the University, as a state institution, is once again in the forefront. The qualifications of the two former trustees and the two new trustees are not in question. The question is, as an educational institution, is the University of Massachusetts above politics?

The University of Massachusetts was established to provide the best possible education for the residents of the Commonwealth. In that vein the University has grown from an "aggie" school to a topnotch University providing unsurpassed training in fields ranging from agriculture to pre-med. However, the University must continue to grow and improve. It cannot do so unless it is free from partisan politics. Who controls the legislature or who is Governor when the University expands into Boston and adds a medical school should not matter; the importance should be that the University will be able to provide better educated citizens of the Commonwealth.

Educated citizens are the cornerstone of the Commonwealth; without them the Commonwealth cannot retain its position of leadership in the nation. To provide those educated citizens, regardless of their political affiliations, the University has to be free of partisan politics. The legislators and Governor must work together to attain the highest level of education possible at the University, without politics.

Freedom of Expression

College press freedom has always been a much debated topic on campuses throughout the country. Recently this issue came into closer perspective when Donald Wilkinson, editor of the Student Voice, the student newspaper of North Adams State College, was removed from his position for running a reprint from the "Northeastern News" entitled "Sex and the Single Man." This article, a parody on the book "Sex and the Single Girl" was declared offensive by the adviser to the Student Voice.

The removal of the editor met with much student disapproval and evoked a demand for more student rights, for censorship has been somewhat of a problem at North Adams where all news and editorial copy is read by the advisor prior to publication.

However, the real justification for freedom of the press has nothing to do with student rights. The protection which professional newspapers enjoy under the constitutional does not apply to campus papers.

A college administration is not bound by law to foster a free campus press. Moreover, an administration can eliminate a student newspaper entirely just as it can eliminate any other campus organization.

If a campus paper has no legal right to be free or even to exist, why allow freedom of the student press? The answer lies in the academic lessons to be learned from freedom of student expression.

First of all, a free college press develops responsibility in a student editor by making him, rather than his educators, accountable for what he prints. Criticism from one's peers is a much better teacher of responsibility than surveillance by stern administrators.

Secondly, a free campus press teachers a student newsman how to become a good critic and oppose what seems wrong to him. The student who is not afraid to take a stand against the college administration will in later life become the responsible citizen who is not afraid to oppose corrupt politicians and businessmen.

In the third place and most important of all, freedom of the college press shows students how a democratic system should operate. Therefore, by enjoying freedom of expression in college, students will learn how this freedom should be exercised in our society. Morever, it is somewhat contradictory to teach freedom of expression in the classroom and to deny this very freedom in the school newspaper.

The survival of our democratic society depends on the ability of its citizens to distinguish between truth and error. Freedom of the student press trains students for this mental exercise.

WMUA Playback

To The Editor:

In last Monday's Collegian, a rather irate fellow wrote an interesting letter regarding WMUA's disrespect for a religious sign off used to close out the station's day of broadcasting. At first glance it would seem that the engineer in charge had committed a blasphemous act. However, had the writer of the indignant letter been listening earlier (He obviously had just tuned in as the sign off tape went on), he would have realized that the playing of the rock and roll record and the sign off tape had absolutely no connection with each other.

Like most rock and roll shows, the one on WMUA is filled with running gags. The final performance of the rock and roll group was simply the finish of one of these. At 12:30 the disc jockey started to play a record which he intermingled with the rest of the show. Its final performance, which, I might add, came after the third and final Amen of the Lord's Prayer—not the second, as Monday's irate writer stated—was simply a conclusion to this running gag.

A final point. The announcer, when he said "One more time' (Not one more time, fellas), referred to the rock and roll artist and not to the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

Sounds like a childish type of running gag, you say? Of course! It's a rock and roll show. However even more childish are those individuals who jump wildly to conclusions without having first checked into all the facts.

Mud Again

To the Editor,

The rainy season presents an annual problem to the UMass campus—MUD! The new dirt path behind the Copper Kettle is wonderful for swamp animals, but people find it rather frightening to have to fight to keep their shoes on.

The question in our minds is, will this be a permanent fixture, or does the maintenance department plan to remedy the situation. If they do, we suggest they complete the chore before the spring thaw.

The conditions at present are intolerable, and we hope that something will be done soon.

Faculty Apathy

To the Editor:

The administration at the University of Massachusetts seems to preach the importance of a liberal education, that is, an education that involves classroom study, independent study and stimulation from cultural and social activities. Among these activities much is done to stress the importance of the informal relationship between student and teacher; yet, the faculty is apparently apathetic when it comes to doing its part.

Many organizations take great pains to provide opportunities for this endeavor. The Orchard Hill Complex is one such project sponsored by the University. The September, 1964 issue of the "Amherst Journal Record" said this about the Complex: "the project is designed to bring students and faculty closer together and thus decrease the chances of big institution's impersonality." The First Congregational Church of Amherst, as well as the South Commons, have similar programs.

Recently at a tea for freshmen in Van Meter South, only five faculty members appeared. Twenty-nine invited members of the faculty did not attend and did not send a regret. If such apathy exists among faculty, how can the University hope "to bring students and faculty closer together?"

Hillel Lecture

Prof. Discusses Future of Religion

by Linda Perlstein
Staff Reporter

The future of religion was the topic of a lecture given by Dr. David Leonard at the Hillel Delisupper last Sunday, Feb. 28 before approximately 60 people.

Dr. Leonard began his talk with the statement that the University is an environment as hostile to religion as you can find, since it is only concerned with reason.

He went on to explain that the there is a basic conflict between the desire to dominate and the need for self-transcendence, or in different words, the need for religious awe. Where there is a dominance of reason there cannot be religion.

He then traced the revolutions of society, the last being that of human rights where every man will be treated equally as a man —because he is a man.

Dr. Leonard spoke of how in ancient times there was no distinction between the secular and the religious but that today the emphasis on trusting in man rather than something transcendent has brought about a devaluation, a dehumination. Today, according to Leonard, man does not care about his fellow man. Instead he is frightened, anxious, driven and thoroughly unhappy.

"None of the religions that exist today are the religions of the future," said Leonard, because they are all too parochial.

In giving his definition of religion, he put the emphasis on doing and especially on caring. Religion, to him, is "to regard the other person not as a thing, but as Thou—the personal."

Leonard closed his remarks by stating that "either men will become religious in a new way in which caring will be the center, or they will cease to be totally, or change into something that isn't really man."

Leg. Committee to Seek Permanent Boston Site

Formation of a study group to find a permanent site for UMass-Boston was given initial approval recently in the Massachusetts Senate. The bill, sponsored by Sen. George Kenneally of Boston, calls for joint study by legislators and University trustees.

The legislative group would consist of three senators and five representatives. No date was set for the committee's report to be given. The bill is now before the Joint Rules Committee.

Kenneally said that the temporary location in the former Boston Consolidated Gas Co. building will be too small for the proposed 3000 students in the Boston branch.

Keneally had tried to force location of the Boston school on the subway line in Dorcester to eliminate possible traffic problems, but failed.

Sen. William Randal of Framingham wanted faster action on the part of the UMass trustees than they have shown on the medical school. He said, "At the rate they are going, I'll never be treated by a doctor from the medical school."

Judiciary Comm. Considers Court Costs Legislation

by Paul Rodman
State House Reporter

A bill is currently before the Committee on the Judiciary of the General Court of Massachusetts that would have the Commonwealth absorb all court costs.

A representative of Mayor Collins, Paul H. Burns, appealed to the committee to report the bill favorably this way, "The administration of justice is a statewide function and all courts operate in the name of the state."

Edward G. Seferian, legislative counsel for the Massachusetts League of Cities and Towns, estimated the total cost of the bill to the commonwealth at $1.5 million. The cost he said, should not be borne by any particular type of taxpayer. It should be transferred from the real estate taxpayers to the state, he said.

James M. Richmany, a member of the Pittsfield City Council, said the bill would be a step forward in relieving the real estate tax burden.

Governor Volpe also sent a message to the legislature on his proposal for the study of the state's court systems. He said, "When we reflect that we are here concerned with the needs, for a generation to come, of one of the three great constitutional divisions of our government, it is evident that careful planning is not only a duty, but a necessity."

Chess Team Travels to Boston Univ.

A team of four UMass chess players went to Boston Univ. Feb. 13 - 14, to meet M. I. T., U.R.I., B.U., Rensellaer, and UConn in a chess meet.

M.I.T. won the tournament with UMass finishing fourth overall.

"Kin" Sargent led the way with a fine score of three wins and one loss, the loss coming in the first round. His partner on the school "B" team, Russell Salk, had two wins and two losses, and together they came in fourth in the field of 12 teams.

M.I.T. ran away with the top two spots.

E Kotski and Tom McFarland made up the "A" team and, with scores of 1½-2½ and 1-3 respectively, did well enough to give the team a respectable total score of 7½-8½.

Firday night, Sgt. Krauss from Westover A.F.B., who has a master rating in chess, gave a display of his talents in a simultaneous exhibition here at the Student Union.

A turnout of 24 players, plus many kibitzers and spectators, watched Sgt. Krauss put on a fine display. winning 18 games, drawing four and losing only two.

Future events include a tournament starting Monday, March 8. It will go five rounds, with everyone playing one game a week for five weeks. Trophies will be awarded. Registrations are in the R.S.O. office.

Lacrosse Coach In Favor Of Non-Scholarship Program

by Howie Davis
Sports Reporter

(Note: This is the second in a series of articles designed to give the public an idea of how the University of Massachusetts develops top flight scholar-athletes and the manner in which these young men are recruited to attend the University. This article shows how one of the more successful "minor" sports, functions without aid from scholarships.)

Dick Garber, head coach of the University of Massachusetts varsity lacrosse team, said recently, "As long as we're able to compete with other universities who do not give scholarships, I'd certainly like to keep our program on the non-scholarship and non-recruitment level."

Garber, currently beginning his eleventh year at the University, was chosen to coach the North team in the North-South All-Star lacrosse game June 12 at Syracuse. The game is sponsored by the United States Inter-Collegiate Lacrosse Association.

This appointment illustrates the respect the UMass coach has earned during his career. Through his first ten years he has compiled a record of 66 wins, 37 losses and 2 ties. When you consider that this record was accomplished without the aid of one player being on scholarship, it becomes more amazing.

Garber's personal philosophy on scholarships is that an athletic team exists for young men to play sports and they shouldn't have to be rewarded by their performance. There is no scouting program for high and prep school athletes in lacrosse.

Colleges as Army, Penn State and Rutgers, who produce nationally powerful lacrosse teams each year, do have active scouting and recruiting programs. For this reason it is impossible for a non-recruiting team, as UMass, to compete on the same level as these schools.

The University competes in the New England Inter-Collegiate Lacrosse league with teams of the calibre of Brown, Wesleyan, Yale, Harvard and Dartmouth. The Ivy League tends to get the more experienced lacrosse players from the high and prep schools because of the "nature of their school." When the Ivy schools records are totalled against the remainder of the league for 1964 it comes out to a fantastic 43-2 record. This is an example of what teams that recruit can do to teams that don't.

If the University wants the lacrosse team to play on a "big time" level, a term disliked by Garber, they will have to give scholarships or grants-in-aid. An athletic grant-in-aid is given to a high quality student who shows financial need. Originally intercollegiate athletics were to provide athletic competition for athletes. The competition has now broadened for purposes of school publicity and alumni support. The lacrosse team is classified as a non-scholarship program for minor sports. The team depends on participation from the student body and those athletes who just want to compete.

As long as a student meets the University's academic policies he will be accepted as a candidate for the team. Once a student-athlete falls below the average of his class he is dismissed from the University and will not be retained merely because he is a star on the lacrosse team. A tabulation was taken of members of the lacrosse team in 1963 and it was found that the grade point averages of the team came out to a 2.6 or C-plus B-minus average.

Scholarships or not, the fellows on the team are asked to live up to a higher level of personal conduct and appearance. This aids in the impression of the University, especially when the team is competing at another institution.

"Sports do not mean everything to everybody, but for some men it tends to be a stabilizer for academic success," says Garber. He does not believe there is any hope for scholarships in the near future and sees no need for them if the team's performance remains as successful as it has been. If UMass maintains a schedule with other non-scholarship schools they will be able to continue with their current policy.

THIS YEAR'S OUTLOOK: With only three seniors on the team and having lost their top six scorers, Garber's team will have to rely on speed and hope for the rapid development of the sophomores and juniors. The lacrosse team plays an 11 game schedule and has 11 scrimmages. There are 63 men out for the team and a little more than half of these will play the scrimmages on the "B" team.

Charley O'Rourke takes one of the jump shots that netted him 29 points.

Grapplers Down BC

by Art Keown

The varsity wrestling team closed their regular season Monday night with a 25-7 win over Boston College. This win gave the Redmen a 5-4-1 record for the season. Captain Jesse Brogan remained undefeated and untied for the year.

In the 123 lb. class Gary Lefort won by forfeit because B.C. had no one in that class to wrestle. Dave Balanoff decisioned B.C.'s Gately 5-3 in the 130 lb. class in a match which Balanoff dominated. Boris Chevone won a close match for the Redmen in the 137 lb. class by defeating Curtin (BC) 7-6. In the 147 lb. class D'Ambruoso (BC) put up a valient but hopeless fight before Captain Jesse Brogan scored a pin in the second period.

George Darling tied with Dobryzynski (BC) after a hard dual in the 157 lb. class. The score was 4-4. Wrestling at 167 lbs. Dave Caferelli was decisioned 10-0 by Moses (BC). In the 177 lb. class Dave Kelley was tied by BC's McCreary 2-2. Kelley now has a 7-0-1 record. Milton Morin closed his season with a 7-0-1 by quickly pinning Blowers (BC) in the first period.

For the next three days the team will review and practice the many holds necessary in collegiate wrestling. On Friday and Saturday UMass will attempt to win individual and team honors in the New England Interscholastic Wrestling Tournament, which will be held here at UMass. All the team members are hoping for a good turnout from the students to help make the Tournament a success.

In a Freshman Meet held with Boston College just before the Varsity Meet, BC defeated the UMass team by a s core of 18-15. BC forfeited in the 123 lb. class while UMass was forced to forfeited in the 130, 147, and Unlimited classes. Rossi (UM) won by forfeit in the 123 lb. class and then wrestled an exhibition match against a heavier BC man and pinned him. In the 137 lb. class Campbell (UM) lost to Koch. Gary Revell and Jim Thompson, wrestling at 167 and 177 for the Redmen, both overwhelmed and pinned their opponents. Also wrestling exhibition matches for UMass were Loch and Sales.

Helping out O'Rourke for the Redmen were Clarence Hill with 17 points and Tim Edwards with 14 and 22 big rebounds. Frank Stewart performed well for the team in the second half as he scored nine points and five rebounds against the taller Friars.

In addition to being the last home appearance of the Friars, the game was Mullaney's 200th victory at PC. They have Brown left this Friday before meeting West Virginia Monday in the second game of the NCAA triple header at the Palestra.

The University of Massachusetts wrapped up their second campaign under Coach Johnny Orr, and managed a winning record despite the toughest schedule in the history of the school. With only Co-captains Charlie Kingston and Chuck O'Rourke leaving, the club should have another fine season next year.

team with 14 points. Four of the Eagles starters fouled out of the game that was marked by 38 fouls being called.

Tonight Vicky's will match their brawn against the Chadbourne Maroons. Don't forget that LCA and TKE will also be battling it out for the IFC championship at 7:00. The winners of these games will play Monday at 8:00 for the Campus championship.

In the bowling tournament Monday night PSD lost their big chance to overhaul league leader TEP as the latter prevailed 6-2. The only team that has a chance at the championship now is AEPi. To do this Pi must keep even with TEP for the remainder of the season and then defeat them 8-0 on the last day of the season, March 15.

POST SEASON NOTES: The IM office has released the official All-star teams for the IFC, Dorms and Independents.

P. C. Drubs Redmen 102-75 In One-sided Season Closer

by John Goodrich

The University of Massachusetts closed out the 1964-65 season with a sound drubbing administered by the Providence College Friars, 102-75.

The loss to the NCAA bound powerhouse was the 11th in 24 games, but was hardly a disgrace to the club. UMass had a relatively poor shooting night, as a combination of defenses by the Friars kept the Redmen off balance. The visitors made only 32 of 93 as compared to the Friars 45 of 87.

Tim Edwards goes in for a layup over Dexter Westbrook and Jim Walker in action at last night's P.C. game.

Big man in the victory for PC had to be Jimmy Walker. The man Coach Joe Mullaney calls the best guard he ever had, came up with 21 points and dominated the game. Big center Dexter Westbrook had 21 as well as 16 rebounds.

SENIOR CO-CAPTAIN Chuck O'Rourke came up with one of the finest nights of his long career as he scored 29 points, 18 in the first half. He also pulled down nine rebounds to close out his career at UM.

Massachusetts was only in the game for about the first 15 minutes. This was due mostly to the work of O'Rourke along with Tim Edwards and Clarence Hill. In fact, these were the only three men to score for the Redmen in the first half. Edwards had 8 and Hill 9 in the opening session.

The Redmen were within three points of the home forces with 10 minutes left, 21-18, but Bill Blair made three points and Westbrook scored on a jump shot to open an 8 point gap. Mass scored a foul shot and a basket while the Friars got a single basket, but then Blair, Walker and Mike Riordan scored to put the club on top by 13, 34-21.

That was about the margin for the rest of the half, with the Redmen never getting closer than 11 nor further behind than 15. The score was 50-35, as Westbrook had 15 points and 10 rebounds while Walker and Jim Benedict, with his deadly jumper, had 10 points each.

IN THE second half, the Redmen never got closer than 13. Mike Meola scored the first basket of the second half to cut that point spread, but Westbrook scored for the Friars. O'Rourke scored on a short jump shot to make it 52-39 but that was the last time the Redmen got that close.

Westbrook, Benedict and Blair scored to open a 19 point lead. That was just about the ball game as far as the Friars were concerned.

About all that remained was for Clarence Hill to score on a jump shot with 9:45 left to give him his 13 points and a new season's scoring mark. He eclipsed Doug Grutchfield's mark of 506 points set in 1961.

With about 6:30 left, Coach Mullaney put in all of his seniors for their last home appearance. The two captains, Noel Kinski and Jim Ahern were among those who saw action during this span. These two had told Mullaney that they would rather sit out the games and let the young Friars stars do battle.

THE FRIARS showed once again why they have won 21 of their 22 games. Besides their two big guns, Blair had 17, Benedict 16, and Don Dutton 10 as a sub.

UM Skiers Place First In New England Meet

By Walt Swiatek

In a tricky 44-gate slalom course that trapped over 20 racers causing disqualifications, the University of Massachusetts ski team skied strongly and defeated all other competing colleges and universities.

Tom Pittendreigh, demonstrating perfect form turned in two excellent runs for a combined time of 83.5 seconds taking 5th in individual standings. Co-Capt. Dick Woods coupled strong runs to place 2nd for the University and 8th in overall standings with a time 90.7 seconds. He was followed by Pete Plasteridge, the University's most consistent racer whose two run total of 93.8 enabled him to place 12th of the competing racers. Tom Clark finished 18th with a two run combined time of 106.1 followed closely by Walt Swiatek who finished 19th with a time of 106.6 seconds. Bob Bibby had a very fast first run but was disqualified for missing a gate in his second run.

This was the big race of the season for Coach William MacConnell. The Redmen won back valuable time from New England College, Amherst, and Keene State College placing the University in strong contention for 1st or 2nd position in the season's standings.

The University skiers proved their team's depth by being the only competing team to finish five men. All placed within the top twenty racers.

The Redmen are preparing for the last race of what appears to be their best season. This Saturday Boston University will host the Conference with a Giant Slalom race at Bridgton, Maine. The Redmen will go all out in an effort to finish first in the season's standings.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

The Chadbourne Maroons defeated the Webster Hawks 45-37 Monday night to win the Dormitory championship of the Intramural Basketball tournament. Dick Stewart led the Maroons with 16 points, but yielded high point honors to Chet Zabek of the Hawks who had 20 tallies.

Kappa Sig, without the services of Carl Kamens and Jim Neary were no match for a tremendously improved TKE team as they were defeated 63-41. Paul Caisse of TKE was high man in the game along with Bob Cogick with 16 points. Ron Merrill of TKE aided the team with 13 points.

Steve Shea, the leading scorer on campus with close to 30 points per game, was held for a season low of ten points by a strong Theta Chi defense, but Bob McNeil compensated for Shea as Lambda Chi Alpha prevailed over TC 47-38. McNeil had 18 points for the victors for his best game of the season. Jim Kuczynski led TC with 12 points.

The IFC championship game will now be between LCA and TKE tonight at 7:00. The concensus here looks for a major upset by TKE in a game that will be decided by four points or less.

The new Independent champion is Vicky's 202's. In a tough battle with the Eagles, the latter had their wings clipped 52-40. Mike Candel played a fine all around game coming up with 14 points to pace Vicky's. Ken Stevens of the Eagles led his

Late Night Bomb Scares Clear Grayson and Hills

by Ellen Levine and Tom Donovan Staff Reporters

Seven hundred and ninety students were forced out of their dorms Wednesday night when two hoax calls to telephone operators warned officials that bombs had been placed in Grayson House and Hills North.

The first call was received by the University operator at 8:22 and immediately transferred to the Dean of Men's office. With the threat that a bomb was set to go off in Grayson House at 11:30, State police were immediately notified.

Following their directions, Dean William Burkhardt ordered the evacuation of Grayson as well as the transfer of the girls in the east wing of Dickinson and the north wing of Field, which are adjacent to Grayson.

Counselors from Webster were notified at approximately 9:00 and were informed of the bomb threat. Grayson residents were asked to move quietly to their respective floors in Webster House.

As the boys piled into Webster, Dean Burkhardt ordered the transfer of the residents in both girls dorms as well as the removal of all persons within 300 feet of Grayson House.

By 9:30 six state policemen under the direction of Lt. Timothy Keene of the State Fire Marshal's Office and his assistant, Americo Sousa had arrived on the scene and began a room to room search of Grayson House.

Assisting the State Police were campus and local officers under the direction of Col. Marchant, head of University security.

Also on the scene was a bomb squad from Westover Air Force Base. Lt. Hirt, a member of the squad, said that he is called for this public service "about a couple of times a month."

The search in Grayson continued as troopers checked the other three dorms to make sure no one was in the areas nearest to Grayson. Two troopers said that even though no bomb had been found, the search would continue.

A call to Joseph Cotton of the Springfield Union, whose daughter is a resident of Eugene Field House, revealed that Springfield reporters had been sent to the University and that AP was carrying the story of the bomb

Dean of Medical School Notes Advantages of Non-Urban Site

In a talk to the Greenfield Lions Club, Dr. Lamar Soutter, Dean of the University Medical School, told of the advantages of a nonmetropolitan area as the school's site. Although not permitted to talk about a specific location, he gave support for such an area.

The UM school should be "first of all for teaching," he said, "but should combine all phases of medicine "because combination facilities offer lower building costs, better cross-reference facilities, and because research possibilities in such a center could attract the young flexible people the school will need to make it one of the best in the nation."

Soutter gave what appeared to be negative reasons for placing a medical school in a large city. He said specifically that if the school were in Boston, it would be competing with Boston hospitals on referrals. The same type of competition would also be true of Springfield or Worcester, he said.

In a reference to UMass, Soutter mentioned the University's public health department and school of nursing as being preferred near the medical school location.

One problem that has been encountered in choosing a site is that the six hospitals that have been offered all need rebuilding.

Soutter went on to say that if the location were in Amherst, he would like to see doctors from the Greenfield-Northampton area on the custody staff of the school hospital. He also felt that by adding a VA hospital to the University medical school hospital, the veterans would get the best possible care.

Campus Extension Defeated

At Amherst's town meeting Monday night, the extension of the Campus zone to the west side of Lincoln Avenue and south to Fearing Street was soundly defeated by a vote of 105-82.

Planning Board Chairman Theodore Bacon spoke in favor of the enlarged zone, saying it would be in the best interest of the town and eventually the neighborhood.

Dean of Students William Field also pointed out the tax value of new houses as compared with old ones, the stringent requirements of the master planning council, and the difficulty experienced by fraternities and sororities in finding large enough sites upon which to build.

The opposition argued that the residents simply wanted a place to live. With the fraternal organizations taking over, there will be many left over homes, isolated among the fraternities and the neighborhood will suffer, they claimed.

In a house to house canvass, the majority of residents of the proposed zone were opposed to the idea.

Forum To Feature Multiversity Problem

by Rita Gotowala

Harold Taylor, past president of Sarah Lawrence College, will address the Free University Forum tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

His topic will be "Multiversity vs. the Student." This is the first program in the five-part conference that has been planned by the Free University Forum and an invited group, Young Americans for Freedom.

TAYLOR

The 14 years of Taylor's presidency of Sarah Lawrence College, a post he assumed in 1945 at the age of thirty, were marked by his active leadership in the struggle for academic freedom, racial equality and religious tolerance.

Taylor, a friend of the late Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, has recently been appointed as a special consultant to Adlai E. Stevenson, chairman of the Eleanor Roosevelt Memorial Foundation, whose most recent programs and projects are designed to further human rights.

SINCE HIS RETIREMENT in 1959, Mr. Taylor has travelled in Russia and Asia on a special Ford Foundation grant and has lectured and taught in colleges and universities here and abroad. He is vice-chairman and co-founder of the National Committee for the Support of the Public Schools, and Chairman of the National Research Council on Peace Strategy.

In addition, Dr. Taylor has conducted special educational research studies, among the most recent being one in the field of education in liberal religion and another in university organization. He has published three books, On Education and Freedom, Art and the Intellect, and Essays in Teaching.

The rest of the conference schedule is as follows:

March 9—Panel discussion on "Quantity vs. Quality," 8:00 p.m., Mahar Auditorium.

March 11 — Panel discussion on "The University Image," 8:00 p.m., Mahar Auditorium.

March 16 — Panel discussion on "Undergraduate vs. Graduate," 8:00 p.m., Mahar Auditorium.

March 17—Paul Booth, Students for a Democratic Society, East Coast Coordinator of Berkeley .Free Speech Movement, will speak on "Berkeley, Student vs. Multiuniversity."

As stated by Sid Finehirsh, president of the Young Independents, the purpose of the conference is "to acquaint students here at this University with problems of a large university and to suggest possible solutions to these problems, showing how they can deal with them.

Senate Vocally Approves Mandatory Flag Salute

In the Mass. Senate Wednesday vocal approval was given to a proposal for legislation that would make it mandatory for every pupil and teacher to salute the American flag at the beginning of each school day.

This action followed the Monday decision by the House even though it directly contradicts the Court barring such legislation as unconstitutional. Under this legislation teachers would be responsible for making each child salute the flag and recite the "Pledge of Allegiance" under penalty of a five dollar fine for every five days missed.

An effort to revive a bill that would require public schools to teach a 30 hour course on the evils of communism brought a strong vote of disapproval and strained relationships across party lines.

IN NEW HAMPSHIRE Wednesday, the House Education Committee also disapproved a bill to bar "subversives from speaking at state-run schools and facilities. Amendments proposing specification of certain groups as subversive or the addition of stiff penalties were also turned down.

The negative report was expected and the bill was labelled "inexpedient to legislation" by twenty of the twenty-two members of the committee.

Despite this action the bill is considered to have a fair chance in the House where it will be introduced next Thursday. Heated discussion is assured.

Judiciary To Choose New Justices

The Men's Judiciary Board consists of seven undergraduates selected by the Student Senate Committee on Men's Affairs. The board members are chosen through interviews by members of the current board.

Four new members, one freshman, one junior, and two sophomores will be chosen Mar. 13-14.

The Men's Judiciary has jurisdiction in all misconduct of a general nature not committed in either Areas I or II (residence hall areas) which are referred by the Office of the Dean of Men.

Penalties from the Men's Judiciary range from a verbal warning to probation to recommendation for expulsion from the University, and are decided by common consent of board members.

Most of the penalties are in the nature of recommendations to the Dean of Men, who reviews and acts upon them.

Final enactment of the recommendations, therefore is done by the Office of the Dean of Men, but in nearly all cases the Judiciary's recommendation is followed.

In no case is the recommended penalty increased by a member of the Dean's office.

Smith College To Present Cherry Orchard

The Department of Theatre and Speech of Smith College will present The Cherry Orchard by Anton Chekhov on Mar. 10, 11, 12 and 13 at 8 p.m. in the Smith College Theatre. This is the second major production of the 1964-65 season and will be directed by Denton Snyder, associate professor in the Department of theatre and speech.

Two UMass sophomores, Charles Horne and William Poole are participating in the production.

Chekhov's great comedy was first produced in 1904 and almost seems to prophesy the coming revolution. The play takes place on the estate of Madame Ranevsky who has been living in Paris and returns to Russia only to see the end of her estate and the sale of the cherry orchard. An era comes to an end.

scare.

As late as 12:30 a.m., police were still searching the area behind Grayson and Field Houses. At 1:14, police issued an all-clear and the Grayson boys returned en masse to their dorm.

Meanwhile, as the search on the Hill was continuing, a second call was received at about 12:30 by a Northampton telephone supervisor, warning that a bomb would explode in Hills North.

By 1:10 the four-story dorm had been evacuated and the search for the alleged bomb began. However, an hour-long search failed to produce any explosives and the students were permitted to return to their rooms.

Dean Burkhardt remarked that the "last time there was a bomb scare was over three years ago at Johnson House." Col. Marchant, when questioned about the severity of the hoax, said that, "Not only is it a University offense, but it is also a Federal and State criminal offense."

As of 3 p.m. today there were no suspects and information as to the identity of the callers or verification of a rumor that one of the calls originated from Grayson house is still unavailable.

Senate Cites Proposal On Guidance System

by Roxana Adams
Staff Reporter

In a Wednesday night session of the Student Senate, the main issue was the proposal of a new guidance system that would assign an upperclassman to freshmen and sophomores in their majors for counseling purposes.

These advisors would be trained and qualified to give personal advice, and would be paid for their services. This system would not replace, but only supplement the present system that uses faculty advisors.

After a lengthy debate, highlighted by persistent arguments from both sides, a vote was taken, and a majority of one barely passed the motion.

Senator Jones then changed his vote to nay, which swayed the decision, defeating the motion. By doing this, the bill cannot come up for consideration again until next week. Insufficient debate of the proposal was one of Senator Jones' reasons for changing his vote.

The Senate also appropriated $14,372.50 for the 1956-66 fiscal year for the University Bands budget. New musical instruments account for almost $6,000 of this, as it was pointed out that, although the life expectancy of a band instrument is ten years, some of the instruments in use were 20 years old.

Passage of a bill keeping Goodell Library open from 5-10 p.m. on Saturday night on a four week trial basis was approved. The reserve desk will also be open during the same hours for a three week trial basis. Continuation of these hours will depend on usage of the library facilities.

The Senate moved to recommend to the Faculty Senate that a directory be printed listing faculty members by department, degrees received, field of specialization, and campus address.

Debate Honor Society Comes To UMass

The University of Massachusetts Forensic society was accepted for membership into the National Debate Honor society, Delta Sigma Rho - Tau Kappa Alpha. The formal initation will take place at the annual Forensic banquet held on this campus May 8.

Present at this ceremony will be the regional governor of Delta Sigma Rho-Tau Kappa Alpha, Herbert L. James of Dartmouth College. The main address will be delivered by a distinguished leader in the field of education whose name will soon be released by Gerald Goldhaber, chairman of the festivities for the UMass Forensic society.

ORIGINALLY DELTA SIGMA RHO and Tau Kappa Alpha were two different honoraries. Delta Sigma Rho was formed in 1906 in order to encourage effective and sincere public speaking. Since its inception, Delta Sigma Rho has exercised much influence in enouraging the development of courses in public speaking, in argumentation and persuasion of the collegiate level. It assisted in the formulation of departments of speech, and it did much to win administrative responsibility for supervision and the financial support of debate and oratory as extra-curricular activities.

Tau Kappa Alpha was established in 1906. It was dedicated to the cultivation of effective, intelligent and responsible speaking. Its activities and prestige were similar to DSR. In 1963 the two honoraries officially merged to form the largest and most distinguished organization of its kind in the U. S.

The UMass Forensic society, coached by Phillips Biddle of the Speech Dept. currently is the Yankee Conference champion and possesses one of the finest overall varsity team records in the East.

"Miss Kopper Kettle"

The first weekly winner has been chosen in the "Miss Kopper Kettle" Contest sponsored by the Graduate Supper Club of the School of Business Administration.

The winner is Candace "Candy" Tuttle, a freshman English major from Newton.

The purpose of the contest is to enable more coeds to receive recognition than is allowed in the University's many queen contests.

From the weekly winners a monthly winner will be chosen to compete with other monthly winners for the title of "Miss Kopper Kettle".

All girls who dine in the South Dining Commons are eligible as contestants.

"If the people could see real courts in action on television rather than 'Perry Mason' and 'The Defenders', then they would probably want to make some changes in our courts," Durham Caldwell told a University journalism class Wednesday.

Caldwell, news director of WHYN (Channel 40) in Springfield, was commenting on the responsibilities of television as a news medium.

He believes that television should be allowed in the courtroom since modern techniques make it possible for them "to take film of court proceedings without any commotion". He thinks that "there has been a great deal of overemphasis on this problem due to stubbornness."

HE DEFENDS HIS POSITION by theorizing that if TV cameras were in the courts at all times they would be no more of an influence on witnesses than the court reporters are today. He did admit that "some people in our business have very poor manners", but that, he said, is not common to television alone.

Caldwell doesn't suggest that live broadcasts originate from courtrooms. They would need much editing before the essentially boring court proceedings are palatable to the average viewer.

However, he explained, the public does have the right to view these proceedings and they have a right to know what is going on before a case goes to court.

Not to be able to print an arrested man's criminal record—as England forbids its press is an "outrage" according to Caldwell. The public should know if an habitual criminal has been arrested for a specific crime, he stated.

No one wants the noise, movement and lights of television interfering with proceedings, in court, clubroom, or church, but television proved it can use good taste when it televised President Kennedy's funeral.

Though Channel 40 does not editorialize, Caldwell said he would, if it were left to him. The selection of what news to broadcast and what aspects to play up in a story is a form of editorializing, however, he admitted.

Caldwell showed a film of the top news stories covered by Channel 40 in 1964 and described many of the difficulties involved.

A 38-year old Columbia liberal arts graduate, Caldwell believes that "anyone who goes to broadcasting school should have his head examined, unless you want to be a disc-jockey, then you can go anywhere." It is much more important to be well rounded, especially in the smaller stations where the jack-of-all-trades is invaluable.

Protestant Council to Sponsor 3 Films - "A Silent Trilogy"

The Protestant Christian Council is sponsoring "A Silent Trilogy" in conjuction with this year's Fine Arts Festival on Monday, March 8 at 8 p.m. in Bartlett auditorium. This trilogy is composed of silent films entitled "Two Men and a Wardrobe", "Parable", and "A Movie".

"Two Men and a Wardrobe" is an eloquent fantasy parable about the ambiguity of life and the contemporary world. Photographed simply, the film makes its points without commentary, assisted only by a backdrop of contemporary jazz.

"A Movie" is a Polish film involving a collage of events of the contemporary world suggesting that life on the one hand is perhaps but a joke, yet that man finds himself wanting to participate in it. The sound of a symphony pervades hauntingly throughout the film.

"The Parable" is a twenty-two minute film, all in pantomime. It opens with a gaudy circus parade moving through a wooded countryside. Bringing up the rear is a figure, all white on white from flowing robes to chalky Marcel Marceau make-up. He is the main character of the film and promotes its large amount of symbolism.

These three silent films will be presented free of admission and there will be a coffee hour afterwards in Bartlett lounge.

Two Amherst College Students Arrested For Undue Loitering At Amherst Tower

by Roger Hamilton and Philip Angell of the Amherst Student

Jarrett Leplin, '66, and Thomas Taylor, '66 of Amherst College were arrested late Monday night, for loitering at the Amherst Tower.

The two students were playing chess in the Tower at 3:00 p.m. and refused to leave before they finished soft drinks they had purchased. The police were called, but no action was taken then.

Campus police told the two of the warrant for their arrest at about midnight and then advised them to turn themselves in.

"At the station," Leplin said, "Officer Ashby handed me the warrant. I began to read it, and he pulled it out of my hands. I didn't have a chance to read it." Taylor said that Leplin had a right to read his warrant, whereupon he was told to "shut his face." "Don't talk to me that way," Taylor replied.

Three policemen then grabbed Taylor and pushed him into a cell. The two remained in jail for about 45 minutes before they were allowed to post bail. Tuesday morning they were arraigned in Northampton District Court where they pleaded not guilty to a charge of loitering. The trial is set for March 12.

Asked if the college will provide assistance, Dean Swartzbaugh could only say "we are concerned that they be provided with legal assistance." Taylor thought it is unlikely that the college will intervene at all.

Exile To Discuss Viet Conflict

Vo Thanh Minh, voluntary exile from North and South Vietnam, will discuss "The Conflict in My Country, Vietnam," on Monday, March 8, at 8 p.m. in the assembly room of the First Congregational Church, Amherst.

Since 1963 Vo Thanh Minh has been in the United States to protest military intervention in his country. With talks, vigils and fasts he has urged the United Nations to help end both Communist and United States military action in North and South Vietnam.

A CONFUCIAN SCHOLAR, Vo Thanh Minh was born in 1906 in Vinh, now in North Vietnam. He studied in his native country and in France.

Beginning in 1949 he left Vietnam to plead for his country, first at U.N. headquarters in Geneva, later in Paris.

In this country he has been jailed in Brooklyn and hospitalized in a psychiatric ward, as a result of his appeals, which are non-violent.

In this area he will speak at Smith College, the University of Massachusetts, at Amherst Regional High School and over WTTT.

Swedish Classic Based on Medieval Romantic Legend

The Virgin Spring is a film based upon a medieval folk-song known as "The Daughter of Tore of Vange." The folk-song exists in several versions both in verse and prose. It was romantic in origin, but it was in Scandinavia that it gained the character of a legend, and it is only in Scandinavia that it has been connected with a specific church and spring.

According to the legend, a young virgin called Karin was on her way to church when she was raped and killed by three brutal herdsmen, and her innocence was proclaimed for all by the miracle of a spring bursting forth from the spot where she lay. And at this spring her father vowed to erect a church to absolve himself for the sin of the revenge he had taken for his daughter's death.

The embellishment of the legend both broadens and intensifies the story of the folk-song. This primitive drama of violence and revenge is put in a Christian setting with the need for atonement and the assurance of the grace of God as the important message of the folk-song.

This Bergman film is being presented in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival. It will be shown Sunday, March 7 at 7:00 p.m. in the SU Ballroom.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

No Joke To Us

Wednesday night, an incident took place at the University which can only be viewed as the result of immaturity, and malice on the part of the individuals involved.

At approximately 8:20 p.m. a telephone call was received at the University switchboard which led to a costly and time consuming inconvenience for many people connected with the school. The call was to warn the community of an alleged bomb in Grayson House set to go off some time around 11:30 p.m. Another call came in later in the evening to warm of another bomb in Hills North.

An action of this sort leads to several repercussions of which many people are not aware. The most directly affected are the prankster's fellow students. They were forced out of their rooms for a period of several hours, during a time when most of them would normally be engaged in their studies.

These students, the direct victims of the "joke", certainly did not appreciate it. Their reactions range from contempt to sympathy for any mind which would devise such a scheme.

The bomb squad was called in from Westover Air Base. These men had to go into the restricted area, and as a result of their training and previous experience cannot regard such a mission as a prank. Lt. Sousa expressed their feelings when he told Grayson residents "This is no joke to us."

The entire campus security force, along with State Troopers, and members of the administratation were also called to the scene, unnecessarily jeapordizing the rest of the campus. Thus the entire campus was affected by the incident, not only the dorms which were evacuated.

In an official statement from the Dean of Men's office, Dean Hopkins said that the incident was a "very dangerous and very disturbing type of prank, and I find it practically unthinkable to consider that a student at UMass would take such a step to play a joke at the expense of his fellow students." The Collegian is in complete agreement with the Dean.

Spring time is almost here and students will become even more rambunctious than were the purpertrators of this hoax. Let us hope that the other citizens of this communiy are mature enough to keep their emotions in check, and to channel their energy into socially acceptable activities.

Editorial Associate Chairman

Promises To Keep

How pleasant—the coolness of the March breeze brushing your face as you lie outstretched near the window, the sound of laughing scholars at play on the lawns, the music of "Fascination" in the background, the sight of the bear tree stretched out in the sunlight. How pleasant is this moment so long due, this moment of leisure, rest, and appreciation which only one who has known the weight of long persistent labor can realize. The noise and laughter grows louder. The play grows harder. The moment steals away, and you must rise to return to your books, your study, or your work.

With the coming of warm Spring weather rides fancy, a desire to enjoy, to feel, or imagine rather than to think objectively or to work. We, at the University, must recall our responsibilities—our reasons for being here. We are here for a general education—to learn who we are, to achieve maturity, or to channel our thinking processes; we are here for a practical or technical education; or we are here for the prestige and advantages of a college diploma. We may take that moment for we have earned it. It may add to the meaning of time gone before or of time to come. Yet, we must not let an earned moment become a wasted hour. We may take that moment, but it must only be a moment.

We must move on in a rarely interrupted life of work and dedication. We must sacrifice our friends to our greater goals.

How many of us trade the coin of endurance, discipline, and realized intelligence for wasted pleasure in the Hatch? Does college entail by definition a coke, a jukebox, and friendly small talk? How many of us, on the other hand, will display our education not by means of a ring or written diploma but by means of competence and purpose?

Let us choose wisely when we take that moment. Let us not lose sight of our objectives in the light thoughts of Spring. Let us inscribe the words of Robert Frost and life of Thomas Dooley in our actions:

"The woods are lovely, dark, and deep,
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
and miles to go before I sleep."

Letters To The Editor

Birth Control

To the Editor:

Cardinal Cushing stated, through his envoy, at the State hearings on the birth control issue that, "the people whose good is at stake must decide what measure of public virtue is to be enforced upon them by laws and what public evils are to be legally repressed." The Cardinal also stated that the amendment "could result in great harm and mischief to the public, especially the young."

In response to this statement, concerning the proposed amendment to render ineffective earlier, antiquated laws forbidding the dissemination of birth control devices and information, the students of this state university should publicly express ther opinions.

Since we are the "young", we should have a right to decide for ourselves what is harmful and mischievous to us. We the students, and future citizens of Massachusetts, should express our desires concerning the proposed amendment, and inform the Cardinal that we are quite capable of deciding for ourselves as to whether or not the amendment would be harmful to us. Since the Cardinal approved in principal the legalized dissemination of birth control information and devices in Massachusetts, the point in question is only concerned with the wording of the bill and not with the ideas.

Therefore, the Collegian or some other University orgauization should conduct a poll asking the students whether they approve or disapprove of the amendment as it stands now. It's about time that the students of the Univ. of Mass. respond en masse to the state legislature concerning a question that definitely involves them.

Cow College

Now I know why this university is called the "cow college." I am referring to the affront which this school so ungraciously delivered to Josh White last Sunday night. I had heard from teachers and other students that this University had done such things in the past, but I had not believed that any university should be so inconsiderate.

It began after the performance of Britain's TW3 cast during the show given by Judy Collins, the British cast of TW3, and Josh White. The announcer brought Josh White on to the stage, and couples began leaving the cage. After and during each of Mr. White's songs, more people left. This was distracting both to Josh White and to the audience who remained. At one point, the clattering of the shoes and high heels of those who were departing drowned out the singing of Mr. White. Josh White, one of the finest performers in the field of folk music, certainly did not deserve the rebuke he suffered at the hands of this university's students.

I realize that some of the couples left because of some misunderstanding about curfew time. This, however, is no excuse for their conduct. They should have found out about the change in curfew time beforehand. Better still, the announcer could have announced the change in curfew before the start of the program.

The University is growing physically, when will it grow emotionally?

Freedom of Expression

Copy of Letter Sent to the Academic Affairs Committee at North Adams State College

To The Editor:

I am writing to you in an appeal that one of the basic freedoms of a democratic society is being jeopardized here at N.A.S.C. I am refering to the freedom of the student press, a freedom which is closely akin to freedom of speech.

Over the years I have been taught that one of the ideals that has made our country great has been a freedom of expression. Voices other than those in command warning its leaders to proceed with caution, that the mystical ship of state is travelling in dangerous waters. These voices have taken visable form in a free press.

The situation of the student voice has been forcefully relegated to the environment of the cafeteria where it exists in the forms of complaints, rumors, and other clandestine forms. This I set forth is primarily due to the acute censorship of the student newspaper which has culminated in the removal of its editor, Donald Wilkinson, on February nineteenth.

By the term "acute censorship" I refer to the reading of all news and editorial copy prior to publication by an advisor. In doing so, the paper's advisor, John McNulty, has instituted his own views as the policy views of the paper.

UNTIL FEB. 19TH, editors of student publications have tacitly complied with his stringent censorship. At that time, undeliberately, an article appeared in the Student Voice which Mr. McNulty had in September of 1964 "advised" be omitted because the article was in poor taste and I quote, "offensive."

The article on which the controversy is centered is entitled "Sex And The Single Man," reproduced from the NorthEastern News. It is a parody on the book Sex And The Single Girl. The article was thought to be in good taste by all members of the editorial staff prior to publication.

The strict censorship carried out by Mr. McNulty has resulted in the suppression of several editorials and letters to the editor, all forms of student opinion. This action I feel is detrimental to the democratic ideals of our nation, and also to the academic atmosphere at the college.

I AM WRITING this letter with the frame of mind that the students' voice at N.A.S.C. is one of involvement in the college's affairs, and, I wish to state, that this involvement is accompanied with a sense of responsibility. This sense of responsibility however, must be accompanied with student freedom, a freedom in which the student is allowed to participate.

I therefore petition the Academic Standing Committee either (1) recommend to President Freel that Donald Wilkinson be reinstated as editor of the student publication, that the constitution of the paper be revised, and that a new advisor for the paper be found, or (2) that a meeting of the Academic Standing Committee be called at which the matter of the student publication will be discussed.

Sincerely,
Donald A. Wilkinson

The Lesson of the Berkeley Affair

To the Editor:

I would like to quote a few comments on the Berkeley crisis which seem distrubingly applicable to the situation at this university. They are not startingly new, but they are impressive, succinct statements of conditions which are all the more appalling because they are not new and because they should gravely concern us all.

I therefore present the following quotes without further comment, only hoping that our student press will feel "free and responsible" enough to print them and that someone, anyone, on this campus—student, faculty member, or even administrator—will feel concerned enough to express their reaction to criticism which damns each and everyone of us for passively condoning some of the most glaring faults in our educational system.

"The function of administration is to expedite the essential academic business of teaching and learning and protectively to represent the academic community in its external relations, when administration becomes the dominant force in the community, however, it is a sign that extramural powers are in control — State, Church, or Economy—and the administration is their agent. Notoriety, Image-burnishing and fund-raising disregard or even prevent teaching and learning."

"At present in the United States, students—middle-class youth—are the major exploited class." "The labor of intelligent youth is needed and they are accordingly subjected to tight scheduling, speed-up, and other factory methods. Then it is not surprising if they organize their CIO. It is frivolous to tell them to go elsewhere if they don't like the rules, for they have no choice but to go to college, and one factory is like another." (Paul Goodman, "Thoughts on Berkeley," The New York View of Literature.)

"But most important, . . . [is] the situation of the student in the face of neutrality and competence: his moral nature must have some culture or other, and if no ideal or moral connections are made in the university, this culture—unless he has had an unusually lucky upbringing—will fall to the first extramural propagandsit, or intramural but extra-curricular propagandist . . ."
(Paul Goodman, "The Freedom to be Academic", i.e., The Cambridge Review, Number 5.)

Cinder Lots

To the Editor:

Would someone in the administration kindly inform me the estimated cost of permanently paving the parking lots near the School of Business Administration and the Old Cinders Lot?

I've Had it! that's right had it . . . up to and above the ankles ! I dare anyone affiliated with the administration to travel the treacherous route from the SBA building to the parking lot at night without any lights. If any person accepts the dare I would advise #1, a pair of OLD shoes and #2, tie them on very tightly otherwise he may be walking in his stocking feet.

The University is expanding. We are spending millions of dollars for new dormitories but we're spending comparatively few dollars to throw crushed cinder on top of the old decayed cinder that is beginning to tell the tale of time.

Spring vacation is just around the corner. There will be very few students on campus to interfere with crew of construction workers ot pave over the lots.

Is there any hope for modern road topping in the ancient and perilous parking lots? Will something be done to make the journey form SBA to the parking lot one that can be walked without hip boots?

Middle of the Road

To the Editor:

From the letter appearing concerning Hitch-Hiking ,I quote the following: " . . . hitch-hikers stand in the middle of the road . . . creating hazardous traffic conditions . . ." How absurd?

Really now, can anyone recall the last time he saw someone standing on the white line with out-stretched thumb?

Might I suggest to the author of the letter that before he engages in a vigorous Anti-Auto-Stop Campaign, he take a second look at those people standing in the middle of the road. They are called pedestrians. Their only wish is to cross the street, not ride in your nice shiny car. In this Commonwealth, these undesirables do have the right of way.

However if you should see an individual standing on the side of the road attempting to "hitch" a ride, DON'T STOP. He's probably just tired and trying to save fifteen minutes out of a busy schedule. "I guess hich-hiking students could . . . be taught how to be more considerate."

Army Cadets Accept Wings

by John Goodrich

Seven Army ROTC cadets were awarded their cadet wings by Colonel Albert W. Aykroyd Tuesday in Dickinson Hall.

The cadets had completed some 70 hours of training that was begun last summer. The schooling consisted of 35 hours of ground school and 35 hours of flight time with 20 solo hours.

The summer session began as these seven seniors completed their ROTC summer camp training. They then returned to campus for six weeks of work. The actual flying portion was done in conjunction with civilian pilots at LaFleur Airport in Northampton.

The seven cadets were Cadet Majors Thomas Kiernan, Herbert Mongue and Richard Greene, Cadet Captains Richard Bailey, Edward Lemieux and Donald Margeson and Cadet Lieutenant Louis Porazzo. Upon commissioning the cadets will be assigned to a basic branch before being sent to further flight training.

Sex and Morality

Reprinted from the Polytech Reporter

Editors's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on college morals, sex and sin. Any comments from the UMie gallery are welcome. Write % the Feature Editor.

by Hyman Katz

There once was a time when sex meant gender; it simply was a convenient manner in which to separate a group coming from the same genus and species, but having different characteristics. Today, however, sex has come to mean: pleasure, excitement, desire, sensuality, even ecstasy. Today there are sexy women and sexy men, there are sexy movies and sexy magazines. Understandably, many sociologists have proclaimed ours a sex-centered culture, Yet, far from being an abrupt innovation, today's mores are but the logical outgrowths of the fertile grounds our parents nurtured.

In the '20's our grandparents probably were alarmed to discover that a kiss was no longer a restricted commodity. Johnny had come marching home and the times had changed. There were plenty of girls and lots of jazz to make the young soldier forget. While it was still unheard of to praise sexual freedom, however, more girls were liable to pass a smiling glance in your direction. The propriety of the Victorian era was passing into antiquity.

Puritan Tradition

This decline was understandable. Morality in America was rooted in the Puritan tradition; and the Puritan tradition was based on the premise that legislation could cure all human imperfections. How really successful these legislative measures were as a means of repression is speculative, but with time the pendulum was to swing in the opposite direction. Puritanism was attacked by Freudian psychology as being harmful; repression began to be looked upon as a dangerous impulse. The man who supressed his sex instinct was now the neurotic. Another major force that contributed to the abandonment of the old code was the emergence of the female. Women began to demonstrate for increased rights. Everywhere, it seemed, women united in response to some ancient longing. Given the right to work and the right to vote was just a beginning. The fair sex demanded the right to love. No longer would they remain passive or feign detachment. Many were eager to adopt greater permissiveness; others soon learned.

Hence the old impediments were fading and the World War was but the finishing blow. The young men who populated the colleges during the aftermath were keener and bolder. They could now frequent a prostitute and smile at their own consciences. Pleasure was a desirable end and sex was but a justifiable means.

This, then, was a new beginning, a fresh start, a genesis for new standards—for modern moralities. With this considerably more permissive background, today's young adults, were well-equipped to seek new codes. Especially noticeable is the practice of combining love with sex. Few collegians today follow time-worn standards and abandon the campus to seek out a prostitute. Young men find coeds on their own and near-by campuses much more desirable. The emphasis has shifted from pleasure to fulfillment. While lust is still evident, it is no longer isolated in a meaningless relationship. Affairs are no longer casual. The conspirators treat each other as persons, not as a means toward an end.

CRITIQUE: Again

"Will there be or will there not be a third issue of Critique? This question was recently asked of editor Dick Littlefield. The response was a very enthusiastic "Yes! (I hope)."

This magazine of course criticisms was first published in the spring of 1964 under then editor Mark Cheren. Soon after Mark and a number of the staff graduated. The problem of graduation is once more making itself felt.

Quite a few of the present staff will graduate this June. This means new staff must be trained. Combine this with writing a constitution to legalize the whole affair, revision of the questionnaires and a valiant attempt to assume some semblance of organization and you have a rough idea of the work ahead.

Each semester Critique presents a number of course evaluations obtained from questionnaires distributed to both faculty and students. The objective being to provide a wide sampling of opinion to aid the student in course selection.

The emphasis during the next few weeks will be to produce a more comprehensive questionnaire. The questionnaire is a crucial part of the resulting course evaluations therefore it is being revised to obtain as much information as possible.

Editorial staff is needed. And people are desperately needed on the business staff to keep this independent magazine financially solvent. Meetings will be held each Tuesday night at 7 somewhere in the Union, near the Franklin room. If not on the spaghetti board, look for a rather large young man carrying a briefcase with a worried but optimistic look on his face. Follow him.

College Curtails Coed Kidnapping

CPS—The University of Oklahoma has prohibited kidnapping.

Under a new university rule, "any student who holds another person under physical constraint or causes this to be done shall be automatically suspended or dismissed from the University."

The university apparently imposed the ban because of an incident during an Engineering Week celebration last year which saw all the queen candidates kidnapped on the day of the engineers' ball.

Where Do UMies Come From?

by Harriet Braunfeld

A geographical analysis of Massachusetts residents attending UMass indicates that students from eastern metropolitan areas dominate the undergraduate enrollment of the University and Stockbridge, while the Graduate School is dominated by Western Massachusetts non-metropolitan residents.

Metropolitan areas, as referred to in the analysis, are: Boston, Brockton, Fall River, Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford, Springfield-Holyoke and Worcester.

The report, prepared by Raymond Castelpoggi of the Office of Institutional Studies at the University, showed that, if Massachusetts is divided into East and West by a line drawn through the approximate center of Worcester, 47.7% of UMass undergraduates are from Eastern, metropolitan. 19.8% from Western metropolitan areas and 32.5% from non-metropolitan areas.

The Stockbridge geographical distribution is similar, with 46.4% of its enrollment from Eastern metropolitan, 13.7% from Western metropolitan areas and 39.9% from non-metropolitan areas.

According to the report, the reason for the difference in distribution between the Undergraduate-Stockbridge divisions and the Graduate School is that a large number of married students establish residence in cities and towns nearby.

An analysis in terms of size of home towns shows that the majority of students in all three categories come from communities ranging in size from 10,000 to 24,999. The smallest number of students come from communities of 500,000 and over.

Lady Bostonian Loafers

Fashion Flairs

Mention the name Bostonian to a man, and he'll be reminded of two things . . . baked beans, and famous Bostonian Shoes. Bostonians have been footwear favorites with the male animal for more years than we can remember, but the interesting news is a new and captivating collection of fashion casuals called Lady Bostonians, designed and manufactured by the maker of men's Bostonians. They're sleek in look . . . trim in fit . . . wonderfully light and comfortable, and our informant tells us, "irresistibly priced!" You can see this new collection of Lady Bostonians at

Birch President Defends Society's War on Communism

By Jim Foudy

Asking his audience for a realization and understanding of the "war between Communism and a Christian Society", Robert Welch stressed the John Birch Society's goal to "combat collectivism and social evils. . .and to restore the moral and noble aspirations upon which civilization is founded."

Speaking at Amherst last night, Robert Welsh traced for an overcapacity audience of 650 his organization's growth since he founded it in 1958, and expressed his hope of having 1000 members in every one of the nation's 325 Congressional Districts by 1967. The present membership is somewhere between 60 and 100 thousand, but Welsh would not give specific figures.

WELCH NOTED that being an anti-Communist is not the only criterion for membership. He is interested in "men and women of good will and religious ideals" to follow the example of their namesake John Birch, a Christian missionary killed by the Chinese Communists in 1945, and "the first American casualty of the Third World War — a war with the Communists."

"The Communists are disturbed about our work in educating the American public," said Welch, and credited the strong monolithic nature of the organization, which has its headquarters at Belmont, Mass., as being "incapable of penetration by the Communists."

THE JOHN BIRCH SOCIETY strives at bettering Americanism which, as defined by its leading exponent, is "taking America at its very best in all aspects of life...a constructive opposition to Communism."

Welch disclaimed statements that the society is "a secret organization just because we withhold names of our members."

"It is common practice among many groups," commented the society's president, and he accused the "smearing, left-wing press, ignorant of our existence for two years" as perpetrators of the secrecy label.

DESPITE THE FACT that only 3% of the population are Communists, Welch stated that the other 97% are "beguiled by the Communists, and alienated by the 'Comsymps' against the Birch Society. Time, Look, and The New York Times have been leaders in swallowing the line fed by the Communists against the John Birch Society."

Yahoo's Humor Questioned

One of the latest controversial issues on campus is the latest issue of Yahoo.

The controversy seems to be whether or not Yahoo is still serving its primary function of being a campus humor magazine.

In the past Yahoo has served the campus well in several aspects. Its satire has established and perpetuated campus legends and it has created a link of closeness between students and administration. More recently, however, many readers have had the opinion that the clever satire had been replaced by a slapstick brand of humor, termed by some as "fourth grade bathroom humor."

But then, just making its readers laugh is a major function of a humor magazine. The point is whether they are laughing at Yahoo's humor or at the magazine itself. Do they enjoy perusing the latest copy, or do they just plow through it out of habit?

On Thursday, March 11, a poll on the value of Yahoo will appear in all residence halls on campus. If you have opinions, for or against our present humor magazine, be sure to voice them through this poll.

New Signals Discussed At State House

STATE HOUSE, Boston — A bill is now in the final stages of passage at the State House which would change hand signals of automobile operators.

The bill calls for the following signals: Intention to turn left is indicated by extending the left hand and arm horizontally outside the vehicle; intention to turn right is indicated by extending the left hand and arm upward; and intention to stop or decrease speed is indimated by extending the left hand and arm downward.

The present law requires extending the left arm and moving the index finger to indicate a left turn; extending the arm and moving the hand clockwise to indicate a right turn; and holding the hand and arm steady pointing left for intention to stop.

Registrar Proposes to Alter Present Driving Requirement

STATE HOUSE, Boston — Registrar of Motor Vehicles Richard E. McLaughlin has proposed that the minimum driving age in the Bay State be raised to 18. He said, "There is little need for the licensing of 16 and 17 year olds in this Commonwealth."

McLaughlin also suggested that the present learner's permit be retained, but said that the minimum age should be increased to 17, to allow training prior to the 18th birthday. McLaughlin was appearing before a legislative committee of the General Court.

Joined by several legislators who supported his views, the Registrar said that there are now 111,000 16 and 17 year olds licensed to drive in the Commonwealth who represent 4.5% of the total driving population.

"This 4.5% of our drivers produced nearly one fatality per week during the past year on our highways in the Commonwealth and was involved in fatal accidents at a rate 50% greater than our other drivers, said McLaughlin.

Emphasizing that the 16 and 17 year old drivers are not necessarily the worst drivers," the records, indeed, show that other age groups in the under-25 category are, from time to time, somewhat worse," the registrar told the committee that "there is no positive pattern; it changes from year to year."

The Registrar's proposal also included a so-called "Grandfather Clause" to protect those drivers who would be licensed and under the age of 18 at the time the proposal is implemented.

In characterizing the reasons for his proposal, the registrar declared, "I cannot think of driving privileges for the 16 and 17 year olds as being more, in the overwhelmingly vast preponderance of cases, than a minor convenience or a teen-age status symbol." He continued, "It seems to me that the people of the Commonwealth are paying a dreadful price for such a dubious advantage."

Univ. of Bridgeport Finds Grade Changes

When the office where the University of Bridgeport keeps data on student grades was broken into twice last summer, the immediate conclusion was that someone was out to alter his grades.

However, with more than 10,000 cards on file, it was a nearly impossible job to check all of them against the professors' originals.

But the third time the office was entered one file drawer was forced open. That narrowed the field of suspects.

Wednesday, after record-checking by the University and extensive police work, two young men were arrested.

POLICE ACCUSED BOTH of them of breaking-and-entering and one of them of blackmail. They said that a student, threatened that University officials would be told his records had been changed, had paid one pair $100.

Dr. Donald Kern, dean of admission, explained that use of an IBM machine would prevent such collegiate crime.

The IBM is now keeping most student records at Bridgeport, but current upperclassmen are still under an old non-automated record system and it was some of these old-style cards that were found changed.

"At first we couldn't figure out what was happening," Dr. Kern said. "There were valuable typewriters and duplicating equipment in the office but nothing was taken. We suspected someone was after the records but we couldn't pin the thing down until a file drawer was jimmied."

Scholarships Awarded By Alpha Zeta

At a convocation held recently by Alpha Zeta, agricultural honorary society at the University of Massachusetts, five UM College of Agriculture students were awarded scholarships.

Awarded strictly for academic performance, the New York Farmers Scholarship was set up by a group of New York businessmen, many of whom own farms they visit on weekends.

Fred P. Jeffrey, director of UM Stockbridge School, presented awards to Hubert E. Frenette of Vista, Cal., and James B. Cole of Columbus, Ga., both turf management majors; David S. Blodgett, wood technology major from Great Barrington; Ann C. Noble of Westminster and Rodney J. Croteau of Springfield, both food science and technology majors.

UM-Boston Leased At $170,000

BOSTON—President John W. Lederle of the University of Massachusetts told the Committee on Education that the UM has signed a five-year lease for property in downtown Boston at an annual rental of $170,000 for its Boston branch. He estimated that renovations this year alone will cost $732,000.

Lederle said University trustees hope to open the Boston branch at 100 Arlington St., in September.

He appeared before the committee on a bill filed by Sen. George V. Kenneally Jr., D-Boston, to have the permanent Boston branch of the university in Dorchester on the Milton border. Kenneally argued that the location was supported by the Milton selectmen, it is on an MBTA line, adjacent to expressways, there is sufficient land and "it would be ideal for a commuter college."

Lederle opposed the bill on the basis that trustees were weighing parking problems, tax exemption problems and other factors.

The UM president said the Boston location for the branch was selected after competitive bidding. Four buildings were analyzed, he said, but the building on Arlington St. was chosen because it offered facilities at the lowest cost.

When asked if he thought the moral surroundings of the area would be conducive to developing young students, Lederle said the BRA has plans for the area and he expected the condition would be remedied.

Campus Chest Drive To Open Monday

by Harriet Braunfeld and Pat Petow
Staff Reporters

Campus Chest will open its annual all-University appeal on Monday, Mar. 8, according to co-chairmen Toby Kaplan and Don Lewis.

For two weeks, money will be solicited directly from University students and faculty. In addition, various fund - raising events will be sponsored.

This year it is hoped, in view of University growth, that, in addition to monies given a World University Service Project and UMass scholarships, the drive will begin to take shape as a clearing-house for all on-campus charities and service organizations. An executive committee has been formed and is considering how this expansion may be accomplished. Linda Peterson and Candy Holtzman have been selected as treasurer and secretary respectively.

The Campus Chest Committee is composed of representatives from Maroon Keys, Scrolls, IFC, Pan Hel, Men's Inter-Dorm Council, Women's Inter - Dorm Council, GSS, APO, Student Senate, Collegian, Adelphia, Mortar Board, STOSO, and NRSA.

Novena To Honor Saint

Novena of Grace will begin at the Newman Center Chapel Sunday, March 7 at 7:00 p.m. For nine days, services will be held in honor of the great Jesuit saint, Francis Xavier.

The services will consist of prayers, a short homily each night, hymns and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The saint being honored by this devotion was born in 1506 in the province of Navarre, in northeastern Spain. In his missionary endeavors he ranged far over the lands of the Far East.

In 1552 he died on the Isle of Sancian. Since his death, he has been honored by means of devotions such as the Novena which is being conducted at the Center.

Monsignor David J. Power, Rev. J. Joseph Quigley, Rev. Charles Tolman S.J. and Rev. Raymond F. X. Cahill, S.J. will be leading the devotions and Prayers. Dr. Jean Hebert will direct the singing of the hymns aided by the members of the Newman Choir.

Frosh Five Downs P. C.; Ends Successful Season

by Rick Curvin

The Freshman Basketball team completed a highly successful year with a sound victory at Providence. Taking the lead 6-0 the Redmen were never challenged. The halftime score ended at 55-36 and the final score was 99-76. Rick Perkins had 24 points and 9 rebounds while Tindall had 13 points and 11 rebounds before being taken out early. Anderson had a great shooting night as he was very hot from the floor and scored 15 in limited action. Trying to keep the score down in the second half Leeman and hefty Don Alberico at forward but he fouled out before he could grab his first rebound. He was replaced by another huge forward, Hagan Anderson. The team showed great defense as well as offense with their zone press. They managed to get the ball many times without the Friars getting a shot. Bill Canata saw extended action and performed well with 8 points. Even good ol' Rick Badgly made the trip and netted 5. After seeing the 8:15 affair, maybe some of these freshmen will remember and help the varsity next year in Amherst.

It's a cinch many of these freshmen will be playing next year as this team had to be one of the finest at UMass in a few years. Considering the loss of two starters and three of the first seven men, and coming out with a record of 10 and 3, one must really give credit to these boys. Gasperack proved to be a reliable steady scorer and rebounder in Bernard's place. Perkins, moved to forward, did a creditable job, both rebounding and especially scoring, as can be seen in the last game. Don Alberico also helped out in the stretch, highlighted with 24 points at Army. Not enough can be said for big Billy Tindall, the big T from Mt. Kisco. He was a tower of strength under the boards and in scoring and playmaking. Leman said he was probably the finest player that he had ever coached.

Looking over the record, they lost only three games by a total of nine points. Bernard, Gerardi and Winston certainly would have kept them undefeated. An example of this is UConn. At Conn. the Redmen won by around twenty points but lost up here by 4 without the help of these three ballplayers. Greg Rand was a help also as Leeman thought he was the most improved player on the squad. All in all these boys really deserve a lot of credit for their fine play. Lets hope that the infusion of this team with a good nucleus of next years varsity will result in an outstanding Redmen team next year.

Shooters Second In Tourney

The Redmen Pistol Team, bouncing back after being downed by West Point last week, placed second in the NRA Sectional Tournament at the U. S. Coast Guard Academy last Saturday.

The Redmen turned in a fine 1075 score as they finished ahead of six other teams. The Coast Guard middies, featuring several All-America candidates, fired an excellent 1090 for top honors.

The performance gives the UMass squad a record of 21 and 6 for the season with only one regularly scheduled match remaining.

Pacing the Redmen scoring was sophomore sensation Charley Seavey with a 278, followed by George Wietecha with a 269. Juniors Eric Mussen and Pete Thomes closed out the scoring with a pair of 264's.

The 1075 score should place the UMass squad in the Nation's top ten. Last year the Redmen were ranked sixth nationally and second nationally for non-military institutions. This year's squad with only one senior has proven to be one of the best in the area and it holds great promise for next year.

Women Gymnasts Wind Up Winning Season

Staff Reporter

One of the youngest teams on campus, girls competitive gymnastics team, ended their first full scale dual meet season with 2 wins and 1 loss. The three other meets were either for JV girls only, or did not count for team points. The wins came over the girls from Southern Connecticut State College (32½ -36½) and Sargent college (6-36). The only losing score was in the meet against Springfield college (34-54) which is rated number one team in the East and perhaps number three or four in the entire nation.

DUE to this record the UMass girls are considered to be one of the top 10 gymnastics teams in the country and their high scorer, sophomore Marianne Davis, has received many honors. She has been invited to try out for the US girls team to compete against Great Britain in April, and also to take part in the National Intercollegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships to be held Mar. 27 in St. Louis, Mo. Only two girls were invited from New England to be in this event—1964 Olympic team member Kathy Corrigan from Springfield, and Marianne from UM. It certainly is a feather in the cap for the young girls team and they hope to qualify two or three competitors next year.

Tomorrow, UMass is sponsoring the biggest college women's gymnastics meet in the east, namely the North East Invitational Gymnastics Championships. All the major college teams in the East will

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

Last Tuesday evening, this writer had the pleasure of attending the UM-Providence College game at Alumni Hall on the PC campus. While the visiting Redmen were not given much of a chance to win, the team's supporters hoped that it would be a respectable showing for UMass.

The club was far from disgraced by the 102-75 loss. The shooting was subpar, but the performances of a number of the Redmen impressed the partisian crowd immensely. Chuck O'Rourke's 29 point performance had the PC fans wondering how he could have been left off of the All-New England team.

BUT THIS is to be a story on Providence. Coach Joe Mullaney, the brilliant head coach of the Friars, has produced another winner, this time by combining the talents of two juniors and three sophomores.

The team was figured to be pretty good this year, but was never expected to have such an outstanding record as 21-1 with another NCAA bid. The number four ranking on the national level has been held for the greater part of the season.

It is amazing how each of the individual talents of the PC players have been blended. In the forecourt are Bill Blair and Mike Riordan. In warmups, it looked as though Blair couldn't jump at all, but he proved otherwise on about the third PC shot of the game when he went above the rim at least up to his elbow and stuffed the rebound. The 6'3" forecourter hit with consistency from the corners as well as handling himself under the boards.

THE FIFTH and least heard about man on the starting five is Riordan, the other forward. He also measures in around the 6'4" mark. When circumstances call for it, he can shoot from the outside or corners. He picks off his share of the rebounds. In summary, he just seems to complement the talents of the other players. He is the kind of steady ball player that can pick up the slack when it is needed.

The center is Dexter Westbrook, one of the soph stars. A tremendously agile 6'8" ball player, this guy has put on some weight to increase his rebounding strength. As can all the rest of his teammates, Wetsbrook can and does shoot from the outside. He often has to carry a great deal of the rebounding load and is very capable in this contest. When he shows his jump shot, the fans have to be impressed.

THE REAL shooter on the club is Jim Benedict, one of the guards. He can toss shots in with consistency from 15 feet on out. He will be of tremendous importance against West Virginia where the club will have to shoot from the outside because of the great Mountaineer height.

The man that runs the team is the fabulous Jamie Walker. Mullaney calls him the best guard he ever had, and while he was held to 21 points by Massachusetts, his every move drew a response from the crowd. To believe Walker, you have to see him in person and concentrate on him even when he doesn't have the ball.

His quickness is incomparable. On one drive, he had the ball constantly moving while he was in the air before he sank a beautiful layup. At 6'3" and 205 lbs, the star can handle himself inside if he has to. His passes are a thing of beauty, being sharp, quick, and accurate.

RICK PERKINS of the UM frosh saw Cazzie Russell in the Holiday Festival during Christmas recess, and he would compare Walker most favorably to the highly touted Michigan star.

Russell at 6'5" gets much of his credit for being able to go inside, not just on his talents as a guard.

As for the PC team in general, they have shot all the year almost .480 from the field. The lowest starter is at .450. It is virtually impossible for this team to be any better. They have come as close to maximiling their potential is as possible. The only thing that they will have going for them is another year of experience.

Their overall finesse really points out why they are the number one team in New England.

late February." David Bischoff, assistant dean of the phys-ed department, reported.

"At first we thought it was a prank but now it looks like it isn't going to be returned. We of the phys-ed. department were very proud of this bas-relief and would like to have it back." Bischoff emphasized that if it is returned no questions will be asked.

This is a loss not only to the phys-ed. department, and to the Student Centennial Committee, but also to the prestige of the University. The bas-relief attracted many visitors, from outside the University, who were aware of Tait McKenie's reputation.

Costing $375, the bas-relief is the second valuable piece of art stolen from the University in the space of a month.

be entering, including Springfield College, Southern Connecticut State College, Central Connecticut State College, Bridgewater, Wheaton College, and others. The meet will start at 1:00 p.m. at Boyden auxiliary gymnasium. Admission is free.

THE BIGGEST battle in this meet is shaping up between three area gymnasts: Kathy Corrigan from Springfield, Marianne Davis from UMass and Sandie Gunnerrson from Southern Connecticut State College, all considered top performers. In dual meet situations Marianne won over Sandie at SCSC, and lost to Kathy only by ½ point. All the girls are working hard to upset the standings on Saturday. Other outstanding performers on Saturday will be Andrea Hyland from SC, Roberta Cooper from Bridgewater, and Charlyn Webster and Margie Smith from UMass.

Lambda Chi Alpha beat TKE 60-45 last night to win the IFC championship and qualify for the finals Monday night at 7:00. Their opponent will be the ogre of the Independent league, Vicky's 202's. Vicky's got into the finals by drubbing the dorm champs, the Chadbourne Maroons, 61-40.

Monday's game will have an interesting sidelight since no less than three members of Vicky's are, or have at one time been, associated with LCA. Center Charlie Fohlin, Guard Al Garsys, and Forward Ray Stanalis are the men whose emotions will be mixed when they play the rest of their brothers in the championship game.

In a battle for third place in the IFC, Theta Chi beat Kappa Sig 57-41. So the IFC final standings show LCA on top, TKE in second, TC takes third and KS winds up in fourth.

Steve Shea continues to lead all players in scoring. Wednesday night, against TKE, he picked up 22 points and was one of two men who broke the "20" barrier. Norman Tate from TC was the other.

Being the worst handicaper on campus, this typerwriter should refrain from a championship prediction; but here goes. The bigger, more experienced Vicky's will prevail over the younger but more accurate LCA by six points in a hard fought ballgame.

A five-man team from the University of Massachusetts won the first Annual Pioneer Valley College Invitational Bowling Tournament at the Schine Ten Pin Bowl in Springfield last weekend. There was a total field of 22 colleges and the Team of Ken Hardy, Mills; Ed Rojewski, Grayson #2, Rick D'Andrea, Greenough; Rick Marco, Garyson #1; and Don Tordoff of Middlesex rolled a total of 2640 to take the team trophy.

The IM Volleyball tournament has enough participants, but cannot operate unless there are more officials. Remember officials are paid good American currency and the extra money comes in handy. If anyone is interested contact the IM office.

Six Cage Records Broken

by John Goodrich

While the University of Massachusetts may have closed out the season on a sour note, th club managed to break a number of individual and team records. They range from an individual scoring mark to a new team shooting record.

The individual records and near misses are as follows: Most points in a season — Clarence Hill, 511 on 213 field goals and 85 foul shots for a 22.2 average. Old record, Doug Grutchfield, 506.

Most Field goals in a season—Hill, 213 out of 485 attempts. old record, Doug Grutchfield, 210.

Most rebounds in a season — Tim Edwards, 330. Old mark—Chuck O'Rourke, 308.

Most rebounds in a career — O'-Rourke 822. Old record, Doug Grutchfield, 782.

Highest field goal average individual—Edwards .518 on 156 of 301 shots. Old record, Roger Twitchell .483.

Most points in a half — Hill, 24 against Rhode Island, old record was 21 held by four players.

In addition, O'Rourke finished as the number five scorer and Clarence Hill stands number eight on the all time listing. O'-Rourke also was runner-up in many other categories refering to games and minutes played over his career.

As for the team, they also set many records. Most of those for a single game came out of the 120-84 trouncing of Vermont. They were most points in a half (60), Most field goals (50), Most points game (120), Most field goals in a half (29). The club tied a record by pulling down 75 rebounds against New Hampshire.

One of the most important records set during this year was the new season field goal mark. The Redmen shot .444 from the field to mark the fourth consecutive year the old mark was shattered.

There were two near misses, as the club averaged 83.7 points a game as compared to last year's 83.8 mark. The club broke the 2000 point mark again this year, but missed last years 2,-012 by only four points.

All of these statistics just prove how prolific a scoring club Coach John Orr fielded this season. While the 13-11 record might be a little disappointing to some, it must be remembered that the schedule the team played was one of the toughest in New England, and the toughest in the history of the school.

With only two men departing from this year's ranks, co-captains Charlie Kingston and Charlie O'Rourke, Orr should have plenty of talent on hand with which to build for his third consecutive winning season.

Hill and Edwards will provide a potent one-two scoring punch. It will be tough to replace the talents of the seniors, particularly O'Rourke's 15.5 points and 12.7 rebounds.

If there was any real source of discontent for the UM fans this year, it was not that the club lost to so many good schools, but rather that most of the scores were so large. Many figured the Redmen to give much tougher opposition to such teams as Boston College and Holy Cross.

The Redmen were engaged in few really close games this year. The two with BU, both U-Conn games, and the Washington of Mo. contests were the closest.

The Redmen are continuing to earn a great deal of respect from New England coaches as they continue their fine play against area foes. Their second place finish in Conference action and 12-5 record against NE opposition earned them the number five ranking for large schools, their losses coming only to those teams ranked above them.

So with the two big guns from this year's squad plus the group of sophomores that came along nicely this season, the club should be all right. One cannot overlook the expected help that should come from the likes of this year's 9-3 frosh squad. Bill Tyndall and Mike Bernard figure to be the big contributors, but the competition for starting berths should be keen.

Track Drubs UConn In Final Dual Meet

by Terry Carpenter

Paced by double victories by Art Larvey and Terry Carpenter, the Track Team rolled over the Univ. of Connecticut yesterday by a score of 65-48.

Larvey started the meet off with a victory in the broad jump and John Mederios was second. Conn. swept the weight throw for a brief lead, but Doug Renwick won the shot put, and Co-Capt. Dave Sadowsky took the pole vault with Bob Murray getting second. At this point the Redmen took the lead to stay.

John Lisack, right off a tough basketball season, placed second in the High Jump. John Mederos, who is still a little below par was third. Terry Carpenter raced to victory in the mile, leaving him undefeated in dual meets, while Tom Panke was second. Art Larvey then took his second first of the day in the 60-yard dash. The swift sophomore set a school record with a 6.4 seconds clocking, and qualified to compete in the IC4A's. Medeiros placed second in the high hurdles, and wrapped the meet up for the Redmen.

The team thus ended the season with a 3-2 dual meet record. They now look forward to the IC4A's this weekend at Madison Square Garden in N.Y.C.; and the Yankee Conference meet next weekend at UConn. Those that have qualified for the IC4A's and will be making the trip are Art Larvey, John Mederios—Dash and broad jump; Damian Gaffney—600; Dave Sadowsky—pole vault; Tom Panke—mile and 1000; and Terry Carpenter, Bob Ramsay—mile and two mile.

N.E. Wrestling Tourney Weekend Sports Feature

by Dave Sadowsky

The 19th annual New England Intercollegiate Wrestling tournament is being held this weekend at the Boyden Physical Education building. Matches will be held Friday night and Saturday morning and afternoon.

The UMass team should do well this year. The team has three outstanding wrestlers in Jesse Borgan, Dave Kelley, and Milt Morin. All three have gone undefeated so far this year, and each has an excellent shot at the top in his weight class. Big Milt has an extremely bright outlook since he has already defeated two of the best wrestlers in his class.

Springfield nas previously dominated all of the tournaments, and it looks like they are the team to beat. Our team would have a tough time beating them, but they should finish high in the tournament. This will be an excellent opportunity for all students to see some really outstanding wrestling, and it is certain the UMass wrestling team will appreciate your support.

Redman wrestling star Jessie Brogan is just one of the many standouts who will appear at N.E. tourney at Boyden Building this weekend.

President Lederle Calls For "Grand Design"

by Dan Glosband, Managing Editor

". . . I firmly believe that our aims should be great aims, our design a grand one, and our nope for accomplishment the most vigorous and purposeful." So reads the annual report of President John Lederle in reference to his objective of bringing Massachusetts the distinction of being first in the world in private and public education.

At the fore of the 'grand design' is the University. "The sound concept is that there be the University of Massachusetts (with Branches) as the capstone of higher education and the only institution empowered to grant doctoral degrees . . ."

THE REPORTS CALL FOR a careful definition of functions between the State's institutions, for an organically and logically developed system of higher education, and for prevention of duplication, pointing to two obvious implications. They are: 1) A reaffirmation of support for the Willis-Harrington Commission report and it's intrinsic call for coordination; and 2) A seeming rebuff to Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute's plea for a retention of its university-like liberal arts program.

What is needed, in other words, is a general pattern or design by which all new proposals may be tested to determine if 1) such a new program is needed, 2) it does or does not duplicate existing programs, and 3) it is educationally sound and valid.

"Such will not be the case if well intentioned but spur-of-the-moment efforts are made to launch new "university - level" programs outside the purview of the University of Massachusetts," said Lederle.

PRES. LEDERLE

According to the president, "We must avoid the mad scramble found in other states where every institution is trying to be a university."

IN RETROSPECT, Lederle noted several gains made over the past few years. Operations appropriations for the past four years are up 30%, enrollment for the same period is up 70%, while faculty salaries are up 25%. The graduate program is greatly expanded, and a Boston Campus will be in operation next September for 1000 undergraduates.

The report cited the year round function of the University and its evolution into a cultural center in its own right.

FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS will be highlighted by a Fine Arts Center and an extended library of one million volumes. Such expansion is justified by the need to prove the American public university equal to the challenge of a new age of man.

Emphasis on the growth of the University is resultant in part from "the hard fact that any judgment of a state's system of higher education must inevitably start with the state university. And rightly so," said Lederle.

The SMTI reaction to the report is awaited.

Volpe's Statement Defends Criticized Appointments

Defending his appointment of two new UMass trustees, and a new commissioner of Correction, new Commissioner of Correction, lowing statement to the press last Wednesday, March 3.

I am certain you gentlemen realize that the terms of Mr. McGrath and Judge Fox has expired. This has not been emphasized in public discussion.

I did not "fire" them. I did not "oust" them. In not reappointing them, I was not conducting a "purge," as some publications characterized the situation.

It is hardly a partisan, political "purge" when one democrat is replaced by another. And replacement of an individual is not necessarily a reflection upon that individual or his work.

These men were appointed for specific terms. They did not have life tenure. They did not have longevity rights to the positions, specific, inherent or otherwise. The fact that they gave good service is certainly to their credit, but could not be, and should not be, a guarantee of incumbency in perpetuity, regardless of the merits of others.

If I have two or three good prospects for a position, it is my responsibility and right to pick the one I believe to be the best one. It is my responsibility alone.

He becomes my choice, and I see nothing to be gained, and much to be deplored, by a public discussion of the relative merits of the candidates.

GOV. VOLPE

Nor do I see any merit in the indiscriminate ascribing of inferior motives to the appointing power.

Volpe has been the target of caustic criticism in a host of newspaper editorials. His appointments have been called partisan and unwise.

House Rejects Bill For Teaching of Communism

After lengthy debate, the House, by a 28 to 64 standing vote, refused to reconsider a previous action when it rejected a bill to require the teaching of communism in public schools in the Commonwealth. The bill is now killed for this legislative session.

Reconsideration was opposed by Rep. Sidney Q. Curtiss of Sheffield, Republican floor leader, who said the bill in effect was a course on philosophy, and ordinary philosophy in government should not be taken up until students reach the college level.

FAVORING THE BILL was Rep. Joseph DiCarlo (D-Revere), who quoted from a book by the American Bar Association as saying that evils of communism should be taught. He questioned the number of students who go on to college and study philosophy of government. "This is our problem—not the students who go to college but the students who do not go to college," said Rep. DiCarlo.

Rep. Thomas C. Wojtkowski (D-Pittsfield) said the basic issue is how it should be taught—for 30 hours by legislative mandate of whether the schools should develop the course in connection with their history and economic courses. He said only four states have passed legislation of this type since 1954—Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Louisiana. He said 25 states have integrated the course with other programs, and 35 states through the department of education. "Massachusetts should stay with this group," he said.

Poverty Workshop Planned By DVP

The DVP program committee has announced final plans for its poverty workshop program to be held here March 22, 23 and 24.

The program, to feature such speakers as Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) and noted sociologist Oscar Lewis, will answer questions concerning the problem of poverty in the United States and efforts made on the national and state level to solve it.

THE HIGHLIGHT of the program will be the March 24 panel discussion with Lewis, Martin Deutch (psychologist) and Robert Lampman, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin. Lampman will also attend classes on campus, explaining the nature of poverty and answering questions from students.

Senator Ribicoff, former Sec. of Health, Education and Welfare will present a lecture March 23, concerned with the efforts of the Federal Government to solve the problem of poverty.

DVP has also released tentative plans for the upcoming year, among them an appearance by Allen Dulles, former head of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Finalists Chosen For Greek Week Queen

Diana Alverez is a sophomore from Melrose, Mass. and is a Chi Omega sister. Diana's major is speech. Gina Testa, a sophomore from Fairhaven, Mass., is a sister in Sigma Kappa majoring in English-Journalism. Roxanne Gile is a sister in Kappa Kappa Gamma majoring in Government. Roxanne comes from Kingston, Mass.

Kathy Kane, a freshman from Fairport, N. Y. is majoring in Home Economics. Kathy is now pledging Chi Omega sorority. The last of the five finalists is Merryll (Sue) Barnes, a freshman from Glencove, Long Island. Merryll is pledging Kappa Kappa Gamma and is majoring in Psychology.

During the next two weeks these girls will be interviewed by judges chosen from the faculty who choose the queen to be crowned at the Greek Ball on Friday night, April 2.

The Queen and her court will reign over Greek Weekend events from the Greek Ball night through the Concert on April 4th.

Voting for Greek Week Queen finalists took piace Thursday, Mar. 4, in the lobby of the SU. The five finalists that were chosen are left to right: Merryll Barnes '68; Kathy Kane '68; Roxanne Gile '67; Diana Alverez '67; and Gina Testa '67. One of these girls will be chosen as the Greek Week Queen at the Greek Ball on Friday night April 2. The Queen will reign over a gala weekend planned by the UMass Greek world.

UMass Poets Will Read Own Works

Prof. David R. Clark and Prof. Leon Barron of the University of Massachusetts English Department will read selections from their poetry Tuesday at 7:30 in Jones Library.

Clark has published his poem in magazines and has also held the Eugene Saxton Memorial Fellowship in poetry. He has lectured at the William Butler Yeats international summer school in Ireland and during 1960-1961 was Fullbright lecturer at the University of Iceland.

In addition to being a member of the University English Department, Barron is master of Grayson House, one of the new resident college dormitories. He has published poetry and criticism in a number of journals.

Barron and Clark make up half of the four University poets represented in "The Curious Quirex."

Former College President Sees Large University Fading

by Ray Abbott,
Staff Reporter

Seeing the American university as a gigantic machine where thousands of students are involved in a factory operation of producing and disseminating knowledge, Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College, expressed hope that students today are rejecting traditional American ideas of education.

Taylor, speaking before a small gathering in the SU Ballroom Friday evening, said, "There is a new awareness on the part of students from Yale to Berkeley."

Describing the multiversity or large university as made up of consumers (students) who buy a product (a degree) to improve their economic and social position, Taylor said, "This condition should alarm us."

FORTUNATELY, HE EXPLAINED, some students are rejecting these ideas. Sensitive, well educated, and intelligent students, such as those who are protesting at Berkeley, are questioning the direction of American education and universities. "In over three months," said Taylor, "students have developed new educational policies in California."

Explaining the events at Berkeley, Taylor said students originally were protesting a rule that denied them the right to collect funds on campus for a civil rights cause. Students were quick to realize that they should be allowed to act. As a result, the movement grew from 200 to 5,000 students and took on new and more meaningful significance.

THE ADMINISTRATION was slow to realize, explained Taylor, that they were not dealing with ordinary students. Many of the young men involved "won their spurs in the tougher league in Mississippi." For them, going to Berkeley was a much softer league.

Taylor related the social protest of Negroes to the growing awareness of American students, particularly at larger institutions. "The young Negroes in 1958-59 who started the civil rights movement caught the imagination of students in the university. That example served to generate political and moral awareness," he explained.

As the movement caught on, an explosion of public consciousness raised issues originally brought out by youth.

Taylor sees students of today taking much more interest in issues of reform of education, foreign policy, social and moral issues, and other important matters.

"THIS HAS NOT ALWAYS BEEN THE CASE," he explained. In the 1950's the communist issue inhibited political awareness among students. In addition, American education was blamed because the Soviets put up the first satellites. "Consequently," said Taylor, "national obsession with technology has resulted for the national interest."

Furthermore, he continued, we began to equate education with those who could deal with academic materials quickly.

"Many students today," said Taylor, "want to return to the more serious attitudes of education." They want talents to be used to help others and not merely used for self centered reasons. They believe the university should deal with what kind of lives we should be living as people and not with those things that do not really matter.

TAYLOR ALSO CITED a need for more creative and performing artists so a notion of joy can be gained in our society rather than merely a concern for military and economic security.

"There is a growing need in our country for artists," said Taylor. The country has expanded such operations over the past ten years, but we have not thought of this as a function of the university.

Dope At Harvard More Talk Than Use

Harvard Square in Cambridge has been the focal point of a relatively quiet controversy since last month. The controversy is over the growth of drug activity, allegedly promoted by the students in the square.

Marijuana appears to be the most popular drug, and it is probably true that several hundred students smoke the drug at least once in their undergraduate years, said Jim Morse of the Boston Globe. How many smoke frequently is uncertain.

ONLY A FEW STUDENTS import and sell marijuana on a regular basis. Only a few do it to make money and only a few do it on a large scale, according to Globe sources.

About 20 persons bring marijuana to the square in large quantities (by the pound). They are members of what is called the "Cambridge underground"; most of them are not students, drug authorities say.

Charles P. Whitlock, assistant to Harvard President Nathan Pusey for civic and governmental relations, concedes that students may be talking more about marijuana and other narcotics but says there is no evidence "that the talkers are users."

BUT THE STUDENTS and residents of the Harvard Square area disagree with the general opinion that drug activity is student-inspired and encouraged.

They find the problem stems from the beatnick element that hangs around the square cafeterias and is composed of leather - jacket motorcycle types of college age. However, they are not students. They are kids looking for identity. They want to be mistaken for students, so the Harvard students claim.

According to the Harvard Crimson, the undergraduate news paper, there is no evidence that Harvard is responsible for a sizable portion of the drug traffic in the square. The crisis in drug activity was called greatly exaggerated by people without accurate information.

CAMBRIDGE CHIEF OF POLICE BRENNAN says that there has been no increase in crime, including drug traffic, in the area. In fact, he said, there are fewer temptations in Harvard Square today than there were 10 years ago.

Dr. Farnsworth, director of the Harvard University health services, called drug consumption "a way-station on the road to a life different from that for which students come to a university."

Four College News Media Has Problem

"Among the four colleges in this area, communications appear to be the largest problem," said Mr. Davenport, a representative from Amherst College to a 4-College Program luncheon meeting. He went on to mention the necessity of a paid staff for posting events, as he did not think such activities were entirely possible on the student level.

Also in the area of communications, a more concrete method for newspaper staffs to secure news stories "first hand" was suggested. A formal news bureau would be one way. A system of regular student newspaper exchange, using newspapers for advertising events of all schools concerned, and a 4-College council to meet approximately once a month were other suggestions.

IN EXPANDING THE 4-COLLEGE scope it was suggested that a program could be established whereby students could join an organization of the 4-College Program, independent of the individual school.

The possibility of extending to other campuses the performances of groups which come to a particular campus was suggested.

Editor's Note: This is part II of our series on sex and morality. Address comments % the Feature Editor.

Far too many seem to be taking "the pursuit of happiness"all too literally. Those who maintain this philosophy often add that the pursuit of pleasure is the one sure and direct way to happiness. Pleasures of the moment, being the most direct, are therefore the most valued. It becomes evident, then, that the pleasures of the senses, being the most intense, should be preferred. These convictions may be traced back to the pre-Socratic era and represent no new contributions. Youth is merely asserting openly a convenient viewpoint which others have long professed.

Another widely held attitude among today's college men and women is that of evaluating the likely results of one's actions. Many who are repulsed by the reasoning that it is one's right to engage in sexual intercourse, sill indulge themselves by maintaining that the experience is meaningful. This viewpoint has been fostered by many university psychologists. Having no safe and sure criteria, many teachers advise college students to consider whether sexual intercourse would prove rewarding to the relationship. Such impartial evaluation of the effects of sexual intercourse upon a close relationship is commendable, if not realistic. Surprisingly, however, a great number of our college youth seem to be sufficiently mature to make such a decision. By taking sex out of the brothel and onto the campus they have succeeded, to an extent, in abandoning casual, meaningless affairs. Sexual intercourse is both spiritual and passionate to many of these young adults. This combination of sex with love could prove most acceptable if the young adults were emotionally equipped to exercise sufficient self-control—and economically able to meet the consequences if they were not.

Not all current attitudes are deliberative. Undoubtedly, a great number of people act as they do simply because sex stimulates them, and so many others are doing it. In most instances, however people with such convictions stop short of intercourse. Recently this has been attacked as blocking fulfillment. This has gotten to the point where some college women have adopted the extremist, "all-or-nothing" attitude.

Compulsion

Those who believe they suffer from an uncontrolable urge form another minority group. The penalties they frequently meet are most severe. Their lack of self-control is most often interpreted as a major criminal offense, whereas it is often a basic immaturity or unbalance. Unlike others today, they hold no particular philosophy. Their motiva-

Julius Caesar

by Alice Wishart
Feature Staff

"Julius Caesar" fared better in the hands of the University Theatre last week than he did at the hands of his fellow Romans. The cast of (not quite) thousands spoke their lines comfortably and meaningfully. It was, in fact, a pleasure to hear humane interpretations of Shakespeare's wordy apostrophes—this in an era when demi-god Willie has been known to freeze up vocal cords for miles around.

AMONG THE NOTABLE PERFORMANCES was that of Mark Antony, played by Leslie B. Titcomb, whose strong action underwrote a compelling interpretation. Walter Radulski gave a Brutus whose repressed force and tension evoked the "noblest Roman" at war with himself. George Dimock, as Cassius, mesmerized the ideal-bound Brutus with calculated politeness. Sheila Ferrini conveyed Calpurnia's wretched worry with dignity even though her spangled eyelids suggested anachronistic spectacles. David Blaisdell was an adequate Caesar who died with more style than he had lived.

Francis Foley, as Casca, added a warrior's swagger along with a charming brogue, while Ken Bordner's brief appearance as the sick Ligarius also had the air of the lion chained. The Soothsayer, fearful of his own insights, loomed before a haunting sky in the person of Don Johnson.

The crowd scenes and the battle scene were exciting and involved the audience entirely. Then, a moving silhouette of tragic nobility artfully concluded the evening.

THE SKY CHANGES OF NIGHT, storm and bright, sunny day were resourcefully under the technical direction of James Stockman. Their thunder and lightning indoors was not for the weak-hearted, but their sunrise effect cleverly signaled the blood-bath that followed.

The familiar literature of the play gained spectacle from the imposing set, while the costumes lent it movement and grace. The lighting was in sensitive accord with the mood throughout. However, some of the make-up should have been checked: blue lights emphasized highlights and made grotesque masks on some faces.

The student thespians attained a rare level: an evening of be-

Student Pay Hike

A large discrepancy exists in the pay scale at the University. At the very pinnacle there are a few administrators receiving a salary equal to or exceeding that received by the Governor of the Commonwealth. At the bottom of the totem pole can be found students who work for a dollar an hour.

These two extremes in pay are not mentioned for the purpose of questioning the high salaries of UMass administrators. Administrative positions not only require extenive educational experience but also entail enormous responsibility, and as a result, deserve high remuneration.

However, what needs to be questioned is the low pay being received by student employees of the University. Last year the minmum student wage was ninety cents an hour. This amount has been increased by ten cents. Yet, a still larger raise is needed to insure student employees adequate compensation for their labors.

Students frequently work in the same capacity as non-student employees who receive much higher wages. From a remunerative viewpoint it would be more rewarding for a student to drop out of the University and be re-employed as regular help. It is high time that students be paid on the basis of the work they do rather than on the basis of a general student wage.

Students with high cumes have been rewarded in the form of more scholarship aid. It is only approprate that less gifted students who have to work their way through college be granted an increase in pay to at least the $1.25 state minimum.

UMass Party Boy

It's a weekday, about 9:00 p.m. and as we enter the confines of Goodell's fourth level, we come across Dom (that's short for dirty old man). He is hunched over Plato's Republic, deeply engrossed —no, not in his book, but in the great flick two desks away.

But wait, he just checked his watch and is now hastily gathering up his books. He almost forgot to take his study break. And so, he is off to where all good heroes go, the Hatch. This is Dom's second home. He has discovered that by cutting eight lectures per week, and by spending all of his free time between those absurd uncuttable classes, he can devote 24.6 hours per week to satiating his intellectual curiousity hatching it. Where else can one sit down in a choice location i.e. up front, and count the number of people he knows?

Here he can share with his friends the secret of his success. Imagine, a 1.65 cume, and he never even cracked a book!

Dom is so smooth he appears never to have a care in the world. But never let it be said that he does not worry. For by Wednesday evening of each week, he is faced with the crucial issue of finding a sharp date for the weekend. But, for a hot ticket like Dom this is not really a major problem. He has an amazing capacity for conversing with members of the fairer sex, and when he ultimately succeeds in out-dumping his new found friend his success is assured. What more could a girl desire from a guy than a pair of "weejuns, grey socks, and an excellent capacity for dumping?

And so, Dom picks up his Saturday night date and they're off to a "really great party". After arriving and making his formal entrance, a ritual of backslapping and arm slugging, he is ready to display his hidden talents. He's a terrific dancer, and above all, he can chug-a-lug better than anyone else there. After a while he settles down to conversation with his date.

He discusses such intellectual topics as, sex on the college campus, and how to chalk up brownie points. He then concludes with a dissertation of his episodes in the local "haunts", Mike's, the Drake, and the Valley. By the end of her thrilling evening with Dom, his date begins to wish he had haunted Mike's this weekend and not her.

After pushing away our hero at the doorstep, oops, I guess a little too hard, (he just fell over,) our co-ed does a little rational thinking and comes to this conclusion.

Dom is a member of that sizable group who spends four years of his life for the sole purpose of obtaining a litttle piece of paper, more popularly known as a diploma, while of course making certain that he sacrafices none of his "good times". What he fails to realize is the fact that this piece of paper is no wonder formula that reads, "You've made it Dom". What it really says is, "now it's up to you to make something of yourself";

Diploma in hand he is suddenly thrust out into the world all by himself with many fond memories but a pityfully shallow prospective on life. Life looks frighteningy dismal; But don't worry Dom, there remains one glimmering hope—Uncle Sam might ever need you!

Policy Statement

Editor's Note: This statement in no way reflects the opinions of the Collegian or the members of the staff. It does not reflect, either, the opinions of any individual Club member.

Extremism

This organization shall define as extreme political action that which goes beyond constitutional legal bounds, and extremist groups as those which are listed by the Attorney General's Office as subversive and devoted to unconstitutional and unlawful action. We are unequivocally opposed to such action and such groups.

Foreign Policy

Communism thrives on human misery. It has been fostered by individuals who deny others basic human freedoms necessary to the pursuit of life, liberty, and happiness. The United States Government should, by action as well as by words, openly exhibit its opposition to World Communism—its goals and methods of action.

A concise and consistent definition of executive policies leading to ultimate South Vietnamese victory in South Vietnam should be established. The United States should increase its economic sanctions on Cuba and should consider the possibility of providing military aid to Cuban exiles. The maintenance of a free West Berlin is integral to the foreign policy of the United States.

The United States position in the United Nations should be critically re-examined in view of existing inadequacies concerning the best interest of the United States.

Domestic Policy

The federal, state, and local governments are urged to keep their policies concerning security risks under constant review and to enforce these policies to the greatest possible degree, concurrent with the freedoms granted by the Constitution.

We support unlimited indirect Federal Aid to Education and favor the present government policy of non-regulation of education.

This group believes that the agriculture industry will improve upon gaining its independence from government controls. This independence should be achieved through an intelligent long-range program.

The House Un-American Activities Committee must be continued as a necessary complement to the other investigative agencies of the United States Government.

The graduated income tax system should be studied to determine whether better alternatives exist.

Past congressional action has given more powers to labor unions than is advisable and a change of certain existing laws is necessary. The Federal Government should not intervene in labor-management relations unless a contract has been broken and such intervention is requested by either of the parties involved or in the case of a national emergency.

Right-to-Work laws (as defined by Section 14B of the Taft Hartley Law) are necessary to protect the rights of the individual worker and employer. The Social Security system must be maintained until such a time as a workable, voluntary system can be established.

Socialized medecine is a reprehensible contradiction to our American concept of free association and enterpirse. We therefore advocate the system of Eldercare, presently under consideration.

This organization shall oppose any pending federal legislation which limits individual rights as guaranteed by the Constitution.

The Federal Government has the right and the duty to support by all Constitutional means the pursuit of freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution.

Proper Balance In Education Sought

Northeastern President Asa S. Knowles has warned that Massachusetts taxpayers should insist upon a proper balance between public and private education.

Speaking with reference to the new UMASS-Boston, Dr. Knowles pointed out that private colleges and universities have made Massachusetts a world center for higher education.

"Their pioneering efforts are also largely responsible for the industrial and scientific strength now enjoyed by the Commonwealth," Dr. Knowles said.

He admitted that there would be enough qualified Massachusetts students seeking admission to college in the years to come to warrant expansion by both public and private facilities.

However, he warned, again with obvious reference to UMASS-Boston, against the costly duplication of existing programs at state expense to accommodate students who could be better served at private institutions.

Dr. Knowles called for an expansion of the state scholarship program, as well as for growth in state-supported facilities.

A NEW PROGRAM OF INTEREST TO

MEN

It isn't easy to become an officer in the United States Army. Only the best young men are selected. The training and course of study are demanding.

But if you can qualify—and you should find out if you can—you will receive training which will put you a step ahead of other college graduates. Army ROTC training will give you experience that most college graduates do not get—in leading and managing other men, in organizational techniques, in self-discipline and in speaking on your feet. This kind of experience will pay off in everything you do the rest of your life.

Army ROTC has a new program designed specifically for outstanding men who already have two years of college, and plan to continue their college work. During your junior and senior years in this program, you will receive $40 per month. Want to find out more about the program? Simply send in the coupon below, or see the Professor of Military Science if you are now attending an ROTC college. There's no obligation—except the one you owe to yourself.

If you're good enough to be an Army Officer, don't settle for less

Ford Motor Company is:

responsibility

Stephen Jaeger
B.B.A., Univ. of Pittsburgh

A key dimension of any job is the responsibility involved. Graduates who join Ford Motor Company find the opportunity to accept responsibility early in their careers. The earlier the better. However, we know the transition from the academic world to the business world requires training. Scholastic achievements must be complemented by a solid understanding of the practical, day-to-day aspects of the business. That is the most direct route to accomplishment.

Stephen Jaeger, of the Ford Division's Milwaukee District Sales Office, is a good example of how it works. His first assignment, in January, 1963, was in the Administrative Department where he had the opportunity to become familiar with procedures and communications between dealerships and the District Office. In four months he moved ahead to the Sales Planning and Analysis Department as an analyst. He studied dealerships in terms of sales history, market penetration and potentials, and model mix. This information was then incorporated into master plans for the District. In March, 1964, he was promoted to Zone Manager—working directly with 19 dealers as a consultant on all phases of their complex operations. This involves such areas as sales, finance, advertising, customer relations and business management. Responsible job? You bet it is—especially for a man not yet 25 years old. Over one million dollars in retail sales, annually, are involved in just one dealership Steve contacts.

As a growth company in a growth industry, Ford Motor Company offers an exceptionally wide spectrum of job opportunities. The chances are good that openings exist in your field of interest. See our representative when he visits your campus. We are looking for men who want responsibility—and will be ready for it when it comes.

The long basketball season begins its final act of this year when the two major tournaments get under way. The NCAA starts its playoffs tonight while the NIT starts later in the week.

All of the interest in this area will center on Philadelphia beginning at 8 tonight. There will, however, already have been one game by this time.

At 6 p.m. Ivy league champ, Princeton, will put its ten game win streak on the line against a Penn State quintet that has won its last 13 in a row. The Nittany lines have six good veterans with good height, but they must contain the nation's top ball player in Mr. Bill Bradley.

HIS PRESENCE on the court has to make the Ivy quintet the slight favorite. The prediction here is Princeton 72, Penn State 67 in the closest game of the night.

At 8, Providence meets the West Virginia Mountaineers. Off of the season records, the Friars have a wide edge, 22-1 as opposed to WV 14-14. The Mountaineers cannot be taken very lightly. They won their last four games in a row as they averaged around the .600 mark from the floor. Included in that string was a 72-70 overtime victory against Davidson in the Southern Conference Tourney.

WV is a tall team featuring a starting lineup that has men 6'9" 6'8", 6'5", 6'4" and 6'3". About the only thing for sure is that the Friars will not get too many inside shots. If this is the case, much of the burden of cracking the 2-3 zone of WV falls on Jim Benedict. This backcourt man is probably the best outside shot on the team with his deadly jumper.

A West Virginia assistant coach that scouted the UM-PC game last week was impressed by the overall agility of the team, and admitted that no one on the starting team could keep up with the speed of the Friars.

The strategy of the game will probably run something like this. Providence will work to keep up a good outside shooting percentage while WV will hold the ball in an effort to get it inside and get Dexter Westbrook, the lone real big man the Friars have in trouble. PC will also run if they get the opportunity, but it would seem with their height disadvantage they won't get enough rebounds to do the job consistently.

THE CHOICE has to be Providence by ten, 75-65.

The final game of the night will have the Connecticut Huskies, 23-2 against the St. Joseph's Hawks, 25-1. The UConn club seems to have all of the cards stacked against them. First, they will be playing on a court that serves as the home of nearly all Philadelphia clubs, while the sophomore loaded Huskies have many players that weren't around when the club was there last year. Second, the Hawks are far and away the best club UConn has faced this season, while the Philly club has met the likes of Wichita, Davidson, Providence, Villanova and St. John's losing only to PC at Providence.

Thirdly, the Huskies played on Wednesday and Saturday leaving only Sunday and Monday to prepare for the Hawks while St. Joe's has been off since Wednesday to prepare for UConn. The task will not be easy for the men from Storrs. Dr. Jack Ramsey's men are noted for team balance, and while they are not particularly big, they make use of a rugged, pressing defense to win their games.

The best hope for Connecticut seems to be a retreat to last year's deliberate style offense that brought them 52-47 victory over Temple and a 52-50 win over Princeton before they were smothered by Duke in the finals, that ranks as one of the classic mismatches in recent years.

St Joseph's with their combination of Tom Duff, Marty Ford, Cliff Anderson, Matt Goukas and Billy Oaks should overcome the UConn combination of Toby Kimball and Wes Bialosuknia to triumph 83-68.

The three winners will then proceed to College Park, Maryland, this weekend where they pick up North Carolina State, an upset winner over Duke in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. NC State at least finished second to Duke during the regular season to the Blue Devils who had two narrow victories over the Wolfpack. But with Duke and Davidson gone, the favorites for the title have to be St. Joseph's and Providence with NC State and UConn the outside threats.

Cohen Third at Temple

Sports Staff

Al Cohen tied for third place in the long horse vaulting competition this past weekend at the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League tournament at Temple University to record the highest finish by a member of the UMass gym team.

Cohen registered a 9.35 on his preliminary vault that put him in seventh place among the eight finalists, but two vaults of 9.55 and 9.70 moved him up in the standings. First place went to Rick Black of Springfield whose 9.65 in the finals was lower than Cohen's, but Black's high mark in the preliminary gave him an overall average of 9.7.

Pete Saponero of Penn State registered a 9.85 in the finals but he also had a lower first round score than Black. Saponero finished second to Black in the event. Defending NCAA champion Sid Oglesby of Syracuse competed with bruised heels and finished fifth.

Cohen will be competing against many of the same men next weekend in the NCAA semi-finals at the University of Virginia. The top six men in each event will go on to the NCAA Championships scheduled for April 10, at Southern Illinois University.

Dave Lizotte scored an 8.6 in the preliminary round which wasn't high enough to get him in the finals, but placed him 14th. Sophomore Al Carver finished 15th on the horizontall bar with a 7.65. Carver also recorded a 7.0 on the trampoline, his highest score of the season in that event. Lizotte and Carver each placed in one other event, Carver scoring an 8.8 on the long horse and Lizotte scoring an 8.1 on the parallel bars.

like this to me and complain," Meyers said.

After reading the statement of the Negro athletes, Meyers said, "I cannot truly believe that this is a sincere way that Negroes feel about the situation here." Meyers said the statement by the Negro athletes made him "sick," and that he did not believe even half the athletes read the NAACP resolution.

UNIVERSITY ACTION in the controversy has been conspicuously absent. Lyle Lanier, executive vice-president and provost of the university, said his office would not act in the matter until charges were brought to him. "We need to get this issue back in administrative channels," he said.

Lanier said that his office has officially "heard nothing about any discrimination since my directive was issued last September 28." The directive urged that coaches cease interfering in the social life of athletes.

Nothing has since been done by his office, Lanier said, because he was not aware that alleged discriminatory practices had continued to exist.

A spokesman for the NAACP said that administrative channels were by-passed when the recent charge was made because the provost's directive was ineffective. (CPS) tion is impulsive rather than rationalistic.

These attitudes—pleasure is a right; what will the results be?; why not?; and compulsion — summarize the major views of today's emerging generation on sex and morality. To a real extent, they have been fostered by the adult society. It is not even surprising that ministers and educators have voiced far fewer injunctions.

Churchmen, in large numbers, no longer condemn all premarital sex. The meaningful relationship, the compulsive association, and the trial affair are all condoned, though not sanctioned. Educators are in general agreement. College administrrators for the most part, however, refuse to play the part of innovators. Consequently, dormitories have not yet replaced the wayward motel. Only "established" patterns of morality are tolerated by the administration of the average institute.

Discrimination Seen In Illinois Athletics

Charges and countercharges have clouded the issue of whether or not racial discrimination against Negro athletes exists at the University of Illinois.

In the original charge, the University of Illinois chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People(NAACP) claimed that Negro athletes were being "subjected to discriminatory practices" by the university athletic association.

"Over the past several years," said the NAACP resolution, "complaints have been lodged with this office alleging that the university Athletic Association and members of the physical education department, including some coaches, have been guilty of following racially discriminatory policies."

THE CHARGES made by the NAACP were later denied "without exception."

"We do not need an organized spokesman, whether it be the NAACP or some other organization," the athletes continued.

Replying to the repudiation, Mack Jones, president of the NAACP chapter, said his group would continue to uphold its resolution declaring that discrimination existed on athletic teams at the university.

"We at the university NAACP," Jones stated, "are disheartened but not surprised by the repudiation of our recently passed resolution purporting to speak for all Negro athletes past and present. We do not choose to engage in any internecine debate with this group. However, we stand on our resolution."

THE NAACP stand was supported by a number of organizations including the local Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, which released a statement commending the NAACP for taking "a courageous step in challenging the athletic department, which has a strong hold on scholarships and grades of the people who were the subjects of these discriminatory practices."

Five independent campus groups, including two Negro sororities and two Negro fraternities, also aligned themselves with the NAACP.

Also supporting the NAACP stand was Mel Meyers, a former Illini quarterback who now works in Champaign. Meyers said that because he had been on campus for several years, the younger Negroes look to him as a sort of "big brother."

"I would say that five or six times a week I'd hear the familiar gripe: 'Mel, the man ain't treating us right.' They'd come

Springfield Gymnasts Sweep Meet Held at University

by Al Rice

The Springfield College women's gymnastics team swept the top positions in both divisions of the Northeast Invitational Gymnastics meet, held at the Auxiliary Gym Saturday.

THE SPRINGFIELD GIRLS staged an impressive performance two weeks ago in a dual meet with UMass, and they proved it was no fluke on Saturday by winning first in each event and second in three of the four. The top stars of the meet were Kathy Corrigan, who won the All-Around title with 36.80 points, Andrea Hyland, second with 35.65 points, and Marianne Davis of the University with 34.8 points. Marianne prevented a Springfield sweep of the top spots by tying Andrea Hyland on the uneven parallel bars with a 9.2 and taking sole possession of second in side horse vaulting with a 9.25. Her score in that event led until Kathy Corrigan registered a 9.40 on her second vault as the last competitor entered.

One of the attractive and talented members of the UMass Women's Gymnastics Team displays her ability at Saturday's meet.

The Olympic team member from South Weymouth also won the uneven bars with a 9.55 and the floor exercises with a 9.3 score. That event was the Springfield specialty as they took second with Miss Hyland's 8.8 and third by Linda Valade. Miss Valade took a second place on the balance beam to aid in her fourth place All - Around finish.

The highest ranking non-Springfield or UMass contestant was Ellen Babushka of West Chester State College who registered a third on the balance beam, a 9.0 fourth on the uneven and a 8.7 fourth on the side horse. Overall she ended up with 33.55 all - around points, good enough for fourth.

THE NOVICE DIVISION for girls with no college competitive experience prior to this season was also dominated by the Springfield girls with two firsts and a tie for another first, three seconds, and two third places. The placings were split among six contestants since only Judy DeLorme entered as many as three events.

She won the free exercises with an 8.25 and took second on the side horse. Third place on the horse was a tie between Gail Williamson of Springfield and Birdie Valkan of West Chester who won the All-Around title in the novice division.

The UMass girls team had Marianne Galir.ski and Phyllis Lieberman placing third and fourth in the floor exercises, and Lucille Riddle taking a fifth on the side horse with a 7.3 score. Mass also had the highest non-Springfield finisher on the balance beam as Diane Lizotte had a 6.25 to place fourth behind Sue Umstead, Judy DeLorme, and Mary Alice Astoldi.

Protesters to Picket Against U. S. Supporters of Apartheid

by Richard Danca
Staff Reporter

Students for a Democratic Society, including UMass Young Independents, are planning to picket certain U.S. corporations on March 19 in an attempt to call public attention to what SDS calls "economic support" of apartheid in South Africa.

The date chosen is the fifth anniversary of the so-called Sharpeville "Massacre" in which many black South Africans were shot and killed protesting apartheid.

The corporations chosen for the demonstration are the largest of the 200 U.S. investors in South Africa. SDS charges that the 26 per cent return on investments there is made possible only through apartheid.

Students from the Four-College Area, including at least 12 from UMass, will picket and sit-in at the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, which has invested some $10 million.

ANOTHER AREA GROUP is set to picket the Boston First National Bank in another of the simultaneous nationwide SDS protests.

Members of the demonstrations who sit-in at the Chase Manhattan face possible arrest and jailing.

Plans for the demonstration in this area were initiated in conjunction with a lecture and panel discussion on apartheid held last week at Smith.

L. GARY COWEN, highlight lecturer at Smith discussed what he called the four views of apartheid.

The first, or conservative view holds that apartheid is a domestic problem which must be dealt with domestically.

The second, which Cowan termed the in - between view, says that the problem is not domestic and that the UN should invoke sanctions.

Another in-between view urges the use of persuasion, as this view holds that the issue is a moral one.

THE FOURTH is the extreme view, which feels that since 20 years of persuasion have had no effect, something economic should be done.

The one major disadvantage of a sanction, as seen by Cowan is that it would require full support of the UN to be effectice, Mike Farrel holds the trophies the UMass Forensic Society won in New York by defeating 32 other schools for 1st place. Farrel finished as the "Best Varsity Speaker" over 94 other debaters.

UMass Debaters Capture 1st Place in CCNY Tourney

The UMass Forensic Society went undefeated to win the championship trophy at the tenth Annual City College of New York Invitational Debate Tournament March 5-6.

In winning the tournament, the team posted 'a 6-0 record, the only school of the 32 schools participating to accomplish this feat.

The varsity A team was composed of Mike Farrell and Wren Farren. The University of Massachusetts won another trophy when Mike Farrell finished as the Best Varsity Speaker of the 94 debaters entered.

The varsity B team of Alan Davis and Gerry Goldhaber tied for fourth place with a 4-2 record. This gave UMass the best overall record, 10-2, of any two teams entered.

The two trophies constitute the 23rd and 24th awards that the debating team has won in the last 2 years. The Debating Club, coached by Phillips Biddle of the speech dept., is the Yankee Conference Champion and possesses one of the best records in the East.

This weekend they will return to N.Y. for the Brooklyn College Debate Tournament and March 18-20 they will compete in the District 8 Regional Championships at St. John's College.

In addition to competing in 15 tournaments this year, the Forensic Society has cooperated with the University to stimulate interest in debating on the High School level. A debate Workshop and High School Tournament were both held on this campus. This Sat., March 12, the Forensic Society will co-sponsor the Western Massachusetts High School Elimination Tournament.

New Antenna Up Lifts WMUA Power

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

WMUA rose to new heights yesterday in rigging a new antenna atop the Engineering Building, doubling their effective radiated power to 17.4 watts.

At a cost of only 17 cents per student WMUA, the student voice of UMass, now has the power potential of reaching almost 25,000 listeners in the Amherst area.

Two years ago WMUA proposed moving their antenna from the Engineering Bldg. to a dorm atop Orchard Hill. The Student Senate appropriated the necessary funds for last fall's budget.

However, Technical Director George Drake pointed out to the station members that placing the old, obsolete antenna on the hill only 100 ft. higher might not significantly improve the signal, whereas a better quality antenna located on the same site would practically guarantee double the radiated power.

Therefore a new model Jampro antenna was purchased and installed on the same site at a cost of $1,635 — less, in effect, than the proposed cost of moving the obsolete, old antenna to Orchard Hill.

WMUA has to broadcast with the old antenna until the FCC approves operation of the new Jampro.

St. John's Students Demonstrate

St. John's University in New York was the scene of a large demonstration protesting restraints on student freedom Monday afternoon.

The demonstration, an echo of the demonstrations held at Berkeley and at other college campuses around the country, was particularly significant because St. John's is the largest Roman Catholic university in the country.

About 500 students participated in the demonstration called by the Students United for Academic Freedom as a quasi-political, academic, and basketball rally.

THE MAIN SPEAKER was William Graves, a 21 year old philosophy honor student, who was the prime force behind the student rebellion. Speaking for student goals which include the right for political and even extremist clubs on campus, Graves said, "We want the right to establish Young Republican and Young Democrat Clubs, and indeed chapters of a young socialist group and the Young Americans for Freedom."

The students also demanded that the University permit "contraversial" leftists and rightists to speak on campus and that student publications be allowed to criticize the administration.

Campus Varieties To Highlight H.E.R. Weekend

HER weekend will have an added attraction this year. Campus talents will appear Friday and Saturday night, Apr. 30 and May 1 with songs and antics.

Campus Varieties, originally scheduled for the weekend of Apr. 23, will be a feature of HER Weekend. Talent known and unknown will appear to liven up the weekend.

Already in the preparation stages, are three one act plays. Two were written by University students who have received cash awards for their fine efforts. Joe Augusta and Dave Axelrod will be directing the plays which they have written. A third play, so controversial that its author remains anonymously masked, will also be presented. The cast, also unknown, is reported to have been selected for knowledge of the campus.

Stay tuned to WMUA this week when one of the Revelers will be supplying more information. Also watch the Collegian for notices concerning Campus Varieties and tryouts for all potential talents.

Pres. Lederle gives his contribution to Campus Chests and exhorts others to support the cause.

Lederle Urges Support For Campus Chest

The all-University Campus Chest drive commenced Monday, March 8; dormitory treasurers decided Monday night to request a one-dollar contribution of each student in his house. The money collected will be distributed to campus charities, campus scholarships and a World University Service project.

The following statement was made by President Lederle:

Once again all members of the University community - students, staff, faculty and administration —have an opportunity to support the worthy Campus Chest campaign. Here is an excellent chance to express in a very special way our deep concern for the welfare of our fellow man. I urge everyone to give as much as possible to this cause in order that our efforts as a university community may be a significant contribution to human betterment. With full participation by all of us, I am confident that this year's Campus Chest campaign will be the most successful we have ever had.

New Hampshire Bill Bars Communists From Schools

New Hampshire's Governor King re-emphasized his position Monday in favor of legislation barring Communists from state institutions. The presently proposed bill would bar members of subversive organizations from using state property.

The measure has been strongly opposed by the trustees, administration, faculty, students and alumni of the University of New Hampshire. The governor has also received a considerable amount of mail on the issue, sixty percent of which has been in favor of his position.

and Russia would find it easier to exploit South Africa if the situation were to remain as it now is.

There would be no economic effect in a blockade, he said, since the world depends on South Africa for gold.

He also said that if U.S. corporations withdrew their investments, British and Italian corporations would immediately take over the investments.

THUS, HE IMPLIED, the U. S. would be in the same position as Kenya, which is losing two and a half million dollars a year through its boycott of South Africa.

Cowan is Executive Secretary of the African Studies Association.

Following the lecture was a panel discussion on Student Action against Apartheid, moderated by Gladstone Ntlabati, a South African graduate student at Yale Divinity School.

MEMBERS OF THE PANEL were Nat Stillman of Harvard, one of the major coordinators of the SDS apartheid demonstration; John Shingler; and Judy Nicholson.

Shingler is the former president of the National Union of South African Students (NUSAS), a group working with SDS, and is presently a grad student at Yale.

Judy Nicholson, a 1961 graduate of UMich., is a member of the World University Service which works in South Africa.

Each panelist discussed the work of his own organization in the attempt to eliminate apartheid in South Africa.

This year to add to the events during the week, the Inter-fraternity Sing has been scheduled for the Monday of Greek Week. The entire campus is invited to attend this program in the Student Union Ballroom.

The Interfraternity swim meet is planned for Wednesday night's entertainment. The houses will be grouped into teams of four.

The tempo quickens as the weekend approaches, with Friday night a highlight. They have as night club entertainment the Flamingos and a 12-piece dance band. The S.U. ballroom will be set up as a night club with a night club atmosphere.

The highlight of the evening is the crowning of one of the five finalists, Merryll Barnes, Diana Alverez, Roxanne Gile, Kathy Kane, or Gina Testa who will reign over Greek Weekend.

What would Greek Week be without the Olympics which are planned to be the most impressive in many years? Since Alumni Field is being torn up, the Olympics have been moved to the lower field behind Boyden on Satudray.

The famous Olympic Chariot races are planned to coincide with the Olympics on the lower field.

To climax the entire week, a popular concert with Mary Wells, Little Anthony and the Imperials, and the Shangra-las is scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

Cadet Captain Alan Bunce, eelcted the commander of Area A-1 Headquarteds for Arnold Air Society, on the left, is being congratulated by Major James Fleming, the present Area commander. Bunce will take command of overseeing Arnold Air Squadrons throughout the New England area for the '65-'66 school year.

SEX AND MORALITY

Reprinted from the Polytech Reporter

Just five years ago, an assistant professor of biology at the University of Illinois was dismissed after he had condoned premarital sex in some circumstances in a letter published in the student newspaper. Last year, the American Association of University Professors censured the institute for this action. Also indicative of this liberal trend is the reactions toward a young chaplain. Two months ago, he delivered a sermon at a college on "Sex Within the Created Order." In it, he stated that premarital intercourse need not be "bad" or "dirty." In his own words, "It can be very beautiful." While he does not advocate premarital intercourse, he does not condemn it if the parties bear in mind the responsibilites "to each other to any unborn child, and to society."

Where To?

What all this means and where it will lead is still debatable. Some have rushed warnings that it is the sign of the deluge—that we are witnessing the decline and fall of the United States. Others ardently believe we are making rapid strides toward utopia.

The idea of the utopia, and more recently of the sexual utopia, has always been a compelling one. What man has not dreamed of being the sole male on a tropical paradise? How many await Huxley's Brave New World?

About the only sure outcome is that a new standard of ethics will be drafted. Its basic shape will be a compromise between the view that morals are both private and relative to the situation, and the position that personal morality be judged as a universal code. It is likely that the new code will encompass both principles by substituting a "trial affair" for today's engagement. (Engagements have already been seriously supplanted by going steady.) Eventually, it is held, if love exists, it will grow into marriage.

Trial Affair

The "trial affair" would be entirely successful if no one was hurt. This is the major difficulty. Just as there are few "successful" divorces, there are likely to be few successful "partings." Indeed, such affairs may merely be used to exploit the naive. Birth control, however, does promise a good deal of protection against wholesale blunder. The ultimate protection, nevertheless, must come from education.

There is a definite need for sex classes. At worst, they would not be decisively inferior to what today's youngsters have learned at home and in the neighborhood. At best, they would foster the growth of mature people able to responsibly exercise their sexual powers. Not only could pregnancy and disease be limited, but urges could better be handled. Ultimately, more compatible and competent individuals would result. Perhaps such a program will soon be initiated at the college level as a marriage orientation elective. Hopefully, someday there will be a full, factual program available — from the first grade through high school.

Yet, in the last analysis, it may only be hoped that today's spirit of liberty and innovation will bring forth a more harmonious existence. Then will tomorrow's world be free from sex, and full of love.

FIGHT Dirty Water

Water, Massachusetts' most vital natural resource, will be the center of attention during National Wildlife Week, March 14-20. Conservationists are asking every citizen to join them in efforts to insure enough clean water for both present and future needs.

"By 1980, only 15 years from now, America will need 600 billion gallons of water each day," says Ovide N. Lanois of Marlboro, state chairman for National Wildlife Week.

Lanois added, "By the year 2000, we will need a trillion gallons daily. It would take a tank car train 600,000 miles long to haul it." He stated that the only answer to a growing nation's water needs is to re-use existing supplies. "Some authorities say we will need to re-use water six times to have enough," he said.

National Wildlife Week slogan this year is "Fight Dirty Water," being sponsored in Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Conservation Council.

The $11.98 Prof

If some college courses were judged on a monetary basis — $21 for three credit hours—the University of Oklahoma would be forced to set up a bargain table at the end of enrollment, says the Oklahoma Daily.

Take for example, a class in which the professor consistently arrives 10 or 15 minutes late. Since he makes a habit of tardiness and teaches only part of the class period, shouldn't that class sell for about $17.35.

A class where a professor never really is prepared or where he uses outdated, yellowed notes should go for about 25 per cent discount, or perhaps $16.75. A class taught by a teacher whose tests haven't been changed since he got his doctorate and are in wide circulation probably should go at about half price.

AN UNCHALLENGING TEACHER could be rated on a sliding scale from about $8.50 to $15, taking into consideration the amount of class discussion, completeness of material, size of class and number of times jokes are repeated per semester. A professor who uses his class as a personal soap box for political, religious or social harangues could sell for about two for $5.

If a course combined several of these sales points, say a tardy professor with 10-year-old notes, it could sell for about $8.98.

SIR, are you an $11.98 professor?

Shackling Education

One of the more unfortunate aspects of public educational facilities is that state legislatures have the power to dictate what they feel ought to be required courses in the public schools throughout their respective states. This power also enables the leigislatures to decide at what level certain required courses ought to be taught.

In the past, state legislators have for the most part left public school curricula unencumbered by state-dictated required courses. Recently, however, several states have conidered making a course on the "evils of communim" compulsory. Massachusetts is one of these states.

Last Wednesday the Massachusetts House engaged in furious debate on an old bill which would require all public high schools in the state to teach a 30-hour course on the "evils of communism." The bill was voted down but the possibilities of it being again revived with a few minor changes are good. Already four states have passed similar legislation and it is only a matter of time before serious opposition in other states withers. It is not politically wise to oppose legislation which is considered anti-communist.

What some state solons obviously do not understand is that there is no place in American schools for political indoctrination. Our schools are educational facilities not places in which the Nation's youth are brain-washed with half-truths.

If this is the sort of legislation which we can expect for our schools from our state law-makers, then it is time academic policy-making be left to educators whose business it is to teach America's young.

Numerical Education

Every Man An Architect

The instructor's first task at the beginning of any semester is to explain the rules of the game .The student's first task is to put down the number system for that particular course, 20% for this, 30% for that, and 5% for each of these. How much does this count, what should I study to get this or that grade, are my quizzes very important? . . . These are questions every student asks.

A foreign language instructor recently stated that such common pre-occupation with numerical evaluation is an insult to our educational system. A history instructor once answered the "what do I study" question with "whatever source or sources give you the information."

Concerns of this nature are hardly more than "cries in the wilderness" however. Numbers at the University are increasing steadily, and it seems that there is just not enough room on the narrow path of meaningful education for so many. The practice seems to be one of fighting fire with fire. The greater the school enrollment, the greater is the recourse to numerical evaluation. And the most significant purpose of a university education, a purpose which cannot be fixed numerically, is forgotten or neglected.

The university today is a buffer between high school and life. Fewer and fewer employment opportunities exist for which a degree from this buffer state is not required. It is only fair that a student be free to discover his strengths and weaknesses before confronting the high-speed business world outside. Yet, the student at UMass finds he is strongly penalized for assuming a self-directed course of trial and error in the search for a calling.

It is not rare for a student to spend two or three years in engineering, doing poorly, but trying to stick it out, change a major once or twice, and end up doing quite well. The catch is that his cume is at best unimpressive, and probably not up to graduation requirements. A string of six to ten A's in his final major probably won't get him into graduate school either.

Admitted: students must complete a standardized curriculum if we are to have national, interchangeable, educational standards. Admitted: some common standard must be incorporated for equality of evaluation purposes. But grade reporting systems which by nature discourage an academic career of trial and experimentation are intellectually stifling. Few people are strongly motivated or capable in a great many fields. The student must be free to discover himself.

"Every man is the architect of his own future". Cornell University has found the means to incorporate this truth into the mechanics of learning. At Cornell no course, extra to the finally chosen major or field, is figured in a student's numerical average. The student may take the courses he likes, grow and benefit from experience with them, and then select the curriculum by which he will be numerically represented.

UMass might do well to consider such a system. Serious consideration should be given to re-emphasizing the value of education as an intellectual exercise and not as a numbers, per cent game.

I would like to discuss one of Miss Neilon's models in her editorial "Subject-Object Dichotomy," as I have come in contact with him in his business dealings. Miss Neilon praises this 3.4 business major for his directed life. Yes, he works day and night. You can see him at the libe until 12 and then studying at Greenough until two every night seven days a week. Yes, you can view him plotting his business career in his vacations, and in his summer enterprise. Yes, you can sense the strict Puritan that he is-non drinking, non smoking, non swearing, non dating, non frivolous spending, no monkey business. But is this the type of individual the university strives to create?

Mr. X has a one-sided, narrow minded interested spectrum, where he can only discuss business or its related counterparts. He can not even begin to appreciate the arts, beauty, true learning, or other higher aspects of life. Is this the UMass student we want to produce? His goals are basic, wealth and power. Prejudiced by his purpose, insensible to anybody else's ideas, uncompromising, unadaptable, unacclimated to our social times, Mr. X is a callous, hard personality, who has lost most of his human qualities and values. Isn't this why we teach music, humanities, and the arts to humanize the individual.

Miss Neilon may go on praising, but many of us feel differently. Mr. X is not the type of man the University is striving to create.

MASS REVIEW

To the Editor:

The Massachusetts Review display at Goodell Library sheds much light on the "behind the scenes" effort that invariably goes on in the publication of a literary magazine of this sort. The correspondence concerning Jean Paul Sartres Black Orpheus, brilliantly translated by John A. MacCombie, member of the faculty of the romance language department at the University, shows to what extent one man's work is indeed his own personal property.

Though the display seriously erred in failing to give more credit where credit is due, that is to all those who contributed the published material, it is a fine gesture on the part of the Massachusetts Review staff to bring such information to the student body.

A DRY CAMPUS?

To the Editor:

It strikes me as a farce; as a myth, so ably perpetuated though constantly negated by the inexorable and known, reality of everyday life on College Campus, U.S.A.

To those who impose this myth, the general legal system with its laws and corrolaries provides the solid ground for their justification for expectancy of "abstinance from the use of alcoholic beverages" for every student.

But merely a walk on any of the campus' paths and streets, if not every night, at least during weekends, could give any observer the chance to detect gross abridgement of this "anti-alcohol" law.

Questioning the validity of a law, such as the 21 year age limit for the use of alcohol, could be justified by the simple fact that I happen to be "a Sociologist in the making."

As a Greek, and a European, I could only say that back home, the limit for permission for drink is: "You should be able to pay for what you drink." This of course may be perceived as an attitude whose liberty is rather offensive.

One should note, however, that from my personal experience in the U.S. I have come to the following conclusions:

Alcohol, being a legally unobtainable "good" acquires for most teenagers and College students something of the quality of Eden's "forbidden fruit." It serves thus a multiplicity of functions and disfunctions as a societal element. Here are some:

It becomes a challenge for the individual in trying to "outsmart" the authorities; since its use is forbidden, its availability leads to abuse; oftentime it becomes a catalyst, a psychological justification to a guilty consciousness.

Lack of use of alcohol and approprate teachings at early adolescence, renders the individual ignorant of the substance's uses and abuses, and of its effects.

Many may have raised points similar to these in the past; since, however, both administrations and student bodies know well that "a Dry Campus" is nothing but a myth awfully remote from reality, a visitor wonders what is the purpose of its perpetuation?

UMOC Is Coming!

Kappa Omicron Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega is sponsoring an "Ugly Man On Campus Contest" for the benefit of the Campus Chest. The contest will be held during the week of March fifteenth through the twentieth. The object is to find our most homely male. Cheating in the form of make-up, disguises, etc. is highly encouraged.

Each fraternity, sorority and dorm was asked to submit a contestant. Pictures of contestants were taken on Tuesday, March 9 in the Hampden Room.

These pictures will be posted in the Student Union lobby throughout the week. The winner will be chosen by popular student vote. Each cent contributed to the Campus Chest counts as one vote. It is hoped that the make-up and costumes will be as gruesome as in years past.

First prize for the winning house or dorm is a UMOC key and a plaque. For additional information contact Bill Sockey, 173 Hills South.

ST. JOHN'S . . .

THE DEMONSTRATION was primarily directed against the Rev. Edward J. Burke, president of the university. Rev. Burke was not at the university during the demonstration to hear Graves' accusation that "Father Burke refers to himself as the 'father' and to us as the 'children'."

One priest, a professor of theology at the university, tried to quiet the demonstration by telling the students that the institution's "dirty linen and garbage should not be thrown out into the city of New York." The priest was booed loudly by the students.

The meeting was punctuated by the loud heckling of a group of students protesting the protestors. Mid - way through the demonstration was turned into a basketball rally pleading for the retention of the varsity coach.

THE ADMINISTRATION announced that no reprisals would be taken against the leaders of the demonstration. They stated that they wished the students would air their grievances through the proper channels of student government.

Dissatisfaction with university policy broke out earlier when 200 faculty members walked out of a Saturday meeting as a protest against faculty salaries and the failure of the administration to give them a role in policy making.

Two Students To Work In Mississippi

by Dave Walsh
Staff Reporter

Young Independents Bill First and John Childs will leave for Mississippi Saturday, March 13, to participate in a church-building program under the auspices of the Mississippi Committee on Concern.

The committee, made up of prominent white southerners, represents all the major religious denominations in Mississippi. It has collected nearly fifty thousand dollars to restore the Negro churches burned because of their use in Freedom Democratic Party voter registration and political activities before the 1964 elections.

The Students for Racial Equality, an Amherst college civil rights group, has volunteered to help rebuild one of the demolished churchs during spring vacation.

First and Childs will be going down with the Amherst group even though the trip does not coincide with the University vacation period.

Asked about the possible danger involved in the project, they replied that they had taken into careful consideration all the consequences they might face. They felt that their commitment was equal to any situation they might encounter.

NOTICE

A meeting for all candidates for the Freshman golf team will be held Tuesday at 7:00 in room 251 at Boyden.

On Monday night the NCAA championsips got under way at the Palestra in Philadelphia with the first round playdowns. The games proceeded according to schedule with the expected triumphing.

As was anticipated, the closest game of the trio was the opener pitting Penn State against Bill Bradley, or rather Princeton. Bradley scored eight clutch points to pull the Tigers even after the Nittany Lions had run off ten straight points to take the lead. His 22 points were far below his average but the star proved again why he is probably the best all-around player in the country.

THE SECOND GAME featured the Providence Friars who blitzed a slow moving West Virginia quintet right out of the Palestra. PC had a game on its hands for about the first five minutes, but the club ran to a 17-7 lead which was stretched to 41-17 before the Mountaineers managed to cut that to 49 to 29 at the intermission.

WV proved to all of the fans what a fantastic upset it must have been if they could have beaten Davidson. The smooth working Friars consistently stole the ball and ran around the taller opponents. Only Bill Maphis with 21 points managed to do anything that could offset the performances of Jim Benedict with 21 points and the jump shot that destroyed the zone, Dex Westbrook had 18 as did Bill Blair. Jim Walker had 14 and Mike Riordan 13.

The most exciting part of this game was the last five minutes when the subs put on an outstanding display of ball handling.

The nightcap was an exciting if not completely well played game. St. Joseph's looked anything like the third ranked club in the country as they threw the ball away 14 times in the first half. They managed to came back from a 17-6 deficit only to trail by seven at intermission.

It was a game that matched the strategies of two great coaches, Fred Shabel and Jack Ramsey. The latter was highly disappointed with his team's first half efforts, as the Hawks consistently lost the ball to the scrappy Huskies without getting off the shots.

The second half proved two things, one that the Hawks have the balanced attack to come back and second that club's constant pressure took its toll. Despite the evidence that the team did not have a very good night, it is to their credit that they stuck with their game plan, that is, try to penetrate the UConn zone, get the good shots, don't do much fast breaking, and above all keep pressing the Huskies.

For the Huskies, Toby Kimball was tremendous. The nation's leading rebounder dominated the boards as the Huskies racked up a 50-36 rebounding margin. Kimball had 20 in the first half and finished with 27, according to one set of stats and 29 on another. He had 21 points in a finale to a brilliant career that left him just 36 points short of the all-time U. Conn record. The Huskies will surely be hunting for a big man as good as Kimball next year, and for a long time to come.

The other top post season tourney gets under way tomorrow when the National Invitation Tournament starts play. The two top seeded teams in the field that draw first round byes are Villanova and New Mexico, a finalist a year ago. The best darkhorses in the field appear to be St. John's and Bradley along with Army.

Thursday's action has Manhattan against Texas Western and Boston Collee against St. John's. Predicted winners from this writer who puts a three game win streak on the line are Manhattan by 70-63 and St. John's by a score of 88-79.

Swimmers Finish Strong; Defeat Tufts Team 64-31

by Bud Pratt

Joe Rogers' Varsity Swim Team finished off another winning season with a solid 64-31 victory at Tufts Saturday.

UM started off with a victory in the medley relay, and simply continued to pull away. This relay was won by Orzak, Monnier, Levy, and Wilson. Tufts' enthusiasm was then crushed as their big gun, Flug, was soundly defeated in the 200 free-style by Dick Daniels in 1:59.9.

Chip Wyser and Steve Lovitch then placed 1-3 in the 50 free-style, with Chip's winning time of 23.7 his best of the year. Dick Lennon and Dan O'Mara were first and third respectively in the individual medley, Dick winning in a fast 2:18.4.

AFTER HANLEY'S SECOND in the diving and Levy's second in the butterfly, Wilson was barely touched out at the finish by Tuft's Flug in the 100 free-style. At this point Tufts trailed by just five points, but with the Redmen notoriously strong in the late events, the meet was not about to stay close for long.

Dick Lennon and Walt Orzak opened things up again with a first-second in the backstroke, Dick winning in 2:27.7. The meet was permanently salted away when Daniels won the 500 and sophomore Mike Shameklis swam a fine race to take second. The Redmen rang up their third consecutive one-two finish as co-capt. Charlie Monnier won the breast stroke, with Dan O'Mara right behind him.

IN THE FINAL EVENT of the season, the 440-yd. free-style relay team of Shameklis, Wilson, Lennon, and Daniels won in 3:45.2.

For seniors Charlie Monnier (co-capt.), Dan O'Mara, and Tom Hanley it was the final meet. Both Monnier and O'Mara have been solid pointgetters for four years, Charlie as a breast stroke specialist and Dan as a highly versatile utility man who has won points in practically every event, including the diving. Hanley, a diving specialist, is a two-year man whose steady performances, including numerous firsts, have kept diving from becoming a weak spot in the competition. Tom's progress in the brief two-year stretch has been remarkable. Monnier will graduate as the current varsity record-holder in the breaststroke.

ALSO VITAL to tie spirit of this year's winning team were the efforts of Co-capt. Jim O'Sullivan. Forbidden to swim as a result of a blood ailment, Jim served as Joe Rogers' right-hand man, always giving the team a boost of spirits when the going got tough.

It was a comeback season: after dropping the first three, the Mermen won five straight before bowing to M.I.T., then closed out a 6-4 season at Tufts.

Prospects for next year are better than ever. The team's biggest pointgetter, Dick Daniels, has next year still in which to assault Mike Rothschild's free-style records. Another fine free-styler, Frank Wilson, will also be back. The bulk of this year's team, including Lennon, Levy, Orzak, Wyser, Lovitch, and Shameklis, was composed of sophomores. But the best news is the finest crew of freshmen Joe Rogers has ever seen, headed by Jim Hogan, Ken Nowak, Jack McHale, and Tony Robound. These men figure to take a lot of firsts next season.

This weekend Dick Daniels and Steve Levy will compete in the New England 14-college competition at M.I.T.

Tenure Denied to Popular Yale Prof.

Refusal of tenure for a popular Yale philosophy professor was made certain Monday with release of a statement by Yale president Kingman Brewster Jr. in spite of extended student protest which ended in an all night protest last week.

The statement, which reasserted Yale's official stand on the release of associate professor Richard J. Bernstein, said in part:

"Ultimately, the faculty must decide who the faculty shall be. Appointments and promotions should not be made either by presidential decree or by student ballot."

Bernstein, who has taught at Yale since 1953, was refused tenure because he has not published enough books.

Tenure would have guaranteed another 33 years at Yale to the 32 year old Bernstein, who was very popular with his students and until Sunday had the unanimous support of Yale's philosophy department.

Another Yale Professor, Robert S. Brumbaugh, said "Under the criteria of publication that were used for Mr. Bernstein, we could not have gotten tenure for Aristotle when he was 32; we could not have gotten it for Kant . . ."

The student protest called for greater emphasis on "More creative teaching" rather than on publication.

In addition to the picketing, the Yale Daily News has run a three part feature suggesting investigation of and change in tenure policy.

Brewster also announced formation of a committee to study these policies.

"I would hope that students would be able to present any constructive ideas to this committee," said Brewster.

Intramural Report

Vicky's 202's Intramural Champs

by Howie Davis

On the basis of a strong second half, Independent champion Vicky's 202's is the new Intramural champion. They beat Lambda Chi Alpha, IFC champs, 61-50.

Down 29-27 at half time, the favored Vicky's put together a team effort for the victory. Every starter for the champs wound up in double figures for the night. Mike Candel came through with his best point production of the season for 19. Thirteen of these came in the second half. Charlie Fohlin hit for 10 as did Ray Stenalis. Al Garsys picked up ten of his 11 points in the first half. Tom Vizard had 11 points, nine in the strong second half.

On the LCA ledger Don Rana picked up 11 points for high man. Ten of these were in the second half. Leading scorer on campus, Steve Shea hit for ten points in the first half and then was shutout in the second half by the fine defensing of Ray Stenalis. Considering the fact that Shea averaged 29.9 points per game during the regular season and was held to 10 Monday night, this remains as the big factor in the game.

Trackmen Prepare for Y'kee Conference Meet

by Terry Carpenter

Having returned from the IC4A's in New York City without having a runner make the finals, the varsity track team now looks forward to the Yankee Conference Championships meet at Storrs, Connecticut this Saturday.

Villanova won the IC4A's for the third straight year, and Maryland State was second in the 71 team meet at Madison Square Garden. Running well for the Redmen was Art Larvey. The speedy Sophomore ran another 6.4 60 yard dash, but finished in a three way tie for first. The Judges waited for the phototimer picture to be developed before announcing the result. Upon inspection of the photograph, Art was placed third, while the first two were eligible for further competition. This becomes even more heartbreaking when we stop to think that the majority of the heats were won in 6.5 and some even in 6.6. If Art had been in almost any other heat, he certainly would have qualified.

John Medeiros, who claims his leg is all right, ran a 6.5 to place a close third in his heat. Terry Carpenter turned in a 4:19 mile effort and just missed qualifying for the finals. Tom Panke ran a 4:24 for his best mile of the year. Carpenter came back to run a 9:49 2-mile later in the afternoon, for his best time in that event. Also Damian Gaffney ran a fine 1:15.1 600 yard, for his best time as he continues to creep up on the school record of 1:14.6.

Coach Footrick now looks forward to the Yankee-Conference meet optimistically. With sophomore Art Larvey running so

Senate Controversy Heard On "Rubber Stamp" Policy

by Jim Foudy
Senate Reporter

A lengthy Student Senate session Weds. night covered business ranging from the acceptance of the Flying Redmen Drill Team travel appropriations to a much contested attempt to clarify and strengthen the Student Senate's role in matters of men's and women's affairs.

The University of Massachusetts Marching Band's trip budget for 1965-66 is $4,069, which was approved at Wednesday's meeting.

Attempting to prevent the Senate from being used as a "rubber stamp", Senator Ross Jones (Commuter) proposed a bill, later defeated, requiring the Men's and Women's Affairs Committees to submit to the Senate, beforehand, all recommendations headed for the Offices of the Deans of Men and Women allowing the Senate to voice its opinion.

"The Deans of Men and Women now make the rules, and we get blamed for them," said Jones, "but it is possible for the Student Senate to consider these changes in a responsible and reasonable way."

SUCCESSFULLY OPPOSING the measure, Senator Karen Garvin, Chairman of the Women's Affairs Committee, pointed out the behind-the-scenes work of her committee, stressing the "spirit of diplomacy and the ability to bargain for what we want" now existing between the committee and the Dean of Women's staff.

The Senate was also informed by Senator Potvin ('66) that the Office of the Dean of Men would "consider it a personal affront" if the Senate "tried to run their 'shop'."

Treasury Discusses Tuition Tax Break

A treasury official has stated that proposals to grant tax credits for college tuition payments would give benefits to those who have no real need for help.

The official, Asst. Secretary Stanley S. Surrey, said such proposals are not substitutes for President Johnson's student assistance program and could actually slow up progress in education.

He cited a proposal to grant a blanket tax credit as an example of special tax treatment to attain a specific nontax objective.

Several members of Congress have proposed plans to reduce taxes for those who have college expenses either for themselves or for their children.

One such plan would permit a tax credit for college tuition, permitting the subtraction of all or part of tuition from the amount owed the government.

There is a much greater benefit to the taxpayer than merely permitting the deduction of educational expenses, as some members of Congress have proposed.

"A tax credit for tuition expenses—costing us a billion dollars—could actually slow up rather than hasten our progress in education by giving benefits to those who have no real need for help, thus wasting tax revenue which instead could be used directly to finance a constructive program of aid to those students who most need it," said Surrey.

Another proposal was introduced Wednesday by several senators to aid students who are working their way through college. The bill would enable a student to deduct the cost of

Conte Bill Demands Limitation Date on UMass Medical School

by Paul Rodman
Legislative Reporter

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON — State Senator John J. Conte (Democrat, Worcester) yesterday filed a bill in the Massachusetts General Court to require the Board of Trustees of the University to make known by April 15 of this year their recommendation for the site of the new University Medical School.

The bill would amend a 1963 law which authorized the trustees without a date limitation to choose the site.

Conte's new bill was sent to the Rules Committee on the "question of admittance" at the present session as a late-filed bill.

In order for the bill to be acted upon in the immediate future, a suspension of legislative rules is necessary. Under joint Rule 12, the bill may only be admitted after a favorable reaction from both houses.

Conte's action follows on the heels of Governor Volpe's appointment of two new trustees, both of whom are viewed as favoring an Amherst site for the new medical school.

There was considerable speculation at the State House that replacement by failure to renew appointments of the old trustees was partially motivated by consideration for the medical school. Sources indicate that the Board of Trustees is now closer than ever to choosing a site.

DR. ROBERT HIGGINS EBERT, newly appointed head of the Harvard Medical School, expressed his belief that the proposed University of Massachusetts Medical School should be at Amherst.

Commenting on the unsolved problem of the Medical School site, Dr. Ebert said: "The closer the medical school is to the home university, the better. Once you separate the faculty, there no longer is the kind of interchange that is necessary. It should be at Amherst."

Dr. Ebert, chief of medical services at Massachusetts General hospital, takes over his new position July 1.

Obscenity Demonstrations Cause Berkeley Resignations

Administrative interference has been cited as the cause of the resignation of Clark Kerr, University of California president, and Martin Meyerson, acting chancellor of the beleagered Berkeley campus.

Last week seven persons, five of them students, were arrested for seemingly unrelated demonstrations on behalf of obscenity. They shouted an obscene four letter word in microphones and displayed it on signs.

What was described as the "filthy speech movement" by The Daily Californian, the student newspaper, was referred to two faculty committees for recommended action. A campus source said that Edward Cantor of Los Angeles, chairman of the Board of Regents, had called upon Mr. Kerr to expel the arrested students, or he would summon the board itself into special meetings to take action.

Mr. Kerr and Mr. Meyerson, while reportedly agreeing that the students should be disciplined, were represented as holding that summary expulsion would have a bad effect on a campus that was recovering from months of chaos.

Kerr said in a statement: "We are currently faced with a new confrontation at Berkely potentially filled with great passion. Offenders must be disciplined, but due process must have its due place, and faculty committees should not seek to avoid

Yale Prof Denied Tenure By "Publish or Perish"

"Publish or perish", a hotly disputed issue on this campus in 1962, is the cause of student picketing on the Yale campus in New Haven, Conn.

Students rallied to the support of Professor Richard J. Bernstein when he was denied tenure by Yale administration officials on the grounds that he had not written and published enough books.

Coming out of seclusion Wednesday, Dr. Bernstein ended all controversy by making his first public statement since the student demonstrations began, nine days previously.

In his statement, Dr. Bernstein thanked all those who had supported him, and went on to say that the nine days of student picketing had been the "most exciting, exhiliarating and bewildering period in my life".

The granting of tenure by the Tenure Appointments Committee of the Humanities at Yale would have guaranteed Dr. Bernstein a permanent position until such time as he retired.

African Students At UMass For Learning To Take Home

by Ginny Sheinhouse
Staff Reporter

WHAT COMPELS AN AFRICAN student to apply for admittance to the UMass and what is it like after he gets here?

Mrs. Evelyn Russell, advisor to foreign students, reports that of 250 foreign students 15 are Africans representing Kenya, Nigeria, Uganda, Liberia, the United Arab Republic, Malawi and Ghana.

Like the other students on campus, Africans are accepted by application but "they are not the typical graduate or undergraduate," Mrs. Russell stated.

"The number of high school and college graduates are limited in Africa. Those that have any training whatsoever are quickly placed in jobs requiring the most skill. Therefore, most Africans have had some professional training or have worked for their government before coming here. They have made a firm place for themselves in their society," she added.

TO THE AFRICAN student, she stressed, this is important for it means that he has demonstrated his readiness to serve his country.

"All Africans," Mrs. Russell emphasized, "are concerned with the problem of freedom for all Africans. Most plan upon graduation to go home where they know there are jobs to be done and people to be served."

There are usually two reasons for choosing: First, "They choose this college because of the particular department which satisfies their personal needs and those of their country," she said. The second reason: They have been recommended to come here by countrymen who have graduated from the University or who have heard about it in their travels to the States."

Mrs. Russell explained financing may be taken care of by the student himself. Two at UMass are on the African Scholarship Program of American Universities (ASPAU) and several are in the College of Agriculture under the Agency for International Development (AID) program in cooperation with their home governments.

BEFORE HE ARRIVES, the African student's expectations about the U. S. school system often differ from reality.

"Some may be a bit surprised," Mrs. Russell said. "They are more used to the British type of educational system where the studies are more concentrated. The American educational system is based more on an overall education. The American system also pre-that the intake from the dormitory vending-machines, now controlled by this council, be returned to its respective residence hall.

Landis, who recently spoke with President John Lederle about the situation, refered to the Athletic Council as an "autonomous arm of the University, and commented that President Lederle is also interested in limiting the Athletic Council control of vending maching profits.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED that President Lederle will address the Senate body March 31, focusing on the University's expansion and UMass-Boston, and the talk will be followed by a question period.

The Student Senate, just prior to its midnight adjournment appropriated $145 to the Forensic Society to cover tournament expenses, and $787 to the Flying Redmen in order that they may attend the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C., April 8-11.

COMMENTING on the meeting, three students from Amherst Regional H. S., guests of the Student Senate, expressed surprise at the "power" of the body, and thought that the president "did a good job."

Although they found the senators "sometimes out of order... cutting each other up", they admired the assembly for trying to give all the students a "fair shake".

Greenfield Attorney Comments On Libel

by Eileen Alderson
Staff Reporter

"The problem of who can be held libel on a college newspaper is a tricky one," Joseph T. Bartlett told a UMass journalism seminar Wednesday.

Bartlett, a Greenfield attorney, was commenting on the many aspects of libel and the press.

"LIBEL IS MALICIOUS publication tending to blacken the reputation of one dead or alive," Bartlett said. "It is a tort, a wrong, a violation of a person's obligation to another."

According to the speaker, if the libel is a publication of a corporation, the corporation can be sued; if it is the work of an individual, the individual is libel.

"A COLLEGE PAPER is not a corporation, so you cannot sue it as a whole," Bartlett said "It is still unsolved as to whether the college itself would be libel."

The person who wrote the story and the editorial staff would be responsible, he remarked. However, would the Student Senate be responsible since they supply the money for publication, and would the college itself be responsible?

"Unless the college itself is participating, I would draw the line as to who was libel at those who wrote, edited, and published the paper," Bartlett commented. "This would include the advisor, if there is one."

REFERING TO COLLEGE HUMOR magazines, he said most people feel they should accept such magazines without feeling insulted. If someone were to sue, it would be up to a jury to consider libel in the form of publication.

"A DEFENSE AGAINST LIBEL is the ability to get up and prove the truth of your statement. However, not even this is a defense if it is shown that you wrote the statements maliciously," Bartlett emphasized.

The former district attorney remarked that this principle came from the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Sullivan case. In this case, the New York Times printed an ad attacking the police force in Montgomery, Ala. Sullivan, the police commissioner, sued the Times for libel and won $500,000.

THE U.S. SUPREME COURT ruled that under the Constitution

Sophomore Banquet Offers Night With Roaring Twenties Decor

All the excitement of the good old days will be at the speakeasy "Naughty Lady" in the Union Ballroom. Featuring "Barry and the Remains" and "The Folklores," the "Naughty Lady Club" will make its appearance on the UMass campus Wednesday, March 17 at 6:30 p.m.

The Sophomore Banquet offers a chance to rediscover the reckless years of the "Roaring Twenties" with an evening of frolic, surprises and memories.

Within the clubs hush-hush atmosphere there is a 32-foot bar lined with glittering liquor bottles, and an enormous chandelier will dimly reflect scenes of the Twenties.

At the beginning of the evening, the mysterious Naughty Lady herself will greet the guests. She will lead the toast to the Twenties, and the club's waitresses will serve the meal of fried chicken and spaghetti, tossed salad, Italian bread and dessert.

Each guest will receive a free favor of a Keystone Cop figurine. Within its hat are a measured shot glass and a church key.

Costumes will add to the color and fun, and the club's management requests that everyone try to catch the mood with shift dresses, vests, straw or bowler hats, cloches, racoon coats, and canes. Tickets can be purchased in the Union Lobby.

Jazz Group To Play For Music Hour

One of the newest and most promising jazz groups in this area is the Pete Witherell Jazz Quartet. The boys—Dave Witherell on piano, Jacob Epstein on tenor sax, Dave Sibley on bass, and Ken Hohenberger on drums, all students at the University, started playing together informally last semester.

Specializing in progressive jazz, the group does such recent arrangements as Take Five, Girl from Ipanema, and Randy Weston's Little Niles. They have appeared professionally at Rahar's, and will make their University debut at the Music Hour, Sunday, March 14, at 3:00 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge.

New York Superintendent Out For No Specific Charge

The New York City Board of Education last Thursday, March 4th, placed the superintendent of schools, Dr. Calvin E. Gross, on a suspension described as a three-month leave of absence with pay but without authority. The action, tantamount to firing, left up-in-the-air the unexpired four years of the contract with salary amounting to $180,000.

More importantly, the Board has brought up the question of just what requirements are adequate for professional success and selection, especially since no specific charges have been publicly revealed. In 1963 Dr. James B. Conant suggested to the American Association of School Administrators that school system heads should not be required to have an educational background for their post of executive leadership but should be trained as businessmen.

ONE OF THE AREAS of reported-dissatisfaction was the delay of the superintendent's integration recommendations; but they were handed to the Board last Friday by the Executive Deputy Superintendent Dr. Bernard E. Donovan, who has now been named acting superintendent.

In a news conference, Frederick D. Jones of the NAACP questioned the dismissal at the same time the integration report was made. Dr. Donavan, after his appointment, indicated that no action would be taken until after at least six weeks of public discussion. The civil rights group has threatened the Board with demonstrations and legal action unless a program for the Negro students is forthcoming.

Dr. Gross has made known his intention to fight for his job and has retained Herbert Brownell, Jr. He is supported by the American Association of School Administrators.

In his short tenure, the former superintendent faced a teacher-contract negotiation (with another now impending), two major civil rights boycotts, a white-boycott, court actions and protests. In addition to his ordinary responsibilities, he has been caught up in today's politics, social reforms, anti-poverty problems and complex union bargaining.

Magriel Collection of Realistic Art To Be Exhibited In SU

Seventy-five watercolors and pastels loaned by Paul Magriel comprise an exhibition entitled One Hundred Years of American Realism which will open in the Commonwealth Rm., SU, on Sunday, March 14, and continue through April 4.

It is circulating in museums and galleries of the United States under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts.

The exhibition embraces realism in the broadest possible sense. It indicates the prevalence of the realistic mode of artistic treatment from the early 1800's to this day, a span in which there are countless subdivisions. This trend is characterized by a frank, uncompromising, objective vision—as against styles advocating technique over subject matter.

In the early decades of the 19th century, artists of Western Europe strove to break from the polished classical severity of academicians. In this wise, they became increasingly justified by mid-century with the advent of a new art form: photography reproduced exact details by mechanical means; therefore, precise transcription of nature through the medium of paint could no longer be viewed as an end in itself.

European influence can be seen in works of the Hudson River School, the American Impressionists and "The Fight." While much of their advances are reflected in this country, painters within these movements have brought significant contributions of their own to the definition of an American idiom.

Unique images of the spirit of the time are evoked in paintings by John Kensett, George Inness, John Singer Sargent, Louis Elishemius, Henry Varnum Poor, Robert Andrew Parker and others.

Most recent exponents of realism, e.g., Richard de Menocal, have sometimes returned to photgraphic likenesses, accepting therewith the challenge to infuse their subjects with a presence that gives strong intimations of an ideological content beyond the portrait.

scribes more specific ways to study."

However, because most come from countries that are former British colonies, she said, there is no great language barrier—English is taught in their schools.

"Pre-conceived ideas about racial problems in the U.S. tend to make them a little guarded because they wonder how they will be accepted. They soon find out, however, that they are well liked," she remarked.

Recreational activities for Africans from UMass, Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith include the African Student Association's lectures, movies and social events, Mrs. Russell reported.

AID-sponsored students participate in a program of trips to points of interest in the States during semester breaks and long vacations.

"IT'S A LONG WAY TO AFRICA, so they usually work or go to school during the summer," she smiled.

Mrs. Russell's interest in foreign students extends beyond her position. Her home is always open. In fact, she has had boarders representing nine countries.

Her interest in African students began last year when one lived in her home until his graduation. During Christmas vacation, she paid a visit to Africa where the student is now teaching.

"FOR TWO WEEKS, I was a 'foreign student' myself," she proudly beamed. "I know how it feels to be part of a minority and to be unsure of local customs. Perhaps this experience can be helpful to me in dealing with problems of foreign students."

Smiling again, she said, "I'm ready to go back!"

Morality: By Choice or Law

After 17 years of silence, our state legislature has finally started on the road to revising our antiquated laws regarding birth control.

At present, of all the 50 states, it is illegal only in Massachusetts and Connecticut to supply any information regarding the use of birth control devices, or the devices themselves.

Not only are these laws, which are based on an outdated moral attitude, a violation of our fundamental beliefs of freedom, but they are so entirely ineffective that they have made a farce of the entire issue.

When the new birth control bill was introduced to our legislature, about one week ago, the solons took a surprisingly realistic attitude towards it. This was perhaps due to the encouragement of the new legislation on the issue by Cardinal Cushing.

Although he is opposed to the bill as it is now stated, he said, "in light of the position taken by other religious groups in our plural society, it does not seem reasonable to me to forbid in civil law a practice that can be considered a matter of private morality."

And, birth control is purely a matter of PRIVATE morality.

It is a matter which can only be decided within the family, and a matter, the morality of which, can only be decided by each individual involved.

As long as there is a division of belief on a subject of moral convictions, it can only be considered a violation of basic constitutional freedom for one group to impose its doctrines upon another.

New Hope For Drug Addicts

The United States government is finally making a serious attempt to aid the nation's drug addicts instead of punishing them. Our present laws treat narcotic users as criminals instead of sick people who need and deserve the benefits of controlled rehabilitation. As a result, little has been accomplished in arresting the traffic of drugs.

As long as addicts receive little or no help in alleviating their illness, they will return again and again to the source of their "habit", regardless of how many times they are incarcerated.

President Johnson, in a message to Congress mapping out his plans to check the rising U. S. crime rate, has taken the first step in putting some compassion into our laws governing the use of drugs. It is a cautious step; but it is a step in the right direction..

The President recommended that "those penalty provisions of the Federal narcotics and marijuana laws requiring mandatory minimum sentences and precluding probation or parole be applied restrictively in order to provide a greater incentive for rehabilitation."

Judges now have the right to order convicted addicts to Federal hospitals but Federal hospital facilities are inadequate in proportion to the number of users. Convicted "junkies", as narcotics users are sometimes called, therefore usually receive stiff prison terms.

Great Britain has long maintained a sane policy in this area by turning their drug addicts over to doctors for treatment. In this way the problem of narcotics traffic and addiction in England has been effectively arrested. Hopefully, Pres. Johnson's first step will lead to this logical conclusion.

The nation ought to applaud President Johnson's efforts and give him the popular support needed to continue his war against this blight on American society.

Editorial Policy of the Massachusetts Collegian

In order to serve the ever growing campus community the Massachusetts Collegian has adopted the following policy for the editorial pages. The name of the page shall be Massachusetts Collegian Forum so called in order to stimulate those not on the Collegian staff to express themselves on any issue which they feel pertinent to the campus or students.

A Collegian editor, or a member of the editorial staff, will present an editorial on any subject which is felt to be of primary importance or interest to the student body. These editorials, however, are solely the opinion of the author, and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the entire staff, or the official viewpoint of the Collegian.

At times the Collegian may wish to take an official stand on a matter of primary importance. If this is the case, an editorial will be printed UNSIGNED. An editorial of this nature must have the approval of five editors, and should be regarded as Collegian policy.

The Collegian welcomes all letters to the editor, and will endeavor to print all letters which are deemed to be of general interest to the campus. The editorial staff welcomes all comments and questions regarding editorials, and respects the right of all students to express contrary positions.

The only restriction is that the letters be written in good taste and with the discretion necessary for use in a campus publication. The Collegian reserves the right to edit all letters for language choice, grammar, and length. The editorial staff will make every attempt to retain the full meaning of any letter which must be edited.

Through use of the above policy, the Collegian editorial staff will endeavor to:

1. Uphold freedom of expression on the UMass campus.
2. Clarify the goals of education at the University.
3. Foster constructive criticism and meaningful debate.
4. Expose existing problems at the University and suggest remedies.
5. Render recognition of deserving individuals and groups.
6. Defend injured parties in order to promote justice.
7. Provide an unbiased forum to air campus grievances.
8. Stimulate creative thinking within the campus community.
9. Bring into closer prospective campus happenings.
10. Comment on local, national, and world affairs.

The preceeding principles will be followed with due discretion so as not to unjustly discredit students, administration, faculty, alumni, and friends of the University.

The Massachusetts Collegian is a "free and responsible press", and is in no way censored or edited by persons on the University Administration.

Letters To The Editor

"Quiet" Hours?

"Do you find it difficult to concentrate on your homework in the evenings?", a future University student might ask. Oh, not at all. You see, the Women's Residence Regulations state that Quiet Hours are in effect from 7:00 p.m. to 10:00 a.m., Sunday through Friday.

What are "quiet hours"? They are exactly what the name implies. When the magic hour of 7 o'clock strikes, the corridor lights are dimmed, and a great hush settles over the women's dormitories. The girls scamper off to their rooms or to the study lounge, eager to begin their evening of diligent study. As one girl pounds on the wall to hint that her neighbor's radio is too loud, we are convinced of the great enthusiasm with which the girls comply with this rule.

Take Mary, for instance. She is so engrossed in her reading that she does not even notice her visitor, Barbara, from upstairs, who has come to spread the latest gossip about Jane Doe's new boyfriend. What agony Mary suffers as she forces herself to tear herself away from The Odyssey. Barbara realizes that Mary has an hour exam the next day and promises whole-heartedly that she will stay only two minutes, as five minutes go by, then fifteen minutes, a half hour, an hour. "Oh, I really must be going," Barbara says sadly as she heads toward the door. "Oh, have you heard about Mitch and his...?" and she helps herself to another cookie.

Well, by this time, it is 10:30 p.m., and there is a half hour break between quiet hours. Mary needs one and decides to go visiting herself to see what kind of refreshments are being offered.

Quiet hours have finally resumed, and as Mary settles herself down again, her roommate comes bouncing in. "I'm pinned!" she shrieks, as the neighbors some in to see what all the commotion is about. This calls for a celebration, and Roommate is dragged down the corridor where she unwillingly takes a refreshing, cold shower, clothes and all. With a flash of a camera, and a comment or two by the counselor, the excitement is over, and it is back to the books once again.

Now, the upperclassmen curfew is drawing near. Is it not remarkable how the boys keep their cars in such good condition? While studying a history assignment, for example, we are just delighted to listen to them compare the tones of their motors. Horn blowing is a specialty, reserved for those late evening traffic jams in front of the dormitory. However, this lasts for only a half hour, and, alas, we are able to resume our studying, or are we?

Now that all the girls are inside, safe from the clutches of their beaus, many people think that this is the best opportunity to call. Therefore, the intercom system is used to its fullest capacity. Is it not wonderful how considerate a girl is when she pages someone on a corridor? She is very courteous and has much respect for those who are studying; you can barely hear her, especially when no one answers the page.

Ah, yes; such is the study environment of the dormitory. That is why it is so easy to make the Dean's List every semester.

Message From The Men's Judiciary

The Men's Judiciary has been in recent weeks, receiving a number of cases involving vandalism on the University of Massachusetts campus. We feel that offenses of this nature may have very serious consequences and should be brought to the attention of the student body.

The most recent and no doubt well known of these offenses took place during Winter Carnival Weekend. It was decided by a couple of the University students that it would be a very funny "prank" to take the statue of the giant from in front of the Kopper Kettle and place it in front of one of the student's apartment house.

Is this the type of behavior that is expected of a University of Massachusetts student? We do not think so. It is even less understandable when it is known that one of these students is a senior. The fact that the other student involved was a freshman does not lessen the degree of his guilt or the extent of immaturity exhibited by these two students. Not a few students do and have done many things that are not allowed or condoned by the administration and, in fact, by the student body itself. A good number of these violations are of a relatively minor nature but an infraction of this nature is by no means a minor matter.

There are several points of view from which this incident may be viewed. First, is that of the student body. It may be taken as a valid premise that the students as a whole take pride in the fact that they are the student body. Because of this, there is pride in the University and what the student can contribute to what "in toto" is known as the University Community. The Winter Carnival Weekend is presented by and for the student body and an incident of this nature is essentially a slap in the face to the entire group.

A second point of view is that of the tax paying residents of Massachusetts. Obviously, no person who has spent good money for this university through taxes expects to have his dollar wasted through an act of vandalism. There were many visitors to this campus Winter Carnival Weekend, many of whom no doubt observed the fallen giant, who must have wondered how many other "pranks" occur and how much money it costs them personally. Most of these people would have no way of knowing that the damage, in this case, would have been borne by the students themselves—the Sophomore class in particular. Which brings us to the third point of view.

Many members of the Class of '67 worked long and hard hours to make Winter Carnival a success. Had the individuals involved in this incident not been apprehended the class would have had to pay the damage which would amount to an actual cost to each student of the sophomore class. So it can be seen that this did not only affect the student body as a whole, but also that the sophomore class would have had to bear a special burden.

There is also a fourth point of view which should be mentioned: that of the two students involved. They probably realize most completely the seriousness of this incident. They have been suspended from the University. It was felt that these students had not attained the degree of maturity and respect for the property of others that is required of a student of this University, and that a period of separation from the University would be beneficial to these students in the sense of helping them acquire these characteristics.

We of Men's Judiciary feel that we have obligations to all of these points of view: the student body, the people of our state, any group particularly affected by an infraction, and particularly to the individual students involved.

Adequate Reporting Needed

To the Editor:

While we feel that you have discharged your duty in adequately reporting most of what was said at last Thursday's panel on Viet Nam, we nevertheless were dismayed that you chose to give no recognition to us as the sponsor of that program.

It would seem to us only good journalism to have included this information in your report, not to mention common courtesy. We believe we speak for all campus organizations when we request that you be more conscientious in regard to acknowledging the sponsoring groups for various presentations of this nature in the future.

Student-Prof Poetry Reading

Two University Professors will read their poetry in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union 8 p.m. Sunday.

Martin Halpern, author of a new book of poems, Two Sides of an Island, and Joseph Langland, who recently published The Wheel of Summer, will be guest readers at a Caesura coffee hour.

HALPERN

LANGLAND

Prof. Halpern, who came to the University this year, is currently teaching a course in creative writing, poetry. His interests also extend to drama and verse plays. His verse comedy, "The Reservation" is currently being held over for a second month of Wednesday night performances by the Image Theatre, at the Club 47 in Cambridge. "The Reservation" will also be performed on campus, March 20th, as part of the University Fine Arts Festival.

Two University students will also read their work at the coffee hour. Susan Tracy and David Axelrod whose poems have appeared in Caesura, will begin the literary evening.

Applications and information for the editorial board of Caesura will be available at the coffee hour for all interested students.

The readings, along with refreshments and staff information, should offer the campus community an opportunity to hear and discuss new writing in the area.

'Hamburg With' To Mean With Radiation at UMass

Remember the "lifetime hamburger" in the news a few years ago?

The idea was to treat a burger patty with radiation so that it would keep without first being frozen, cooked or dehydrated. Unfortunately, scientists were unable to complete the research successfully.

Today, irradiation of food is once again undergoing careful examination. In an effort to diagnose just what happens when food is subjected to irradiation, the United States Public Health Service has awarded a five-year, $54,600 grant to the University to support a study of the "Effects of Ionizing Radiation of Food Lipids."

With UMass food scientist Dr. Wassef W. Nawar as principal investigator, the University's department of food science and technology will seek to gain a detailed and basic knowledge of what happens to certain constituents of food when bombarded with radiation.

Working in cooperation with the U. S. Army Quartermaster Research and Development Center's Irradiation Laboratory, samples to be tested will be transported to the Quartermaster facility in Natick, where they will be subjected to ionizing radiation from a cobalt-60 source.

While radiation can preserve food, it can also cause off-flavors and changes in characteristic odors that may affect product acceptability. By determining the exact nature of these changes, researchers hope to be able to come up with the techniques necessary to make a tasty as well as a long-lasting hamburger.

Dr. Nawar received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Cairo, and his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois. A member of the UMass staff since 1959, he has conducted research on the deterioration of fats by heat, the role of organic compounds in food flavors, and gas chromatographic analyses of foods.

'65 CHEVROLET

These great performers are the lowest priced models at our One-Stop Shopping Center

Top to bottom: Chevy II 100, Corvair 500, Chevelle 300, Chevrolet Biscayne. All 2-door models.

Each of these beauties is the lowest priced in its line. But the ride doesn't show it. Or the interior. Or the performance.

That luxurious Biscayne is as roomy as many expensive cars, has color-keyed interiors, plush vinyls, fine fabrics, full deep-twist carpeting.

Chevelle, America's favorite intermediate-size car, has clean new styling, wide doors, roomy, tasteful interiors and Chevrolet easy-care features.

Chevy II got a lot smarter for '65—but stayed sensible! Still family-size, easy to handle, economical, and the lowest priced Chevrolet you can buy.

Or get a sporty rear-engine hardtop in a Corvair Sport Coupe or Sport Sedan for fun in the months ahead.

Chevrolet, Chevelle and Chevy II are available with the Turbo-Thrift Six for fuel economy, quick warmups, quiet idling. It's light, efficient, smooth and spirited.

Corvair's air-cooled rear-mounted Turbo-Air Six delivers the best balance and traction for this size car.

So be practical. Only you will know. Because it sure won't show!

J is for Jazz

The "Ambassador"

By Rez

MAINSTREAM, a fine new Jazz label, presents the Clark Terry-Bob Brookmeyer Quintet in their debut. Not a new group these two men have worked together before. The album containing originals by some of the best composers of the day (Terry, Brookmeyer, Monk, McFarland and Herbie "Watermelon Man" Hancock) is hard driving from beginning to end. Also featured in the group are Roger Kellaway on piano, Bill Crow on bass and on drums Dave Bailey. "Tonight" on Mainstream.

Thelonius Monk
Columbia Photo

One of our two jazz ambassadors of good will, Benny Goodman, appears live in Japan on Capitol. Backed by Dick Shreve, Colin Bailey and Monty Budwig (formerly with Shelly Manne), Goodman shows once more why he is the King of Swing. All standards are featured here (Stompin' at the Savoy et al.) to show the very best of Goodman. Incidentally, the other "Ambassador" is Louis Armstrong.

Switching to the other continent, we find Ella Fitzgerald bringing down the house at Juan-Les Pins in France. Accompanied by the Roy Eldridge Quartet (on his way to Boston) Ella Fitz again shows her prowess on ad-lib singing. The album reads like one long cut, and should be added to your collection as it is one of the best sounds of "The First Lady of Song" that we have heard in many years. "Day in, Day Out" is the best cut, available on Verve.

BITS AND PIECES: With all this warm weather around campus, we can't forget that the Newport Jazz Festival is just around the corner. It's the weekend of July 4, but I don't believe it will be held at Freebody Park. ... Remains to be seen... John Coltrane and company appearing nightly at Boston's Jazz Workshop on Boylston Street... Count Basie with full orchestra soon to appear at Springfield's "The Gunnery." ... It's certainly a shame to see Riverside Records go out of business. Astrud Gilberto has her first individual performance album on Verve... See you next week.

SEX AND MORALITY AT UMASS

By Sherry Spear
Feature Editor

"I'm not a virgin and I'm not sorry." "Intercourse is what you take a girl out for, work for, want." "65% of the girls graduating are virgins." Sex and morality, age old questions even today as we look at: U-Mass '65.

Sex, the elusive catch-all phrase for everything from which one you belong to, up to illegitimacy. On a campus where thousands of students gather from all corners of the state and beyond, and different socio - economic backgrounds, they must seek out what is best for themselves and still remain responsible members of this academic community.

In various roundtable discussions we tried to frankly determine the attitude of today's young adults. The beginning of the year found the Doctors at the infirmary answering questions on WMUA, our student radio station. This is not an attempt to shock, scandalize or be coy. This is a forum of opinion from fellow students who will be referred to as merely male or female. We hope they are representative so that as in sex, the name doesn't matter, just the attitude.

Sexual activities are an integral part but not the whole of the mature adult. The flurry of "family" magazines has deplored the deterioration of sexual morals. But a male senior feels that, "It hasn't increased but the talking has. Today there is a liberal affect, an ambivalence—people won't condemn others as easily but set definite limits for themselves." "The Kinsey report on covering virginity felt that a majority of the young brides were virgins. Since then other less encompassing tests have found approximately the same. This is a definite test for validity, only what kids used to do at 18, they are now doing at 16."

Sexual relations on campus are often not impersonal passionate affairs but rather two people fulfilling themselves and the other person. Asked if there were places to be alone on campus even to talk the answer was "only if the weather's good."

"Do guys talk?" was the question and brought an almost unanimous consensus that "not if the guy likes the girl." Asked if rooms should be opened to female visitors the reply was a surprising "no—there are no suites, not enough privacy and most girls are from middle class homes whose mothers wouldn't approve."

The question and subject of the virgin girl is the topic of many interesting books. But, as for the virgin guys, our senior says, "guys who say they would if they could, well I say they can if they want to."

Fraternities and sex: a blind date from a fraternity expects more. He feels he's doing you a favor. (girl '67). They are used by some guys as a social crutch. The CHI TRI after their name is their idea of a key.

Both boys and girls agreed that many deliberately make themselves fall in love—for security, while further adding that sex is okay if you're in love and only one guy at a time.

Drinking and sex: drinking physiologically reduces the sex drive, getting high makes the more inhibited less so. One candid male junior added, "If you have sex for the physiological drive, you might as well just masturbate. It's less trouble."

What would happen to many of our friends if they found a 100% method of preventing conception?

"The Cherry Orchard"

By Alice Wishart
Four College Reviewer

Two UMass students are appearing in the Smith college production of Chekhov's "Cherry Orchard" which opened Mar. 10. Charles Horne has cleverly drawn the crafty, money-dreaming neighbor, Pischtchik, while William Poole plays a charmingly opportunistic apprentice butler.

Director Denton Snyder did a masterly job of evoking purposive motion in this performance in the round. He disclosed unaffectedly the ironic comedy in the masterpiece Chekhov wrote for Stanislavsky.

Sue Carroll's own bearing, coupled with an entrancing smile, was the firm foundation on which was built the Madame Ranevsky whose regal charm was not defense enough against the rigors of independence.

Varya's domestic qualities glowed warmly in Stephanie Braxton's portrayal of the spinster-to-be. Love of life and affectionate optimism showed in Anya's lifting footstep and Catherine Ridnick's acting. Jerri Hill's sly Dunyasha flirted and pouted as the classic maidservant. Rosalind Kaplan, as the clever Charlotta, crackled her lines drily while doing some truly mystifying card tricks.

The director, Denton Snyder, made a brief cavalier appearance as the off-course passerby.

Although the individual acting performances ranged from good to excellent, the play did not quite click for a small, undemonstrative audience. Yet, everything seemed ready to touch off the response that never came.

The setting, designed by William Hatch, changed with each of the four acts. The garden set, with its shrine and Vicki Scott's slightly bacchanalian cherubs, was particularly well done. But, it was Dorothy Randall's costumes, authentic and rich, which served to cue mood by color onstage.

The only problem seemed to be overillumination in the exposed northeast corner of the hall where groups waited distractingly for the entrance into the action.

Future performances: March 12 and 13.

The aim of the Society is to contribute to a better AFROTC, Air Force and promote the concepts of Aerospace citizenship. Pres. Lederle's contribution to the expanding University and its educational program significantly advances such goals, said a spokesman for the department.

Six To Join UMass Faculty; Appointments Effective Sept.

UMass Provost Oswald Tippo Friday announced the appointments of four new UMass faculty members to departments in the School of Business Administration and the College of Arts and Sciences.

The four are Dr. Harry T. Allan, Edward Feit, William M. Johnston and Dr. Yosihiro Kato. All the appointments are effective September 1.

Dr. Allan, a native of Saugus, currently teaches business law at Oregon State University. He holds a B.A. from Washington and Jefferson College, a B.S. from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a J.D. degree from the University of Chicago, where he edited the Law Review.

Dr. Allan will join the School of Business Administration's department of general business and finance as an associate professor.

Edward E. Feit, a native of Austria, was educated at the University of Witwatersrand and the University of South Africa. He teaches in the department of political science at the University of Michigan. He will join the UMass government department as an assistant professor.

Feit is the author of "South Africa: The Dynamics of the African National Congress," published by the Oxford University Press, and several political science papers.

William M. Johnston, born in Brookline, attended Roxbury Latin School and graduated summa cum laude graduate of Harvard College and has studied at the University of Grenoble, the University of Paris, Columbia Law School and the Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

Johnston's scholarly specialties are recent European thought and the philosophy of history. He will join the history department at UMass as an instructor.

Dr. Yosihiro Kato, named assistant professor of zoology at UMass, is now a research associate and teacher at Nagoya University, Japan. He received his B.S. from Tokyo University, his M.A. from the University of California at Berkeley and his Ph.D. degree from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

A member of Sigma Xi and a former research fellow at the Carnegie Institute's embryology department, Dr. Kato is especially interested in the areas of developmental biology, cytology and physiology. He has contributed several papers to biological journals.

Dr. Wayman L. Strother, head of the UMass math department, also announced that two distinguished scholars will join the mathematics faculty next September.

Dr. John Aczel of the University of Debrecen, Hungary, will join the department as a full professor.

Dr. Larry N. Mann, currently at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J., will join the department as an associate professor.

Prof. Aczel, a specialist in the theory of functional equations, has also contributed papers in the fields of algebra, geometry and the theory of probability.

Educated at the University of Budapest and the University of Debrecen, he is the author of three mathematics textbooks and some 90 scholarly papers, in English as well as his own language.

Dr. Aczel has taught at Debrecen, at the University of Szeged and at the Technical University of Miskole. He was a visiting professor of mathematics at the University of Florida during the 1963-64 academic year and is now lecturing at the University of Koln in West Germany.

Dr. Mann, only 30, received the B.A., M.A. and Ph.D degrees from the University of Pennsylvania.

He has been a mathematician for the Radio Corporation of America, a research associate at the Office of Naval Research, and a member of the Institute for Defense Analyses.

Dr. Mann also taught mathematics for two years at the University of Virginia. He has published several papers in mathematical journals, dealing mainly with transformation groups and lie groups.

Temperature Thwarts Mental Processes

A few years ago, the U. S. Weather Bureau established a so-called Comfort Index with the idea that it would tell people whether the combined temperature and humidity added up to good weather.

It didn't work! The experts discovered that one man's comfort is another man's misery.

This finding is borne out by research being conducted at the University by psychology professor Warren H. Teichner. Dr. Teichner, director of the UMass Institute of Environmental Psychophysiology, is working under a continuous Air Force grant of $25,000 per year to study the effects of environmental factors on the performance of complex tasks.

THE ABILITY OF MAN TO PERFORM under unusual conditions is of particular importance for military and space requirements. Teichner has been experimenting with elements such as temperature and noise that could disturb the mental and physical processes.

He found that the 72°-80° temperature range, considered ideal by many, may lessen a man's ability to perform.

The complex actions of temperature and noise and their effects on a man's capacity for work, sleep and endurance involve many areas of study. Firm conclusions, therefore, will depend on continuing research.

Outing Club Plays Host

The UMass Outing Club will host the Intercollegiate Outing Club Association on campus this weekend. College Outing Clubbers from schools throughout the northeast will attend.

A free folk, contra and square dance will be held in the Ballroom Friday evening at 7:30 p.m.

Jerry Carmen and Don Beck will call a fun-level square dance in the WOPE gym at 7:30 p.m. There will be folksinging in the WOPE lounge at the same time.

Admission for the square dance will be 75 cents and refreshments will be served. Sneakers must be worn.

The public is invited.

Directions Provided For Those Preparing For Demonstrations

In any demonstration likely to lead to violence and/or arrest, some precautions can be taken which will make life easier. Wear loose clothing in order not to be choked when dragged.

Wear descent, tough clothing, but not your best. If you expect to be jailed, wear two sets of underclothes so that you can wear one set while washing the other. This is also helpful padding if you are dragged about by police. An extra pair of socks also helps.

Wear a sweater or trenchcoat —cells get cold, and the coat will help cover your legs or serve as a pillow. Take a bunch of kleenex or toilet paper in case that commodity is not available right away.

You will probably not be permitted to keep a razor anyhow, but a toothbrush, deordorant, soap, cigarettes, pencil stubs, notepaper, ballpoint pen refills (not as bulky as the pen itself) and small books are sometimes permitted or can be successfully retained, especially during arrests involving a lot of people at a time. Don't forget to ask for a receipt if anything is taken from you.

Do not wear loafers or other loose shoes which you may lose if you are dragged. Girls should not wear high heels. Sharp objects (such as sharpened pencils, pins, brooches) should not be taken along.

Make sure you have been to the toilet shortly before the beginning of any demonstration. Make sure you have several dimes and telephone numbers with you, and that someone on the outside knows you may be going to jail.

For those who wear eyeglassess carry a hard case to protect your glasses when trouble appears imminent. If you absolutely must wear glasses, carry adhesive tape, and fix three strips vertically across your glassees, one in front of each ear, and one down your forehead, across the bridge of your glasses, and down your nose.

Remember, children, if you are the victim of an attack, and are not severely disabled, you can still take nonviolent initiatives. For instance, in a calm voice you might say, "Sir, may I ask you a question?" If someone else is being attracked, you might go to the attacker and divert him from his victim in a similar way.

H.S. DEBATERS . . .

four students will debate against one another.

Competitions will be held in radio newscasting, group discussion, extemporaneous speaking for both boys and girls, original oratory, poetry reading, prose reading, and interpretation of humorous, serious, and oratorical prose.

Bartlett Hall, the new School of Business Administration building, Hasbrouck Laboratory, Goessmann Laboratory, and Draper Hall will be used for the events.

Complete schedules, with a list of events open to visitors, will be available in the foyer of Bartlett Hall Saturday morning.

Results will be announced in the auditorium of Bartlett Hall at 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Campus arrangements for this sectional preliminary were made by Phillips R. Biddle of the speech department, director of forensics at the University.

The University's speech department and Mr. Biddle also sponsored a debate workshop for high school students last October and a debate tournament in November.

Certificates will be awarded to all students participating in Saturday's preliminaries.

Winning debate teams will compete against other sectional winners next Saturday, March 20, in semi-finals at Notre Dame High School, Fitchburg.

Students who receive ratings of "excellent" or better in at least two of the day's three rounds will be eligible to enter the final statewide competition for all categories, scheduled for Saturday, March 27, at Shrewsbury.

UMass To Host Math Conference This Weekend

The Fourth Annual Mathematics Conference, sponsored jointly by the School of Education and the mathematics department will be held at the School of Education, Saturday, March 13, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Keynote address will be given by mathematics professors Andrew Gleason of Harvard University and Dr. Oystein Ore of Yale University.

Additional presentations will be made by faculty members of UMass, Amherst, Smith, and American International Colleges, and elementary and secondary school teachers from surrounding communities.

There will be demonstration classes at both the elementary and secondary levels, and exhibitions by book publishers.

Dr. Oystein Ore

GLEASON, WHO WILL discuss mathematics for the elementary school, is the winner of a Newcomb Cleveland Prize for an outstanding contribution to science. He has been on the Harvard faculty since 1950.

Dr. Ore, Sterling Professor of Mathematics at Yale, is a native of Norway. He is a specialist of international repute in the areas of algebra, number theory, and probability. He received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1953 and was awarded National Science Foundation grants in 1957 and 1960. He will speak on "The History of Probability."

ORE WILL ALSO ADDRESS a mathematics colloquium to be held the day before the conference in Morrill Auditorium at 5 p.m. He will speak on graph theory.

Education writer Claire Cox reports in a new book, "It is difficult for a student to study and work long enough hours to make money. Colleges discourage substantial student working hours," she said.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall, speaking of working students, said, "They are the students who need our help most, and this bill would grant it to them. At the same time that the bill helps the working student it also helps his parents since they usually have to make up the difference between what he earns and his expenses."

A meeting of the Academic Senate, the top faculty group on the campus, has been called for next Monday to consider the situation. Meanwhile, the senate's seven-member emergency committee, the deans of eight of the 14 schools and 11 top officers, including Vice Chancellor Alan Searcy and Registrar Clinton Gilliam, had a prolonged meeting and concluded that both Mr. Kerr and Chancellor Meyerson "should be asked to continue in office."

Members of the Senate of the Associated Students also expressed regret over the resignations and asked both men to stay. The Meyerson resolution was passed unanimously. Thirteen members supported the Kerr resolution, with six abstaining.

"NONE BUT THE BRAVE"

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

Tonight, the 16 basketball teams left in the NCAA tournament will square off to determine who the four teams that travel to Oregon will be. Listed below are the predicted outcomes.

At College Park, Maryland, the winners of the eastern playdowns will meet with North Carolina State, in the four team field.

Providence 76
St. Joseph's 71

The smooth working Friars looked like the best team in the Palestra. The pressing Hawks should not have too much success with the zone press because of the shooting of Jim Benedict or the man-to-man press because of the fabulous Jim Walker. PC has a 21-1 record while the Hawks are 21-1.

North Carolina State 83
Princeton 65

Not even Bill Bradley can hope to overcome State which downed Duke to earn its trip to the finals. The Wolfpack holds 20-4 mark compared to 20-5 for the Tigers.

On Saturday night, PC will score a 72-67 win to advance to the finals while St. Joe's salvages third by an 87-79 count over Princeton.

In the Mideast regionals, a pair of at large entries are challenging two strong league champs.

Michigan 79
Dayton 65

Look for the Flyers to play possession and try to feed big Henry Finkel, but a healthy Cazzie Russell should carry the Wolverines, 21-3 on the year, to the championship game.

Vanderbilt 81
DePaul 75

A strong independent foe for South East Conference champ Vandy (23-3) but a cool performance should carry them by DePaul.

Michigan will get a tough fight from Vandy before triumphing 83-81 while DePaul rebounds with a victory over Dayton, 73-64.

Manhattan, Kansas will be the sight of the Midwest regionals, which appears to be the weakest of the four.

Oklahoma State 72
Houston 59

The Big Eight is always tough while Houston has taken its lumps before beating Notre Dame in the playdowns. OSU stands 19-6 while Houston is 19-8.

Wichita 82
Southern Methodist 71

Despite being weakened by the loss of two star regulars, one of which was Dave Stallworth, the Wichita club racked up a 19-7 record, just holding on to the Missouri Valley Conference Conference champ, Texas Tech championship. Southwestern had to withdraw from tourney consideration because of an ineligible player so runnerup SMU with a 16-9 record got the call.

Oklahoma State will squeeze past Wichita for the title, 65-62 in a tight duel, while SMU rolls past Houston, 88-75, for consolation honors.

The Western regional is played at Provo, Utah, the home court of Brigham Young, one of the entrants.

San Francisco 69
Oklahoma City 54

The Dons on top of a 23-4 record will meet the Oklahoma City team which stands 20-9. It shouldn't be too much for a contest as Ollie Johnson comes through brilliantly for the West Coast team.

UCLA 87
Brigham Young 76

The defending national champs are number two rated with a 24-2 record as Gale Goodrich has paced the good combination veterans and sophomores all season. Skyline champ BYU has the court advantage, but might be over their heads in this one despite their 21-5 mark.

UCLA, most anxious for a shot at Michigan, will be ready for the finals and score an impressive 79-65 victory over San Francisco. BYU will take third place by running past Oklahoma City, 83-65.

So it looks like next weekend that Providence, Michigan, Oklahoma State and UCLA will be meeting in Oregon for the national prize.

The other tourney, the NIT continues with four games Saturday with predicted outcomes as follows:

Fordham 76 West. Kentucky 67
St. Louis 65 Army 62
LaSalle 74 Detroit 61
Bradley 75 NYU 72

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

This Monday the first Intramural Wrestling clinic will be at 7:15 in the wrestling room. New England finalist in the 177 class, Dave Kelley, will be in charge of the clinic. Competition begins Tuesday.

LCA began the defense of their IM volleyball championship Wednesday night as they defeated TEP 15-9, 15-5.

In the dorm league the Buffaloes were forced to three games by the Barracudas but prevailed in the final two games to win the match 2-1.

The regular bowling season has been completed with Mills being crowned the West league champions, and will meet Grayson #1, winners of East League, for the dormitory championship. In IFC competition AEPi and TEP will probably be playing for the championship on March 22. Unless TEP falls apart and Pi comes out of their present tailspin, TEP will have the championship wrapped up before this date.

Astronomy Club Studies Mars

The Astronomy Club of the University now has use of the 18" telescope at Amherst College, and is planning an extensive use of the facility for observation of Mars this month. Mars is at "opposition," or to laymen, the closest distance it can come to the earth, 60 million miles.

Aside from giving the club members a chance to view the remarkable "red planet," the club plans to make a number of drawings, as requested by Harvard Observatory.

It is hoped that any students interested in viewing Mars will contact the Astronomy Club or Chuck Blumsack, Grayson 521.

Redmen Grapplers Third As Sp'f'ld Dominates

Waligunda of Spfld. "tangles" with Beers of Wesleyan for the New England Championship.

Morin pins his Tufts opponent in the quarter-finals.

Springfield College successfully defended its N.E.I.W.A. crown here Saturday by accumulating 122 points. Wesleyan University took second place with 52 points, while the UMass Redmen were third with 42 points. The Tournament was entered by eighteen New England Colleges and a great deal of fine wrestling was seen on Friday and Saturday.

THE TOURNAMENT FINALS began at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 6, with over 1,000 people in attendance. Freshman Consolation rounds, Freshman final rounds and Varsity Consolation rounds were run first. The finalists for the Varsity teams were introduced at 3 p.m.

In the 123 lb. class Dameron of Springfield defeated Gluchman of Brown 8-7, in a match that was wrestled very well by both contestants. Warren Long of Amherst met defeat 9 - 2 at the hands of Jeff Sadowsky of Springfield in the 130 lb. class. Sadowsky was last year's 137 lb. champion.

UMASS TEAM CAPTAIN JESSE BROGAN, displaying his usual form, decisioned Olson of Williams (12-3) to become the second UMass champion in nineteen years In the preliminary round Brogan pinned Sugarman of Tufts in the first period. The quarterfinals showed Brogan wrestling very well as he pinned his second opponent, Guide of WPI, in the first period. His first competition came in the semifinal round when he met Arrington of Wesleyan. After a gruelling 9 minutes Brogan was the victor with a score of (3-0).

In the 147 lb. class John Cerra of Springfield wrestled Reed of Wesleyan and won by a 5-2 decision. Cerra was last year's 147 lb. champion and 1963's 157 lb. champion. Waligunda of Springfield tied Clyde Beers of Wesleyan in the 152 lb. class. In the 4 minute overtime Waligunda decisioned Beers 4-1. Dale Winter of Springfield pinned Wells of MIT in 2:25. Wrestling in the 157 lb. class for his second straight year, Winter pinned all four of his opponents in the tournament and received the trophy for the most falls. He was the only contestant to pin in each round of the tournament. In the 167 lb. class Frank Peraino of Springfield decisioned Logan of Wesleyan 6-2. Peraino, a sophomore, had wrestled only 10:54 in the previous rounds, and had pinned his first three opponents.

DAVE KELLY of UMass met Joe Cerra of Springfield in the final round of the 177 lb. class. Cerra won 3-2, having accumulated one point for riding time. In the preliminary round Kelley pinned Markowitz of Brandeis and in the quarter-finals he pinned Woodworth of Dartmouth. Kelley's opponent in the semifinal round was Laughary of the Coast Guard Academy. The nine minute match ended in a 1-1 tie, but Kelley emerged a 5-3 victor in the 4 minute overtime. In the 191 lb. class McEntee of Brown and Schmutz of Springfield wrestled to a 7-7 tie at the end of nine minutes. McEntee decisioned Schmutz in the four minute overtime 3-2.

Milt Morin of UMass met Tyler of Williams in the final match of the tournament. Having received a bye in the preliminary round Morin pinned May of Tufts in 2:52 in the quarterfinal round. In the semifinals Morin decisioned Nygren of MIT 5-0. Morin ended the tournament by pinning Tyler in :54, and becoming the Third Redman champion.

Trophies for first, second, third and fourth place were given out in each weight class. Joe Cerra received the trophy for being the outstanding wrestler of the tournament. In three years of college wrestling Cerra has been undefeated, and this year he was nominated for All-American. Milt Morin and last year's heavyweight champion, Laurie McKenzie, each pinned a man in 54 seconds, so each wrestler received a silver bowl for registering the fastest fall of the Tournament.

ON THURSDAY, March 11, Jesse Brogan and Milt Morin flew to Colorado with Coach John Douglas to compete in the National Collegiate Wrestling Tournament. Their results will be printed when obtained. Coach Douglas has great hopes for them and for next year's entire team, which will have seven returning lettermen. Good luck to a fine coach and a fine team.

New England Champions, kneeling, Dameron, 123; Sadowsky, 130; Brogan, 137; Cerra, John, 147; Waligunda, 152; Standing: Winter, 157; Peralno, 167; Cerra, Joe, 177; McEntee, 191 Morin, unlimited.

Prior to entering overtime, Spfld Coach Parker talks with Waligunda, the 152 lb. varsity champ.

Trackmen Hope For Top Spot At Yan-Con Meet

STORRS, Conn. — Six men are scheduled to defend honors won a year ago when the Second Annual Yankee Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships will be staged at the University of Connecticut, Saturday (March 13).

Included among the 135 athletes who will compete in the 13 events are the following winners of the inaugural meet which was held at Vermont last winter: Jim Ballinger of Maine, winner of both the 45-yard high hurdles and the 65-yard low hurdles; Don Dean of New Hampshire, 1,000-yard run; Fred Collingwood of Rhode Island, high jump; Gerry Mazor of Rhode Island, broad jump; Don Mayland of Vermont, pole vault, and Arnold Delaite of Maine, shot put.

Ballinger, however, will not be the defending champion of the two hurdles events because of the change in the distance at Storrs to 60-yards. His chief competitors are expected to be John Mederios of Massachusetts; Al Lavander of Rhode Island and John Copeland of Connecticut.

Dean's 1,000-yard laurels will be placed in jeopardy by Kent Haskin of Vermont, Jon Kirkland of Maine and Tom Panke of Massachusetts.

Making things interesting for Collingwood in the high jump will be Connecticut basketball star Dan Hesford and Pete Matson, also of Connecticut, as well as Mederios.

Mayland's pole vault mark may crumble in the face of threats from Fred Sculco and Clayton Clatur of Rhode Island; John Cross, Maine; and Dave Sadowsky of Massachusetts.

Top weight men, along with Delaite are Tom Whittaker, Vermont; Dan Sullivan, Rhode Island; Craig Hurd, Maine; and Bob Birdsey and Dick Weingart of Connecticut.

The leading sprinters are Mike Spinnell of Connecticut, Dave Matthews of Vermont and Art Larvey of Massachusetts. The top distance runner is Terry Carpenter of Massachusetts.

Because the basketball floor and stands remain in position for Saturdays high school basketball championship game, the facilities at the Field House will not be at their best. This necessitates running trials in the sprints and hurdles and the pole vault event at 10 in the morning. The broad jump starts at 12:30 with the high jump on the basketball court at 1:30. Finals in all events open at 2.

Action in a thrilling game as Vickys defeated LCA, the Fraternity Champion, for the Intramural Campus Championship by a score of 60-51. Fighting for the ball in dark shirt is Shea (LCA) Garsy (Vickys) and Larson of LCA.

Varsity Baseball Schedule Announced

The University of Massachusetts will play an 18-game varsity baseball schedule this Spring. Coach Earl Lorden's Redmen have been working out indoors in preparation for the season opener at Columbia April 10.

Massachusetts usually spends its vacation-week on a Southern exhibition trip. However, the Redmen will not take a trip this season, due to the lateness of the vacation period.

The Redmen will play 10 games in the Yankee Conference plus eight other strong independent teams.

The complete 1965 Massachusetts baseball schedule:

April 10 Columbia, away; April 19 Boston University, Home; April 21 Connecticut, Home; April 23 Vermont, away; April 24 Vermont, away; April 27 Holy Cross, Home; April 28 Rhode Island, away; April 30 Amherst, away.

May 1 New Hampshire, Home; May 4 Connecticut, away; May 7 Maine, Home; May 8, Maine, home; May 12 Rhode Island, home; May 14 Williams, away; May 15 New Hampshire, away; May 18 American International, away; May 20 Coast Guard, away; May 25 Springfield, Home.

"Quality vs. Quantity" Subject of Univ. Forum

by Roxana Adams
Staff Reporter

Quantity vs. Quality was the subject of the second in a five-part conference planned by the Free-University Forum and the Young Americans for Freedom.

Dean Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences, Prof. William Ross, recipient of the University Teaching Award, Dr. Joseph D. Havens, University Mental Health Service, and Kenneth Suid, Staff Ass't Provost Office took part in a panel discussion last Tuesday night in Mahar Auditorium.

SUID STRESSED that the basic fundamentals of the issue are quantity with quality. He said that since the University is expanding and has the quantity, all that is needed is the quality.

To some, quality means a small class and individual instruction. But this does not necessarily make for closer relations between student and faculty. A large lecture can be a stimulating and exciting experience for the student, depending on the professor, Suid said.

ONE HINDRANCE to quality, Suid pointed out, is the lack of communication between student groups on campus. Moreover, Panel member Dr. I. Moyer Hunsberger, Dean of School of Arts and Sciences.

Panel member Dr. William Ross, past winner of the Distinguished Teachers Award.

the student, if he feels that a personal relationship is necessary, should seek this out for himself.

Dr. Havens, in his statements, expressed surprise that the Berkeley situation has not spread, and that this was not a dispute between radical students and faculty, but a controversy of force vs. force.

Liberal learning, Dr. Havens said, involves the person who is involved with what is happening to him. Thought and questioning are taken in course in an atmosphere that characterizes quality and learning. In this liberal learning process, the students and faculty really listen to each other.

BERKELEY is in a process of redefinition, while UMass is in a process of definition. There has never been a clear image since we became a university, continued Dr. Havens, who thinks that a permanent conference on education is needed at UMass. Through this will come a way of helping students get what they really want out of education.

According to Prof. William Ross, many students say the issue of quantity vs. quality has been overdone. The larger a college, the better the facilities and opportunities for learning and quantity sometimes makes for quality.

The increase in size does not necessarily mean more impersonality because, each time the student body is doubled, so is the faculty.

THE LARGER THE UNIVERSITY, the more difficult it is to feel you are doing something worthwhile. Proper motivation of students is based on participation in change and improvement, said Ross.

Dean Hunsberger pointed out that quality does not necessarily come with smallness. The expanding college has the opportunity to increase or decrease its quality.

The character of both the student and the faculty determines the excitement of learning. Some students don't need the stimulus to learn, said Dean Hunsberger, and if they are interested, opportunities are available.

The question, therefore, is not one of quantity vs. quality, but of the relative expansion of both.

13 Students Leave For Selma, Ala.

by Sandy Fairman
Staff Reporter

Five students from the University of Massachusetts and eight from Amherst College left at midnight last Saturday to participate in demonstrations in Alabama.

Due to the urgency of the situation in Selma, Alabama, previous plans to help build a church in Mississippi were altered. The five students from the University community are Peter Shellnut, John Childs, Bill First, Don Johnson, and Dave Walsh.

They plan to first contact the SNCC office in Atlanta, Georgia; and from there to enter Alabama. From SNCC the students will learn by what route they should enter Alabama, and who to contact in Selma.

Although the University students will be missing classes, they feel that the urgency of the recent Selma crisis is important enough to enter the South.

They feel that the mass entrance of concerned Americans from other areas will definitely help the fight for civil rights which has been raging in America.

The students plan to return at the end of the week. They hope that by then the situation in Selma will no longer need demonstrations such as these to bring action.

The Protestant Christian Council is setting up a letter writing room in the Student union for letters to the President and Congress about the Selma situation.

Amherst College Plan Would Kill Fraternities

by Alan Grigsby
Staff Reporter

A new concept for college living has been proposed at Amherst College by a subcommittee studying student life, part of a larger committee studying educational policy.

Their new plan is aimed to more effectively mix the intellectual and social aspects of college life. This goal would be met by the elimination of the present fraternity and dormitory systems.

In place of these would be residential clusters of the present dormitory and fraternity buildings. Each would have between 90-130 students and might contain an art room, record room, dark room, sculpting studio, small theatre, or wood-working shop.

IT IS HOPED that each society will stress one interest more than another and increase exchanges of ideas between students.

Every student at Amherst would belong to a society of preference or be placed in one if his choice was full. The society would, in turn, give added cultural contacts with the arts, his hobbies, the faculty and fellow students, resulting in what they hope will be a more complete Amherst student.

The reason for the change to societies is due largely to the fact that efforts to correct the present system have failed. According to the report, "... the fraternities at Amherst had become an anachronism, that the possibilities for their reform had been exhausted, and that they now stood directly in the way of exciting new possibilities for student life."

THE REPORT CITED LOSS of individuality, wasted time, decreasing percentages of the population in fraternities, low service to the college as part of the reasons the fraternities have lost their utility.

When the chairman of the subcommittee Prof. William W. Heath, was asked if the present system could be modified, he replied that the fraternities conflicted with any such plan because so many members lived in the dormitories, causing duplication of effort.

Prof. Heath was asked if there was adequate money and faculty support to start the project. He stated, "I wouldn't want to guess where the money will come from" and added that no formal statement of faculty opinion had been made, but from what he had heard it was quite favorable.

AS FOR THE PROJECT'S success, this, says Heath, is up to the faculty, the students, the alumni, the president and the trustees.

Tom Poor, president of the Amherst fraternity council, said that the remarks in the report about the fraternities are true and that a general cleaning up is needed. He added that he felt some of the appraisals weren't fair because the committee members were too distant from the present day fraternity life and drew their opinions from what they saw in the classroom and in the dining hall.

Poor commented that he liked the society idea, but felt it was not for Amherst. The individual sacrifices for a fraternity are not, he felt, that great when the benefits are considered, such as closeness of the group and escape from routine.

He pointed out that the report wasn't trying to abolish fra-

Westfield State Coll. Faces Administrative Interference

by Carl Haarmann
Staff Reporter

In an interview with Collegian reporters, Bing Carey, President of the Student Government at Westfield State College, charged school president, Leonard Savignano, with interfering in the Student Government's action in the current question on student dress.

In an effort to probe the attitude of the students and faculty concerning the present rules governing student attire, a committee was formed to prepare a questionnaire for distribution pending S.G. approval. The questionnaire was prepared and unanimously ratified.

WESTFIELD PRESIDENT SAVIGNANO, however, forbade distribution of the poll on the basis of what he considered to be a lack of clarity in its opening statement. Calling it "not a fair poll," the President continued adding:

"If the editors and faculty advisors of Westek wish to print a poll which they really feel is acceptable and which is directed to the basic question of campus dress, they have the right to run it."

When asked by Collegian reporters for a statement on his position, Savignano refused to comment, saying that the Collegian should have the courtesy to let Westfield manage its own affairs.

Student Council President, Carey, said that he felt Savignano's actions to be inconsistent with the aims of the Student Government as defined by the school constitution. These aims are:

"To promote self-government among its members and to make suggestions concerning the social, cultural, and scholastic activities of the students."

In an address to the Student Government, Carey said, "What S.G. is trying to achieve, and

Faculty Panel Defines The University Image

by Roxana Adams
Staff Reporter

The image of UMass was defined as "pretty good" by Daniel Melley of the University News Office in a panel discussion entitled "The University Image" last Thursday night.

The other participants in the discussion were Prof. Joseph Marcus of the Univ. Athletic committee and Prof. Howard Brogan, head of the English department.

Melley went on to say that UMass is a better institution than most people think. This is due to what he called the "image lag"; it is difficult to keep up with all that is going on and build an image in a few weeks.

ACCORDING TO MELLEY, UMass now has national recognition through the New York Times, Newsweek and Time Magazine. Radio and television relations are also growing.

Prof. Howard Brogan emphasized that the surest way to give a good impression is to make the University what it should be.

The competition is becoming more severe and the quality must be higher to achieve a better image. Brogan pointed out that better students and faculty with a larger size promote a better University which, in turn, creates a better image.

IMPROVED PUBLIC APPEAL, Brogan said, can be obtained by offering the best quality education determined and kept at this level by the faculty.

Private institutions put pressure on UMass, and make it hard for us to excell, but a mediocre performance will not be accepted. "There is no need to worry about our image; we will only have it if we deserve it," Brogan stated.

Prof. Joseph Marcus defined image as different for everyone, according to what they want to see in the University. To the alumni, it is a winning football team and to parents it is a comparatively inexpensive place to get a good education.

THE STUDENTS' IMAGE of themselves and the college also varies, Marcus said. It ranges from the escape-from-life attitude, to a second choice college, or a wonderful experience.

The faculty image of students is stimulated by grade-seekers, unique honor students, the Hatch, been cans on the campus, peace marchers and the seemingly apathetic attitude of many students.

Prof. Marcus pointed out that we will never reach a condensation of one image, but if we can define a good image, we are improving and will turn out a favorable image.

FRATERNITIES . . .

ternities and even if they were better, the subcommittee would still favor this plan.

POOR NOTED that an experimental group of 80-100 students is going to try the plan in one of the dorms next year and even if all goes well it would be five or six years before the plan could be adopted.

One aspect of the plan, dealing with the Amherst tradition of freshmen dormitories, was discussed by the subcommittee. It resolved to keep the dorms, but mix in more upper class proctors to free the students from attitudes typical of high school.

Poor thought that the freshmen, if given a lighter first semester, should be allowed to live in upper class dorms and rush fraternities first semester. This would, he said, accelerate their adaptation to the college environment.

Steve Graham, president of the University's Inter-Fraternity Council, pointed out that the fraternities at UMass are different from Amherst's in that they are a private system and are not dependent on the school. Therefore such a plan as Amherst's is unlikely at UMass.

Fraternities are, he said, in a bind because their role has changed from the purely social function of the pre-world war two era. Members are involved in all types of organizations and have a higher level of intellectual pursuit. They must set new goals and initiate programs to grow with the University, added Graham.

At present, he said, interest must be generated in the fraternities for new intellectual growth and further fraternity activity to benefit the campus. As for colonization, Graham pointed out that one fraternity is added every two years and there is room for more if a campus group has adequate support.

Prof. Leland H. Varley, head of UMass' Orchard Hill project, said there are many differences between the Orchard and the new society plan. The UMass project, he said, is on a larger scale, has financial backing, wholehearted faculty support and lacks the problem of planning inter-school events for the project since UMass is a co-ed school.

In some random comments Prof. Varley mentioned that that both plans lacked adequate fields for playing sports and that our fraternity system has many challenges facing it—not the least of all growth.

will achieve sooner or later, is the same rights and responsibilities on campus as private citizens have off campus. School dress is a very minor issue compared with the real issue of freedom of the press, freedom of speech, and freedom to petition."

The school dress ballot is to be resubmitted today.

Dr. Peters Appointed Head of Environmental Control at UM

by Quint Dawson
Staff Reporter

The newly appointed Keeper of the Royal Environment keeps a watchful eye on the UMass campus from ice-patched walks and smokey labs to Dining Commons.

Doctor Howard Peters, 38, who last year was the first sanitarian to receive a PH.D. from the University of North Carolina, is this year the first to hold the position of Director of Environmental Health and Safety here at the University.

The Health Council, under Doctor Gage, recognizing the need for environmental control several years ago, advocated the creation of this post and prepared a statement of its functions. The duties are essentially to investigate sanitary, health and safety conditions of University facilities, locate problem areas, and advise the various administrative offices concerning improvements.

Since his arrival in Amherst, Dr. Peters has moved ahead in the assumption of his duties. During the Christmas Vacation he made a preliminary inspection of campus housing and dining areas. At a Collegian interview last Friday, he concluded that "conditions are not bad," but noted with disappointment a few minor cases of abuse in rooms at the new Orchard Complex. He suggested some improvements in lighting and more careful storage of food in student rooms.

The county (Stockbridge) dorms, "which will probably disappear after the completion of the South West Complex," are heavily lacking in many respects, the doctor said.

At the Dining Commons Dr. Peters felt procedure could be improved with a food handling training program which he hopes to initiate next fall including several lectures and demonstrations. He also expressed a desire for co-operation from fraternities and other off-campus groups in the improvement of their living standards. It is possible that he will work with the Amherst Department of Health to achieve these ends.

Dr. Peters commented that co-operation with his work has been excellent. Complaints about the vending machines in the dormitories placed him in contact with officials of the businesses concerned. The officials offered to put more personnel at the task of maintaining the machines.

As part of an attempt to establish an accident rate for UMass and to locate important safety hazards, the new director is maintaining accident records and reporting them to the American College Health Association for statistical analysis and comparison with other schools.

When Dr. Peters mentioned the routine inspections of dormitory rooms to see that healthful and safe standards are maintained, he said that students must not be careless housekeepers because "in a community one must consider others."

He also stated that "aesthet-

Arts & Music Committee Hosts Classical Guitarist In Concert

Celebrated guitarist, REY DE LA TORRE, foremost international artist in this field, will be in concert on Friday evening, at 8:00 a.m., March 19, in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is 50 cents. Sponsored by the Arts and Music committee, REY DE LA TORRE has been applauded annually in his United States tours and has followers as far away as Iran and Lebanon.

Born in Havana, REY DE LA TORRE was an accomplished guitarist by the age of ten and at fourteen journeyed to Spain to study under the famous guitar teacher, Miguel Llobet. At sixteen he made his debut in Barcelona. In 1941 he made his debut in Town Hall, New York, and his sensitive artistry and exciting programs have raised him to top flight eminence in his field all over the world both performing and recording.

REY DE LA TORRE's performance at the University will be the first of many in his annual cross-country tour which this year will take him on to the Orient.

University Theatre Casts Production of "Romulus"

The next University Theater production, Friedrich Duerrenmatt's ROMULUS has been cast and is in rehearsal under the direction of Prof. Doris Abramson.

IN THE TITLE ROLE is Lawrence Wilker, a senior economics major who has appeared in many University Theatre productions. In recent years he has been featured in T. S. Eliot's MURDER IN THE CATHEDRAL and Boucicault's STREETS OF NEW YORK. As Romulus he will have the challenging task of portraying a witty emporer presiding over the last days of the Roman Empire, in a Broadway role created by Cyril Ritchard.

ELEANOR CAPLAN, an English graduate student, has been cast as Romulus' shrewish wife, Julia. Their daughter Rea will be played by Helen Tefs, who was seen last year in the University Theater production of a new play by alumnus Ray Kennedy, I DO NOT THINK I'LL FALL IN LOVE TODAY.

With the many "character" roles in this satirical comedy, there is a romantic partner for Rea, a matching Teutonic wit for Romulus, and even a few soldiers. The rest of the cast:

Titus	Anthony Francis
Pyramus	Ken Feinberg
Achilles	Richard Guerra
Chef	Ken Bordner
Tullius	Chuck Interlandi
Apollonius	Burgess Needle
Metellus	Bruce Schlosberg
Zeno	Tom Kerrigan
Aemilian	Ted Buswick
Otto Rupf	Gerry Goldhaber
Odoaker	Philip Bedaw
Theodoric	Ken Bordner

Teutonic Soldiers
Donald Westall, Bill Segal, Steve Gabriel

ADAPTED FOR THE STAGE by Gore Vidal, the University Theatre production opens at Bowker auditorium April 1st, the fourth production of the '65-66 season.

Help For Correspondents: Multiple Choice Form Letters

Those of us who twist our mailbox lock in vain every day hoping for letters probably have something in common: we are bad letter writers.

Someone should soften the job for us by stocking the Student Union store with prepared letters for college students with multiple choice salutations to fit the occasion.

Then you could just enter the store, purchase the appropriate letter of a job application, a love letter, or the eternal 'letter home' and have the whole thing completed before you could walk to the mailbox.

A typical letter to the folks might go like this: Dear Folks: How are you? I am (check one) —fine, —dismal, —in love (— again, optional), —all of these.

I sure like my —housemother, —roommate, —schedule, —botany lab instructor.

Right now I am —watching television, — listening to WMUA, —in the head, —studying, —all of those.

The food in the Commons is —good, —horrendous, —starchy, —sickening.

My date is —making me drink, —making me laugh, —making me sick, — making me.

Yesterday I got a letter from

A Study In Education

Nothing in education is so astonishing as the amount of ignorance it accumulates in the form of inert facts. Adams had looked at most of the accumulations of art in the storehouses called Art Museums; yet he did not know how to look at the art exhibits of 1900. He had studied Karl Marx and his doctrines of history which profound attention, yet he could not apply them at Paris . . . . .
The Education of Henry Adams

In view of the current panel discussions on education, it would prove helpful to consider Henry Adams' bout with life. To his misfortune Adams quickly discovered that the factual preparation he received in college in no way prepared him for an effective assault upon life with its numerous vicissitudes. Needless to say, Adams felt alienated from his environment and couldn't keep pace with progress.

Numerous college graduates today will encounter a fate similar to that of Henry Adams. Being left on their own, they will soon discover that their college diploma is not so much a certificate of achievement as it is a certificate of ignorance of life.

The entire problem centers around the meaning of education. The ability to recall the birthdate of Woodrow Wilson and to recite the exact stipulations of the Magna Carta is not an indication of education. It is merely proof of a keen memory and nothing else.

Meaningful education is far more complex than simple retention of information. It involves mental calisthenics, exercises in digesting, analyzing, and utilizing ideas that one encounters. The success of these exercises depends on the student's ability to channel what information he has at his command into practical application.

Of course, a person needs a certain reservoir of facts to communicate effectively and to understand fundamental principles. Yet, the brain need not become a filing cabinet of data. For this purpose we have an encyclopedia and other forms of reference material that are more precise and detailed than the keenest human memory.

Therefore, what a college should teach students is not so much the necessary facts, as the knowledge of how to find these facts, interpret them, and apply them to some social endeavor. The utilization of information also includes its communication to other members in society. The most learned scholar in the world is an educational mute if he cannot communicate and transfer his knowledge to others.

Before our colleges let out more academic cripples into society, it would be extremely feasible to re-organize the existing educational system so that it functions as a training ground for responsible living rather than a tutoring service for superficial diplomas.

No Troops in Selma

Attorney General Katzenbach's decision late last week to bring suit against the Alabama state troopers for undue brutality, displays the good sense that characterizes the Administration's handling of the situation in Selma. Katzenbach's only other alternative was to send Federal troops into Dallas County to replace the state police force as law-enforcers. Judging from the protest marches and messages that the White House has been receiving, the Attorney General would have had wide popular support from Northern liberals for such a move.

That latter alternative, however, would have put Dallas County under Federal marshal law. No move could have been more detrimental to the cause of Negro equality in Alabama; for it would have alienated those modern Alabamians whose help will be needed one day soon to assimilate black Alabamians into the mainstream of life in that state. No picture conjures up more fear and hatred in the minds of the Southern white than that of the omnipotent Federal Government imposing its will upon a "sovereign state" by the use of Federal troops. This fear is an historic one and very real.

There is one other important factor which should lend support to the Attorney General's decision. The Negro in Alabama has been for so long repressed that his white brethren in that state do not believe him capable of doing anything short of manual labor, and very little of that.

Therefore it is just as important for black Alabamians to win their struggle as much as possible on their own. The presence of Federal troops in Selma would simply indicate another victory for the Federal government and would not in that respect be lasting. As soon as troops withdrew, old antagonisms would again burst to the surface and very little would have been gained.

It is indeed sad to see peaceable people being beaten mercilessly and in some cases killed by state police and ruffian gangs. But each drop of blood that stains Alabama streets in the name of Negro equality brings the entire civil rights movement closer to its goal — FREEDOM.

South Africa And The U.S.

Five years ago, on March twenty first, a mass campaign was held by colored South Africans to protest the increasing rigidity of racial segregation and exploitation in ther country. The protest against this injustice was non-violent; Negroes gathered in small groups in Johannesburg, while larger crowds formed in Sharpsville, to demonstrate against the government—a government for which they were not permitted to vote.

Shortly after they arrived, armoured trucks and heavily armed police met them and ordered them to disperse immediately. The Negroes held their ground and refused to move. Shots were then heard, which the natives presumed were being fired over their heads, until they noticed police were aiming into the crowd. Then everyone began to panic and run as bullets continued to pour into the mass of demonstrators. At the end of the day, 70 men, women, and children lay dead, and 200 more had been wounded.

Since that time the government of South Africa has passed an Unlawful Organization Act, which defines as unlawful any assemblage of persons who

a) Cause or promote general dislocation, disturbance, or disorder.
b) further encourage any political aim, including economic or political change.
c) embarrass the administration of the affairs of state.

If convicted under this Act, a person faces a minimum of five years imprisonment, or a maximum sentence of death.

How does this concern us as American citizens?

The sad truth is that we are very deeply involved in the internal affairs of South Africa. U.S. investments have been increasing from $400 million in 1960 to $750 million in 1964! If this trend continues unchecked, the U.S. might well become the world's primary investor in Apartheid within a few years.

With peaceful demonstration brutally surpressed, internal overthrow of Apartheid seems unlikely without outside aid. Leaders have implored other nations to adopt political and economic sanctions against the Verwoerd Government. They ask how a nation like the United States, which has a Bill of Rights, and believes in freedom and democracy, can continue to support a government as unjust as the South African Government is today.

Prime Minister Verwoerd has said that a strong, white, anti-communist government in South Africa is the best friend the United States could ever have. If we continue to believe this statement, we will not only incur the hatred of non-white nations throughout the world, but we will also be turning our backs on the values and ideals upon which our own government rests.

Boston Admissions Officer Named Friday

F. Donald Costello of Concord, a teacher and guidance counselor in Watertown schools for the past 11 years, has been named admissions officer for the University of Massachusetts - Boston, Dr. William D. Tunis, Dean of Admissions and Records, announced Friday.

Costello is an alumnus of UMass and holds a master's degree from Northeastern University. He has also studied at Boston University and Boston College.

The newly-appointed UMass-Boston administrator will work from temporary offices on the University's Amherst campus until Boston quarters are ready.

While a student at UMass, Costello was president of his junior class and a member of Adelphia, the senior men's honor society. He was also a member of the football, track, and baseball teams.

Before joining the Watertown school system in 1954, Costello was physical education director and program director for the Boys' Club of Waltham, Inc. Since 1954, he has served as a program supervisor for the Boys' Club of Boston.

Music Hour Features Witherell Jazz Quartet

by Bill Johnson
Staff Reporter

"That sax player is out of key!" This was the comment that was heard running around the Cape Cod Lounge during the Music Hour sponsored by the Student Union in conjunction with the University's Fine Arts Festival.

The Music Hour started at 3:00 and lasted for an hour and a half, brightening even further the sunny, lazy Sunday afternoon.

Featured during the hour and a half was the Pete Witherell Jazz Quartet, with Pete Witherell on the piano, David Sibley on string bass, Kenneth Hohenberger on drums and Jacob Epstein on tenor sax.

The presentation, on the whole, was quite good except for one drawback, and that was the saxaphonist. During the whole hour and a half, he played off key which tended to detract from the whole performance.

As for the other three performers, they played magnificently.

The repertoire, to name just a few, consisted of such songs as; Moonlight in Vermont, God Rest Ye Merry Gentleman, This Here, Misty, The Girl From Ipanema, and ended up with Take Five, which contained an absolutely delightful five minute drum solo by Hohenberger.

The group has been together for about a month and presently work at Rahar's Inn every Saturday night.

UMass Professor To Lecture

Professor Robert L. Gluckstern, chairman of the department of physics at the University will serve as a visiting lecturer at Cortland College of the State University of New York, Cortland, New York, on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 13 and 14.

He will visit under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program is now in its eighth year and is supported by the National Science Foundation.

Professor Gluckstern will give lectures, hold informal meetings with students, and assist faculty members with curriculum and research problems.

Dr. Gluckstern joined the faculty at the University as professor of physics and chairman of the department in the summer of 1964. He is a theoretical physicist whose chief interests include nuclear physics, particle physics, and the theory of particle accelerators.

Soph Class To Feature R&R Group

The Sophomore Class reports that it is bringing back Barry and the Remains for an engagement at the Naughty Lady Club, this year's Sophomore Banquet, next Wednesday night in the Ballroom.

This group, one of the big attractions at the Cage concert during Winter Carni, will be joined by the Folklores.

Tickets for the Banquet are now on sale in the SU lobby for $1.50. This includes the dinner and the entertainment, and also gives each patron a Naughty Lady Club favor.

Further mementos of the return to the 20's will be the gag shot photos taken of any interested patrons. The sophomores are all encouraged to drag out his or her racoon coat or flipper dress to join the festive air.

Rumor has it that the Keystone Cops are planning lightning raids Wednesday in hopes of apprehending a band of purveyors of bathtub gin.

Grades or Learning--Educational Success

College students and their parents should measure educational success not by grades—by the question "what did you get?"—but by the question "what did you learn?"

This was the suggestion made to parents of Amherst College students in a recent "Report to Parents" dealing with the subject of grades and with parental concern about success in college.

"The crucial issue," said the Report, "is not defined by the question 'what did you get?' but by the question 'what did you learn?' The second question is far more difficult to answer... but also far more significant for the student and those most concerned about him. To put sole emphasis on the first question is to commit oneself to a pragmatic illusion: What is college for? Is it to amass grades and credits for a career? If so it is vastly overpriced and highly inefficient. Or does college also have to do with the student's sense of who he is, with his competence and skills, with his relation to, and vision of, the world around him.

"Success is reflected when the attitude of the student becomes more important than the subject matter, his pursuit of knowledge and understanding more important than their acquisition, and when choices and kinds of effort elicited are celebrated above the resulting event. It is an attitude which regards a solution to a problem less interesting as an answer, than as a suggestion for new questions. Our students' posture is a deliberate and dynamic balance between what a man needs to know and what a man needs to be. It will be slightly different for each man, and even different for the same man at different times."

"Ideally, the student and his parents will come to regard the grade as the estimate of one expert in a particular field of the student's attitude toward, and acquisition of, the essence of that field. At the same time, it is hoped, each student will become an increasingly effective evaluator of his own progress. Not every course is worth an A effort from every student, but every student should be his own most severe critic."

A message of importance to sophomore men

If you've got what it takes to be an Army Officer, you may qualify for this new on-campus training program

A new Army ROTC program starts this coming Summer for sophomore men who apply prior to May 1—only 3,000 applicants to be accepted

If you're a sophomore now attending one of the 247 colleges and universities that offer Army Officer training—or you plan to transfer to one of these schools next Fall—you may qualify for the new two-year Army ROTC program.

This new program—designed especially for college men who have not taken Army ROTC during their first two years—will commence with six weeks of field training this coming Summer, beginning June 14. Then you'll have on-campus training during your junior year . . . six additional weeks at camp during the following Summer . . . and more on-campus training during your senior year. Even flight training is offered at some schools.

ROTC training is really a process of learning to organize and direct others—to be a leader. Consider how important this ability can be to you throughout life; yet, to acquire it you will spend relatively little time in the ROTC classroom. You'll obtain valuable junior management experience . . . a fuller and richer campus life . . . extra spending money ($40 per month during your junior and senior school years, and even more during Summer training) . . . and, when you graduate, an Army Officer's commission as Second Lieutenant. Then you'll normally spend two interesting years on active duty, often abroad with opportunities for travel.

Talk to the Professor of Military Science on your campus about this opportunity. Ask him to describe this new short program in detail.

Or send in the coupon below for complete information. There's no obligation involved, and you'll not be subjected to any "hard sell" recruiting effort. The kind of men the Army wants can decide for themselves if this new opportunity is right for them.

If you're good enough to be an Army Officer, don't settle for less. Sign up now for Army ROTC.

Send in this coupon for more information on this new two-year on-campus Army Officer training program.

ics and public health cannot be separated," suggesting that a program to make the campus safer should be accompanied by a program to beautify the less attractive sections of campus such as sites of recent construction. He is especially interested in safety precautions in areas presently under construction and hopes to be in on the planning stages of buildings yet to be constructed.

Dr. Peters plans to soon turn his attention to other areas of concern such as pest infestations, and the danger of toxic vapor and radiation in some labs. The doctor considers humidity control and air conditioning more a NECESSITY than a luxury.

The office for the Direction of Environmental Health and Safety is on the second floor of the infirmary and Dr. Peters invites information from faculty, staff, and students about legitimate health and safety hazards on campus. Much of his program will depend on such information and he said that he "will certainly handle complaints."

Dr. Peters is performing a number of services in addition to his duties at the infirmary. His academic position, that of Assistant Professor of Public Health, allows him to continue a research project he began in North Carolina on a type of food poisoning. He also participates in a program of discussion meetings to widen the knowledge of Public Health officials of nearby towns.

Dr. Peters received his B.A. at the University of Omaha and his M.P.H. from the University of North Carolina in 1958.

Shower Fad Floods Campuses

Cleanliness, so they say, is next to godliness. Fanatics, religious and otherwise, are still splashing away as the shower fad continues to flood campuses.

A Sir George Williams university student in Montreal, Canada, just last month doused himself continuously for 60 hours. Not long after a Utah student immersed himself for 75 hours. Then the championship went south to New Mexico where two University of New Mexico freshmen stood and slept together under the nozzle for 80 hours. And all to no avail a Canadian, Phil Calvert, at Acadia University, has racked up an amazing 101 hours in the shower. Emerging dragging an air mattress behind him, Calvert allowed as to how he felt a little "drizzled."

NOT TO BE OUTDONE on the cleanliness kick, another Acadian student endured a 31 and a half hour molar-polishing marathon to smash the previous world record for toothbrushing by more than 20 hours.

MEANWHILE, two Acadia co-eds added a new dimension to godliness and cleanliness, symbolically at least. They set a new international record for ice-cube tossing: 1,316 tosses of a single ice cube of standard size at room temperature. (CPS)

"Found Object" Sculptor To Speak Wednesday

Richard Stankiewicz, well known American sculptor, will be a guest speaker during the UMass Fine Arts Festival. He is known throughout the world as perhaps the most original artist working in the area of "found object" or "junk" metal sculpture. Since his first one-man exhibition in New York in 1953, his work has appeared in most of the significant international and American exhibitions of contemporary sculpture.

He was born in Philadelphia in 1922, grew up in Detroit, and since 1963 has lived in Chester, Massachusetts. He studied with Hans Hofmann in New York, and at the ateliers of Fernand Leger and Ossip Zadkine in Paris.

Stankiewicz's work almost defies classification. He has been called a surrealist and a Neo-Dadaist, but he does not fit neatly into any category. His approach to sculpture is totally his own, and his imagery is always unique.

He will speak in Bartlett Hall Auditorium on Wednesday, March 17th, at 8:00 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

perience, ranging from last year's tourney to the Olympics, has made him oblivious to pressure and he consequently is a real steadying influence on his teammates. He is the only senior in the starting lineup for the Tigers, but all his mates can shoot, and all seem to cut at just the right time to catch his passes.

Not even the strongest of Tiger supporters would have believed that the club would score 18 point and 40 point victories, but Butch van Breda Kolff's men did just that.

In the Mideast regional, Michigan won as expected, but not without a tough fight. Vanderbilt won the opening game over DePaul, 83-78, in overtime, after nearly missing enough foul shots to lose two games. Michigan, meanwhile, had an easy romp over Dayton, 98-71, as Bill Buntin was highest of five Michigan double figure scorers with 26 points. Cazzi Russell had only 14, but that was enough.

'In the third place battle, Dayton upset DePaul 75-69, to set the stage for the final. Vandy had the crowd behind them and responded by leading for almost the entire game. Clyde Lee, their great center, picked up his fourth foul in the first half, and was hampered but still managed to go the route.

Michigan finally took the lead in the last two minutes, but never shook Vandy. Russell made seven of nine points the team scored in the last stretch. With the Wolverines on top 85-83, the Commodores fouled in an effort to get the ball, and three times in a row Michigan missed the one and one opportunity. However, each time the Wolverines got the ball back and kept at it until Oliver Darden sank two fouls to put the game out of reach. A last second Vandy basket just made it close at 87-85, but the Wolverines had managed to survive another near loss as they have been doing steadily since Christmas.

In the NIT, four straight upsets by Army, Western Kentucky, NYU, and Detroit made Saturday even more interesting. The predictions for tonight and tomorrow night's quarter final round show:

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

Princeton, Michigan, Wichita, and UCLA will be the teams that make the trip to Portland, Oregon for the national championship this weekend. Today's article will deal with the contestants of the first game in Portland, Princeton and Michigan.

The Eastern Regional produced some surprises this year, but none to match the success story of the mighty Tiger. Of the four teams in the regional, third ranked St. Joseph's and fourth ranked Providence were the favorites, while North Carolina State was ranked as a threat. Princeton? Why they were from the Ivy League, never very strong. Despite Bill Bradley, it was felt by many, including this writer, that they were just along for the ride.

The Tigers opened the tourney with a mild upset as they beat NC State, 66-48, after holding the Wolfpack to only 16 points in the first half. While Princeton is noted for its aggressive man-to-man defense, this low score was hardly anticipated. The Wolfpack had averaged 48 per cent from the field all year, so many felt that their 17 for 66 shots was just an indication of how bad a night they really had.

Besides, all eyes were on the second contest, the long awaited rematch St. Joe's and PC. This game was every bit as tight as the fans had been led to believe it would be. While the Hawks led most of the game and had leads of as much as six, PC came back in the second half as Jim Walker, Dexter Westbrook and Jim Benedict led the way.

The Friars missed several foul shots in the last minute, but St. Joe's missed a last second shot, and it was 61 all going into overtime. Walker and Benedict scored eight points each in the extra session as PC got a well earned 81-73 overtime win.

The third place prize went to NC State which regained its touch as Larry Lakins led them to a 103-81 triumph over St. Joe's which just didn't seem to care at all, with the possible exception of Cliff Anderson, a scrapper every inch of the way. Lakins had 33 points for the Wolfpack.

The final was simply no contest. Favored Providence was buried, 109-69, as the Tigers put on one of the greatest shooting exhibitions ever seen. The PC announcer had them hitting on 41 of 55 shots, but it was probably closer to 41 of 60. In either case, that is one fantastic percentage. Of course, the key was Bill Bradley who hit on 14 of 20 shots, 13 of 13 foul tries, nine rebounds and eight assists. Against State he had scored 27 points, 14 rebounds, and eight assists.

Providence had no defense for the Tigers, who just never wasted a shot. There were few from more than 20 feet out, with many being layups as Bradley passed to his teammates when the Friars collapsed on him.

Bradley is more than just an offensive weapon. His vast ex-

Skiers Finish Season Fourth

On Saturday, March 6, the University of Massachusetts ski team placed 5th in a Giant Slalom at Wildcat Mt. in New Hampshire. This was the lowest the University racers placed over the entire season. This race prevented the UM team from capturing a high position in the league although the University experienced its best season in many years with 53 wins and only 17 losses.

In Saturday's race which was won by New England College, the University was hindered when Tom Pittendreigh disqualified by accidentally skiing through a gate in a pre-race examination of the course. During the race, only two University skiers were able to finish the course without experiencing any difficulties. Co-captains Tom Clark and Dick Woods had excellent runs in their last race for the University. They finished 4th and 8th with respective times of 89.6 and 91.8. Seniors Walt Swiatek and Bob Bibby and junior Pete Plasteridge made slight mistakes on the course which cost them valuable time and prevented the University from placing high in the standings.

In a banquet for the men's and women's leagues at Conway, N. H., awards were presented for the season's performances. Pete Plasteridge skiing strongly and consistently placed 4th out of sixty racers, while Dick Woods placed 6th and Tom Clark 7th.

Following the banquet, team members cast ballots for next year's co-captains choosing them from next season's eligible racers.

This year, the University will lose four seniors. They are Tom Clark, Walt Swiatek, Dick Woods, and Bob Bibby. Both Tom Clark and Walt Swiatek skied for UMass for three years. Dick Woods skied for two, and Bob Bibby one.

Returning next year from the A - team are Pete Plasteridge, Don Piegza, and Tom Pittendreigh, while Brian Hendricks, John Schmelzer, and Hanno Fontaine will come up from the B - team. The UMass team also hopes to have Collin Garstang racing again. In his freshman year, Collin raced in two meets easily placing first and second.

Students and Clergy Leave For Selma

by Tom Donovan, Staff Reporter

Seven clergymen and nine students departed from the Student Union Monday night in three cars and expected to reach Selma this noon to participate in freedom marches.

The Amherst contingent is the second group to leave from the Four-College Area in the past week.

In another group were 75 theological students from greater Boston.

THE UNIVERSITY GROUP planned to fill up on gasoline just before crossing the Alabama state line today and to drive non-stop to Selma. This action is designed to prevent any problems until the destination is reached.

Armen Roupenian, a freshman UMass student, explained: "Getting in and out of Alabama is one of our major problems."

The Rev. John L. Scott, chaplain of students, said the group wants to see that the march, following an awaited Presidential injunction, goes according to plans.

The Rev. Mr. Scott added: "It's the only kind of action that makes sense."

Richard Soble, a senior here, commented: "I think that everyone's basic reaction is that it is wrong. The question is why; also, how we can remedy it. That's why I'm going."

THE OTHER CLERGYMEN in the second group are: Rev. Richard K. Green, First Congregational Church; Rev. Harold Cooper, United Church of Christ; Rev. Darrell Holland, pastor of the Congregational Churches of Hadley and North Hadley.

Also, Rev. James Clark, Grace Episcopal Church, Amherst; Rev. David King, Rev. Christensen Dowel, and Rev. Bruce Bunker, Congregational Chruches of Sunderland and Whately.

The trip climaxed a day-long tribute, quietly paid Sunday to the late Rev. James J. Reeb of Boston, planned to evidence support in this area for the struggle for voting rights in Selma, Ala. The demonstrators expressed hopes for a quick and just settlement in the South.

IN AMHERST, more than 200 demonstrators marched to the town Common after church. They heard an original song, composed by UMass freshman Barbara Webster of Needham and sophomore Kenneth Hardy of Swampscott, memorializing civil rights workers in Selma.

Miss Webster told the Collegian: "We felt we wanted to do something more than just talk about it."

As a tribute to the late Rev. Mr. Reeb, Philadelphia's Temple University announced Sunday that it had awarded full tuition scholarships to his four children.

Rev. Reeb received his Master's degree of sacred theology from Temple University in 1956.

Also leaving Massachusetts Monday were two planeloads of Greater Boston residents, including Lt. Gov. Elliott Richardson. One group of more than eighty included the Rev. Dr. Jack Mendelsohn, minister of Boston's Arlington Street church (Unitarian), where the slain Rev. James Reeb and his family worshipped.

President Johnson Speaks To Congress

Text of President's Address

Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, members of the Congress, my fellow Americans: I speak for the dignity of man and the destiny of democracy.

I urge members of both parties—Americans of all religions and colors—from every section—to join me in that cause.

At times history and fate meet at a single time in a single place to shape a turning point in man's unending search for freedom. So it was at Lexington and Concord. So it was a century ago at Appomattox. So it was last week in Selma, Ala.

There, long-suffering men and women peacefully protested the denial of their rights as Americans. Many were brutally assaulted. One good man—a man of God—was killed.

There is no cause for pride in what happened in Selma.

There is no cause for self-satisfaction in the long denial of equal rights of millions of Americans.

But there is cause for hope and for faith in our democracy in what is happening here tonight.

FOR THE CRIES OF PAIN, the hymns and protests of oppressed people, have summoned into convocation all the majesty of the Government of the greatest nation on earth.

Our mission is at once the oldest and most basic of this century: To do right to do justice, to serve man.

There is no Negro problem. There is no Southern problem or Northern problem. There is only an American problem.

Many of the issues of civil rights are complex and difficult. But about this there can be no argument. Every American citizen must have an equal right to vote. There is no reason which can excuse the denial of that right. There is no duty which weighs more heavily on us than the duty to ensure that right.

YET THE HARSH FACT is that in many places in this country men and women are kept from voting because they are Negroes.

Every device of which human ingenuity is capable has been used to deny this right. The Negro citizen may go to register only to be told that the day is wrong, the hour is late, or the official in charge is absent.

If he persists, and manages to present himself to the registrar, he may be disqualified because he did not spell out his middle name or because he abbreviated a word on the application.

For at the heart of battle for equality is a belief in the democratic process. Equality depends not on the force of arms but the force of moral right—not on recourse to violence but on respect for law.

We intend to fight this battle where it should be fought—in

Amherst Student Beaten In Montgomery March

Special From Collegian Reporter in Montgomery

A member of the student group which left last Friday night for Montgomery, Ala., Amherst student Fredrick Kraai, was beaten about the head and trampled by a horse Monday as police attacked marchers in Montgomery, according to Don Johnson, Collegian reporter. Kraai also suffered cuts on the head but the severity of his injuries is unknown at this time.

Don Johnson, a UMass junior from New Bedford, said that the Montgomery police tried to run demonstrators over with cars and motorcycles. They also beat the students with nightsticks. At one point, an ambulance drove through the crowd in order to drive them towards the police, he added.

According to Johnson, the police last night attacked marchers with tear gas bombs in an attempt to drive them away.

Sheriff James Clark of Selma, Alabama arrived in Montgomery yesterday morning. There was no announcement of his purpose for being in the strife-torn city.

Students Evacuate Buildings As Bomb Scare Threatens Again

by Tom Donovan and Ellen Levine
Staff Reporters

Both the Student Union and the Curry Hicks Cage were evacuated Monday morning after an anonymous male phone caller informed a Northampton telephone operator that either the Student Union or the Cage was going to be blown up at 12 noon. According to Campus Police Chief Alexander Blasko the operator received the call at 10:20 a.m. and the buildings, including the south wing of Bartlett Hall, were evacuated soon after 11:00.

University news officials estimated that almost 1,000 persons had to leave the SU, another 500-700 from Bartlett and less than 100 from the Cage.

After several searches of both buildings by campus and state police, they reopened at 1:30 p.m.

During the search of the SU, a wall telephone was removed by state police for fingerprinting. The Northampton operator had traced the call.

When asked if the fingerprinting had turned up a suspect, Sanford Keedy, district attorney of Hampshire-Franklin county, said that "at this point I'm not going to look into the case."

The last search was begun at 1:00 after Detective Lt. Timothy Keane of the state fire marshal's office decided that, if the bomb existed, it had malfunctioned. He added that this is an accepted procedure; if a bomb does not detonate within an hour of its supposed time, it is then considered to have been a dud.

Two State Police troopers prepare to enter Student Union in search of alleged bomb during Monday's bomb scare.

Comments regarding the individual responsible ranged from "a sick kook" to "a pitiful person."

A member of the visiting Five Day Tree Conference, ousted from the SU by the threat, was heard declaring, "got another nut loose." When questioned by Collegian reporters, W. L. Cummings, manager of the Student Union store, said, "It's a shame. A real inconvenience to you students." Another SU official said, "This mess is money right out of the student's pockets."

One of the state police officers again stressed the fact that, if caught, the offender faces a seven year jail sentence.

Jay and the Americans To Highlight Soph Banquet

JAY & THE AMERICANS will highlight the entertainment at the sophomore Class Banquet to start tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom.

Enjoying national popularity, Jay & the Americans have recorded "Only in America", "Come a Little Bit Closer", and most recently, "Let's Lock the Door."

Dave Hoy, the comical MC featured at the Winter Carnival Rock 'n' Roll Show, will also present two other entertainting groups—The Folkores, famed performing group of King's Rook and Dateline Boston, and the Better Halves, a female singing group.

A full evening has been planned by members of the Sophomore Class to make it one of the most memorable occasions of the year. "Keystone Cop" favors will be presented to all in attendance.

Ellen and Anne Macgregor will show their slides of the University of New Mexico at the Education Club Meeting on Wednesday, March 17 at 7 p.m. The slides were taken when the girls were education exchange students at the University. Also planned for the meeting will be the election of officers. All interested are invited to attend this informative meeting.

Young Independents Vote— Join SDS, Picket Apartheid

After voting to become a chapter member of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), Thursday, March 11, the Young Independents at UMass began leaving for points both north and south to press the struggle for racial justice at home and abroad.

Thursday and Friday of this week, other YI's will leave for New York and Boston to take part in an action against U.S. corporations that, according to the SDS Bulletin, are making a profit on South African apartheid.

In Boston, the First National Bank will be picketed, and, in New York, a sit-in is planned at the Chase Manhattan Bank which has, according to the SDS Bulletin, loaned South Africa 10 million dollars on revolving credit, thus making the Chase Manhattan the biggest U.S. investor in apartheid.

Those students participating in the sit-ins will risk arrests and fines.

"We know the risks involved," said Young Independent Kathy Nolan, "but what about the risks involved in being a black in South Africa or being a Freedom Worker in Alabama? If we want Freedom, we must take risks to secure it. Those who left Saturday for Selma are risking their lives. We'll be risking little in comparison to them."

According to the YI's, the demonstration Friday will be primarily directed toward the First National Bank of Boston, 67 Milk St. The bus will leave Amherst at 8:55 a.m. and will leave Boston on Friday night at 5:30.

Campus Chest To Award Scholarships

by Harriet Braunfeld
Staff Reporter

Ralph Leonard, the first UMass student asked to participate in the Experiment in International Living, will receive a $300 grant from Campus Chest to help finance this endeavor, according to Toby Kaplan and Don Lewis, committee co-chairmen.

Campus Chest will award scholarships totaling 40% of this year's drive income to worthy University students. The World University Service, which gives financial and manual aid to schools all over the world, will receive 30% of the total intake, and the United Negro College Fund will also receive 30% of funds collected. This fund gives financial aid to Negro colleges throughout the country.

The Campus Chest committee believes that this manner of distribution will benefit a variety of needy causes and hopes that, in view of current situations involving both the civil rights movement and the push for higher education everywhere, that students will not hestitate to give generously when approached.

Bruce Payne leader of the Yale tenure dispute, will substitute for Paul Booth as the final speaker of the UMass Free University Forum tonight at 8 p.m. in the small SBA auditorium. His topic will be "Berkeley: Student vs. Multiversity."

Booth, East Coast Coordinator of the Berkeley Free Speech Movement, will be unable to attend.

SEX (at UMass)

by Mike Shuman

Much comment has arisen over the series of articles on sex that has appeared on our feature page lately. We've heard from the Victorian who thinks that too much is being said about sex already, as well as from the liberal, who neither approved, for he said not enough was said. In this series, I'll attempt to discuss some of the prevailing types of sex attitudes, from Dwight to Dean Curtis, from Hills to Dean Hopkins. Readers write in, so we might distill some truths and common sense from the endless drone of SEX talk on campus.

This article deals with a certain breed of co-ed, who is too well known at UMass. She can be found in many different garbs and coiffures, and in any part of the Hatch; but her guises give her no concealment. . .she is the "Tease". Usually bubbly and effervescent, this delightful wretch worships the "feminine mystique". She wears clothing that approximates paint in appearance. Her make-up is usually over - done, almost always widening the eyes for the "feline look". Her gait is entrancing to behold, and her derriere increases its pendulum swing in direct proportion to the number of male heads that turn to see her off. This kitten knows all the tricks in the fine art of man-attracting, but all too aften she has no idea of what to do with a man once she's finally got him.

Oh, you GUYS know who I mean. She's the one who always yawns so deeply and stretches when she gets up from a table at the Hatch. Her skirts are fabulously short, and though she acts like she doesn't know that guys are watching, her hemline keeps climbing and climbing. Besides tossing incredible flicks, this gal is a swinger in slacks, a bomb in blouses, a smash in sweaters, and fellows would give an arm and a leg to see what she looks like au naturel. But the ironic thing is nobody knows what she does look like under the straining fabric, because she'd probably scream bloody blue murder if anyone tried to touch her.

She looks like a tramp; a sexy broad, even a nymphomaniac...but she isn't She's a huge sign advertising a locked store, and she exalts in the frustration she breeds. Sure, she gets plenty of dates, 'cause any guy who could add her to his "conquests" would have quite a notch for himself. Her universally known sexuality has made her a marked woman, and the guys virtually line up to try their luck at her. The end result isn't very pretty.

The men she's frustrated hate her passionately, so with the added emphasis of her sexy decor, her name on campus takes a nose-dive. She is happy, though, as she goes out weekend after weekend, running the gauntlet of inquisitive hands. She shuts them all off, but she also ruins her chances of finding a worthwhile relationship. She is dated for her physical potential and fame, not her personality. She is hated for her hypocrisy, and the more she teases, the more ardent her suitors become. Someone will get her in the end, but it certainly won't be out of love. She'll be hurt, and badly, but no one can warn her, she doesn't hear them. Poor little Tease; she uses her abundant femininity to nail her own social coffin.

One Man — One Vote

Many people in the United States have criticized President Johnson during the past few weeks for not taking any action to stop the trouble in Selma, Ala. He has been accused of being afraid to act, and of being a supporter of segregation, for not sending Federal troops to the scene.

These people should realize, however, that there is more to the problem than Selma. The President was doing what an intellegent person in his position MUST do. He was extensively investigating the segregation problem in its entirety. Stronger action may have been in order, but the President's ultimate action was far more significant.

To send troops to Selma may have alleviated the present problem, but it in no way would have contributed to the solving of the civil rights issue itself.

As a result of his investigation, Johnson has drafted new legislation which, when passed, will help to resolve the entire struggle.

This bill will insure voting privileges for the Negro.

In a joint address to the House and Senate, the President called for immediate action on the new legislation. He also denounced any attempt to water it down. The address was so well received, that the legislators interupted for standing ovations several times. This is a rare occurance, seldom seen during a joint address.

The President stated that "This bill will strike down restrictions to voting in all elections—federal, state, and local—which have been used to deny Negroes the right to vote."

He further said that this bill "will establish a simple, uniform standard which can not be used however ingenious the effort to flout our Constitution.

The Legislators, except those from die-hard segregationalist states, are firmly behind the President.

This legislation has been a long time coming, and should be well received by the entire country as the beginning of the end of the century old battle. President Johnson has truly shown himself to be the President of the people when he said, "I want to be the President who helped end the hatred among his fellow men, and war among the brothers of the earth."

Joel Hartstone,
Editorial Associate Chairman

We've Had Enough . . .

Monday afternoon for the second time this month, the University was plagued with a bomb scare. This time the hoax necessitated the closing of not only the Student Union, but also Bartlett Hall and the Cage. Because of the noon hour, many students were forced to find places to eat off campus. The entire staff of the Student Union was disrupted from its duties, and the Union store was closed at a loss of service and profit to all.

However, this is not the worst of it. Three hours of classes had to be cancelled. Professors and students already trying to cope with too few hours for the required material were forced to waste their time so that an unbalanced person might get the attention he craved.

It is unfortunate to think that the activities of so many students can be curtailed for even one moment by the actions of "thrill-seekers."

The scare also forced the State Police to be called to the campus. These men, who find pranks of this nature very difficult to laugh at, were taken from their own districts at a cost of time and money to the public.

It is time that the citizens of UMass realize that bomb scares are no joke. An atmosphere conducive to study is definitely lacking when bomb squads and crowds of curious students move about the campus. Only when the entire student body becomes adamant to this type of inane behavior will the culprit fear to practice his tricks again.

Our University is a place to learn and the faculty and students must not permit its purpose to be subordinated to the whims of irresponsible pranksters.

On Morality

The ideals that are stated in the article "Sex and Morality" might truly be beneficial to obtaining a "utopia," if people regarded marriage solely as an institution for deriving pleasure from the sex act. With this philosophy, premarital relationships would be necessary to develop a successful marriage, for if a man and a women were not compatible sexually, then they would not be compatible at all.

We firmly believe that the individuals who agree with this philosophy do not agree with it simply because it will augment the advancement of this society. We feel that many individuals would profess this philosophy solely for the opportunity of getting a little free sexual enjoyment.

But are successful premarital relationships indicative to a happy marriage? Is sex really such a major element in judging whether or not a couple can enjoy a marriage? Sex is not really the determining factor in selecting a mate, although it may seem to be at first. There have been many happy marriages in which either the man or the woman has been sexually impotent, and we believe that there will be many more such marriages. We will leave to the individual the determination of that element which is conducive to the desired situation in a marriage.

We do not condemn premarital sex, but we can see no rational correlation between premarital sex and the choosing of a mate.

Fire Alarm

To the Editor:

Pranks and jokes are expected as long as they don't interfere with the health and welfare of others. About a month ago a handle on the fire alarm in Hills Dorm North was ripped off and reported. Since that time Hills Dorm North and South have been without a fire alarm system. If the students only realized they are not only hurting themselves but their fellows students who reside in the dorm. If a fire did happen to break out, it would be tough trying to go door to door waking up sleeping students. Need I say more?

Course Drop Policies Explained

Several misunderstandings of the latest regulations affecting undergraduate academic records resulted in the registrar reminding students this week of the changes approved by the Faculty Senate Dec. 3, 1964.

Registrar William C. Starkweather pointed out that the regulations are effective this semester. The latest changes include:

The period during which a course may be dropped with a W grade, last year extended to mid-semester, has been shortened back to the 28th academic day from the beginning of a semester. This period is, however, extended to six academic days beyond the closing date for mid-semester grades for first semester freshmen and first semester transfers.

Any course dropped after the 28th academic day is entered on the permanent record as a WF unless an exception to the regulation is made in a case of protracted illness or critical personal or academic problems.

The incomplete grade regulations are changed in several ways, according to Starkweather.

"An incomplete may be reported only when work has been missed because of illness or extreme personal circumstances, or for scholarly reasons. If the instructor does not know why the student has missed work, the missing work is counted as failing and averaged with the remaining work in order to calculate a final grade.

"In order to qualify for an incomplete grade, the necessity for the absence must be validated by the health service or the appropriate personnel or academic dean," the registrar commented.

Incomplete work must be made up within two weeks from the date of the last final examination, unless an exception to this two week deadline is requested by the appropriate agency.

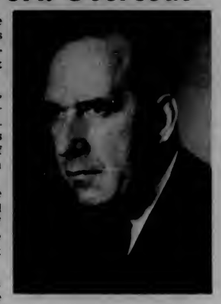
Director of Japan Society To Discuss Work Overseas



The Executive Director of the Japan Society, Inc., Dr. Douglas W. Overton, will speak this Friday, March 19 in the Student Union Colonial Lounge.

Overton will present his talk, "Japan and the United States—A New Partnership," at 4 p.m. The lecture is one of a series concerned with the role of American professional people in overseas positions.

The talks, supported by the Ford Foundation and sponsored by the UMass department of sociology and anthropology, are open to the public without charge.

The Japan Society, of which Dr. Overton has been Executive Director since 1952, is a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization of Americans and Japanese interested in furthering U.S.-Japanese cultural relations.

Prior to joining the Society, Overton served as Director of the Institute for American Studies, St. Paul's University, Tokyo; Vice Counsul in Yokohama; Second Secretary at the American Embassy in Tokyo; Deputy Officer in Charge of Japanese Political Affairs in the U.S. Department of State; and a U.S. delegate to the U.S.-Japan Conference on Cultural and Educational Exchange.

"American Character 1965" New Caesura Experiment

An experimental supplement, bound with the regular issue but exploring a single theme, is Caesura's goal for its final issue of the year. As announced at Sunday's coffee hour, the projected section of the commencement issue will attempt to channel campus creative talent to the theme, "The Character of America, 1965."

In announcing the experiment, Caesura editor Maida Hurwitz said that the magazine seeks all types of material for the supplement. The theme may be expressed in fiction, poetry, art, essay, drama or any other medium that the contributor feels might capture the essence of the American character.

THE DEADLINE for material for the commencement issue of Caesura is Tuesday, March 31, including material for the proposed supplement. All material for Caesura should be left in the Caesura office in the Franklin room with the author's name attached to the otherwise anonymous manuscript.

Concurrently, Caesura is seeking applicants for membership on its prose, poetry and art boards for the 1965-1966 school year. Graduation will leave many openings for qualified persons seeking membership. Applications are now available in the Caesura office and are due by Tuesday, March 23.

the courts, in the Congress and in the hearts of men.

We must preserve the right of free speech and the right of free assembly. But the right of free speech does not carry with it the right to endanger the safety of others on a public highway.

We do have a right to protest — and a right to march under conditions that do not infringe the constitutional rights of our neighbors. I intend to protect all those rights as long as I am permitted to serve in this office.

We will guard against violence, knowing it strikes from our hands the very weapons with which we seek progress—obedience to law and belief in American values.

In Selma as elsewhere we seek peace. We seek order. We seek unity.

But we will not accept the peace of stifled rights, the order imposed by fear, the unity that stifles protest. For peace cannot be purchased at the cost of liberty.

Above the pyramid on the great seal of the United States it says—in Latin—"He has favored our undertaking."

God will not favor everything we do. It is rather our duty to divine His will. But I cannot help believing He truly favors the undertaking we begin tonight.

The second of Friday night's NCAA semi-final games will match Wichita, the Mid-West champ against UCLA the Western regional and defending national champion.

Wichita has had a long tough road to the Coliseum in Portland. At mid year, the Shockers lost All-American Dave Stallworth, who had used up his collegiate eligibility, and 6'10" star Nate Bowman because of scholastic difficulties. A lesser team would have folded under such a blow, but Wichita held on to its berth in the regionals by squeezing out the Missouri Valley Conference title.

THEY HAD A GOOD BREAK in the regionals, because the field was weakened. Texas Tech, far and away the best team in the Southwestern Conference, won the title, but had to remove itself from post-season consideration when it was found to have an ineligible player on its squad.

This put Southern Methodist in the field as Wichita's first round foe. The Shockers matched their 19-7 mark against the 16-9 record of the SMU club. The Kansas team ran off the first 12 points of the game, and never let SMU catch up. Kelly Pete, a 6'1" hustler, scored 31 points for Wichita.

The other game in the regional matched Big Eight champ Oklahoma State against a good Houston team. The Cougars had been averaging 83 points a game, but State, led by big Gene Johnson, swept to a 75-60 victory.

SATURDAY NIGHT SMU got past Houston, 87-85, as both teams just played out the season. The championship game saw the second upset of the four regionals when an underdog Wichita, paced by Pete's 19 points and numerous clutch rebounds, downed Oklahoma State 54-46. The Shockers beat State at its own game, a possession style of play.

The Far West regional saw the combination of Gale Goodrich and Keith Ericson lead UCLA over the century mark twice and past two good opponents for their trip to Oregon.

SAN FRANCISCO used its defense and Ollie Johnson's 35 points to score an impressive win over Oklahoma City, a no defense club. The final score was 91-67, as Johnson helped the Dons shut off the Chiefs under the hoop (only 2 of their first 13 baskets came from outside 20 feet).

UCLA buried a good Brigham Young team that was ranked ninth in the country, 100-76. Goodrich came up with 40 points, many in the second half, after Ericson got the club rolling in the opening session. He finished with 28 points. This marked new season's highs for both players.

Oklahoma City continued its no defense style, but with better results, as it wiped out BYU 112-102 in a free scoring affair.

THE FINAL BATTLE matched a good defensive club in the Dons against the high scoring Bruins who go over 100 with regularity.

The UCLA style won out as they beat San Francisco, 101-93. Goodrich made two free throws with four minutes left to set the UClans off and overcome a superlative performance by Johnson who had 37 points. Goodrich finished with 30 points and Ericson had 29 as these two men formed a great scoring punch.

UCLA wants to get back the top spot they had to surrender to Michigan this year. It is a strong possibility that those two clubs will meet in the finals.

Connecticut Quintet Sets New Records

STORRS, Conn. — Several records were set by the University of Connecticut basketball team which closed its season with a 23-3 mark and its 14th Yankee Conference title.

Capt. Toby Kimball, 6-8 senior from Sudbury, Mass., posted a new career high for a three-year varsity member with 1,361 points in 74 games. This eclipsed the three-year mark of 1,354 set by Art Quimby from 1952-55 in 72 contests.

Wes Bialosuknia, 6-2 guard from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., placed his name at the top of the list of high scoring sophomores with his 490 points in 23 games, an average of 21.3 per game. He replaced Vin Yokobaskas ('51-'52) who had 454 points in 27 games.

Wes also matched a home court high for field goals when he scored 17 against Boston University in a 37-point performance. That placed him even with Eddie Slomcenski against Maine in 1963 and Toby Kimball against Colgate in 1964.

Bialosuknia led the team in scoring this past season with 490 points on 198 baskets and 94 free throws for an average of 21.3 Kimball was next with 177 hoops and 101 free throws for 455 points and a 19.8 average.

As a team, the Huskies set a new record for consecutive games won in one season with 15, topping the '53-'54 figure of 14; and the 23 victories matches existing record for most wins set in '54. The 81 rebounds against New Hampshire on Feb. 27 erased the old team rebounds mark of 80 against American International in 1957; and the attendance of 4,848 in that same game topped the 4,705 home crowd on Dec. 1, 1956, in a game with Colby.

worth and SFC Martin, the most recently arrived member just returned from Germany.

In addition, M/Sgt. Cudworth aids Captain William McGinnis with the varsity pistol team. SFC Martin and SFC Margelony have assisted Major Fowler with both the varsity and ROTC rifle teams. Spec-5 Twait has been assisting with the rifle teams on various occasions.

These five men are most important to the various duties performed by the detachment as they assist the commissioned officers who instruct 350 cadets enrolled in the Army ROTC program on the UMass campus.

Redmen trackmen at Yan Con meet festive in Friday Collegian.

Redmen Frosh Five Have Another Good Year

Five members of the University of Massachusetts freshmen basketball team averaged in double figures this winter. The Little Redmen, 10-3 for the season, scored at a rate of 87 points per game while limiting the opposition to 64.

Forward Mike Bernard, 6'4" (Brockton), scored 115 points in six games for a 19.2 average and also hauled in 12.2 rebounds per game. Mike hit 50 of 90 field goals attempts for a nifty .555 percentage. Bernard's outstanding defensive efforts and clever ball-handling were key factors in the Massachusetts frosh winning all six games he played.

Billy Tindall, 6'5" center (Mt. Kisco, N.Y.) finished second in scoring with 216 points for a 16.6 average and grabbed 155 rebounds for an 11.9 mark. Tindall's speed, defensive feats and inside moves to the basket showed him to be one of New England's best freshmen players. Third on the list was 6'5" forward Jim Cirotti (West Springfield) with 74 points in six games for a 12.3 average, followed by guard Hagan Anderson, 5'11" (Haworth, N.J.) with 143 points for an 11.0 average and Rick Perkins 6'3" (Ramsey, N.J.) with 137 points for a 10.5 average. Perkins started in the backcourt the first six games then moved to a forward spot.

Gary Gasperack, 6'4" forward (West Springfield), notched 119 points for a 9.2 mark and Russ Vitallo, 6'3" forward (Schenectady, N.Y.) was next with 87 points for 8.7. The Little Redmen received valuable contributions from 6'5" Greg Rand (Marblehead), guards Don Alberico, 6' (Utica, N.Y.), Bill Cannata, 5'11" (Watertown), Alex Vyce, 5'1" (Chicopee) and Charlie Winston 6'1" (Boston).

Massachusetts freshmen Coach Jack Leaman now has a four-year record of 43-14. The three losses this year were by a total of nine points.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

The Intramural Basketball season ended last Thursday night with the playing of two All-Star games. In the preliminary match, played between the All-stars of the two Independent leagues, the Nationals nipped the Americans 65-63 in overtime.

Three of the starters for each team hit for double figures in this ball game. Al Garsys was high man for the Nationals, hitting on nine field goals and a free throw for 19 points. Other double digit men for the Nationals were Ray Stanelis and Charlie Fohlin, both with 11 tallies.

High man in this game was Carl Belz of the Americans. Belz scored 20 points on 9 field goals and 2 free throws and played his best all around game of the season. Terry Swanson picked up 12 and Art Driscol had 10 to round up the top scorers.

The game ended in a 57-57 deadlock after regulation time. The Nationals then played a deliberate game to muster their lead and held it to the final buzzer.

The match that was billed as the feature game of the night, between the Dorm All-Stars and the IFC All-stars, was anti-climactical. The IFC showed Princeton polish as they downed the dorms 76-47.

Steve Shea recovered from the cold touch he had in the championship game to lead the IFC men with 18 points. Also hitting in double figures for the IFC were Alan White with 13, Paul Caisse and Jim Neary with 10 each.

The dorm All-Stars were not able to break the stubborn defense of the IFC and when they shot it was done haphazardly. George Manos was the only dorm All-star to hit in double figures as he picked up 12 points.

In the IM Tenpin bowling tournament the men from AEPi are rapidly closing the gap on league leader TEP. Monday night Pi took QTV 8-0 as TEP drew a bye. TEP now stands with an 86-18 record and Pi is 78-26. The big match is Monday night when the two leaders meet. AEPi MUST win all eight games to force the league into a deadlock. One loss will give the championship to TEP.

The IM squash is heading into the home stretch with one final position already assured. Lacrosse coach Dick Garber defeated Bob Greenberg 15-10, 15-9, 15-8 to reach the finals. All that's needed now is a contestant for Garber and that will be determined within the next week.

A record number of entries have signed up for the IM wrestling tournament which begins tonight at seven o'clock. There are no defending champions in the weight classes which are 123 lb., 137, 147, 157, 167, 177, 187, 197 and unlimited.

Pete Plasteridge finished fourth for successful Redmen skiers.

Hill, Edward, O'Rourke Led Redmen Five

A pair of juniors, Clarence Hill (Washington, D.C.) and Tim Edwards (Duquesne, Pa.) and senior Co-Capt. Charlie O'Rourke Jr. (Amherst) paced the University of Massachusetts basketball team in all statistical departments this winter.

Hill, speedy 6' backcourtman, scored 511 points (a new record) for a 22.2 average, made 213 field goals (a new record), 85 free throws and passed off for 103 assists. He also took the most shots, 485, and had the best free throw percentage, .714 In two varsity seasons Hill has scored 815 points to rank as number 8 on the all-time UMass scoring list.

Edwards, rugged 6'4" forward, led with 330 rebounds (a new record), had a .518 field goal percentage (a new record), and led in free throws attempted, 135, and most fouls committed, 86. Tim was second in scoring with 385 points for a 16.7 average.

O'Rourke, hard-working 6'7" center, finished third in scoring with 371 points for a 15.5 average and second with 304 rebounds, 71 assists and 77 free throws made. Soph forward John Lisack, 6'3", (Allendale, N.J.) a regular the final portion of the season, made .519 of his field goal attempts (54 of 104) and .727 of his free throws (40 of 55) for outstanding marks.

O'Rourke ended his career as the number five scorer at UMass with 924 points, and the all-time rebounder with 822. His career total of 2527 minutes of varsity play makes him only the third Redman to play 2500 minutes along with Doug Grutchfield and Peter Bernard. He also started 72 straight varsity games, the only Massachusetts player to start every game during his varsity career.

Massachusetts scored 2,008 points, four under the record 2,012 set last winter. Six different Redmen scored 20 or more points in a game. Hill hit the mark 16 times followed by Edwards 8 times, O'Rourke 6, and Lisack, Co-Capt. Charlie Kingston (Springfield) and forward Jim Painten (Quincy) once each.

Rights Hunger Strike On In Montgomery Jail

by Dan Glosband, Managing Editor

Montgomery, Ala.—"Sorry, guys, I have to hang up now, there's another bomb scare and we have to leave the building."

Reporting from a hotel phone booth in downtown Montgomery, Collegian correspondent Don Johnson was forced to abruptly cut off his 10:55 call to the Collegian office last night.

Johnson, a junior, called back from the SNCC (Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee) Headquarters a few minutes later and explained that it was but another hoax, the second of the day.

"These scares are frequent and intended to shake up the students and drive them into the street," he stated.

Johnson pointed out, though, the other threats of violence have not been hoaxes. Fred Kraii, the Amherst student injured Tuesday, escaped with four stitches on his head and is reported to be "all right", according to Johnson.

Johnson himself was beaten on the head yesterday with the butt of a mounted policeman's whip while pinned between two horses. Johnson was trying to obey the mounties' orders to get out of the way. Said Johnson, "I didn't get hurt much, but I was pretty mad."

Eighty-nine students picketing the Montgomery County Courthouse were arrested yesterday according to Johnson. Included in the group of those arrested were Dave Walsh of UMass, Julios Williams of Amherst College and Posy Lombard of Smith.

The jailed students refused to accept bail last night and have gone on a hunger strike, hoping that the issue will be brought to a head, and—to quote Johnson — that "Somebody will do something."

"This place is a madhouse," said Johnson, who has been thus far unable to contact the clergy and the other students who left the Amherst area Monday for Alabama.

From WMUA News Service

Pres. Johnson, on receiving a message from Wallace, noted that the governor had 10,000 Alabama National Guardsmen at his disposal. "If he is unable or unwilling to call up the guard and maintain law and order in Alabama," the President said, "I will call the Guard up and give them all the support required."

WALLACE TOLD a televised session of the Alabama Legislature Thursday that 6,100 men would be needed to guard the marchers. His message asking for Federal help came shortly after his speech.

Although the Governor did not specifically mention Marshals, sources said that was what he meant.

Pres. Johnson messaged the Governor that the Government does not have enough civilian officers to match the protection sought by Wallace.

A spokesman for the Governor said the State Chief Executive went to bed before receiving Pres. Johnson's message and would have no comment before morning.

In other Civil Rights developments...

White and Negro demonstrators paraded around the Montgomery, Alabama, City Hall Thursday night in protest against the arrest of Civil Rights advocates earlier in the day.

In Washington, police arrested nine of 40 to 50 pickets staging a sit-down outside the White House. Those arrested were charged with blocking the public way.

International Club President Don Moore addressed a crowd gathered in front of the Student Union yesterday. Students and faculty called for more students to join those leaving this morning for New York and Boston to sit-in at private corporations who have lent money to South Africa. The protestors claim that the money is being used to support apartheid.

Senate Resolution Decries Racial Suffrage Injustice

by Jim Foudy
Senate Reporter

"Resolved that the Student Senate express it sympathy with the cause of those American citizens who are denied the right to vote on account of their race and with other Americans who are trying to rectify this injustice through peaceful means."

as sponsored by Senators Kevin Downes (Hills No.) and Dick Wimberly (Brett), "expresses in some small way the general opinion of the campus upon not a Negro problem, not a southern problem, not a northern problem, but only an American problem."

Also resulting from Wednesday's Senate meeting was a recommendation to President John Lederle for a thorough investigation into the affairs and policies of the Athletic Council.

The recommendation calls for a "careful consideration of the internal procedure of the Athletic Council and a review of its present policy for distribution of commissions received from the dormitory vending-machines."

ACCORDING TO SENATOR BETTY CHAMBERS (Van Meter So.), the Athletic Council gets the first $30,000 and 5 percent of everything over that amount under the present system. The rest of the profits, which are comparatively small, are used for University scholarships.

It was pointed out that there is no check on the commissions taken in, nor is there any attention paid to the quality or price of the items in the vending-machines. A study of the chain of command of the council was also recommended.

Senator Chambers suggested that some of the profits be reverted back to the dormitories, commenting that the council "does not need the money that badly, but the dormitories could put the money to good use."

Later, the Senate in a less generous mood, strongly defeated the Art Club's bill to finance a trip to New York museums and galleries with unused budget funds.

AN ORGANIZATION BUDGET is set up according to categories of expenditure. The $284 needed for transportation was derived from other categories by careful budgeting, and rescheduling of art exhibts and speakers to allow less expensive programs.

The category changes were defeated because it was felt that they would not benefit the "cam-

Bruce Payne, leader of the Yale tenure dispute, was the substitute speaker Wed. night for Paul Booth, East Coast Coordinator of the Berkeley Free Speech Movement.

Booth was unable to attend the last in a series of discussions of the UMass Free University Forum. Payne's topic was "Berkeley, Student vs. University."

Payne attended Berkeley and is now a graduate student at Yale. As leader of the disagreement that arose over the refusal of tenure for Dr. Bernstein, Payne classified the incident as a bombshell which student resentment had gradually built up.

A vigil, march, and rally, all of which lasted for about 77 hours, and at times numbered 600 or more students, was concerned with more than the tenure issue. The demonstrations were also for the man, the quality of teaching, and the student voice, said Payne.

The demonstrators didn't expect to change the decision, but they were told that, the case

UMass To Sponsor Workshop On Poverty

by Lois Skolnick,
Staff Reporter

As a result of the current national interest in the war on poverty, the University will sponsor a Poverty Workship on March 22, 23 and 24 with Senator Abraham Ribicoff, Michael Harrington, Martin Deutsch, James Lampman, Oscar Lewis and Rep. James G. O'Hara as speakers.

Wade Houk, chairman of the DVP program and co-ordinator for the three day workshop, stated that he felt the conference would prove to be "culturally enriching."

He said that "Pres. Kennedy had supported the Peace Corps, but many students are not aware of the domestic poverty."

"ONLY YESTERDAY," Houk continued, "were they becoming aware through Pres. Johnson and his poverty bill." The purpose of the program, Houk continued, "is to let students know what the government is doing about poverty and some of the Psycho - Socio - Politico implications of the poverty work."

He pointed out that "American colleges and universities will be the main sources of personnel assistance for these programs."

"WHAT IS THE PROBLEM" is the topic for the March 22 workshop. Michael Harrington, head of this workshop, has an impressive background in the field of labor relations. He served as a consultant to Sargent Shriver in the War against Poverty in 1964, and he is working with Walter Reuther in setting up the Citizens Crusade against Poverty. He is the chairman of the Board of Directors of the League of Industrial Democracy.

Senator Abraham Ribicoff will discuss "Solutions" at the workshop on March 23 in the Student Union. Ribicoff has served as a member of the Connecticut state legislature, a judge, a member of the U. S. House of Representatives, a governor, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW),

Panel Discusses Placement Of Best Minds in the University

by Ray Abbott,
Staff Reporter

Where are the best minds in the University to be employed? This and other important questions concerning serious students and educators were discussed Tuesday evening in a panel entitled, "Graduate vs. Undergraduate."

The panel, part of a series presented by the Free University Forum, consisted of Dean of the Graduate School, Edward Moore; Dean of Students, William Field; professor David Leonard, and professor Jules Chemetzsky.

Dean Moore said he did not think that freshmen need the best minds. "Often they do not understand them," he remarked.

He said further that he believed, judging by the small turnout at the panel discussion, there exists no great feeling that the undergraduate program is being shortchanged by the graduate program.

SEEING THE GRADUATE PROGRAM as a considerable advantage to the undergraduate program because it results in a higher academic level and a better quality of teaching, Dean Moore said, "for the graduate school this is not a good thing." He added, however, "We are glad to be on campus with the undergraduate program. Whether we are distorting the institution, I do not see any evidence."

Professor Jules Chemetzsky questioned whether the emphasis is shifting from undergraduate to graduate. It has happened at other institutions, he explained, and may be beginning here.

He sees some efforts being made to fight against it—mainly the Orchard Hill Complex. But vision, money and committment are important to accomplish this end, he said.

He further explained that the problem is rooted in American education itself. "American education," said Chemetzky, "is in a terrible state of confusion. American education in itself does not know where it is going."

HE CITED BERKELEY as an example. Here, explained Chemetzky, students wanted to be free from the outdated rules and regulations. Students wanted to go back to traditional liberal arts education. Berkeley places on the table right now an inquiry on the purpose of the University, he continued.

Dean William Field sees UMass as representative of an institution with some responsibilities of a state university which at the same time is not in any sense forced into a model of some other university. We are not forced to be the same as the Mid-Western university model that argues undergraduate vs. graduate, he said.

"We get into endless chaos when we say this university will be like x or y school," he added.

Field said he cannot conceive of a large university with 10,000 students without a graduate program that is still a meaningful place. "I am not really concerned that the undergraduate is lost in this climate," he said.

Field believes we have our own way to make. We must do what we can with truth and learning and come up with something that is ours. "We have a unique mission, a unique opportunity. Let's not boot it," he said.

UMass could be different from the models, Berkeley and Michigan, said Professor David Leonard, but the belief we can continually be plastic is not so. Decisions have already been made, he argued, that bind us. Also many of our noble plans are already obsolete, he added. "This university ought to be planning not for the next 5 years but 50 years..

Leonard pictures the future as being greatly different from today as a result of technological changes which will give men much more free time.

In short, said Leonard, there will be "impressive freedom for large masses of people. This is going to be a crisis."

We should plan for this, he said. One way is to try to fill the need for teachers on all levels. "We need 10 or 15 times as many teachers over the next 20 years."

This is part of the function of the University, he continued, to let the Commonwealth know what its needs will be in the future. We are failing if we do not inform the Commonwealth.

It is also the function of the university, said Leonard, to make people well founded and give them an awareness. The problem is to make the institution serve human values. Alienation comes with inability to control the complex, he added.

Leonard sees UMass as made up of docile, conformist students who seek status here.

Said Leonard, "Students in this place are among the most passive I have ever encountered."

Imagination is lacking in the liberal arts today, said Leonard, not only at UMass but in the U.S.

"I don't know what the answers are" Leonard continued, "but the undergraduate is suffering."

"We say we care about teaching around here. But we don't reward teaching, we punish it and everyone knows it."

Leonard said further that we must want good teaching and research but we cannot have good teaching when rewards are for research.

Well Known Classical Guitarist In Concert

Classical guitarist Rey de la Torre, internationally acclaimed for his recitals, recordings and concert appearances, will perform tonight at 8 in the SU Ballroom.

De la Torre's concert is being sponsored by the Arts and Music Committee as part of the University's 1965 Fine Arts Festival.

The public is invited. There will be a fifty cent admission charge.

Rey de la Torre was born in Havana, was a pianist at the age of five and an accomplished guitarist by the time he was 10.

He studied in Spain with Maestro Miguel Llobet and made his debut at Barcelona while still in his teens.

Since his American debut at New York's Town Hall in 1941, de la Torre has been an outstanding attraction in the United States, Canada, Europe and the Near East.

He has performed in a series of international programs for the National Broadcasting company and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

On de la Torre's annual tours of the U. S., critics from coast to coast have called him one of the foremost guitarists in the world.

Summing up a de la Torre performance, the New York Times said, "His artistic lineage is unimpeachable, and he does it proud."

The Seattle Times, reviewing another de la Torre performance, said, "He must be reckoned as one of the finest interpreters of the instrument."

Much Work Involved In Selection Of Adelphians

"Your eyes get blurry, the ink runs off onto your hands thence to your shirt and your face, your throat gets sore and your chair gets awfully hard," is the way Adelphia President Jeff Davidow described the "long, hard process of selecting new members for the senior men's honor society.

Working with IBM lists, the names of every junior and senior male at the University is mentioned and voted upon by this year's eight Adelphians.

The deliberative process has been underway for the past three weeks and will continue for "at least a month longer," according to Bob Healy.

"IT'S TOUGH WORK, and its time consuming," says Bill Wilkinson, "especially when you're trying to plan a high school honors day, a celebration commemorating Adelphia's fifthieth anniversary and a number of other projects at the same time," adds Wade Houk.

"But it's worth it," comments Lenny Charest, remarking that this year's Adelphians felt it was the only way to insure that no potential candidate for the honor was neglected merely because someone forgot to bring his name up for consideration.

A TOTAL OF TWENTY JUNIOR and senior men will be selected to join the ranks of the society. They, along with approximately five members of the University faculty, will be tapped at this year's Student Leaders' Night which will be held in the Cage on the evening of May 4: Adelphian Denis Busche is chairing the committee making plans for the event.

Qualifications for junior election to Adelphia include 1) academic ranking in the upper one-third of the class; 2) participation and leadership in extracurricular activities, and 3) general good character and personality.

"THE FIRST QUALIFICATION KNOCKS a lot of the kids out of the running," says Senate President and Adelphian Bill Landis.

It was Landis' 3.8, along with Don Boyd's 3.5 and Bill Wilkinson's 3.6 that helped to give the Adelphians a first semester quality point average of over 3.0.

Fact Or Fiction?

As modern man probes deeper into the outer reaches of space, his curiosity about this new, exciting frontier continues to grow. And, though our knowledge of space has increased a thousand-fold during the past 10 years, many misconceptions and half-truths still remain to puzzle the public.

But, although puzzling, space exploration seriously concerns the public because of the increasing role it plays in our lives every day. Right this minute, Mariner IV is streaking towards a photographic rendezvous with Mars this summer.

Are the following fact or fiction:

1. The Greeks first knew of the modern rocket principle.
2. During summers on Mars the temperature reaches 50 degrees F.
3. The heavier a body, the faster it falls to earth.
4. Space is empty.
5. In space, the chance of a space craft being struck by a meteoroid is virtually zero.
6. It is five times easier to escape the moon's gravity than it is to escape the earth's.
7. An astronaut can endure speeds in space up to 30,000 mph.
8. Moving objects in space actually contract.
9. A space craft uses flaps to slow its orbital speed in order to return to Earth.
10. A space craft travels at phenomenal speeds before it leaves its launch pad.
11. Space is free of gravity.
12. It might be easier for man to reach the moon than to close the door of his space craft once there.

ANSWERS:

1. True. In the third century, Greek scientist Hero demonstrated the jet engine principle.
2. True. But the temperature of Mars is generally lower than earth's. The range is from —70 degrees F. to 50 degrees F.
3. False. Galileo disproved Aristotle's 20-century old theory that heavy bodies fall faster with this experiment: at the same instant he dropped a heavy object and a light object from the Tower of Pisa, and both landed simultaneously.
4. False. Space is not empty. It is filled with gases, mostly hydrogen, and millions of particles of matter.
5. True. Even though there are millions of meteoroids 1/10th of an inch or larger zooming around up there, space is so vast, and a space craft so relatively minute, that the chances of it being struck are remote.
6. True. The gravitational pull of earth is approximately five times greater.
7. False. There is no speed beyond human endurance provided a space craft accelerates gradually enough, and fortunately so, for it will take phenominal speeds to get man to his destinations without his dying of old age enroute.
8. True. According to Einstein's Theory of Relativity strange things happen in our curved universe. When objects move at very high speeds over long distances, they actually contract in the direction of their motion. So if you could see a space craft soaring through space, it would appear as if it were squeezed "bumper-to-bumper."
9. False, Retro rockets powered by solid fuel are used to "brake" the space craft's speed enabling it to come out of orbit and return to Earth.
10. True. Before a space craft ever leaves its launch pad, it's already traveling in one direction at about 1,000 mph (due to earth's rotation) and about 40,000 mph in another direction (due to earth's revolving around the sun).
11. False. There is no place free of gravity. As a space craft moves away from earth, the "All men caught with the possession of liquor on campus will be sent to Trinity College for one semester."

The above was one of a set of twelve regulations for social conduct which The Bowdoin Orient published in proclaiming "Affection Week", or "Love Thy Heaven-Sent and Inspired Faculty Week."

Other rules. "handed down by the faculty, but mostly by tradition," included:

"No women are allowed in the dormitories, except on special occasions, such as blue moons."

"Students are urged, but not required, to keep elephants out of their rooms."

Also as a part of their Affection Week proclamation the student newspaper listed the most popular courses "offered" at Bowdoin College. One of the more interesting was Wine Testing. This course was listed as "a pre-requisite for advanced courses in all fields."

Another subject was "Geology: Rocks for Jocks," with a pre-requisite requirement of "two varsity letters, freshman numerals, and guts."

A most appealing course listed was Religious Thought Throughout the Ages, taught by "God and the rest of the department."

The Flamingos

The Ball

The highlight of Greek Week this year, as always, will be the Greek Ball.

This year continuous entertainment is planned from 8:30 on, featuring the reknowned orchestra of Perry Borrelli, and the "fabulous" Flamingos. The two groups will alternate sets from opposite sides of the Student Union "night club" in an atmosphere reminescent of ancient Greece.

Mr. Borrelli's 12-piece dance band and vocalist are well know along the eastern college circuit for many fine performances. And certainly all are familiar with the sounds of "I Only Have Eyes For You" and "Lovers Never Say Goodbye", just two of many Flamingo hits.

The highlight of the evening will be the crowning of one of five finalists, Merryll Barnes, Diana Alverez, Roxanne Gile, Kathy Kane or Gina Tests, who will reign over Greek Weekend.

The Concert

Little Anthony & The Imperials

This year's Greek Concert is to consist of an exciting group of stars. Every year Greek Week is climaxed by the traditional Sunday concert, and this year the occasion is to highlight four well known entertaining groups. Little Anthony and the Imperials, Mary Wells, The Shangri-las and the Coasters will be the performers for Sunday afternoon, April 4 at 2:00 p.m.

LITTLE ANTHONY and the Imperials are ranked by DCP International as one of the most talented groups in the recording business. They have been able to attain renown in the recording industry without the use of gimmicks, they are four serious minded young men who love to sing and sing well together. Their first big hit "Tears On My Pillow" was followed by many others including such recent ones as "On the Outside Looking In" and "Goin' Out of My Head".

THE SHANGRI-LAS have been one of the more recent groups to come into the public eye within the past year. Among their current hits has been "Leader of the Pack", "Remember (Walking in the Rain)" and "Give Him A Great Big Kiss".

Political Bribery

Supreme Court justices received a political rap on the knuckles Wednesday when members of the House refused to give them a $3000 yearly pay increase The reasons for the refusal included a barrage of criticisms ranging from court decisions to marriages.

The real issue at stake in this case involves much more than the matter of money. Currently, the Chief Justice is receiving an impressive annual salary of $40,000 while each of the eight associates trails behind with a handsome $39,500. With salaries like these Supreme Court justices are obviously comfortable without any pay increases.

However, Congressmen too often regard the pay scale as a means of harassing and bribing Supreme Court justices into submission. The general contention in Congress often tends to be that as long as the justices make unpopular court rulings on integration, school prayers, and reapportionment of state legislatures, they deserve to be punished where it hurts—namely in the pocketbook.

Possibly, many of the criticisms of the vacations, privileges, and personalities of the Supreme Court justices are valid. However, the private affairs of the justices should not be confused with the official decisions they make concerning the welfare of the country. Moreover, a seat on the Supreme Court is a position of honor and dignity and should be respected as such by Congress as well as the people at large.

If the moral qualities of Supreme Court justices continue to deteriorate, then it would be feasible for the President to be more careful in his selection of candidates for this post. But to pressure justices by means of pay threats amounts to transforming the Supreme Court into a political Wall Street.

— A Proposal —

Reprinted from the Christian Science Monitor, March 15, 1965

A professor has written this newspaper to propose that President Johnson appoint a commission to study the entire American educational system—public and private. He suggests that the study should probe the role both of government and of religion in education.

He says that "study of the whole question might show how government money could most helpfully be used in the whole educational picture," how it "could be applied to an orderly and intelligent overall program rather than as now to a piecemeal, spotty program."

In spite of the sometimes discouraging record of presidential study commissions, we think the proposal deserves attention. The American Government and people might find it useful to consult a good road map before they discover themselves irretrievably lost in a wilderness of conflicting educational programs and theories. Perhaps the pressing need now is to try to gain a clear perspective of the whole, to see where all the pieces fit in. Then, perhaps, those pieces which do not fit in could be discarded.

A commission with the stature of a British Royal Commission could explore the effect on American culture and ideals of a host of controversial matters and their interrelationship. It could delve into such thorny questions as government aid to parochial schools, racial imbalance in the schools, the expanding role of the federal government in education, the creation of a federal Department of Education and the validity of proposals for educational reform advanced by Dr. James Bryant Conant.

The focus of such a commission would be the forest, not the trees. We endorse the professor's call for a survey of the timber.

On Their Own ?

To the Editor:

John Robinson's editorial in Monday's Collegian should not go unanswered. Far from being "detrimental to the cause of Negro equality in Alabama," federal troops in Selma are at this time entirely necessary.

Granted, sending federal forces into Selma may very well alienate many Alabamians. But, under the present circumstances, I cannot see how President Johnson has much choice. The United States Code authorizes the president to use force against any "domestic violence, unlawful combination or conspiracy" which deprives any people of a state of the equal protection of the law. And there is an undisputed right of people to peaceably assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. It is not enough for the president to investigate, to appeal to the courts after violent outbursts and to appeal to Congress for more legislation. The president is obligated under the Constitution to faithfully execute the laws. He has not done this in Alabama.

It is undoubtedly true that Negroes should win their struggle as much as possible on their own. But when they are attacked and brutalized for exercising their constitutional rights, the federal government must step in. People cannot win "on their own" when they have an entire state against them.

Robinson's assertion that very little would be gained after the troops withdrew is disputable. The enforcement of our constitutional rights is no slight gain; it is a very big and important one.

Finally, Robinson's statement that blood shed in the name of equality brings the Negro closer to freedom defeats his own argument, for quite obviously the purpose of a federal force is let people further the cause of racial equality.

Splendor In The Grass!

To the Editor:

It was sticky, not thin and runny; the type of substance that you read about in various horror books which tell of swamps, vines, and poisonous snakes. It would almost support its own weight if one was to build a castle out of it or something like that. Interwoven with this substance was a rather large quantity of material which is called "grass" in the summertime. It was never more than ankle deep, but usually exactly that deep—just enough to make your clean gray socks brown and sticky and your shiny brown Weejuns all the more brown, but not so shiny. One time the authorities tried to cover it up with ashes, gravel, lint, nails, nuts and bolts, but this only made the situation worse.

It was really a funny sight last week when a student in his fresh new sneakers tried to cross the impenetrable pass. While running away from the crocodiles and swamp rats he stepped in the muck and it quickly filled his new sneakers. Several students were completely devoured by the quagmire last weekend when they lost their balance and fell into the sticky mess. Each move they made only increased their plight and they eventually sank beneath the surface and disappeared forever in the same way the ill-fated Orchard Hill number five did last spring.

Students, teachers, beware. Watch where you step or you may follow Orchard Hill number five, said students, several faculty, three cars and Chief Blasco's cruiser, under the gurgling UMass Mud.

TASTELESS DRIVEL

To the Editor:

Re: the music played over the P.A. system at the South Commons: Why are we forced to digest this tasteless drivel (we mean the music not the food) three times each day? As it stands now, the Commons' musical repetoire seems more fit for the cow barn at Stockbridge than the dining Commons. We feel that Muzak type music should be confined to a certain Texas ranch. May we suggest that the students be allowed to choose the type of music they find most enjoyable. This is in the best tradition of a free, democratic institution.

Where Do We Stand ?

To the Editor:

So where to we stand? Another martyr arises in the South and the Negroes in Selma regroup their forces. The so-called plateaus of civilization always level off when you least expect them to and external crises seem to erupt in a direct correlation to internal strife. We seem to be heading for one more Spring season and Nature, who never heeded Man's puny efforts in the past seems intent on continuing her customary schedule.

And where do we stand? Well, the face of the clock on the front page of the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists now reads several minutes earlier than it has been reading for the last few years. At least some areas in the field of human endeavor are chalking up pluses (but then again, there's always Red China). So far the rough treads of the Great Society have been skidding on ice and the time comes when the average American citizen looks to Washington for out and out action and not the recent political maneuvering our present chief of state is so adept at.

Every now and then I snap out of my reverie and slam my text books shut and look out at the rest of the world. Lately, I've been filled with the awful feeling that too many people are waiting for something to happen and not initiating action themselves. President Johnson doesn't have to invade North Vietnam as far as I'm concerned, only tell us what he does plan to do. I'm sure the Negroes in Selma are ecstatic to know that the government is behind them; but is that enough? No! It isn't.

The universe doesn't care one way or the other about Man's 'eventual' destiny and it's up to Man to keep his own house in order.

For Honesty's Sake . . .

To the Editor:

I owe the beginning of this argument to a student of mine in one of the Soc. 1 sections who, after the exam last Thursday, forgot her copy of the "Sociology Review Outline, MONARCH series No. 16," in the classroom.

Being a recent graduate of City College, an undergraduate college in New York City, I happen to be well acquainted with the MONARCH review outlines. However, what was rather surprising and eventually became disturbing, was the fact that on the upper right corner of the front cover of this outline I could read the impression of a rubber stamp that stated bluntly: "Keyed to a course based on CHINOY".

This is utterly, and I am afraid, intentionally false and misleading. This outline is published in N.Y. and is sold to many U.S. Colleges who DO NOT by any means use CHINOY as their text for Introductory Sociology.

Furthermore, the outline is not based on CHINOY, since it does not follow the topical outline of CHINOY's textbook and indeed its content material is oftentimes different and contrary to that of CHINOY, for the simple reason that the publishers used other textbooks in compiling the contents of this outline.

I promptly visited the bookstore, where I checked the pile and realized that each one of the Soc. 1 outlines bore the same stamped impression mentioned above. Upon request, I was informed by an employee of the University's Bookstore that this stamp is printed on the Outline by the publishers.

Without questioning the pragmatic utility of such outlines for the student, I do question the integrity of a publishing house and our own bookstore who, though being aware (I think) of the false and misleading nature of it, do permit the imprinting of a statement that reads, contrary to the TRUTH: "Keyed to the course based on CHINOY".

Troops For Alabama

To the Editor:

To take issue with Mr. Robinson's editorial of March 15—troops for Selma as soon as possible. Perhaps Mr. Robinson would not be so willing to stain Alabama's streets with blood if it was his blood doing the staining. To my way of thinking, a man should not call for sacrifice unless he is willing to sacrifice himself first. If Mr. Robinson is willing to sacrifice himself why isn't he in Alabama now? I have friends in Alabama and I demand they be protected. Last summer I attended the funeral of Andrew Goodman who was found in a shallow grave in Mississippi. I'm not willing to attend another such funeral. The only way to prevent such funerals is with Federal troops.

Mr. Robinson should also consider that law must be enforced to have continued meaning. It is obvious Alabama is a lawless state—thus Federal intervention is necessary if law is to continue to have sanctity.

As for the "suffering" of the white folks in Alabama, they must be made to know that law is to be enforced. If we continue to be soft on segregation we will encourage them in circumvention of law and tokenism which they do so well anyway. In conclusion, let me end with a slogan, TROOPS FOR ALABAMA — NOT VIETNAM !

P.S. Save your 48 star flag; Alabama and Mississippi are not part of this Union.

Workshop To Present Prof's Play

"The Reservation," a play by Dr. Martin Halpern of the University English department, will be presented this Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The English department is sponsoring "The Reservation" as part of the University's 1965 Fine Arts Festival.

The Image Theater Workshop of Boston and Cambridge, directed by Paul John Austin, will perform Dr. Halpern's play.

"The Reservation" is an allegorical comedy, part prose and part verse. Within a comic situation, it attempts to expose and examine some serious human problems.

Dr. Halpern joined the UMass faculty last fall. A graduate of the University of Rochester, he received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard University.

He has been a teaching fellow at Harvard and has also taught at the University of California, Berkeley.

A collection of Dr. Halpern's poetry, Two Sides of an Island and Other Poems, was published in 1963. He has also written a biography of the American poet and dramatist William Vaughn Moody, published last year.

22-Story Towers To Feature Shorter Halls, Bigger Rooms

by Richard Danca, Staff Reporter

Construction on the new Southwest Complex "tower" dorms has now reached the point where final plans for room shapes must be set.

Any students having recommendations for the new dormitory rooms should hand them in to the Collegian Sec'ty. between 9:00 and 5:00 immediately.

Building is proceeding at slightly less than one floor a day for the five 22-story dormitories.

The choice for the room floor plans is between the standard rectangular rooms or a new concept of "offset" rooms, which would be essentially a suite of two 9 by 12 rooms, one for sleeping, the other for study.

Present architect's plans call for the offset rooms and, according to Mr. Frank B. Thomas of housing, these plans "will most likely go through."

THE OPINION of the dozen or so students who saw the plans and the full-size mockup was "100 per cent for the present set-up."

"Dorms now become residence halls," said one of the students, impressed by the flexibility of small group living, offered by the short corridors.

If the plans go ahead, each of the living quarter floors would comprise ten offset double rooms, four large singles and four rectangular doubles, sleeping space for only 32 students per floor.

Each of those floors will also have three elevators, a laundry, a study lounge and a telephone.

Regardless of whether the rooms are offset or rectangular, each tower will have a ground floor lobby and lounges on the fifth, twelfth and nineteenth floors.

These lounges will occur in the middle of each of the three seven-story residence halls contained in every tower.

LOUNGE FLOORS will consist of head-of-residence apartments, lounge areas, recreation rooms and vending machine rooms in addition to their multi-purpose rooms.

The final choice of plans will be decided soon.

Completion of the five 22-story towers is set for Sept. 1966. The four 4-story dormitories in the complex will be completed by Sept. 1965.

Dorm Councils Join For Social Activity

by Alan Grigsby, Staff Reporter

The Women's Inter-Dorm Council and the Men's Inter-Dorm Forum have joined together to improve the social activities in the dormitories.

The President of the Men's Inter-Dorm Forum, Edward Grund, said, "the RSO (Recognized Student Organization) and fraternities aren't keeping up with the pressing need for social activity.

"The fraternities constitute a smaller precentage of the student population and many students don't have enough planned social activity." Grund went on to comment that there should be more social activity for the dormitory students than studies and baseball.

The first step to solve this problem has taken the form of a subcommittee which is inspecting the facilities of each dormitory for social affairs. Blueprints have been checked at the Housing Office to see each dormitory's capabilities for social activity.

Chairman of the subcommittee, Wayne Dorris, said that the group checked for space, furnishings, recreation equipment such as television, hi-fi players, and ping-pong tables and present recreation plans.

County dormitories, Gorman and Wheeler, that lack a recreation room will join girl's dormitories with recreation rooms for social activities.

Grund said that a "brother-sister" type of co-operation could be created between dormitories for social activities.

How to buy a suit

Valuable pointers for men from Michaels-Stern, the 116-year-old Rochester clothiers

1. Ask to see the styles that suit you best. Are you short? Avoid tight-waisted jackets, overly padded shoulders, wide lapels—they make you look squat. Average? On you, everything looks good. Heavy? Avoid all fuzzy fabrics—they're fattening. Come on in and we'll suggest the Michaels-Stern models that do the most for your build.

2. Be a crank about quality. Inspect the fabric. See if you like its feel. Make sure it's flawless. Look at the linings and ask if they're pre-shrunk (they'd better be!). Pinch the lapels—they should bounce back into shape without a wrinkle when you release them. Check the seams. See if they're neatly and evenly stitched. Examine the buttonholes for tight, precise stitches. Ask if the thread is silk (that's the best buttonhole thread).

Stop in and we'll show you all the fine needlework in our Michaels-Stern suits.

3. Be sure you get a good fit. First, relax and stand naturally before the mirror. Resist the temptation to pull in your stomach and square your shoulders. Discuss everything you want done with the fitter. And take your time. Remember: a well-fitted suit looks, feels, and wears better than an indifferently tailored one.

Come see our new Spring selection of Michaels-Stern Suits and Sportswear now. $45.00-$65.00

Dutch Ambassador Explains Free-Trade

by Peter Hendricksen, News Editor

"Getting the Benelux nations to work together created problems not dissimilar to demands of Connecticut residents to raise the New York drinking age to 21", quipped the Royal First Secretary of the Netherlands Embassy in Washington.

Vincent Kramers, their man in D.C., lectured Monday to Prof. Ryavec's International Relations class on "Benelux and European Integration". He addressed Orchard Hill residents Sunday.

THE HISTORY OF BENELUX—a free-trade union of Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands—is pocked with foreign occupation which produced certain postive results, the ambassador explained.

The Germans, he said, "brought us to the realization that we were able to support more change than we formerly thought possible." Dictatorial regimes, such as Napoleon's, serve to unify small countries, he pointed out. But, he added "integration must be reached on a voluntary basis."

Kramers, who served in The Congo before coming to the U.S. three years ago, showed that voluntary integration has been successful — by 1960 97 per cent of Benelux trade was liberalized. He likened the barriers to achieving these results to those encountered in building a superhighway through U.S. metropolitan areas.

THE DOMESTIC MONETARY POLICIES of the member countries—now expanded to include France, Germany and Italy (the Inner Six or Common Market) — lets them revalue their currencies at will.

Kramers noted that the countries had to revise their foreign policies after the war as they no longer were caught between three great powers. Strict neutrality has been replaced with a tie with the Atlantic alliances such as NATO.

There has been talk of a Common Market Political Federation but, Kramers reminded the class, France usually vetoes any proposals that might lessen her influence. Conversly, the other countries are not eager to have France emerge as a "ruling big brother". However Kramers proposed that in two years the smaller nations will be able to outvote France. More federation talks are scheduled for this summer.

DeGaulle, said Kramers, inspired faith in the French economy on becoming President in 1957. "Behold! Let there be a good economy, and it was there," was the way Kramers explained DeGaulle's policy.

KRAMERS POINTED OUT, though, that the existing soveriegnties are the most reliable basis for negotiations as they must "bear the responsibility of the well-being of their inhabitants."

Cracking a smile, Kramers added, "There will be no overnight wonders of political unity. We recently constructed a new Chancellory Building in Washington. It is not a temporary structure."

During a question period, Kramers said, "Germany is not feared as much as it was in 1939. It is divided and still limited by treaty against holding its own nuclear weapons."

COMMENTING ON THE BOMB, he compared it to the apple in the Garden of Eden and feared that "someone may take a little bite".

The ambassador mentioned a recent cabinet crisis over nationalized TV. It arose when a private station began broadcasting from an artificial island on the continental shelf. The govtrnment declared that its jurisdiction extends that far and seized the station in a naval raid.

He noted in closing that the U.S. considers the crabs in the Bering Sea to be within its territorial boundares because they walk — don't swim — on the Alaskan Continental Shelf.

UMich Chamber Music Quartet Here Sun.

The University of Michigan's chamber music ensemble, the Stanley Quartet, will perform at UMass. March 21, at 8:15 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The quartet's concert is being sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Department in conjunction with the UMass Music Department as part of the University's 1965 Fine Arts Festival.

The public is cordially invited. There will be no admission charge.

Founded in 1949 by Gilbert Ross, the quartet's present first violinist, the Stanley Quartet has since compiled an impressive list of honors for concerts, radio and television appearances, recordings, and musical education.

In addition to Ross, the quartet includes Gustave Rosseels, violin; Jerome Jelinek, cello; and Robert Courte, viola.

Prof's Son Arrested In Mississippi

The son of History Professor Schaefer Williams, 18-year old Christopher Williams was arrested recently in Batesville, Mississippi where he was working as a volunteer in the Negro voter registration drive.

Young Williams was convicted Tuseday by a justice of the peace on charges of vagrancy and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

He was sentenced to 10 days in jail and fined $100, bond was set at $500 when he appealed.

According to Prof. Williams, the bail money was posted, but his son is still in the Batesville jail.

Christopher Williams left Amherst Regional High School last year in his junior year to join the voter registration drive.

Brooke Rules On Flag Legis.

Pending Senate legislation to require school children to pledge allegiance to the flag "would be unconstitutional and void," Attorney General Edward W. Brooke ruled Monday.

The bill, which would make the pledge of allegiance mandatory, won initial approval in the House, but was rejected in the Senate by a vote of 17 to 16.

Brooke issued the opinion in response to a request from the Senate which was initiated by Sen. Mary L. Fonesca (D-Fall River).

Federal Government Threatening Press Freedoms, Says Editor

by Joyce Hervey

"The news media is threatened as much today as ever," Harold E. LeVanway, editor of the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette, told a University journalism seminar Wednesday.

Speaking on the dangers to the freedom of the press, LeVanway said, "The ghosts of our riotous past come back to haunt us."

"THE BIGGEST STORY of our era—the death of a President—renewed the question of federal control of the press," LeVanway reported. "Because the reporters and cameramen were allowed to surround Oswald, Jack Ruby, undetected, was able to shoot him. The news media can't deny some guilt," he continued, "for it opposed Oswald's legal rights to a fair trial."

The Dallas affair has led the American Bar Association to seek legislation restricting pretrial publicity. LeVanway added: "No newspaperman who is sincere is going to argue that a fair trial is not only necessary but vital to our social process."

Explaining that "the sins of the past and the sins of Dallas are used by judges and police officers to cover up the operations of the courts and police departments," LeVanway argued: "People have rights to know something about the people they elect or employ. Recentally, three pages of bills, designed to censor the rights of the press, have been filed. Among these is one that would prohibit the printing of voting results.

"SINCE THE DALLAS incident, police are reluctant to give information that might tend to bias the court trial, even to reveal the extent of injuries." he added. "It's like 'once the camel gets his head into the Arab's tent, it won't be long before the Arab is in utter darkness,'" he stressed.

The Massachusetts Open Meeting law of 1959 requires board meetings on local, county and state level to be open to the public. "However," he continued, "officials have ways to get around this law by 'forgetting' to post meetings or by calling executive sessions."

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT has a way to cover up information it doesn't want printed by putting it under "classified documents," he continued. "Our recent Presidents have realized the importance of the news media, that democracy thrives on information. They realized their responsibilities to the public, of frank and open discussion of non-strategic information."

Asked if the federal government will get control of the press, LeVanway answered: "If we see the government running the railroads and public utilities, we shall see the government running the newspapers.

HAROLD E. LeVANWAY

If a catastrophe takes place in this country, we may see the newspaper pass into the hands of the government.

"We lose a little freedom through every major catastrophe. When man gained security, he lost some of his individual freedom," LeVanway concluded.

and now a U. S. senator.

As secretary of HEW, Ribicoff instituted a new approach to welfare operations, placing greater emphasis on prevention and rehabilitation. He has been an ardent supporter of civil rights in the Senate.

"THE PROBLEM OF IMPLIMENTATION" will be the topic of the panel discussion to be held on March 24 in Mahar auditorium. The panelists include Martin Deutsch, Robert Lampman, Oscar Lewis and Rep. James G. O'Hara.

Martin Deutsch is a psychologist, presently associated with New York Medical College as director of the Institute of Developmental Studies and professor in the department of psychiatry. He is noted for his work concerning educational and social psychological issues.

ROBERT LAMPMAN, professor of Economics at the University of Wisconsin, is an expert on public finance. He served as a member of the President's Economic Advisory Council in 1962-63.

Oscar Lewis, professor of Anthropology at the University of Illinois, has published a study of poverty in Mexico, Pedro Martiny.

pus community" as a whole. As Vice-president Larry Rutstein commented, "Just because an organization has money left over doesn't mean it can spend it."

Senator Ross Jones opposed the measure because it had never been brought before the Fine Arts Council, as is required by the council's constitution.

In an effort to stimulate a more careful consideration of Senate bills, the Student Senate moved that the Senate agendas be printed five days in advance of the meeting.

It is hoped that this will encourage more pre-meeting discussion of legislation, and eliminate some floor discussion, as well as arouse a greater interest throughout the University for its student government.

TENURE . . .

might be reopened, Payne stated. "A great university must be great enough to admit when it's made a mistake," he continued.

Payne called this situation "a calm sort of activity" in comparison to the Berkeley movement. In Berkeley, he said, the faculty had been called upon for five years to recognize student requests. A conservative board was finally appointed to look into the matter.

The feeling present at Yale and Berkeley, Payne asserted, was the attitude that there was a moral quality—a sense of right and wrong—lacking in society.

If things aren't good in terms of the academic community, and a meaningful life can't be lived now, how can it be done later on? Payne asked.

Berkeley students were pushed to action, said Payne and few faculty members helped until they were forced to face the issue.

The large size of a university was labelled by Payne as "not the best thing that ever happened." In fact, he said, it is a hindrance to activity in the academic community and the university binds people together only because they all work there—in other words, a multiversity.

To transform the multiversity, Payne had several suggestions. They included: autonomy of departments to give students more voice; better counseling systems; revitalization of housing to eliminate dichotomy of social and academic activities; and encouragement of the publishers in the faculty to communicate with the students.

Student motivation is necessary to make all of these successful. This comes through the constant exchange of ideas and the ever changing student body. "The more responsibility you give a student government, the better people you will get on it," said Payne.

Payne concluded by saying that when a bad decision is made, such as at Berkeley and Yale, students should try to change it, and demonstrations are a good way of expression.

Naughty Lady Takes Campus By Storm

The New Prince Spaghetti Minstrels "raising a ruckus" at the Naughty Lady Cub.

by Tom Donovan
Staff Reporter

The Naughty Lady hit campus Wednesday night, and everyone who paid the $1.50 had a good time. The Naughty Lady was the night club motif of the annual Sophomore Banquet.

The banquet, termed by many as "impromptu night", was well received. The Naughty Lady Club, with roarin' twenties theme, included a spaghetti and chicken dinner, three singing groups emceed by ESP expert Dave Hoy, and roving waitresses in black skirts and sweaters.

After the meal, emcee Hoy introduced three folksingers from north of Boston, The Folklores. Their act was highlighted by a musical commercial, "Rum goes better with Coca-Cola . . ." and their own song about South Viet Nam entitled "Small War."

Next to perform were The Better Halves. These two girls, just starting in the entertainment business, sang three songs inciuding, "That's Too Bad". They plan to start recording next month.

Before introducing the next act, emcee Hoy entertained the audience with an exhibition of Extra- Sensory Perception. After explaining that he was a former minister who had "kicked the habit", he called Sharyn Foster up from the audience and predicted her actions in a successful experiment.

Hoy also made a number of predictions, including one that Jackie Kennedy would get engaged in 1965. Another was that, some high government officials would be resigning in the next 35 days because of purported differences with President Johnson.

The main attraction of the evening, The New Prince Spashetti Minstrels, closed out the evening with sparkling performances of "You're Going To Miss Me When I'm Gone", "Raise a Ruckus Tonight", "River, She Come Down", and others.

Smiles were in evidence as satisfied sophomores departed the "Naughty Lady Club".

Congo Ambassador To Talk Sat.

The Congolese Republic's Ambassador to the United Nations, Theodore Idzumbuir, will speak in the Student Union at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 20.

His appearance is sponsored by the African Students' Association. He will share the program with E. Y. Agorsor, First Secretary of the Ghana Mission to the U.N.

The Ambassador will dicuss the Congo's progress and problems. Agorsor will speak on "African Unity and the Organization of African Unity."

Idzumbuir, Vice President of the Eighth Congolese Delegation to the 17th, 18th, and 19th sessions of the U.N., is the permanent representative from the Congo to the U.N. He led the delegation for the Security council debate on the Congo.

In addition, he was the Congolese delegate at the Organization for African Unity (OAU) meeting last Sept. at Addis Abetz, and has been in many other delegations representing the Congo.

Idzumbir studied at the Kinzambi Seminary and studied Thomastic Philosophy at Mayidi Seminary.

He holds a degree in Political Science at the University of Higher International Studies at Geneva.

The program, which will feature a discussion after the formal talks, is open to the public at no charge.

Campus Chest Drive Sets Distribution

The annual Campus Chest drive set forth the percentage distributions for this year. Thirty percent of the money collected will be alloted to a project of the World University Service.

Since 1920, the WUS organization has been carrying programs of mutual assistance among universities; it is supported by faculty and students in 48 countries who, through their contributions, ameliorate the conditions of less fortunate students in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

In order to make meaningful the impact of these projects, WUS focuses on four divisions of service: student health, food and lodging, educational facilities, and individual and emergency aid.

The University fund-raising drive which hopes to stimulate generous and even self-sacrificing donations will contribute to a particular project. The selection will be similar to these: scholarship assistance to student refugees (South African, Hungarian), book banks at many Asian universities, a woman's mass X-Ray program in Paraguay.

At the University of Chile, Santiage, the World University Service project is a Student Health Center with 25 beds and out-patient facilities to be attached to the University Hospital of Chile. To meet the deficiencies in university health care in a country where the major problems: infectious diseases, tuberculosis, dental, and psychiatric may be treated as well as prevented, WUS hopes to contribute $23,000 with a similar amount raised nationally. The Center is expected to be used by other universities also.

Adlai Stevenson, the U.S. Representative to the U.N., has stated in regard to the WUS, ". . . every educated person educates others and inspires others to seek knowledge."

President Lyndon B. Johnson has written the following letter:

The activities and programs of the World University Service deserve high tribute and wholehearted support.

Your help to students promotes the enlightenment of bright young minds throughout the world. You have advanced the cause of freedom and justice, and human beings everywhere are your beneficiaries.

My congratulations on your past achievements, and best wishes for even greater accomplishments in the years ahead.

Cyclist Hurt In Serious Car Collision

UMass senior David A. Daisy, was treated at the infirmary Monday, for body and leg injuries, he sustained when his motorcycle was demolished in a collision with a car.

Daisy, from Truro, Mass., was released from the infirmary and his condition was listed as not serious.

The accident took place at the top of Clark Hill near East Pleasant Street. Operator of the car, Peter E. Finn of 10 Griggs Ter., Brookline, did not report any injuries although his car was slightly damaged.

The Redmen Pistol Team is conducting a Spring clinic from Monday 2 March until Wednesday 31 March at the Dickinson Hall Range. All male pistol shooters are invited to particiapte. Students with no prior experience with handguns are also invited to attend. Those students who wish to try out for the pistol team for the 1965-66 season are particularly encouraged to make their presence known at the clinic.

At 10 o'clock our time this evening, the referee will toss the ball in the air for the opening tap, and the 1965 edition of the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball finals will be underway. The site this year is the Coliseum in Portland, Oregon, this being the year for the West to host the action.

This fearless forecaster, sporting a rather mediocre 19-11 record, after a week of deliberation has decided on the final guesses for this year's college basketball season.

Michigan will meet Princeton in the opening game. When these two clubs met in the Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden around Christmas, the Wolverines edged the Tigers 80-78, after a great comeback. Princeton's fabulous Bill Bradley, the greatest the college scene has had in a long time, had 41 points before fouling out with better than 3½ minutes left.

MICHIGAN listened to the great ovation for the star, then calmly set about picking apart the 15 point lead Princeton had held. It was actually 12 when Bradley retired. Speculation has it that if Bradley goes the route, Princeton will win.

This writer cannot agree with that idea. Princeton played two of its finest games of the season this past weekend as they smothered both North Carolina State and Providence. Against the latter team, they hit about 41 of 60. However, most of these shots came from inside 20 feet.

Princeton is not small so it can play a somewhat deliberate brand of ball and work for these shots. Bob Brown at 6'9" and Bradley at 6'7" give them plenty of height. Sixth man, Ed Hummer also goes 6'7" and is a great man to have on the bench for a sub.

The other three starters for Princeton are Gary Walter, the playmaker, Don Rodenbach and Bob Haarlow, the other big scorer.

Michigan, on the other hand, sports a club that has as its smallest starter 6'4" jumper, Palmey. Oliver Darden, Bli Buntin and Larry Tregoning combine with the great Cazzie Russell to form a potent unit. During the season, ever since that Princeton game, this team has established a record of comeback wins that is most impressive.

Indiana had them by seven with 54 seconds left but were tied. In the first overtime, Indiana was four points ahead with 20 seconds left, but were tied. Michigan won in double overtime. Minnesota had the Wolverines on the ropes twice, only to bow in the waning minutes, while Illinois saw a game long lead vanish in the closing seconds. Only Nebraska, St. John's and Ohio State beat this team.

THE IVY LEAGUE just isn't as strong as the Big Ten at any time, and the feeling here is that Michigan was just a little overconfident in the first outing against the Tigers. This time, Michigan will triumph by an 83-72 score.

The second game will match ULCA, the defending national champ, against a Wichita club that has battled the odds all season to earn its trip to Oregon. Kelly Pete has been the big star for Wichita since both Dave Stallworth and Nate Bowman bowed out at mid-season. He is joined by a sporting cast of Leach, Criss, Thompson and Smith, but the club's fate hinges on Pete's performance.

UCLA has a great coach in John Wooden and a scoring punch of Gail Goodrich and Keith Ericson. Kenny Washington and Edgar Lacey provide the height in the forecourt, while Fred Gross joins Goodrich in the backcourt. Denied the top spot most of the season by Michigan, the Bruins will be out to keep the trophy they earned en route to their 30-0 season a year ago. Like last season, the UCLA's combine good shooting with a pressing zone defense. When the Bruins unveiled last year, they panicked a good Duke team and went on to win the title. UCLA should triumph, 95-83, and move into the finals.

Princeton should pick up the consoiation trophy, 86-81, as Bradley caps his career with a great performance. This tourney would appear to be the last time Bradley will play organized basketball, and he will be a great loss to the professionals, but a gain for the men of Oxford.

The finals should be a tense duel. Yet, the feeling here is that UCLA will put on a press early enough to build a lead. If this is the case, it is doubtful that they will fold under pressure. and should hang on for an 88-85 win, becoming the fifth team to win consecutive titles.

IN THE NIT, the finalists are unknown at press time, but the choices were St. John's and Villanova. While the Wildcats are top ranked, the sentimental choice is the Redmen, because it will be the final appearance of one of basketball's all-time greats, Joe Lapchick, coach of the Brookiyn team. Look for the Redmen to score a 77-69 win, after Army wipes NYU, 65-59, for consolation honors. The cadets have too much pride to let down, even if they cannot win the top prize.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Associate Sports Editor

The UMass Varsity baseball team has been working hard the past few weeks to get in shape for the fast approaching season. Workouts for pitchers and catchers have been held outdoors this week, but Old Man Spring has forced them back in the cage. Coach Earl Lorden's remark to the December weather, "lousy".

Next year's version of the UMass basketball team will forego the mid-western trip of this year and play in a Southern tournament with VPI, Clemson and Alabama. Many spectators believed that this year's swing benefited the team, if not by their record, by the experience they picked up from playing such perennial powerhouses as Bradley, Washington of St. Louis and National small (that's a laugh) College Champions Evansville . . .

MILT MORIN AND JESSE BROGAN, the New England Inter-Collegiate wrestling champs in the Unlimited and 137 lb. classes respectively, found national competition a little stiffer than the local. At Colorado last weekend Brogan drew a first round bye and then lost to a grappler from Lycoming 5-2. Morin was eliminated in the first round 5-1. Wait 'till next year . .

Should faculty members, specifically Physical Education faculty members, be allowed to compete in Intramural tournaments? I refer to lacrosse coach Dick Garber's dominance in the present IM squash tournament.

Nationally, all eyes will be focussed on the NCAA basketball tournament this weekend to see whether the upstart Princeton tigers can prevail over number 1 ranked Michigan. During the regular season the tigers, who play a version of basketball known as Bradleyball, had as much as a 14 point lead that dwindled when Bradley fouled out. The final score of that game was 80-78, Michigan . . .

IT LOOKS LIKE UCONN has found their replacement for big Toby Kimball, the nation's leading rebounder. Bill Corley, a 6'7" center from Mineola, N. Y. was the leading scorer on this years Freshman team' with a 22.0 points per game average. His height and build and the capable coaching of Fred Shubel should make Corley a demon under the boards . . .

Sophomore Ed Polchlopek of Chicopee Falls was the leading scorer on the UMass hockey team this season. Polchlopek had 12 goals and seven assists for 19 points. Next in line were Bill Skowyra with 11 points and Dick Feldhoff with 12. None of these men will be graduating and they should form a good nucleius for next year's team . . .

UMass basketballers competed against four teams who competed in the NCAA tourney (UConn, Providence, Washington of Mo., and Evansville) and four teams who were chosen for the NIT (St. Johns, Army, Bradley and B.C.) . . .

Any fight fans on campus? If so, at 5:55 every day on Channel 40 you can see highlights of just about every fight that was won by a knockout in a show called "knockout".

See you on the handball courts.

Intramural Report

By Howie Davis

With half the Intramural Volleyball season completed defending campus champion Lambda Chi Alpha holds first place in Division C with a 3-0 record. This record clinches a tie for the champs.

In the A division Phi Mu Delta and Beta Kappa Phi will meet Monday night in what will probably be the deciding game. PMD sports a 3-0 record, only ½ game off is BKP with a 2-0 record. Division B shows SPE in front as a result of a 15-4 17-15 victory over KS. Since KS was the only team with an outside chance of capturing the Division B crown it looks like SPE all the way in this division.

In the Dorm Leagues the Baker Buffalos have a 3-0 record in the Eastern division closely followed by the Butterfield Lemons with a 2-0 record. In the East B division the Chadbourne Eagles post a 3-0 slate only ½ game ahead of the Chadbourne Maroons.

West "A" finds the Brett Slippery Elms on top with a 2-0 record and the West "B" has the Gorman Maples on top with 2-0 North "A" features the Grayson Aces with a 2-0 mark and the Mills Birch and Webster G. I. Q.'s in the "B" division sponsor identical marks.

The leaders in the Independent league are AEPi Grads, TEP 2, PE Majors, Buggers I and Vicky's 202's with 2-0 records.

UMass Trackmen Third As Rams Bull To Yan-Con Title

Co-Captain Dave Sadowsky and Sophomore Terry Carpenter were standouts for the Redmen, but the Rhode Island Rams took team honors at the second annual Yankee Conference indoor track championships.

The meet at Storrs, Conn. started with the 60-yard dash trials. All three Redmen entries in this event: Doug Sloane, Art Larvey, and John Medeiros qualified for the semi-finals. Sloane's time of 6.4 tied Art Larvey's recently set school record. The Redmen won both semi-final heats with Sloane taking the first and Larvey the second. John Medeiros took third in Larvey's heat and all three won spot in the finals.

In the Shot Put, Junior Doug Renwick took second in a mild upset. Defending champion Delaite of UMaine successfully retained his crown. His winning throw was 47'10", while Renwick's best attempt was 46'10".

In the Pole Vault both Junior Bob Murray and Senior Captain Dave Sadowsky rose to the occasion. Murray, who has been going around 11'6" most of the season, cleared 13' to tie the school record. A minute or two later, Sadowsky also cleared that height to make it a three way tie. Then on his third and final attempt at 13'6". Sadowsky cleared the bar for a new school record. According to the fewer misses rule, however, this effort was only good enough for fourth place. Mayland of Vermont successfully defended his title with a vault of 13'9".

UP TO THIS POINT the Redmen were doing better than expected, and things were looking bright. The Broad jump was the next event. After a foul Art Larvey chopped up his stride to avoid fouling again, and could manage only 20'2", a leap about a foot and a half below his average. John Medeiros re-injured his leg and was through for the rest of the day. On Larvey's last jump, he fouled again and failed to make the finals. Medeiros' first jump of 20'9" was good enough for fourth place in the end. But the Redmen's hopes went with the loss of Medeiros.

The running events were next on the agenda of the meet. In the mile run, undefeated Soph. Jeff Reneau of UNH for 14 of the 16 laps. Carpenter then showed the effect of running two races in 45 minutes as he faded to Reneau's finishing kick. Carpenter finished second while turning in a personal record of 9:45. The winning time was 9:40.

Redmen star John Medeiros in broad jump competition at Yan Con Meet.

Co-Captain Tom Panke's effort in the 1000 yd. was in vain as Jon Kirkland of Maine took the race in record time. Panke finished out of the top five places.

The high jump, which had been going on throughout the meet, featured defending champ Collingwood of URI and a sophomore, Matson, from UConn. After 6'1" these two were the only jumpers left. They both preceeded to clear up to 6'4" inches before the bar was raised to 6'5¼". Matson failed to clear the height but Collingwood went over on his final attempt to set a new meet, school, cage and UConn record. John Lisack cleared 5'10" for fifth place.

The final event of the day was Terry Carpenter and Tom Panke were the standard bearers for UMass. Carpenter got boxed in on the first quarter, but got to the lead by the half-mile and sped to the tape unchallenged for the first UMass victory of the day. His winning time was 4:22. Panke was fourth.

IN THE 60-YARD DASH, Medeiros was forced to drop out because of his leg. Spinnell of UConn was declared the winner in a photo-finish with Doug Sloane. Art Larvey was third. The third was a slow 6.6.

UMass failed to get a place in the hurdles. The lows were won by Johnson of New Hampshire and highs by Lavander of Rhode Island.

The 600 yd. run was won by Pace of Rhode Island in a record breaking time of 1:13. Damian Gaffney of the Redmen was fifth in a close race.

In the two-mile run Terry Carpenter stayed with favorite

Redmen Jumpers Prep For Title Defense

The UMass Sport Parachute Club recently began training for defense of their Inter-Collegiate Parachute Jump championship.

Last May at Orange, Mass., one team of Redmen jumpers placed first in a field of 51 contestants from 18 colleges, winning the Gavin Gavel, symbolic of first place, from defending champion Harvard, who would have permanently retired the trophy if they had been victorious.

Another team of jumpers placed third in that competition, being nosed out by West Point who placed second. It was felt that the Army's use of their own aircraft was a definite asset to their performance.

Due to the success of the team, Governor Endicott Peabody invited the team to display an exhibit at the New York's World Fair. Club president Richard Fillmore, and best accuracy jumper Phil Bedaw were representatives of the club at the exhibit.

MICHAEL HARRINGTON SENATOR ABRAHAM RIBICOFF

DVP Poverty Workshop Presents Noted Speakers

by Lois Skolnick, Staff Reporter

Michael Harrington, author of "The Other America," will open the three-day workshop on poverty in America with a talk on "Poverty in the United States," tonight at 8 p.m. in the S.U. ballroom.

U.S. Senator Abraham Ribicoff, Democrat from Connecticut, will continue the program on Tuesday with a talk on "The Federal Government and Poverty," at 8 p.m. in the S.U. ballroom.

A panel discussion on "The Problems of Implementation," 8 p.m. Wednesday in Mahar Auditorium, will close the workshop, which is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program, under the supervision of Wade Houk, chairman.

Michael Harrington, a leader in the movement against endemic economic deprivation, has been working with Walter Reuther in helping to set up The Citizens Crusade Against Poverty, which will join together trade union, religious, and social welfare organizations in a broad coalition.

Last year he served as a consultant to Sargent Shriver in The War Against Poverty.

Harrington has been active in the civil rights movement, working particularly with Baynard Rustin on the Youth Marches for Integrated Schools.

Ribicoff, Tuesday's speaker, served as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare in the cabinet of President Kennedy, where he was responsible for initiating a new approach to welfare operations, placing greater emphasis on prevention and rehabilitation.

He is the only public official who has served as a state legislator, a judge, a member of the U.S. House of Representatives, a governor, a cabinet member, and now a U.S. Senator.

Ribicoff initiated the act which now provides aid to dependent children whose parents are the victims of unemployment.

The Cuban refugee program was set up by Ribicoff to find homes and jobs for the thousands of refugees who have fled the Castro regime.

Ribicoff's legislative program while Governor gave Connecticut the most modern court system in the nation, the first statewide

Montgomery Marchers Enter Their Second Day

SELMA, ALA.—Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Sunday walked 3,500 of his followers over eight miles of asphalt on U.S. Highway 80 on the way to the state capital at Montgomery so that Negroes will someday be able to vote in Alabama.

They kept the cadence with the chant "freedom." They sang the integration anthem, "We Shall Overcome."

It was the first of five days of march. On Thursday Dr. King will attempt to present Gov. George Wallace of Alabama with a petition on voting rights for Negroes.

On Sunday the law forces who slammed into the marcher's midst and beat them just two Sundays ago on the bridge leading out of Selma cleared the path for them.

President Johnson kept his promise. No harm came to them.

Along the line of march, regular Army military police with their bayonets fixed in sheaths, watched over the marchers. Helicopters circled only a few feet over the heads of Dr. King and Dr. Ralph Bunche, two Nobel Peace Prize winners, who led the marchers.

The marchers listened on their transistor radios of bombs being planted in four places 200 miles away in Birmingham, Ala.

As they passed down Alabama Ave. and Broad St. in Selma, the whites who watched were largely silent.They weren't happy. They had been overcome.

They talked in soft voices. "I ain't seen so many niggers in my life," said one. And another: "I bet they don't have that many niggers in Yankee Stadium."

Negro leaders say the Selma-to-Montgomery marchers hope to cover 17 and one half miles today to make up for time lost yesterday. Armed soldiers will continue to protect the marchers as they make their way down the Jefferson Davis Highway (U. S. 80) to the Alabama capital. Under the Federal court order permitting the march, it must be completed by Thursday afternoon (4 p.m. EST).

En route to Montgomery the marchers will pass sometime tomorrow Lowndes County, a rural area of white resistence to the Negro. The county's population is 81 percent Negro. But it was only last week that the first Negro was registered to vote.

U.S. Highway 80 is a four-lane separated road for about eight miles from both Selma and Montgomery. In between it is narrow, swampy, and entirely desolate. It is here that the Army may have trouble protecting the marchers from snipers.

Sunday it was different. Traffic moved at such a slow pace that no one would dare hit a marcher. They would not get away. But on Sunday there were 3,500 of the marchers. Beginning this morning there will be only 300, as directed by the court order which gave permission for the march.

In Montgomery, 200 Ku Klux Klansmen staged a 20-mile motorcade along the highway to Birmingham, protesting the Selma - to - Montgomery march and carrying signs suggesting "Be a man—join the Klan." Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton insisted that the marchers had planted the bombs in Birmingham to embarass the Klan.

In Selma, whites drove by with signs on their cars saying "I hate niggers" and "Too bad, Reeb"—a reference to the Rev. James Reeb, clubbed to death in Selma two weeks ago.

UMass Students Picket New York and Boston

by Kathy Nolan, Staff Reporter

Five Mass students were arrested and jailed for participating in a demonstration at the Chase-Manhattan Bank in New York City Friday.

Ray Abbott, Bill Dorr, Sidney Finehirsch, Donna Kahn and Kathy Nolan, along with forty others, were charged with disturbing the peace and resisting arrest after a "sit-out" in front of a door to the bank building.

Students for a Democratic society, a national organization, organized the "sit-out" and a picket line to protest U. S. investments in the racist South African government. Lynn Greeley, Bob Rostein and Steve Seyer of UMass joined in the picketing.

According to the demonstrators, American money provides support for the maintenance of the apartheid system which completely separates black and white. This system, they maintain, rigidly controls the lives and actions of natives by restricting them from moving, changing jobs, or walking on the street without government permission.

The Chase Manhattan answered with a statement that, "So long as our government maintains friendly relations with a country, we believe we would not be warranted in any attempt to interfere with the flow of international commerce. . ."

The students arrested in New York were released without bail and will return for trial March 25 and April 2.

In Boston a picket line of about a hundred people including Victor Aronow, Brad Brayton, Linda Brayton, Steve Krinsky, Dani Ostrow and Jane Roland demonstrated for six hours at the First National Bank of Boston and the Kendall Co. United Shoe Machinery Corp. This and another protest at General Electric Co. in Pittsfield were led by Students for a Democratic Society. UMass participation was sponsored by Young Independents, a chapter of SDS.

Consultant Firm to Study Site of Medical School

University of Massachusetts trustees, stalemated in their efforts to select a site for a proposed $33 million medical school, have hired a private management consultant firm to help make the decision, it was announced Wednesday.

Robert J. McCartney, secretary to the board of trustees, said the firm of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, Inc., of New York and Washington will evaluate recommendations made by the trustees thus far and make its report "in a comparatively short time."

"There has been a wide division on the question of a (medical school) site," McCartney said, "and persuasive evidence presented for a number."

"We are hopeful that comments and objectives on criteria for a site, backed up by a professional management firm, will help settle the entire question."

McCartney said that Booz, Allen and Hamilton will make its recommendations to the university's board of trustees, which will evaluate the report and make the "ultimate decision" as to the school's location. McCartney said he is confident the consulting firm will "help settle the entire question" of where the school should be located.

Volpe Aide To Address Republicans

Elmer Nelson, Governor John A. Volpe's campaign manager in the 1964 gubernatorial election, will be on campus Thursday, March 25.

Nelson will speak to the Young Republican Club at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex and Nantucket rooms of the Student Union.

Nelson has served as campaign manager for Sen. Leverett Saltonstall and former Gov. Christion Herter. He has been successful in every campaign he has directed.

His appearance before the Young Republicans will climax their four-day membership drive.

There will be a sign-up table in the Student Union lobby Monday through Thursday, March 22 through March 25, for all those interested in joining.

Information concerning the club's activities on campus, Republican state organization, and the Massachusetts Young Republican Association will be available at this time.

The president of the club, Alfred B. Cenedella, III, along with the other club officers, will be at the table at various times to answer questions.

Nelson's address will give all club members, new and old, insight into the practical machinations of Massachusetts politics and will highlight the clubs' spring activities.

Motor Laws May Extend To Campus

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Richard E. McLaughlin has informed the House Ways and Means committee that he is not opposed to a bill to provide that procedure against violators of the motor vehicle laws be extended to include violations on land at the University.

But the registrar has suggested to Ways and Means that the "special" bill be converted into a "general" bill, to apply to violations on any land owned by the Commonwealth and of its political subdivisions.

The bill was filed by Senator Charles A. Bisbee, Jr., (R., Chesterfield), at the request of the University.

President John W. Lederle in a letter to the Ways and Means Committee, explained that as a result of a technicality no provision was contained in a 1962 act to provide citations for the University police chief.

As a result, he said, the University has been without means of returning citations in district courts for moving traffic violations on campus.

President Lederle said the bill would cost nothing, except the incidental cost of citation forms which are provided without cost by the Registry of Motor vehicles to other municipal police departments.

Ways and Means will either report out the original bill, or a new draft as suggested by Registrar McLaughlin to the floor of the House for action, after it has completed its deliberations on the measure.

MEDICAL SITE . . .

Cost estimates for the facility have been given as $15,000,000 for the school and another $18,000,000 for the hospital, or a total of $33,000,000 for the proposed structure.

The proposed medical school would have a projected enrollment of 400 students by 1972. In addition to the complex of medical science buildings plus facilities for research and laboratory work, the school also would have a 400-bed hospital as an essential segment of the teaching program.

UMass Foreign Students Discuss Civil Rights and Racial Unrest

by Alan Grigsby,
Staff Reporter

Foreign students on campus take a strong stand on Selma and the racial unrest.

Many felt that they were not close enough to the situation to judge accurately, but gave rathed good appraisals in spite of this.

AS SYED P. MAHALI OF INDIA commented, "Troops are not the eventual solution, they are only temporary. There will be no end to the problem so long as there is hostility. There is a need for a change of heart and better harmony. Such things are in process in America. I am hopeful of a solution."

NGAGEN DUNG (pronounced Zung) OF VIETNAM said, "The southerners don't realize the impression or impact these events have on others." He declared, "The people of Amherst don't see how you can have segregation. They don't have direct experience and don't know how they would react if there were a lot of negroes here."

"The people here do not know about voter registration and better government down there. They must live in the south for the atmosphere and the emotion."

"We must all deal with our own consciences, understand each other's and know that we are wrong in what has been done," he said.

"The solution," Dung said, "should not come by force, but by the racist minority in the south, who deep inside themselves know they are wrong."

"As for the impact of this program on the world," he said, "the United States with its high intellectual and practical development is judged by higher criteria than other nations and more harshly."

JEAN PINEAU OF FRANCE agreed with Dung, saying "We need a good view of the problem in order to be more subjective."

He said, "The people in Europe think of awful racists and don't appreciate the problem. The people on the outside make the problem too simple without looking at the relationships. The solution," Pineau thought, would come through education in order that the Negro will be able to take the responsibility of voting. This is the responsibility of the white men," he concluded.

REINALDO VEGA CORDERO of Puerto Rico concluded the feelings of all, "Over the years the words that all men are created equal, in the United States constitution, has been taken for granted in many states, especially in the south. Now the time, the place, the situation call for achieving the meaning of these words. Pres. Johnson has the opportunity and backing that is needed for this proposed civil rights bill. The people of the United States, whether natural or foreign, should do the best they can to express their disagreement with Governor Wallace's and Sheriff Clark's treatment of the Alabama negroes."

Tryout Days Set For New U.T. Play

Professor Cosmo Catalano has announced tryout dates for the upcoming University Theater presentation, "The Glass Menagerie" by Tennessee Williams.

The play, considered by many to be the finest work of Williams, will be presented May 8, 9, 10 in the Student Union.

The play will be presented as an arena production, which allows the audience to actually become more closely associated with the drama. The "Glass Menagerie" offers the University campus an opportunity to witness a compelling, controversial drama as the final presentation of this University Theater season.

Tryout dates for the play with times are as follows: Mar. 23, 4-5:30 p.m.; Mar. 24, 7:30-9:30 p.m.; Mar. 25, 4-5:30 p.m.; and Mar. 26, 7:30-9:30 p.m.

All tryouts will be held in Rm. 125, Bartlett. The times have been scheduled to offer the student an opportunity to try out either in the afternoon or evening.

Dr. G. Tinder To Lecture on Conservatism

Dr. Glenn E. Tinder, who is returning to teach at UMass - Boston, will lecture at UMass on Tuesday, March 23, at 11:15 a.m.

Dr. Tinder, a political scientist, will speak on "The Plight of American Conservatism" at a UMass government department-sponsored lecture to be held in the School of Business Administration's Mahar Auditorium. The talk is open to the public at no charge.

Dr. Tinder first joined the UMass faculty in 1952. He taught previously at the University of California at Berkeley and is now teaching at Lake Forest College.

A graduate of Pomona College, he received his master's degree from Claremont Graduate School and his Ph.D. degree from the University of California.

His book, The Crisis of Political Imagination, was published recently by Scribners.

The Reservation

Martin Halpern's play, "The Reservation," staged Saturday for University cognoscenti was received with much enthusiasm. The performers called upon the author to join them in acknowledging the applause.

No small credit goes to the cast for the excitement of the performance. Originating from the Image Theatre Workshop of Club 47, Cambridge, the performers were Paul John Austin, who also directed, Susan Dorlen, and Spaulding Gray.

Each one played at least two parts: that of a performer in rehearsal, and the part which the performer was building for the audience. Under the direction of Mr. Austin, they displayed a subtle repertory of mime, dialect, and vocal interpretation that was emphasized by the shifts in characterization. Pacing and action were rapid and neatly trimmed.

Halpern has pursued human values in a kindly but perceptive vein. What more can humane letters offer than a humane contemplation of the turmoil of free decisions? The argument of the play—for it is an argument couched in charm and persuasion—is directed at freedom of choice based not only on instinctual desire but on a rational sense of right.

The play uses some standard devices of the contemporary theatre to dramatize its main points: i.e. exist through the audience. However, the end result is a happy marriage of meaty script with imaginative cast and director. It makes you laugh, it makes you cry, and, best of all it makes you forget yourself.

Halpern's cry against determinism is vigorous and entertaining.

1930 Auto's Better than...

"Did you know 1930 automobiles were of much better quality than the 1950 variety? Just check the records and compare the numbers of each which were junked last year. And did you know insurance companies are really perpetrating a hoax by claiming that 90-year-old men are poorer insurance risks that 50-year-old men? Just check the number of each who died last year."

If a person wished to discredit the public schools, he could simply find the most shocking single practice within the worst school that he could locate. Then use this example as though it were a common practice.

Finally, if all else fails, appeal to logic. The word "logic" can sway people's opinions easily, especially if one acts as if he knows his subject to prove his points.

"It has been said anything can be proved by using Holy Scripture. If the sample is sufficiently biased, the ratings casually made, and the data incomplete enough, he adds, one can prove anything.

Rey de la Torre

by Tom Donovan,
Feature Staff

THE WORLD'S GREATEST living guitarist, Rey de la Torre, was the guest performer Friday night in the Student Union. His concert was part of a series sponsored by the Arts and Music Committee.

The Cuban-born de la Torre presented three groups of pieces. The first included the very early guitar music of the classical period. They were: six short compositions by Spanish composer Robert de Visse, circa 1682; two pieces by John Dowland, termed by de la Torre as "rather quiet"; and three pieces by Fernando Sor, Barcelonian composer, including a brilliantly executed Variations on a Theme of Mozart which de la Torre termed "an intricate, demanding, and worthwhile must for every classical guitarist's repetoire".

The second section employed music by Latin American composers. It included: Three Mexican Songs by Manual Ponce, one piece with a strong South American Indian influence, by Argentinian, Gomez Crespo, entitled Nortena, and two pieces, Chorus No. 1 and Prelude No. 3 by the late Brizilian composer Villa-Lobos.

The third group included music by Spanish composers: Suite Castellana a moderated flamingo by Torroba, two Catalonian melodies depicting the slow countryside of Castille by Llobet, and Albeniz's Leyenda, a piano repetoire piece transcribed for guitar.

During the intermission, de la Torre had a few comments. Regarding the audience, "They are fine. Very receptive." The distinction of being the world's foremost quitarist, "I don't consciously strive primarily for fame or glory. I would perform even if no one liked it." On his guitar, "I have two, both hand made for me by the German craftsman Hauser. They are among the last five instruments he made."

One of the most outstanding displays of the ability which earned him his distinction was the Variations on a Theme of Mozart. Also rewarding was his superb control of harmonics, especially his right-hand harmonics in Granados' Spanish Dance No. 5.

Gov. Volpe Declines Invite To March On Montgomery

(The Telegram and Gazette Boston Bureau)

BOSTON — Gov. Volpe last week declined an invitation from Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King to join with Dr. King in a march from Selma, Ala., to the state Capitol at Montgomery.

Volpe wired Dr. King he regretted that "previous long-standing commitments preclude my participation."

Volpe added: "Please be assured, however, that although I cannot be with you in person, the people of Massachusetts join with me in wishing you a successful, peaceful march for the cause of civil rights."

In a telegram evidently sent to other governors also, Dr.

Bread or Ballot?

At a time when everyone's attention is focused on Alabama, it would be appropriate to remember that our nation faces other problems besides civil rights. The most pressing one is poverty.

Many of the college students who head down South to aid the Negro cause should stop and consider whether they could apply their capabilities equally well at home by combating poverty in their neighborhood. This suggestion is not meant to discredit the civil rights movement. The American Negro has suffered long enough and it is time that his right to freedom be recognized.

However, too many people travel to the South and participate in the civil rights movement not out of personal dedication, but out of a desire to reap publicity and notoriety. Many of these people could be better utilized at home aiding poverty stricken families. Moreover, one need not travel long distances in search of people to help. Undoubtedly, there are many families in the Springfield, Worcester, and Boston area who would welcome aid.

The right to vote is a democratic necessity, but so is the right to be free from hunger and want. Suffrage has little meaning for parents living in rat infested tenant houses who have to worry whether their children have enough to eat. The bodily needs of such people have to be met before there can even be any discussion of democracy.

This week a Poverty Workshop is being sponsored on March 22, 23, and 24. Let us all lend our support to this workshop and show that we are willing to do more about human suffering than merely talk about it.

Year Round Operation

Let us adopt the tri-mester plan here at this University.

A created, equal, semester, covering the summer months, would be superior to the present summer session with certain conditions met, including propitious installing of air-conditionng.

The scheduling of courses might be arranged within an overall, flexible scheme: but with increased enrollments offering, simultaneously, both semesters of sequence courses would work itself out.

There would be a more serious atmosphere with the fellowship of full-time students and not mainly of vacationers, academic bums, and potential flunk-outs. Professional and graduate degrees—e.g. for college teaching—would be earned in less time. The student would have a more competitive opportunity to secure a non-summer semester of employment.

The proposal adopted would attract equally-competent instructors for the summer term. Faculty might alternate periods of teaching with research and yet not be far away or might accumulate credit for extended leaves of absence.

The fact of the matter is, proven by the existence of "Special '68," the increase in qualified applicants to the University does and will require full utility of all existing facilities as well as of new: the alternative to the Commonwealth is abandonment of its service—University ideals.

The fortunate circumstance is that the trimesters would be advantageous to students and faculty, individually and as a whole.

Now is the time for those who care about the components of this University to speak out.

A Tease?

To the Editor:

In my naive little world I may be wrong, but I think Mike Shuman has given us the wrong definition of a tease. Following his definition, approximately 98% of the girls on this campus are teases. All girls will try to be as attractive as they can. However, if a guy has only one thought when he looks at her, that's the fault of his one-track mind. This girl is seeking a worthwhile relationship, and that's why she turns away the "inquisitive hands". A good relationship starts with inquisitive minds. This girl is right in shunning contact with those who are dating her for her body. It isn't her fault she's been well-endowed by nature. Why shouldn't she look good? Just because a girl looks sexy doesn't mean she is, just as a plain-looking girl need not have a bland personality. In defining the word "tease" please use the connotation which would be correct in connection with campus morals.

Andrea Teacher '68

SEX AT UMASS

To the Editor:

In response to Mike Shuman's article I think he's being quite unfair to the female ego. Sure this certain breed of female that Mr. Shuman talks about is well-known on campus. She "teases" and feverishly tried to look "sexy". Do you know a better way to attractive a male? Girls have tried many a method: acting shy and demure, highly intellectual, or going to the other extreme and acting just plain dumb and innocent. And believe it or not many females have tried the "just be yourself" technique.

But how many guys can be attracted in these ways? Not very many. A tight sweater, provided it's well-filled, a swinging derriere, and long curly eyelashes seem to attract a fellow far easier than the other tactics I have mentiond. You complain that guys become frustrated when, after they've caught her, she quickly displays a hands-off sign. What do you expect? Do you expect her to succumb to every guy's sexual desires? Is that the type of "worthwhile relationship" you speak of?

If you guys took more stock in an attractive, well-groomed appearance rather than a "sexy front" you'd eliminate the necessity of the tease, who although she wants dates, would like to uphold her moral standards.

Jazz Review

To the Editor:

In last Monday's Collegian there appeared a review of the Music Hour performance given Sunday afternoon by the Pete Witherell Jazz Quartet. Unfortunately, the review devoted a large amount of space to severe criticism of one particular member of the quartet.

This condemnation contrasted with effusive praise delivered the other three musicians.

We of Thatcher House feel that a reviewer representing a paper which emphasizes its "first class" rating on its front page should use considerably more discretion when covering events of this nature. Such one-sided, biased reporting, singling out an individual and degrading him in the eyes of his fellow students, can only demean the reputation of the paper in which it appears.

May we remind Mr. Johnson that a newly formed group is especially prone to intonation difficulties, which are undoubtedly intensified by a piano as poorly tuned as that one presently standing in the Cape Cod Lounge. The blame for such problems almost invariably falls on the soloist, regardless of his ability or inability to perform. Hasty statements regarding the "downgrading" of a "whole performance" must necessarily injure the group's yet indefinite reputation.

We hope that in future reviews both tact and knowledge will be combined with more constructive criticism to prevent such an injustice from reoccurring.

Editor's Note: It is the purpose of a reviewer to give an honest, objective opinion of the performance which he has reviewed. He should give credit where credit is due, but he is also obligated to criticize where criticism is warrented. It is his job to evaluate the performance and the performers as they appeared, NOT in relation to facts external to the performance itself. A group should not perform until it is ready to be judged objectively. It is not the duty of a reviewer to give praise where it is not due for the sole reasons of the group being newly formed and in need of a boost to its reputation. That is the job of a publicity agent.

Willis Report Revisions May Foster Non-Support

The Willis Report underwent political surgery last week in the Legislature's Joint Committee on State Legislation. Because of this marked alteration, UMass and the state's eight community colleges are seriously considering non-support.

The alterations are due mostly to pressure from SMTI and Lowell Tech. Both Universities are suing for recognition as state institutions.

Emergency teams are being sent to the State House today or tomorrow to see if the situation can be saved.

From the vague look which can be obtained of the report, these changes are the controversial issues: The original Willis report called UMass the "sole state university." This has been changed to "sole general state university."

With these changes, a new, powerful Board of Higher Education without any strong guidelines as to how the system should be developed would be created.

The governor would appoint the 11 representatives from all four higher education groups. UMass and the community colleges feel that the representatives should be experienced trustees.

The opinion of some top people at UMass and the community colleges is that it would be better to drop the top half of the Willis Report and start over next year.

The legislators apparently gave in to pressure from two of the 22 state's higher education institutions. The trip to Beacon Hill this week may tell why.

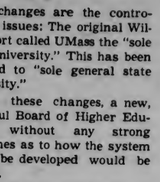
Ford Motor Company is:

perspective



Carl Marcucci
B.S.M.E., Wayne State Univ.
M.S.M.E., Wayne State Univ.

At Ford Motor Company, perspective results from the necessary training, background and further education a college graduate needs to obtain the advancement he wants. Perspective, in a painting, is the illusion of depth. With us there's no illusion.

Perspective at our Company often starts with the two-year College Graduate Program. While in the Program, a graduate progresses through a series of developmental moves. He becomes familiar with our business. Takes on ever-increasing amounts of responsibility. And accelerates according to his own application and ability. We want him to succeed. Because the greater his success, the greater ours will be. One recent graduate, Carl Marcucci, typifies this success story.

Since joining us in 1960, Carl has gained wide experience in our Quality Control Office. For example: He put together a coordinated program to test a new engine . . . served as a liaison between one of our foundries and our manufacturing plants . . . and represented us with vendors who supply our manufacturing plants. In addition, through our Employe Continuing Education Plan, Carl furthered his academic accomplishments by earning his Master's Degree. Carl presently is taking a seminar course to qualify as a registered professional engineer. This added knowledge and the many work situations he encountered have greatly enlarged Carl's perspective. Make him better able to reach the right decisions in his current job—Section Supervisor of a Quality Control Department with 52 people under him.

This is not an isolated case. Many college graduates have grown just as rapidly. If you want a future as big as you'd like it to be, see our representative when he visits your campus.

adult progation program, one of the first laws in the nation curtailing discrimination in private housing, and the largest road-building program in the state's history.

As Senator, Ribicoff has distinguished himself as supporter in civil rights legislation and as an apostle of sanitation, clean air and clean water, of safe pesticides and safe foods.

He has been a leader in national programs to aid those mentally-afflicted and also their families.

The poverty workshop's panel on Wednesday, moderated by Dr. Jack M. Thompson of the UMass history department will be made up of Oscar Lewis, Dr. Martin Deutsch, Dr. Robert Lampman, and U.S. Rep. James G. O'Hara.

Naiads to Present Annual Swim Show

The University of Massachusetts Naiads club will present its annual synchronized swimming show next week at the Women's Physical Education building on the UMass campus.

Forty-two coeds are cast in this year's production, a skit about a new house owner who discovers antiques in his attic.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday, 6:30 and 8 p.m. Friday, and 8 p.m. Saturday, March 27.

The Naiads' shows are being sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association at UMass as a part of the University's 1965 Fine Arts Festival.

One hundred tickets will be issued for each of the four Naiads' performances.

Tickets—at no charge—may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Gertrude Sherman, Women's Physical Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

For the second consecutive year UCLA has won the NCAA basketball championship, this time downing Michigan, 91-80. It was a virtual romp for the Bruins who combined a blistering fast break with a great zone press defense to defeat the nation's top ranked club.

Michigan was big and not very fast. In fact, they were far from impressive in either game. When they beat Princeton Friday, 93-76, it was mainly through their domination of the boards that they won. Against UCLA, the Wolverines were out scrapped by the smaller, lighter Bruins.

UCLA pulled down two more rebounds than Michigan in the first half as they rolled to a 47-34 lead. Michigan led by five with about 10 minutes left in the half, but suddenly the press took effect and the Western Champ ran right past the Eastern winner.

The big gun in this drive was sub Kenny Washington. He came off the bench to replace the injured Keith Erickson, and sank four quick jump shots to propel the Bruins into the lead. He also had three steals. In last year's 98-83 win over Duke, Washington came off the bench to score 28 points.

The big star, however, has to be Gail Goodrich, the All-American guard. He scored 40 points, including 25 in the second half. He completely dominated the latter segment of the game as he dribbled through the pressing Wolverines to sink spectacular layups or convert the foul shots.

If the Wolverines had any ideas of coming back from the deficit at the half as they had done eight times previously this year, they were removed with the first play of the second half. Bill Buntin tapped to Oliver Darden, but Goodrich took the ball right out of his hands and went in unmolested for the easy hoop.

The Bruins reached a 20 point lead several times in the second half, before going into a semi-stall with still 10 minutes left. The slower Wolverines just couldn't steal the ball despite a zone press of their own. When they double teamed the ball, the pass went to the open man, and all of the Bruins can and did score from the outside.

When Coach John Wooden cleared his bench, the score was 91-71. Michigan went on to score the last nine points of the game, many by Cazzie Russell, but UCLA was already giving the knife to Goodrich and he rode their shoulders over to the end of the court where he removed the net.

Russell finished with 28 points for the second night in a row as he paced Michigan. Buntin, Darden and Larry Tregoning all fouled out for Michigan as they commited fouls against the classy Bruins.

Michigan, in beating Princeton, got a good break when everybody's All-America Bill Bradley drew his fourth foul early in the second half. He fouled out with 5:04 left after scoring 29 points. Effective guarding by George Pomey, who prevented Bradley from getting the ball was an important factor in the win.

Buntin had 22 with 14 rebounds in this game, but as a team it became quite evident that Michigan could be beaten by a good outside shooting club that could also shut off the Wolverines under the hoop. UCLA did just that.

UCLA smashed Wichita to reach the finals, 108-89. At the half it was 65-38 as Goodrich had 23 points that time Jamie Thompson with 34 led the Shockers, but Goodrich with 28, Edgar Lacey with 24, and Fred Goss with 19 more than offset his efforts.

Consolation honors went to Princeton as they rolled to a 118-82 win over Wichita. Bill Bradley scored 58 points to set an NCAA tournament scoring record. The 118 points was also a tourney mark. Bradley hit on 22 of 29 field goals, and 14 of 15 foul shots to close out his career in great style. Anyone who had seen Bradley play before, always came away saying what would happen if he shot more. With the 13,404 fans, his teammates, and Coach Bill Van Kolff yelling for him to keep shooting, he made his first five shots in the second half, and finished by scoring seven in the last five minutes of the game. He was lifted with :35 left in the game and received a one minute standing ovation, a fitting tribute to one of the all time greats.

In the NIT, St. John's completed a sweep for sentimental favorites as they won one for Joe. The Redmen beat Villanova 55-51 to present retiring Coach Joe Lapchick, one of the great names in the history of basketball, with an unprecedented fourth NIT crown.

Army nailed down consolation honors, beating NYU for the second straight year by a single point. Junior Dick Murray sank a corner jumper with three seconds left to give the Cadets the win. He earlier sank two free throws after NYU had taken a 74-71 lead.

It was a great day for college basketball and a fine finish to the 1964-65 season.

All New Greek Olympics Planned for Greek Week

by Dave Rooney

This year the all new Greek Olympics, including the Chariot Races, the Pageantry, and the Track Meet Finals, are to be held all in one place. The stretch of road in front of the new Boyden Gymnasium is to be the scene of this mammoth event on Saturday, April 3.

The track meet semi-finals will start at 10:00 A.M., Saturday on the lower field in front of Boyden. These events will include the shot-put, broad jump, high jump, quarter mile, half mile, 120 low hurdles, and semi-finals in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. The fraternities are divided into four teams with four houses in each team.

At 12:00 noon, the scene of events will shift to the road in front of Boyden. There will be bleachers set up to accommodate 1000 people.

The Queen and her court will lead the Pageantry which will consist of floats and the Chariots of each of the fraternity houses. The finals in the 100 yd. dash, the 220, the 440, and the 880 relay race will take place in front of the spectators.

This year the famous Chariot Races will also be run in front of the bleachers. This has always been one of the exciting events of Greek Week. The defending champion of last year is Kappa Sigma—they will be out to defend their laurels.

These events have been improved for the spectators inasmuch as they will be held all in one place for the first time.

Scene from last year's Greek Week Chariot Races. This year they will be held on the road in front of Boyden building.

Group Sponsored By SCLC Travels South For March

by Tom MacLachlan

The group of fifteen people who went to Selma from Amherst under the aegis of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference left at 8:30 p.m. last Monday under the leadership of Rev. David King. Included were Amherst area ministers and students from the University. Those from UM were Protestant Chaplain Father John L. Scott, Rev. Harold Cooper of the chaplain's staff, Mrs. Patricia Winship '65, Paul Fagg, grad student, Richard Soble '65, Stephen Zeidman '66, Louis Pellissier '67, Armen Roupenian '68 and Tom MacLachlan '66.

We arrived in Atlanta, Georgia, Tuesday evening at about midnight and remained there in the YMCA overnight, continuing our trip into Selma the next day and arriving there at about 3 p.m. Wednesday. The S.C.L.C. seemed very much in command of the situation in Selma and our accomodations were very quickly arranged upon our arrival. I think it was hard during the first few hours there to remember the purpose of the continuous action all around us. It seemed more like a county fair than the desperate struggle which it was in reality.

This impression was soon corrected by our orientation session, however, in which the principles of non-violent action were covered and the method of grasping one's head with the arms was demonstrated to us. We were told that this would tend to prevent the type of skull injury which had proven fatal to Rev. James Reeb during the preceeding week.

The complete trust and friendliness of the Negro population was a marvel to all of us as was the unity of spirit and purpose of the demonstrations. We participated in a program of visiting both the citizens of the Selma Negro community and the outlying communities of Dallas County such as Marion, Alabama. At Marion several of us attended the first mass meeting held in that church since the killing of Jimmy Lee Jackson there and the enthusiasm generated by that gathering is impossible to describe.

Another high point was our overnight stay in a recreation facility under "protective custody" when it was found that we were too numerous to jail. Director of Public Safety Baker tries, it seems, to do his best in Selma but this was a case where it was obvious that he had underestimated the strength of the movement.

Of course the event that was most anticipated was the Montgomery march which began Student Describes Montgomery, Ala.

by John Childs

The statements below are not meant to be definite. A week spent in the South does not qualify me to make definite statements and to draw conclusions. However I have spent a very compressed and intense week in Montgomery. From the compression and the intensity a few salient observations may be made.

The first of these observations, one which is not reported in newspapers, concerns the open-armed response of the Montgomery Negro community to the Northern students and others of the "outside agitator" category. Students could sleep or eat in any house of the Negro community.

I saw a carload of Negro teenagers ride by a group of white students, wave out of the windows, and call "Hi brothers."

In short, we were a part of the Montgomery Negro community. We marched with each other, we ate with each other, we slept under the same roofs, together we were beaten, together we were afraid, together we were Americans.

Ribicoff Offers Four Steps To Eliminate U.S. Poverty

by Richard Danca,
Staff Reporter

"For the first time in our nation's history, very many hard-headed men of affairs are saying that poverty can be eliminated, that at long last Pandora's box can be closed," said Sen. Abraham Ribicoff last night in the second DVP Poverty Workshop lecture.

The former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare offered four steps to improve the war on poverty. Ribicoff suggested that:

THE U. S. should invest some money to train a "new breed" of professionals to run the poverty program. These would come from the young people of the country, the poor themselves or from government and business.

There should be a marshalling of resources and brain power of the Departments of HEW, Labor, Commerce, with business and universities to work out a detailed projection of U. S. employment needs.

THE POVERTY program should employ consultants who are actually working in factories or businesses, men who possess the very skills the poverty program is trying to teach.

THROUGH TAX incentives or other means, the U.S. should encourage industries of all sizes to participate in job retraining programs.

Ribicoff explained the various federal anti-poverty programs, including the Job Corps. He stressed new preventitive measures, especially those beginning with children.

He also stated his beliefs on the legality of the programs, saying that "myths hold that welfare legislation has no basis in our constitution," and that "the opposition to welfare legislation in this country has been ideological."

His answer to this argument is "read the constitution." "Promoting the common good, promoting the general welfare . . . are concepts . . . as American as the Fourth of July"

In a question period following the lecture, Ribicoff disagreed slightly with Sargent Shriver, Poverty War chief.

"We'll always have some poverty," he said, "Shriver is unrealistic to say 10 years." He indicated that perhaps 30 years is a closer estimate.

"The thing you have to do is try," he said.

Ribicoff also explained some of the policy in the Appalachia Program.

He concluded by saying that "waging the war against poverty is vitally important to the future of our nation."

DVP Workshop To End With Panel

To: Wade Houk
Distinguished Visitors Program
Student Union, University of Mass.
Amherst, Mass.

Congratulations to you and your committee for the splendid program that you have put together for your annual workshop. This activity by the University of Mass. is unique. It represents a significant awareness by the administration and students of this major problem of all Americans-the elimination of poverty in our country. I know Senator Ribicoff will make a contribution to your program. I look forward to receiving a copy of the record and recommendations which will be made by the participants in your conference. Good luck to all.

Sincerely,
Sargent Shriver,
Director of the Peace Corps,
Washington, D.C.

by Pat Petow
Staff Reporter

The Poverty Workshop of the Distinguished Visitors Program now being held at Mahar auditirium tonight will feature a panel discussion on "The Problems of Implementation," the last presentation of the three days.

Panel moderator will be U-Mass Assistant Professor of Speech Jay Savereid, who received his bachelor and master's degrees from Northwestern University.

The following are the panel participants, representing the spheres of the academic, faculty., and government, as have the other programs in the Workshop:

Dr. Martin Deutsche, the director of the New York Medical College's Institute for Developmental Studies and visiting professor of social psychology and education at Teachers' College, Columbia University. He has dealt with poverty problems in his post in the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues.

Dr. Robert J. Lampman, professor of economics and director of an inter-disciplinary seminar on progress in underdeveloped areas at the University of Wisconsin. Formerly a member of the President's Economic Advisory Council, he was awarded a Ford Foundation Fellowship five years ago to investigate inter-relationships of wealth with size of income and with distribution in Madison, Wisconsin's capital city.

Dr. Oscar Lewis, professor of anthropology at the University of Illinois and twice the recipient of Guggenheim Fellowships. He has published as one of his many sociological and anthropological studies of poverty-afflicted areas The Children of Sanchez, a study of a Mexican family living in severe poverty.

Harrington Advocates Increased Spending and Hiring the Poor

by Linda Perlstein,
Staff Reporter

"The only way to erase poverty and unemployment in our society is to increase social spending and hire the poor to tear down poverty," the first of the speakers of the three day Poverty Workshop, Michael Harrington told his audience Monday night.

Harrington, author of "The Other America," began his speech by drawing a relationship between the happenings in Selma and the problem of poverty that faces the nation. He stated that the "American Negro is raising not only the black man, but the problem of both the white and black man" which requires economic and social solutions.

HE MADE THE DISTINCTION between the old and new poverty. The old poor were "adventurous immigrants who came to a country that needed an expanding blue collar worker class." However, "the new poor are internal aliens. They were forced out of Appalachia, they are Negroes, and they face automation" which, he added, "no other poor have ever had to face." The machines today have on the average a high school education."

Jobs, Harrington went on to elaborate, are not being created at the bottom. These were the jobs which the old immigrants used as ports of entry into our society.

THE GNP WILL have to increase 4½% each year if we are to do away with poverty but he warned the people in the ballroom that "we cannot maintain that kind of growth." "If we don't do something about the job problem . . . poverty will grow."

"One way to solve the problem is the tax cut . . . but it evades the problem of poverty. It tends to benefit only the rich, and makes incomes less equal." We must invest in social programs such as housing, transportation, education and health."

THE BEARD OF AVON

Topic for today is that perennial favorite of English majors, that ever-popular crowd pleaser, that good sport and great American—William Shakespeare (or "The Swedish Nightingale" as he is better known as).

First let us examine the persistent theory that Shakespeare (or "The Pearl of the Pacific" as he is jocularly called) is not the real author of his plays. Advocates of this theory insist the plays are so full of classical allusions and learned references that they couldn't possibly have been written by the son of an illiterate country butcher.

To which I reply "Faugh!" Was not the great Spinoza's father a humble woodcutter? Was not the immortal Isaac Newton's father a simple second baseman? (The elder Newton, incidentally, is one of history's truly pathetic figures. He was, by all accounts, the greatest second baseman of his time, but baseball, alas, had not yet been invented. It used to break young Isaac's heart to see his father get up every morning, put on uniform, spikes, glove, and cap, and stand alertly behind second base, bent forward, eyes narrowed, waiting, waiting, waiting. That's all—waiting. Isaac loyally sat in the bleachers and yelled "Good show, Dad!" and stuff like that, but everyone else in town sniggered derisively, made coarse gestures, and pelted the Newtons with overripe fruit—figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger. Thus, as we all know, the famous moment came when Isaac Newton, struck in the head with an apple, leapt to his feet, shouted "Eureka!" and announced the third law of motion: "For every action there is an opposite and equal reaction!"

Figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger.

(How profoundly true these simple words are! Take, for example, Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades. Shave with a Personna. That's the action. Now what is the reaction? Pleasure, delight, contentment, cheer, and facial felicity. Why such a happy reaction? Because you have started with the sharpest, most durable blade ever honed—a blade that gives you more shaves, closer shaves, comfortabler shaves than any other brand on the market. If, by chance, you don't agree, simply return your unused Personnas to the manufacturer and he will send you absolutely free a package of Beep-Beep or any other blade you think is better.)

But I digress. Back to Shakespeare (or "The Gem of the Ocean" as he was ribaldly appelated).

Shakespeare's most important play is, of course, Hamlet (or, as it is frequently called, Macbeth). This play tells in living color the story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, who one night sees a ghost upon the battlements. (Possibly it is a goat he sees; I have a first folio that is frankly not too legible.) Anyhow, Hamlet is so upset by seeing this ghost (or goat) that he stabs Polonius and Brer Bodkin. He is thereupon banished to a leather factory by the king, who hollers, "Get thee to a tannery!" Thereupon Ophelia refuses her food until Laertes shouts, "Get thee to a beanery!" Ophelia is so cross that she chases her little dog out of the room, crying, "Out, damned Spot!" She is fined fifty shillings for cussing, but Portia, in an eloquent plea, gets the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Thereupon King Lear and Queen Mab proclaim a festival—complete with kissing games and a pie-eating contest. Everybody has a perfectly splendid time until Banquo's ghost (or goat) shows up. This so unhinges Richard III that he drowns his cousin, Butt Malmsey. This leads to a lively discussion, during which everyone is killed. The little dog Spot returns to utter the immortal curtain lines:

Our hero now has croaked,
And so's our prima donna.
But be of cheer, my friends,
You'll always have Personna.

Glassblowing at UMass

by Lauren Coblenz,
Feature Staff

In our age of modern technology, the pride of individual enterprise is too often forgotten. The manufacture of glass, like many other crafts, has been blown into huge proportions by industrialization. At UMass, glassblowing by a skilled craftsman shows the excellence of individual attention reflected in a hand-made creation.

Research projects of the departments of Chemistry, Physics, Botany, Zoology, Food Science and Technology, Forestry, Speech Therapy and others have received aid from the Glass Shop of Gordon Good, professional glassblower, who came to the University last July. Good's service, available to faculty members and authorized graduate students without charge, is part of the program of the Office of Research under the coordination of Dean Edward C. Moore of the Chem. department.

Good is able to aid diversified areas of research, as a mere diagram on paper is blown into the reality of glass. He recently, supplied a highly involved mercury diffusion pump for chemistry research and a group of instruments to be used to develop breathing techniques in research for speech therapy.

Hopefully, a program will be set up so that Good will be able to conduct a laboratory of graduate students in the art of glassblowing. This project might relieve the constant, growing demands of the University for glass research implements.

Although Good works to create objects for practical use, his skill produces a fascinating display of art. Student and faculty researchers, as well as observers interested in this highly developed scientific art, may contact Mr. Good at Goessmann Lab., Room E-4.

A QUESTION

Last Saturday at 3:05 we entered the most provacative and mysterious season — spring. Through the early mud and late snow spring drags a campus full of fresh romance, frolic and human ENERGY.

The last few years has seen that energy boil from spring fever to campus riots—a destructive force more taxing on campus property and personnel than all of winter weather's wear and tear. These riots are becoming a tradition at the University . . . spring after spring. Too bad the energy can't be channeled into a worthwhile, less destructive and image wrecking fun type of tradition that is condoned by the administration. —Whatever happened to Spring Day anyway?

MARY WELLS SUNDAY CONCERT

Mary Wells will perform at the Sunday Greek Week Concert this year. Recently appearing at Smith College to a sell-out audience, her singing ability has brought her appearances on the television shows "Hullabaloo" and "Shin-dig." Some of her well known hits are "You Beat Me to the Punch," "My Guy" and "Two Lovers."

A group bringing back many old favorites is the "Coasters". Just a few of the old favorite gold records are "Charlie Brown," "Yakkity Yak." "I'm Searching" and "Poison Ivy."

An all new local group, "The Street Walkers," will also perform at this event.

Tickets are being sold in the Student Union lobby, Holyoke, Springfield and Northampton.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Price Of Quality

Our facilities are shoddy . . . We need better police and fire protection . . . Lets get better teachers for our children and raise the standard of education in the state . . . Why are so many of the state legislators from the upper classes; why aren't some from the lower classes to give fair representation . . .?

Questions like these are endless, and they are asked continually by the citizens of the commonwealth. The answer is simply given in one word . . . MONEY!

It costs a vast amount to finance the programs we would all like to see appear and continue in this state. Yet, we are appalled when a legislator commits political suicide by asking the people of Massachusetts for more funds to finance this type of legislation. It is time for the people of this state to realize that good government, good protection, and most of all good education cost money. And, this money must come from taxes.

Recently, the question of a pay raise for our State Legislators has arisen. Before we condemn our representatives for asking for more money, we should review the circumstances relevant to the question.

We complain that the legislature is a rich man's club, and that those representatives who are not of the upper class, hold down another job and hence do not give their full time to the public. Yet, we want men of high calibre and ability to fill positions of such importance to us all.

It is time that we realize that the salaries which we presently offer our legislators are not enough to attract a man with the ability we desire. As a result, legislators must be either independently wealthy enough to live on their own resources, or engage in another form of work simultaneously with their terms of office.

We are asking to spend our money while keeping our bank balance constant, or, to use a cliche, we want to have our cake and eat it too. This is the same type of problem which plagues our educational system. We want the best teachers, but we are not willing to pay for them. Yet, we wonder when men of high intelligence and character choose other professions, leaving teaching to the "second-raters".

When are we going to stop fooling ourselves and realize that we will get ONLY what we pay for? The citizens of the Commonwealth will have to show a mature attitude towards the financing of such programs before they can possibly come into existence.

Sidewalk Surfers

Since surfing has become such a popular sport on the West Coast UMass students have taken up its Atlantic contemporary—sidewalk surfing. In place of a surfboard they use a skate board, which is a piece of wood with roller skate wheels attached to the bottom.

One of the best surf areas used by these enthusiasts is the steep hill behind Brooks Dormitory which leads to the Orchard Hill Complex. They can be heard whizzing down this hill day and night, and, consequently, this has led to problems.

The first problem is a matter of safety. A combination of winding curves, trees standing close to the path, and the excessive speeds attained by these surfers coming down the steep hill have already resulted in the injury of a boy who was thrown against a tree. There have also been many close calls.

The second problem concerns the disturbance of non-surfers in the area. Very often the noise from the boards prevents students from either studying or sleeping, especially between the hours of ten and twelve p.m.

A simple solution to the problem would be for the surfers to practice the sport on the safer, smaller hills of the campus. This woud not only protect them from harm, but would also endear them to students whose interests differ from their own.

Censor The Collegian?

Editor's Note: The following is the first of a series of three editorials. The author of the series, Terry Stock, was formally News Editor of the Collegian.

The Collegian should be censored. Now isn't that a strange statement to come from the Collegian staff? Well, it might be, but we want to take you inside the heads of those who want to control us and show you how THEY think about things and why they want to control us for our own good—sort of.

To begin with, the Collegian is the only mass medium on campus whose primary function is not to amuse, but rather to supply information. Our radio station, WMUA, like most stations, exists pretty much for amusement, supplying occasional bits of information to keep up the image.

Yahoo is strictly amusement, and Caesura, aiming high into the artistic clouds, is supposed to supply some amusement but mostly intellectual stimulation.

Amusement, as long as it does not step on the dainty feet of those who have very stern and definite ideas of taste, won't be much molested, and and the intellectual pursuits of Caesura are so lofty that only a rat would attack them. But the Collegian is a medium of a different stripe.

Your college newspaper is run by students for students, and this simple set-up presents problems: As students, we tend to be barely past our teens—rash, hasty, immature. Further, our staff's aim is primarily to praise our student readers by telling them what is going on here and there.

Now if what went on around the campus were 100% wonderful and pure, the boys in South College would love us. Unfortunately, nothing is 100% anything, and so the plot thickens.

Our administrators, only a handful of whom get more than $250 a week paychecks, are out to build a great, famous, wonderful, Harvard-like University, chock full of prestige, glamor, tradition, and with a lovely fat budget and faculty members who are all PhD's, authors, researchers, and world famous to boot.

This isn't an easy job. It took Harvard nearly 328 years to do it, but we don't have until 2293 to become great!

And our administrators have problems: they have to wring money out of a legislature that is busy listening to the wants of ten thousand other people who want tax money too for cat hospitals, sewage disposal plants, pay raises, bridges, public toilets, police stations, highways, and jobs, to mention just a few of the many causes being pleaded on Beacon Hill each day.

Into this loud clamor of "gimme" steps our administration, a smile on its face, charts, graphs, and statistics under its arm, worming it way into some varnished chamber where the people's choices decide who will get how much for what.

If all is going smoothly back at the campus pond, if the research money is pouring in from Washington, if everyone is publishing like crazy and entitled to be called "Doctor", if the team is winning all its games, and if the nieces, nephews, sons, daughters, and friends of the politicians are at least given a chance to go to UMass and prove that a 220 on the College Boards doesn't mean everything, then the money might just come.

But let's suppose things aren't perfect. What if the food in the Commons sends students wretching to the infirmary or the administration tries to give the heave ho to a teacher who likes to teach and hates research? Nothing much happens if the news doesn't leak out—if the Beacon Hill crew doesn't find out.

And how would they find out such things? Through the press, of course, the collegiate press—us, the Collegian.

Remember, we are the only full-time outlet for the truth, and if we don't report it, chances are no one will.

So the administration has to throttle us, really they do. It's important that the image be untarnished as far as anyone knows. And who would seriously want to let some little, messy thing get in the way of Progress?

After all, we all want a bigger, bigger, bigger University with bigger and bigger dorms. don't we? We want a huge campus, a huge enrollment, TV teaching, and more lectures on tape, don't we?

So we should be grateful if the more mature, reasonable adults, the ones who have in mind the best interests of all of us from students and faculty to taxpayers and those yet unborn, take charge of our immature doings.

"The end justifies the means," Karl Marx pointed out, and control of the Collegian is indeed a small price to pay if we are spared waiting until 2293 for a really great University of Massachusetts.

Campus Chest Plans Annual Contributions

by Pat Petow

The University-wide 1964-1965 Campus Chest drive plans to contribute 30 percent of its proceeds to the United Negro College Fund. The New York based fund, established in 1944, has for members 33 Southern colleges and a Pennsylvania university; of these schools, 31 are undergraduate, one graduate, and one professional.

Contributions raised annually by the fund compose approximately one-tenth of the budgets of the members as well as offering scholarships under the Cooperative Intercollegiate Examination Program.

Up to 30 Faculty Fellowship Awards have been given annually since a 1959 General Education Board $300,000 grant: benefiting faculty of the member institutions, the program strengthens the graduate offerings by requiring the study at any one of the United Negro Colleges.

The work of Negro colleges has been particularly impressive before the recent advances in ending educational discrimination. Nevertheless, believing its services are still needed, the UNCF again seeks support. For an example, a 1959 Christian Century survey reported over 300 graduates of the 33 colleges were among Indianapolis Negro professionals.

A member of the New England Advisory Board of the UNCF, the late President Kennedy had donated his $1,000 (1957) Pulitzer Prize stipend for Profiles in Courage to the fund.

Focusing attention on where-the-money-is-going because the University community has demonstrated its concern and responsiveness, Campus Chest hopes that the donations received so far will be augmented.

UMass YR Issues Plea For Harmony

Fred Cenedella, president of the UMass Young Republican club, yesterday issued a plea for harmony of Young Republican clubs across the nation during a drive for new members here.

The statement called for an end "to the senseless bickering ever present in the Young Republican clubs across the country."

The plea for unity follows a similar joint statement by eight leaders of the splitting factions asking for "honest compromise without abandonment of fundamental principles" of the groups.

The UMass YR membership drive will end Thursday night with a speech by Elmer Nelson, Gov. Volpe's campaign manager and "Mr. GOP" in Massachusetts.

He will speak at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union.

Massachusetts Higher Learning Questions Willis Report Findings

Massachusetts institutes of higher learning, including UM and the eight community colleges, once solidly behind the Willis report, are considering pulling out.

They believe that the Willis Commission's original proposal for higher education has been so altered under attack by Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute and Lowell Tech that it is seriously impaired.

What has really upset UMass and the community colleges is the following:

1) A proposed board of higher education and a board of public school education, (appointed by the governor) of 11 members each, and an advisory council of 15 members, six of whom would be legislators. This new structure would be given considerable powers over all Massachusetts education.

2) Whereas the original Willis Report stated clearly that UM was to be the "sole state university." the wording has been changed to "sole general state university." UMass will no longer have sole control over doctoral. programs.

The key question has been why the Committee on State Administration made these changes, and why the Willis Commission agree to them. To some, the answer has been that the legislators have been under pressure from special groups, — S.M.T.I. and Lowell Tech at the upper livel, and the vocational and special education establishments at the lower, and they gave in.

In calling for the two new state boards of education, the Commission has given them more power than the present Department of Education. However, this would supposedly eliminate political pressures determining sites or curriculum of a state college and raise the standards of qualification in schools throughout the state. Those considering the immense cost of education feel Massachusetts should have state wide planning and standards.

A dissenting voice was raised by Dr. Kvaraceus in a paper devoted to education, prepared this year for the Tufts' Assembly. He contends that emphasis is lacking in the Willis study of seeking optimum standards in favor of emphasis for the raising of minimum standards.

John Lauritzen wanted further knowledge

He's finding it at Western Electric

When the University of Nevada awarded John Lauritzen his B.S.E.E. in 1961, it was only the first big step in the learning program he envisions for himself. This led him to Western Electric. For WE agrees that ever-increasing knowledge is essential to the development of its engineers—and is helping John in furthering his education.

John attended one of Western Electric's three Graduate Engineering Training Centers and graduated with honors. Now, through the Company-paid Tuition Refund Plan, John is working toward his Master's in Industrial Management at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. He is currently a planning engineer developing test equipment for the Bell System's revolutionary electronic telephone switching system.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, both educationally and professionally, we should talk. Western Electric's vast communications job as manufacturing unit of the Bell System provides many opportunities for fast-moving careers for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, as well as for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. Get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. And be sure to arrange for an interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Political Science Topic Planned For Lecture

Dr. William C. Havard Jr., chairman of the University's department of political science, will deliver a lecture tomorrow to the University community in conjunction with the annual induction of new members into the University chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honorary.

The topic of the lecture, to be delivered in the Colonial Lounge at 8 p.m. is "The Philosophical Underpinnings of the Current Controversy in Political Science".

Havard received his B.A. and M.A. at Louisiana State University where he was the department's chairman before coming to campus last year. He took his PHD at the London School of Economics. In addition, he has held teaching posts at Northwestern State University and the University of Florida.

A member of the American Society of Legal and Political Philosophers, Pi Sigma Alpha and Tau Kappa Alpha, Mr. Havard was a former research associate of the Louisiana Law Institute and was a senior Fulbright grantee from 1960-1961.

Among his published works are The Government of Louisiana (1958), Henry Sidgwick and Later Utilitarian Philosophers (1959), and The Politics of Misrepresentation (1962). The latter book was also co-authored by Dr. Loren P. Beth, professor of government at UMass.

NOTICE

NEWMAN CLUB

The Newman Club Choir Concert, under the direction of Mr. Gillis Hebert, will present "The Faure Requiem," on Mar. 28 at 3 p.m. in the Newman Center.

Caesura, the campus literary magazine, is still accepting applications from perspective board members. Any undergraduate or graduate students who wish to apply may pick up applications in the Franklin room of the Student Union and appear at an interview this Thursday night, at 8 p.m. in the Barnstable room. Bring applications with you.

German-Russian Department Plans To Establish Corridor

The German-Russian Department is planning to establish a German Corridor on Orchard Hill, starting next September the department recently announced.

This will be a unique opportunity for interested students in all fields to live together, speak German and to hear German spoken during a great part of the day, to initiate and engage in different cultural and social activities (such as German coffee hours, lectures about German literature, history and current affairs, German plays and movies, or other activities of their choosing).

Separate tables in the South Dining Commons are part of the plan, and it is hoped that a graduate student from Germany will share the life of the Corridor.

In order to establish this corridor, it is important that interested students commit themselves firmly to this venture by March 31. Mrs. Ehrlich of the German-Russian Department (Bartlett 272) will be available to speak to anyone wishing more detailed information, and to register those students who definitely wish to participate.

Sunday at 1 p.m. The code name for the operation for walkie talkie use was Exodus and it seemed most appropriate. Estimates of the numbers involved were from 7 to 10 thousand marchers, and 8,000 federalized National Guard troops. The march went eight and a half miles that first day and our departure from Selma was at the end of that distance. We were back on campus Tuesday.

By our presence we lent support to the morale of the Negro population there and let them know that they were not alone in their struggle. It was to protect us, the so called "outside agitators", that federal troops were there and as one local preacher put it, "in protecting y'all they are protecting us too." This I feel was our real purpose in Selma. In doing this, however, not one of us can say that he gave more than he got from the Negroes of Selma in teaching us to live together as citizens.

Fire In University Barn — Losses Valued At $45,000

by Gordon Davidson, Staff Reporter

A Deerfield barn belonging to the University burned Monday night, destroying some $30,000 worth of equipment and hay. Officials say that the fire was set, and an investigation is underway for the arsonist.

Two men were seen driving out of the barn area by a neighbor who was almost run over by the car and who heard an explosion soon afterward.

The car being sought by State Police is a blue and white 1956 Chevrolet station wagon.

The damage estimates does not include the 120 foot long barn, which would cost $15,000 to replace which Bernard Hilton, farm superintendent, says was not slated for replacement, contrary to previous reports.

Prompt action by firefighters saved a nearby tobacco barn, also belonging to the University. Grass fires were also extinguished.

The fire made such rapid headway that it was impossible to attempt to rescue the 25 tons of hay and straw and the equipment which included eight new $1,500 hay wagons.

The barn was part of 400 acres of land acquired by the university for experimental work by the College of Agriculture. Some experimental work is already underway there.

The site also contains another barn and a house.

Montgomery Response . .

tor, arousing Negroes who did not want to be aroused, vanished before my eyes each time I heard the word "Hi brother," or "sister."

Connected with this unity of the Negro community was the evident deepness of the concept of non-violence. The concept of non-violence is more than a high-flying principle. It rises in the hearts and actions of the Negro community in Montgomery. To be sure there are individual acts of violence. These acts, for the most part arise out of a profound anger—an anger which is understandable in the face of police brutality.

Yet despite the brutal Ku Klux Klansmen, deputized as sheriff's men, despite their canes, clubs and lassoes, the dominant and active group attitude of the Negro is one of non-violence.

"You are jackasses if you fight the police," said James Foremen of SNCC one day, and from the listeners came back the words, "That's right; listen, amen."

This is not to say that the concept of non-violence will always be so imbedded. One hears talk every now and then of those who say, "We've got to fight back." Despite this the attitude at this time is still that which Mahatma Ghandi initiated 20 years ago.

There is frustration, but there is hope. The Negro in Montgomery knows he is not alone, he knows that somewhere outside of George Wallace and the state troopers there are others both white and black who are willing to "march as the spirit says march."

HARRINGTON . . .

Harrington gave a cheer to the Kennedy and Johnson administrations for at last laying the problem on the table. The Appalachia program is only a beginning, as is the Medicare problem. Harrington expressed the feeling that these programs only scratch the top of the problem.

"The Economic Opportunity Act trains young children for skilled jobs, but still 17% of American youth cannot pass the reading test for becoming a Private in the United States Army." he said.

"IF WE ARE TO DEAL with the future we must redefine the meaning of work." Harrington proposed that we create new kinds through job simplification, meter maids and teacher aids.

Applause greeted a statement by Harrington that because school is hard work, we should "pay people for it."

In the not too far distant future technological works, the servile work, will be done by machines which will leave men time "for sports, the arts and the works of the mind."

Apollo Space Project Features Novel "Surveyor" Spacecraft

by Tom Donovan, Staff Reporter

With the Gemini project successfully completed yesterday, everyone is looking forward to the continued steps in manned space flight—Project Apollo.

One of the more fascinating features of the Apollo project, which is designed to land astronauts on the moon within the next ten years, is called the Surveyor spacecraft.

This spacecraft is actually a three - legged reconnaissance camera, deesigned to land "softly" on the moon and send back pictures at the rate of 1,000 per hour. These pictures will enable scientists to anticipate more accurately the conditions which will face Apollo astronauts when they land on the moon.

THE ONE-TON VEHICLE will land softly on the moon's surface with an impact force comparable to that of an earth bound parachutist. Upon landing, it will continue viewing the moon's surface. The first Surveyor will have a television camera which will observe the terrain and determine the texture of the surface. Scientists are still not certain whether the moon's surface is solid or covered with "moon dust."

Later versions of Surveyor are scheduled to have three cameras. One camera will take pictures during the approach while the remaining two cameras will take stereographic pictures after the leading.

THE LATER SURVEYORS will also have a number of innovations. They will be: a device to gather and photograph samples of the moon's surface; a miniature chemical laboratory to analyze any samples; instruments to measure moon quakes and micrometeorite showers; and television cameras which will transmit in color.

Surveyor's developers, Hughes Aircraft Co., has reportedly tested the vehicle's landing capabilities in everything from sand to unbuttered popcorn.

Drive To Raise Bail Conducted At Smith

A drive for funds is being conducted today on the Smith College campus to raise $500 bail money for five college students from the area jailed yesterday afternoon while picketing in Montgomery, Ala.

One Smith College professor who was arrested with the students provided $100 bail to free himself.

The students held are Amherst College seniors Frederick Kraii of Fairport, N. Y., Junius Williams of Richmond, Va., Amherst junior Marshall Bloom of Denver, Col., Amherst sophomore Frederick Aranow and Smith College senior Mary Judith Coburn of Ladue, Mo.

Also remaining in Selma from UMass are Dave Walsh and Bill First. It is not known if they are in custody.

The others were arrested yesterday afternoon when they were picketing with eight others in front of Montgomery city buildings.

City police told the group to get off the sidewalk and when they refused, arrested them.

Smith College English Prof. Paul Lauter, arrested with the group, provided his bail.

The drive for funds on the Smith campus is being directed by the assistant chaplain, Rev. Thomas S, Derr, Jr. He emphasized that all contributions should be made at once to free the students as soon as possible.

News of the arrests was learned at Smith last night in a telephone call from Smith senior Susan Herman. The drive to raise the necessary bail funds was started immediately after the call.

Selma Panel To Be Held Thursday

On Thursday evening at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium the Campus Religious Council will sponsor a panel discussion on Selma, The American Tragedy.

The panel will consist of Prof. Leonard of the history department, Prof. Gordon of the sociology department and two Amherst clergymen who, as of this printing, have not yet returned from Selma.

They are Father John Scott, University chaplain to Protestant students and the Rev. Mr. Cooper. Also present for comment and discussion will be Tommy MacLachlan and other University students back from Alabama.

Columbia Psychologist Speaks On Poverty

by Pat Petow, Staff Reporter

Dr. Martin Deutsche, a social psychologist at Columbia University, commenting that the two previous DVP lectures had clearly delineated the problems of poverty, proposed, as a desired instrument of attack, the "continuity of intervention" against this thing which has a "grip on our society."

BELIEVING THAT WE CAN change, or channel, the basic intellectual development of a child of poverty, Dr. Deutsche pointed out the inconsistency of special nursery school programs reversed by normal kindergarten and elementary school instruction. This handling should be met, he indicated, by a detailed kind of coordinated intervention if a "statistically-adequate effect" is to be forthcoming.

FOLLOWING HIM, DR. ROBERT J. LAMPMAN, a professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin, suggested the means of implementation: (1) filling the income gap and (2) accelerating poverty reduction by public assistance. He declared that most unemployment compensation, social security and insurance benefits go to the non-poor.

Dr. Lampman advocated increased social security insurance, a per-child "income-conditioning family allowances," and a general policy of "slanting existing programs" toward the poor in order to most efficiently fill the income gap and reduce poverty, keeping relevant other economic goals.

Introducing the concept of the sub-culture of poverty and defining its separation from the economic affects, Dr. Oscar Lewis, professor of anthropology at the University of Illinois, began his seven-minute statement. He observed that the strategy of counter-attack depended on which way povery was seen; in his opinion, the cultural conditions can be considered potentially more significant.

HE PRESENTED THE CASE for an attack on the cultural side, concluding that other nations, especially socialistic ones, would accuse Americans "of being crudely materialistic in the approach to the poor."

U.S. REP. JAMES G. O'HARA, who arrived late from the airport shortly after the program got underway, was the fourth panel member.

He declared that things can and are being done against poverty in the United States which he call an "essentially income problem." Because he considers its principal factor unemployment, he labelled any effort not directed ageinst unemployment "useless."

O'Hara enumerated three ways to fight the war: (1) provide greater job opportunities; (2) prepare workers for the jobs and establish an adequate placement program; and (3) strengthen the various services now in operation.

HE MENTIONED HIS AMENDMENT to this year's Manpower Retraining act which would allow those with a limited educational background to receive the training. In the area of providing better training and jobs, he suggested an additional two years' of public education

Editorial comment on Willis Ammendments.

Amendments Weaken Willis Report Bills

by Dan Glosband, Managing Editor

UMass forces are amassing to put the teeth back into the Willis Report bills. The bills had their strength sapped and their purpose diverted by two amendments which came out of the Joint Committee on State Administration last week.

The University and twenty of twenty-two state colleges committed themselves Wednesday to fight the powerful interests combined behind the "damaging" amendments. The original proposals, aimed at co-ordination of the Commonwealth's institutions of public higher education, would in fact be destroyed, and the hoped for co-ordinated concept forgotten.

Instead of the University being the "sole state university," it would become the "sole general state university." This change of function would pave the way for the two technological institutes to become universities of science and technology, in competition with UMass, and without the so-called coordination. They would be able to grant separate doctorate degrees, with the possibility of the proliferation of costs and second-rate degrees.

The second amendment would drop the four trustees representing the four state higher education groups from the Board of higher education, thereby making it a totally lay board. Representative David Bartley made an appropriate analogy at the SMTI hearings, "Have you ever heard of a plumbers board without any plumbers on it."

University administrators aren't the only ones taking an interest in the plight of House Bills 3300 and 3301. The freshman class of the University is circulating a petition in support of the bills, without amendments.

An idea of Robert Keough, Vice-President of the Class of '68, has blossomed into a student-supported movement.

The idea stemmed from an article in the Boston Globe, asking for support from UMass alumni. This led to the idea of support from the people who are more intimately concerned, the students. The movement became more urgent when the newly added amendments to bill No. 3300 were announced after behind-doors hearings.

Discussion with President Lederle, Dean Redfern and Dean Tunis followed, and the drive to obtain signed petitions was speeded up. The petitions, asking for the establishment of a board of higher education and in particular the securing of a one-university system with jurisdiction over doctrates, have been distributed to the dormitories, fraternities, and sororities. There also will be a booth in the Student Union Lobby Friday and Monday from 8-4 for the graduate students and the commuters.

The original idea was to either have a marathon run with 100 students running a mile apiece or a tandem bike with two students operating in order to carry the signed petitions to the State House. This plan after careful

UMass Picketers' Trial Delayed

by Peter Hendrickson News Editor

Three UMass students appeared in a New York City court yesterday to face charges stemming from a Friday "sit-out" demonstration protesting loans to South Africa from the Chase Manhattan Bank.

The trio arrived in New York to find that the hearing was postponed to April 30. They were three of the five UMass demonstrators charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest at the peak of the aftenoon picket protest on the steps of the bank.

Sid Finehirsh, President of Young Independents, Kathy Nolan and Donna Kahn reported that their lawyers are appealing the resisting arrest charge. They hope to only face the disorderly conduct charge which is but a city ordinance.

Finehirsh announced at a Young Independents meeting last night that Students for a Democratic Society is sponsoring a march on Washington April 17 to protest the war in Vietnam. YI is a local group of SDS. While in jail last Friday, Todd Gitlin, co-ordinator of the march, said that he expected 10,000 to come to Washington.

YI is also sponsoring political discussion groups on Thursdays at 11 a.m. in the SU. The tentative topic of next Thursday's discussion is Vietnam. The meetings are open to the public.

SELMA IN RETROSPECT

by Richard Danca Staff Reporter

"I didn't have to go to Selma because Selma came to me, just as it has come to all the people of the United States" said professor David Leonard last night at a panel discussion of the Selma situation.

Also speaking in the panel were Don Johnson, a junior, the Reverends Harold Cooper and John Scott of the University, and Dr. Leon Marx of Amherst College, who have all recently returned from Alabama.

The panel was moderated by Ken Hardy, president of the Campus Religious Council, which sponsored the discussion.

Johnson, who returned Saturday from Montgomery, Ala., where he was hit on the head by the butt of a policeman's whip, said "we have secured something at the price of pride and dignity."

Rev. Scott, leader of the UMass group that went to Selma, was impressed by the absence of an American flag at the Alabama state capitol and called Alabama "a fascist state where the state police are the storm troopers of an absolute dictatorship with no interest in an outside group the disenfranchised Negro."

Rev. Cooper explained federal protection as being there "in Selma and Montgomery because "we (white Northeners) were there." This, he said, "stands out blatantly."

Dr. Marx, who lectured at the all-Negro Alabama State college last Thursday, called what he saw "the most extraordinary example of un-reconstruction."

The discussion began with a capsule summary of recent developments in Alabama, highlighted by excerpts of Dr. Martin Luther King's stirring end-of-march speech "we are on the move now."

Pulitzer Prize Juror Defends Free Press

by Chis Hench

"No formal organization of internal or external control should be allowed to regulate a free press," said William Dwight, publisher of Holyoke, Greenfield and Concord newspapers.

Discussing problems of a free and responsible press with a U-Mass journalism class Wednesday, Dwight stated: "The federal government should not and will not regulate the press. The people have the right to know and the press has the responsibility to inform."

Dwight, a Pulitzer prize juror and a newspaperman from birth (his parents were publishers), believes that as long as the people can choose between the good and the bad newspapers, a free and responsible press will be guaranteed. The economic application of the survival of the fittest will act as the best stimulus for the improvement and responsible service of a free press.

"TO CONTROL THE EVILS OF SOME newspapers would be to smother the benefits of all free, responsible press. Mistakes can be corrected. If the freedom to make mistakes is denied, the press cannot serve and the people cannot be informed."

spoke as an experienced expert when he upheld the necessity for a free, autonomous press.

Good taste and self control by each newspaper are Dwight's answers to any suggestion of regulating the press. "The final judge of a newspaper's standards is the reader. If the people buy a newspaper, it is because it is giving them the news that they want in the form that they wish to read."

DWIGHT CONTENDED that even sensationalist, big-city newspaper serve a purpose. "If there were no sensationalist newspapers, a great many people would never read any news," he smiled.

GOVT. INTERNSHIPS

College juniors and seniors or those working in graduate schools, may apply for summer internships in state government, according to Commissioner of Administration John J. McCarthy. The eight week program starts July 5. Interns are paid $70 a week, and will be chosen on the basis of a competitive exam and interviews. A program is open only to Massachusetts residents.

Student Senate Gives Men's Area Judiciary More Needed Reforms

by Jim Foudy
Staff Reporter

As a result of Wednesday's Student Senate meeting, the Men's Area Judiciaries, as "subsidiary and assisting bodies to Men's Judiciary, shall have the power to try all violations of University regulations occurring within its own specified area."

Setting the number of board members at three seniors, three juniors and a sophomore, this bill, according to its proponent, John Greenquist (Thatcher), makes a necessary and "drastic change in Men's Judiciary making Area Judiciaries dependent on themselves and subject to appeliate procedures of the University.

IN A LETTER from the Yahoo editors to the Student Senate an objection was raised to the recent Yahoo poll conducted by the Senate without the permission of the Yahoo staff.

Commenting on the letter Senate Treasurer Joe Piecuch caled for "closer cooperation between the Senate and Yahoo," and announced that because of the desire for change expressed by the pol lthe Yahoo will discontinue expansion plans and print the regular three issues per year instead of the proposed four.

The Student Senate defeated a measure by Senator Piecuch to free Senate terasurers from menial work and allow them more time "to formulate policy and plan ahead."

Presently the treasurer can chair either the Finance or Budget committee. The bill would have made the Treasurer ex-officio chairman of both committees with a co-chairman appointed to each one.

Despite Senator Piechuch's call for a relaxing of routine duties in the light of the University's expansion, the opinion prevailed that, as Senator Bombardier (Gorman) said, "it would put too much inflexibility into the office of Senate Treasurer."

In other business, the Senate passed a $169 appropriation for the Rowing Association's purchase of eight second-hand oars and approved the $56,043 Collegian budget for 1965-66.

UMass-Boston Needs $1,600,000 To Open Doors In September

by Dan Glosband
Managing Editor

Action at the State House yesterday pushed UMass Boston over another hurdle and one step nearer to actual opening.

President Lederle, Treasurer Johnson and University Attorney Austin Broadhurst appeared before a House Ways and Means committee yesterday to press for the $1,600,000 needed to open the doors of UMass Boston to 1,000 students in September.

Speaking with the University administrators in favor of the rapid appropriation were Senate President Maurice Donahue, House Speaker John F. X. Davoren and a spokesman for Governor Volpe. No opposition was raised at the public hearing.

The hearing was precipitated by Governor Volpe's special message of March 22. "The urgency of the need for additional public higher education facilities of University caliber in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was dramatized in 1964 when the University was able to admit only 2,600 of over 10,000 qualified applicants; 7,400 qualified students were denied admission because of limited facilities," said Volpe.

Need for swift passage of the $1,600,000 appropriation was heightened by the fact that the Consolidated Gas Co., now occupying the building, will need four months to dismantle their facilities and leave.

Despite the hardship imposed by only two months of preparation time, the building could be operating in September, if funds are available immediately.

Concomitant to the University's requests was Governor Volpe's statement, "Accordingly, I recommend the enactment, prior to the enactment of the General Appropriations Act, of the (attached) measure, so that the University will be able to fulfill its commitment to provide college education for 1,000 deserving students this September."

The House Ways and Means committee agreed to take the measure under advisal.

Dr. Havard Addresses Society Initiation

by Don Boyd

"The behavioralists in political science take a position of naked realism". This was comment of Dr. William C. Havard, chairman of the government department, in a lecture delivered yesterday before a large group of faculty members, and undergraduate students attending the initiation of twenty three members in to the national political science honorary, Pi Sigma Alpha.

Mr. Havard distinguished three basic philosophical positions. The behavioralist or positivist school employs the methodology of the natural sciences. There men are "radical empiricists", Mr. Havard maintained.

The second position was that of transcendentalism or idealism whereby man is seen as "rising above his own self-awareness".

The sceptic, who confines his decisious of man to "convention" by historical empiricism was seen by Mr. Havard as being a possible mediating influence between the former two.

Undergraduates initiated into Pi Sigma Alpha prior to the lecture were Michael Basile, Alan Bernstein, Dennis Sullivan, Karen Garvin, Joel Gardiner, Philip Williams, Patricia Kelley, Fred Lazin, and Carol Ottaviani.

Also, Charles Rutstein, David Sheldon, Robert Weinstein, Gary Bombardier and Robert Skomro.

beyond high school and both increased coverage and minimums under the Fair Labor Standards Act. These measures, he concluded would make it possible "to at least ameliorate the conditions of poverty in this country."

In answer to a question from panel moderator, UMass Assistant Professor of Speech Jay Savereid, who had accurately predicted contributions of "genuine depth," the congressman remarked that "the poor are not only a minority but also a non-voting minority." Dr. Deutsche also commented that the juxtaposition of poverty and affluence "invades our explicit value system." The psychologist repeated his belief that "no singular strategy is going to work."

THE QUESTION OF WHAT TO DO to alleviate culture-poverty put to Dr. Lewis was answered by his suggestion, admittedly unlikely and "very expensive," that each social worker carry a case load of only five families and that settlement houses be reestablished.

Savareid, after the ninth question from the floor, ended the discussion with a remark that it was appropriate that this last program complimented again what had been clearly outlined by Mr. Harrington and Sen. Ribicoff in considering implementation.

In a final statement, Dr. Lampman urged the students, especially, to seek actual experience among the poverty-stricken areas because it is not a question involving economic effects — there is no great difference economically whether a minority is or is not poor—but of the extension of democracy. He echoed the fundamental thought of the last three days, that it is not a we/they matter but a concern for us.

UM Engineers Host Weekend Conference

The UMass Student Chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers (A.I.I.E.) will be host for the Third Annual Northeast Region A.I.I.E. Student Conference to be held in the UMass Student Union Friday and Saturday, March 26 and 27.

The program will begin on Friday with registration and social events, continuing Saturday afternoon wth an address by Dr. Lillian Gilbreth of "Cheaper by the Dozen" fame, and wind up Saturday night with the presentation of student papers and awards for outstanding papers at the Saturday evening banquet.

UMass will have two students presenting papers, they are: James Bloom '65 presenting "Waste Analysis As A Production Process" and Mitchell Lire '65 presenting "Plant Layout Under Extreme Restrictions."

Other schools attending the conference include Syracuse, Rhode Island, Northeastern, Cornell, New York, and Columbia Universities. David K. Isabelle '65, UMass, will be Master of consideration of the advice of Dean Redfern was postponed.

It was decided that the Executive Council of the Freshmen Class would carry the petitions to Boston via bus. At Boston on Thursday, April 1 the Executive Council will meet with Lieutenant Governor, Eliot Richardson; John Davoren, Speaker of the House; Kevin Harrington, Chairman of the Study Commission; Representatives Spumon and Thompson.

"The Exec. Council, which has received careful preparation and advice on the Willis Report, will discuss the bill and our demands intelligently and represent the University more than adequately," said Keough. The purpose of the trip is to show the legislators that students of UMass are deeply concerned wih the bill.

"Unlike Southeastern Mass. Technical Institute and Lowell Technical Institute, the representatives of this University will discuss the bill with the legislators rationally and intelligently," according to Keough. If the trip proves fruitless, then more drastic measures will have to be applied. The leaders of both houses understand this well.

Keough feels that "not only the legislators but the people of Mass. will respect the University more and take a greater interest in aid to higher education.' This increased interest and respect will assist us in obtaining the needed legislative action on the Willis Report.

was non-violence. Scott said that non-violence will not last forever, since "the Kingdom of God has not yet arrived."

Johnson said that non-violence has achieved something, but that it is not only the non-violence of Negro demonstrators. White participants in the Selma demonstration "introduce an air of legitimacy to the whole issue," since the police see that they are fighting more than "black men of skin and bone," but "a spirit, an ideology."

Leonard seemed to sum up the discussion as well as the entire Negro movement when he said, "Selma will not be the end and white America will not fall back into apathy because the Negro community will not let them."

War Is War

The United States has recently taken up the practice of supplying South Vietnam with non-lethal gas for use in the war against North Vietnam. There has been much criticism of this action on the part of the more idealistic people in our society.

They claim that "gas is gas" and the type is not important. These people are for the most part the same people who feel that the war in Vietnam is not our war. What they should realize is, that no matter whose war it was, it is now our war too. We have committed ourselves, and we must stand firm to that committment.

They are OUR planes which are doing the bombing, and OUR citizens who are being killed. We claim it is the Vietnamese who are fighting the war for political reasons only, and we should all realize that we are as much involved in Vietnam as we were in Korea twelve years ago.

The only justification for which we should look must come from ourselves. The opinion of others is only secondary. If we feel that our fight in Vietnam is a just one, than we should continue it despite what other countries might think.

We must take a rational view of the situation. If we are to accept the fact that we are fighting a war, we should not be repulsed by the methods of warfare. The gas which is now being employed in NO WAY violates the moratorium on the use of chemical, biological, and radiological (CBR) warfare, and is in fact more "humane" than most conventional forms of weaponry.

The gas is a combination of tear gas and vomit gas, which is included in many civilian police dept. armories. It is certainly not lethal, and does not even cause any permanent injury. It only serves to temporarily incapacitate the enemy thereby allowing the civilians to remain unharmed.

Our forces are not in Vietnam to watch what is going on. They are there to participate. Whether offensively or defensively they are there to participate. We should be prepared to defend their lives with every resource available to us short of an all out war which would involve other countries. We have committed ourselves to the cause of the South Vietnamese, and we are now obligated to act on that committment.

Spending at UMass

To the Editor of The Boston Herald:

Many persons associated with the University of Massachusetts are something more than irritated by Mr. Gallagher's carping column of March 5 regarding the matter of carpeting in the President's House at the University.

A working journalist has the obligation to get his facts straight, and in this regard Mr. Gallagher has been remiss. He might well have pointed out, for example, that the President's House at the University is not exclusively a private residence furnished to the President by the Commonwealth, but a public building used for official receptions of distinguished visitors to the campus and for gatherings of many faculty and student groups. Mr. Gallagher seems not to have been aware of this function of Mr. Lederle's residence.

The President's House was built in 1884. About 12 years ago the Commissioner of Administration and Finance decided that the flooring was in such poor condition that it would either have to be replaced or carpeting installed. His decision was that carpeting would be more economical. Because the carpeting installed at that time had become disgracefully threadbare under the feet of hundreds of users, the replacement carpeting about which Mr. Gallagher complains was purchased on the basis of open competitive bidding from the lowest bidder. In this regard, eight bids were solicited; only two were returned; consequently the University chose the lower of the two, in conformity with state procedure. Certainly there was nothing extravagant about it, as he implies.

President Lederle himself provides most of the moveable furniture used by the public in the house. One wonders whether Mr. Gallagher believes that the President ought to provide the permanently installed and necessary carpeting as well. To my knowledge no other state university president is asked to do that.

While I am discussing Mr Gallagher's coverage of University affairs, let me point out that a week or so earlier be reported that the cost to he Commonwealth of educating a student at the University of Massachusetts is $1876 per year. In point of fact the figure is $910, a sum which compares favorably with other state universities. And in still another column he discusses salaries of University officials and implies that these are out of line, and indeed excessive. The truth of the matter is that the salary structures of the principal institutions with which the University is in competition for professional talent still rank higher than those at our own University. Those of us who have responsibility for recruiting new faculty are painfully conscious of this fact.

The Boston Herald is to be commended for its generally statesmanlike editorial position on matters of public higher education in the Commonwealth. In this light Mr. Gallagher should be more careful in checking his facts.

Semantic Error

To the Editor,

In the last few weeks, much has been said, written, and indeed, much has happened regarding the so called "right to vote." Perhaps we should reflect for a few moments on the definition of this term. In other words, to quote some famous philosophers, Socrates, Marcus Aurelius, and Voltaire, "If you wish to debate with me, please define your terms." To begin with, what is the 'definition of "right." Much has been said about human rights, civil rights, property rights, states rights, etc. When people use this term "rights" they usually think of the Declaration of Independence where Thomas Jefferson wrote, "Men are endowed by their creator wits certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

First, it is obvious that the Creator endows men with rights. The existence of rights, therefore depends on the Creator not on other men or society.

What does the term pursuit of happiness mean? To some people happiness might be the chaining and beating of Negroes, Jews, Ukranians, or any other group. The pursuit of this type of happiness is certainly not a right!

What does the term "right to liberty" mean? Murderers and rapists should not be guaranteed the right to liberty.

Since we are having trouble defining "right," we will have trouble defining the "right to vote."

Most people agree that babies should not vote. Criminals, insane, and feeble minded people, also should not vote. Aliens are not permitted to vote in our elections. We understand then that all people do not vote. In other words voting is not a "right," but rather it is a "privilege." This privilege should only be conferred on those who demonstrate the intelligence and responsibility required to exercise it properly.

Much of what has been said and written of the recent action has not demonstrated intelligent responsibility. As was said during the campaign, "We need more restrained, intelligent, responsible action rather than hothead shooting-from - the - hip demonstration of our irresponsibility, lets stop and ask ourselves what we are doing.

A right has been defined as "that" which can logically be assigned to every human being in the Universe without contradiction and without exception.

Selma: A Step Backward

To the Editor:

In light of President Johnson's address to Congress, I think that we should be aware that a great step forward has been made. With passage of Johnson's proposed voter rights bill, Negro voting rights will be guaranteed. I think it is time for civil rights supporters to release some of the pressure which has been effective in bringing this new hope. Further demonstrations such as those continuing in Selma, Alabama at this time only serve to defeat the cause by irritating that majority support which the cause now enjoys.

If the object of demonstrations was to force the President to send federal troops into Selma, those people taking part should have thought twice. As Robert Kennedy stated, the President is not a dictator and cannot use federal troops "willy-nilly", nor should we wish him to do so. We elected Johnson to the Presidency because of his moderation, rejecting radicalism. Why should we now force the President to take radical steps in this sensitive issue?

Greek Week Invitation

To the Editor:

The Interfraternity and Pan Hellenic Councils invite the campus to Greek Week. This year the events of Greek Week have been arranged so that more of the campus may take part in enjoying these activities.

We would like to invite the campus to the Interfraternity Sing on Monday night and to the Swimming Meet at Boyden on Wednesday evening. The event, which we hope no one will miss, is the all new Greek Olympics which will include the exciting Chariot Races and the colorful pageantry.

To climax this fantastic week we have planned a spectacular Sunday Concert at Curry Hicks Auditorium. At this concert we will have Mary Wells, Little Anthony and the Imperials, the Shangrilas, and the Coasters plus that all new group the "Street Walkers". We hope that this Greek Week will be enjoyable for the whole campus.

Foreign Students Rediscuss Ideas

After they had been interviewed on Monday the 22nd of March, by a reporter from the Collegian, Nguyen Dung and Pineau Jean thought that it would be interesting to see what they had said. But they were far from knowing how revealing an experience it would be to read the article. Both learned a great deal about themselves, feel very grateful for it, and are eager to express their warmest thanks.

First of all, but not least important, Nguyen rediscovered how to spell his name, which a long absence from Viet Nam had made him forget. Regarding the matter itself, both learned that they had solutions to propose, which filled them with joy. They always had thought, as foreigners, that their partial knowledge of the racial issue in the United States made them unqualified to suggest a solution for a problem which competent and powerful men have tried to solve without success yet. Pineau Jean, furthermore became acquainted with a new approach he developed concerning the resolution of political problems. The method, which he formulated unconsciously, consists of trying to be as "subjective" as possible (quote of a "quote"). He also learned that he was in fact a racist which does not satisfy him overly, nor is Nguyen satisfied by his newly discovered craving for the "atmosphere" and the "emotion" provided by life in the southern states.

There would be a number of other details, important and less important, which could be pointed out. Most of the things Nguyen and Pineau are supposed to have said, do not agree with their ideas, whether because they have been separated from a necessary context or because of confusions in the reporter's mind between words as different as "objectivity" can be from "subjectivity" or "fault" from "responsibility".

If the aim of an article entitled UMass Foreign Students Discuss Civil Rights and Racial Unrest be to offer an exotic display of opinions, it has certainly achieved that purpose. If it happens not to be such, whoever is to be held responsible for the article perhaps should have tried, in professional terms, "to have a good understanding of Pineau and Nguyen's points of view in order to be less subjective".

A "Better Broad Bureau" Needed To Protect UMass Men From Teases

To the Editor:

In reference to the tease, I think that Barb B. and Andrea Teacher are slightly mistaken if they think that they can find a worthwhile relationship with a tight sweater and a "swinging derriere." Sure these features will attract males, but they will have only one thing on their male minds, sex.

A guy looking for a worthwhile relationship, perhaps someone he could fall in love with, won't turn to the sexy girl who looks like she's everybody's action. She's for the guy on the prowl. For a steady girl he wants a relatively decent girl who is "just herself." For if a girl traps a guy with one of her acts, he is likely to be disappointed when he discovers what she is really like. Girls with real merit will attract guys with this merit alone, without putting on an act.

These teases shouldn't kid themselves by thinking that they're attracting a guy for a worthwhile relationship when they're advertising something else. In other words, they're trying to justify something that can't be justified.

W. Blackwell '67
J. Amato '67

To the Editor:

In reply to Miss Barb B.'s question, "What do UMass male expects honesty. It is true that the you expect?", I would have to say that basically the girl with the "sexy" appearance tends to attract the greatest number of admirers; but it is not the girl herself that attracts, rather it is her "sexiness" that draws the crowd.

Bearing this in mind, I find it hard to understand how a girl who uses her body to attract is so affronted when her body becomes the main attraction.

There is little doubt that a girl can be attractive without being "sexy"; and there is also little doubt that a girl who wants a "worthwhile relationship" without sex will not find it by advertising her "sexiness".

The consumer is protected from false advertising by the Better Business Bureau. Perhaps what we need at UMass is a "Better Broad Bureau" to protect the campus from "teases".

Tasteless Drivel?

To the Editor:

The 'tasteless drivel' condemned in Friday's issue of the Collegian by Mr. Hewitt and Mr. McKinstry was chosen by the students: through their interaction with their dining counselors, through their responses dropped in a Commons suggestion box, and by an informal poll conducted by the person responsible for the tapes now in use.

The 'tasteless drivel' repetoire includes: Roger's 'Victory at Sea' album, Gould's 'Moonlight Sonata', Clebonoff's 'Songs From Great Shows', movie themes from Exodus, West Side Story, and Goldfinger, works by '101 Strings,' 'Boston Pops', Mantovani, Glenn Miller, Frankie Carle, and others.

Even a 'free, democractic institution' cannot please all the people all the time, I guess.

Peter Utz '67

Improvement

To the Editor:

We would like to note that our letter, which appeared in the March 19, 1965 issue of the Collegian, was written more than two weeks before it actually appeared in print. During that time a most miraculous change was wrought at the dining commons—in the music, not the food."

Far from being drivel, "Goldfinger", "Exodus", "And I Love Her", et al., represent a great leap forward. This is not Muzak music and the grounds for our complaint are now non-existent. Indeed, we feel that the dining commons should be commended for its newly acquired taste in music.

Individualism

Editor's Note: The author of this column, Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials concerning the differences between American and European students.

It will be my wardrobe; sophisticated, expensive, unique, different. (Try harder).

My car then. Body work, the make, the chrome, the letters on my back window. You know, something with finesse, something that will go big. (Try harder).

My house; the best architect, rather sorry on the price; beautiful interior; novel exterior, the works. (Try harder).

My friends; they will do it. Bearded, on the "beat", the bohemian type; down with the World, up with our ideas (seen any lately?), really unique in everything, Individuals. (Try harder).

My spirit; that's it, I've got you! My intellectual endeavors, my successes in the world of the ideas. Books, lectures, Art, CULTURE. That's how I'll be different: a REAL Individual. (That's enough Sisyphus of my century; that's enough. Don't forget, life is short.)

• • • •

Tragic that ordeal to uniqueness. The struggle to reach that something, to be THE Individual, the different, the "freed" from the mass.

And what are the ways, friend? They are all as old as man himself. Others have been handsome and beautiful; many have been rich and famous; quite a crowd poses in the pantheon of the world of ideas.

To try to be "different" (oftentime in the subconscious attempt to be attractive), that's what it means to be an Individual!

What an irony. Using every means made available by Society, to excell and thus be different, unique, individualistic.

But if that's the case (and reality apparently so indicates), what's the use of being different? Don't the means man usually employs in his struggle for individualism, exclude by definition based on their very nature and quintesance any hope for the achievement of that troubling human state: Individualism?

It's hard, boring, pathetic maybe, for a man to sit down and think in the simple terms of "know thyself," esoterically, not through the eyes of others.

If so many methods, so many and varying modes to the glory of being an "individual" seem fatal and ineffective, then maybe one should sit down and try—for as long as a lifetime—to come in grips with his own existence.

And when one knows himself, one necessarily knows that it's only "He" that can be HIM, and nobody else can be "Him".

Man might be able then, to live with peace and ease in his society, in America, China, Greece, Russia, because he will know that he is in peace with his own Self; he will have come in grips with his own existence.

We had enough of that struggle for being different; an Individual, through societal, outward manifestations.

Rocky Vetoes Free Tuition

ALBANY, N. Y. — New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller has vetoed a measure to establish a policy of free tuition at the City University of New York. In vetoing the legislation, Rockefeller said the New York City Board of Higher Education should retain power over the tuition policy at City University and its units, not the legislature.

In a statement on his action Rockefeller said, "The proponents of this bill, in now asserting the right of the state legislature to fix tuition at zero, could hardly deny the legislature the prerogative to mandate tuition at some other level in some other years."

Rockefeller said that the slow expansion of City University and its high admission standards "has operated to preclude many deserving students from obtaining a higher education."

"If the New York City Board of Higher Education wishes to continue its so-called free tuition policy, I certainly will not dictate another policy to it, Rockefeller said. "But the effect

Pusey Cites Change In Education

CAMBRIDGE — The idea of General Education is changing; and Harvard's President Nathan M. Pusey recently gave this account of new views of the 20-year-old program emerging in current faculty discussions to the Board of Overseers in his annual report:

"It is clear that the faculty's present conception of General Education is unlikely to be stated in the terms which appealed in the immediate wake of World War II. Then the presumably shared values of Western civilization understandably occupied a much larger central place on the stage of thought than they do now, and far less attention was accorded non-western civilizations. Also the historical seems then to have been almost the only approach deemed suitable for general studies.

"Now non-Western studies, and even more obviously science, have acquired increased importance for all men, and so too have the arts, including the practicing of art. And the relevance and importance of a variety of intellectual methods are recognized. In the meantime, a special aim of General Education seems to have become to encourage interdisciplinary studies.

"It is a personal hope of mine that the early, almost deferential regard for the values of Western civilization which

by Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

In plain English it means: "Who knows?"; and that's a sensible question, I think.

Sex, sex, sex, (I thought I'd mention it!). Check the movies; read the literature; hear the conversations on College campuses; pick the magazine of your choice (Like the playmate?).

Sigma Epsilon Xi, as real in everyday affairs as bread and butter. A controversial subject; provocative, bewildering, mystifying, troubling young and old, men and women: SEX!

And only to think that the loss of Eden would make—you know who—more sensible. O tempora, a mores. Has it ever stopped really, has it ever ceased being what it is? Depressed, suppressed, jeopardized, prohibited and yet always coming to the surface, as a balloon that you press into water in vain . . .

• • • •

IT'S A GREAT NATION! You are a marvellous people! Great experimenters, never ceasing to investigate, to explore, to criticize, to analyze in an attempt to understand. But, "Chi Lo Sa?".

The conflicting ideologies, the "pro" and "con" arguments, the very subject of sex, is not something novel to me, a foreigner.

What is novel, and strikingly so though, is the simple fact that the whole approach is strange. "Sex revolution in America" it has been termed by authorities and laymen alike; and they can claim followers in "pro" and "con" from the population as well as the intelligentsia. The subject of sex though, is a sui generis reality. It cannot be argued in an objective, rational manner; it cannot claim followers within the detached populus. Its very nature requires involvement, subjectivity.

Yet it's easy to "miss the boat" when you make it a subject matter of ethics, when you analyze it and its effects in terms of good and bad; this, in my opinion, will get you nowhere, unless you specify: GOOD for these reasons; BAD because of these.

I hesitate to "stick my neck out" offering a solution to the problem of SEX in America today; not because I am afraid, simply because I don't have any, I don't know of any: "Chi Lo Sa?"

Personal experiences of more than four years at Colleges in America, and my participation in its Culture (marginal though it may be) have driven me to two main conclusions:

FIRST, lack of adequate sex education in the home and the school, combined with lack of understanding between the parent and the child, leaves the latter "free" to explore, investigate on his own; should the adolescent "burn" himself or herself while indulging in this unguided (free) play with the fire, the lack of rapport with the parents will eliminate any proper consolation, and future guidance.

Thus, the little wingless lightfly, will venture into life creating around it a false facade of rationalizations that will serve as justifications for an act which is in reality so controversial (Church & Social Ethics vs. Hollywood, Playboy et al.).

SECONDLY, life in an impersonal mass society is unbearable for the individual. The man and the woman of talent, gifted with the ability of introspection can struggle along the paths of the existential predicament. . . .

But life on a College Campus, or anywhere else for that matter, is a lonely affair. Plato was one of those who saw that as a sexual being, man is half a being, divided and incomplete, a being who longs to overcome the separation of existence by identifying with another.

For most, the best means of identification is SEX. It's the act that fills the boredom of a school or work week and it does so with "pleasant" experiences.

But as such it becomes an end in itself; a temporary salvation, a negation of the inexorable today and tomorrow. That is where the BAD lies. Used in that manner, it necessitates hypocrisy, falseness, procreates remorse, trauma, disgust (and possibly more Homo Sapiens). Whose fault is it? The SOCIETY's, I think. And Society is just the men who comprise it. Society does not prohibit sex with austerity, and it does not approve it wholeheartedly. Why? Well, maybe simply because no generation has taken a stand on it that was very effective. Yesterday's adolescent experimenters are today's parents. And perplexed College students of my generation, will be tomorrow's parents.

Though the experiences from Sex can be traumatic, yet the approach to the subject, was, is and "Chi Lo Sa?" may remain wishy-washy.

And I can't see why people could get surprised when they read the controversial articles on "The Sex Revolution in the U.S."; why they search for a single answer, a standard guideline.

LIFE IS A LONELY battle; and the approach to sex, though "no man is an island. . ." is a personal choice. One thing could be done, however, and that's to keep the adolescent from independent experimentation until he reaches an age in which he or she can make a deliberate rational choice, according to his abilities. Can this be done? I think so; it was done in my culture, with the provisions of legal prostitution for the male, and a good internationalization of the female role by the female (a role praising chastity).

You may smile, you may get indignant citing the "effects" of such an "unjust" system for the individual. That's all right with me. I only said it was done this way in Greece, I didn't say it was better than America's approach.

I can recall though that I do not remember any great "Sex revolution" going on there, yet.

What's best, then? "Chi Lo Sa?", fellow humans...

SEX (at UMass)

By Mike Shuman

It's Saturday night, and those unfortunates who don't have dates are pouring over their notes in the lounge. Suddenly, the silence is broken as Joe College comes bursting into the room, dying to tell of his latest experiences with Teresa Tuff, UMass co-ed. Notes are forgotten, and eyes bulge; lips are wetted, and fingers fidget, as Joe commences his blow-by-blow description of the Dionysian delights of the evening. Even Havelock Ellis hasn't heard of some of the high-voltage activities Joe took part in this evening. Others wander in from their dates, and the crowd swells with more guys, eager to hear of the night's debaucheries.

Finally, at some dim hour in the morning, the bull - session breaks up; if you can call it a bull-session, because Joe did all the talking. That, people, is the UMass tragedy. Teresa Tuff is now Teresa Tramp in the eyes of an entire corridor, or house, or whatever. And Joe College? He's the Toast of the Town — Don Juan, Casanova, and King Kool, all in one package. He has spent a beautiful evening; not on the date—but basking in his unearned, dubious limelight.

Some guys might have been telling the truth, in every gory detail, but not Joe. He's NATO: No Action, Talk Only. He probably didn't touch Terry, but who can prove he didn't? Joe feels terribly inferior as a man, and the admiration of other men, gives him quite a charge. Score at the end of the evening . . . .

JOE'S EGO - 100, TERESA'S REPUTATION-0. But these are only temporary effects; few realize how far off the tremors will be felt.

Teresa Tuff might never know of this conversation, except for Joe's friends. who inevitably take her out, hoping to get their grubby paws on some of those supposed goodies. She'll eventually figure out why all these guys think she's "that kind of girl", and she'll be badly-hurt. Her reputation might not be ruined, but on a campus where reputation is so highly prized, her name is several notches lower.

Besides this damage, one more case history will be added to the overwhelming pile and girls will be just a little bit more hesitant, a bit more cautious on dates. Teresa's friends will be more careful as to the degree of their liberalness. So What? I'll tell you what! What about the Terry's? What about the ones who've been scratched or scrapped by the Bachalanian fantasies of NATO's? These guys just mount up more and more distrust between the sexes, and make SEX all the more unhealthy, all the more dirty. These girls will find it all the harder to feel really at ease with a guy—sex or no sex.

Romanticism

By Jeff Greenfield
Collegiate Press Service

Spring is coming, and with it comes the irritating, useless pests known to mankind: locusts, mosquitoes, and campus romantics.

There are fortunately cheap efficient counterforces against the insect kingdom. But as far as I have been able to determine, no one has yet managed to find a painless yet lethal means of disposing of those insufferable creatures whose only claim to significance is that they feel deeply. For those of you who retain an archaic reactionary admiration for such departed virtues as balance, reason, and sanity, I offer this guide to romantics.

1—Note the girl who walks sideways twisting her body in uncontrollable turns and sweeping her arms low to pluck a flower or piece of grass or leaf or weed, smile wistfully, and place said flora in her hair. Run away from this girl. Quickly. If you do not you will be buying her coffee and listening to her stories about her Relationships.

2—This is the second sure sign of romanticism. Relationships. Romantics don't know anybody; they have Relationships, which are Evolving, Dissolving, Clarifying, or being Redefined. What this means is she wants to sleep with him but is afraid, or has slept with him and is sorry, or doesn't want to sleep with him but thinks she should want to, or he made a pass at her. A Fulfilled Relationship means she is pregnant.

3—Romantics are drawn as lemmings to the sea (or whatever metaphor suggests compulsion to you) to the Children's Books. These books are about the size of postage stamps, are about 30 pages long, have simplistic drawings of wide - eyed children holding daisies, teddy bears, dolls, and cookies, and contain on each page a sentence, such as "a friend is someone you like," or "love is very nice," or "people should be nice to each other," or "home is warm." There is a difference between these Profound Truths Which Only Children Know and the readers you had in third grade. The difference is that your third grade reader had ten times as many pages. The children's stamp books sell for a sweet, Profoundly Simple four bucks a throw and are so common among Romantics that they serve as the medium of exchange, given in fetching gift wrap. The writers earn enough money to buy real books. That is another Profoundly Simple Truth.

4—Romantics are People Watchers. All of them will tell you that they are really People Watchers. This means they stare out the window at people, bringing to this the Inner Truths which they have learned during their Relationships. This also means they do not get around to learning about such base trivia as politics, social change in the world, or their school assignments. They are watching people. In New York City people watching is called Loitering, and is punishable by a $50 fine or ten days in jail.

5—Romantics wade in fountains, look at the Moon, and take long walks at night. They wade in fountains because that is what Romantics do. They have read about it in books and seen the

Debators To Be Heard On Radio

The University of Massachusetts Forensic Society will be heard on "Campus Challenge" Monday night, March 29, at 10 p.m. on WNYC radio station, New York City.

"Campus Challenge" is a special radio series which pairs the top debating teams in the East against each other in cross examination debate rounds.

Every week the previous winner remains on the show to face a new opponent and to debate a new proposition. This week U-Mass meets Pace College of N. Y. The proposition to be debated is "Resolved, that news media hurt the cause of justice by publicizing cases before trials are completed."

UMASS WILL TAKE the affirmative side of this debate. Representing the Forensic society will be Mike Farrell who is recognized as one of the best debaters in the East, and Marshall Goldberg who won a trophy earlier this year at Pace College Debate Tournament.

WMUA will rebroadcast the hour long debate on Thursday evening, April 1, at 7:30 p.m.

IN OTHER DEBATE NEWS, last weekend at St. John's College of N. Y., the Forensic Society finished in seventh place with an 8-8 record in the District 8 Eastern Regional championships. District 8 is composed of all colleges in New England, New York and Pennsylvania.

After the tournament was over the competing teams unanimously voted to hold next year's Regional Championship Tournament on the Univ. of Mass. campus.

Newman Club Hosts Fairfield Univ. Pres.

The president of Fairfield University will be the featured speaker at the annual Communion breakfast of the Newman club this Sunday.

The Very Reverend William C. McInnes, S.J., will speak at the breakfast to be held in the North Dining Commons at 9:15 a.m. Mass for those attending will be at 8 a.m. in the Newman Center. Parents from distant parts of the state may attend the noon Mass at the Center.

Very Rev. William C. McInnes, S.J. President of Fairfield Univ.

A HIGHLIGHT OF THE Newman Club's year-long program, the breakfast provides an opportunity for members, their parents and Catholic faculty members to meet in an informal setting. Tickets are available from dormitory representatives or at the Newman Center office.

At the communion breakfast, Monsignor David J. Power, chaplain to Catholic students at UMass, will present awards to Newman club members who have given outstanding service to the club during the year. To be presented are the UMass Newman Club Silver Platter award, the National Cardinal Award, the National Cardinal Newman Honor Society Award.

Father McInnes is the sixth president of Fairfield University.

A former dean of Business Administration at Boston College, Father McInnes served as a captain in the U. S. Marine Corps in Korea.

Caesura Sets New Rules; Final Deadline Announced

Due to the flood of material for Caesura's deadline Wednesday, March 31, the editors of the UMass literary magazine have announced new and more stringent regulations concerning submissions for the magazine.

Under the new rules, only students in the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes and graduate students may submit material. Content of the material to be submitted has also been limited to art, prose, drama, poetry, fiction, non-fiction, parables, prose-poems and essays.

THIS ISSUE'S "Character of America — 1965" section is intended to provide creative students on campus with a specific goal toward which to aim in producing creative works. The deadline for the supplement is the same as that for the regular issue, March 31.

Because of the difficulties involved in handling late manuscripts, the Caesura staff asks all contributors to respect Wednesday, March 31, as the FINAL deadline. Manuscripts submitted later cannot be assured consideration for the Commencement issue.

Freshmen Honored

Freshman women students will be initiated on next Sunday, March 28, into the National Scholastic Honor society, Alpha Lambda Delta. The eligibility requirement is 3.5 average with a full load of courses.

They are:

Felisa V. Alagar, Nancy L. Bergsma, Carole A. Blonder, Linda G. Chalmers, Susan A. Colli, Joanne Crooker, Patricia A. Davenport, Elizabeth A. Draper, Maryann C. Drega, Theresa A. Falco, Lee A. Sophomores...

Here's what the new 2-year Army ROTC program means to you

A new Reserve Officer Training Corps program permits selected college sophomores to be commissioned as Army Second Lieutenants in two years. You can do this by:

1. Completing a special 6-week summer camp between your sophomore and junior years.
2. Completing the 2-year Advanced Course at any school offering the ROTC program.

What are the benefits of Army ROTC training?

- Management training for success in civilian or military life.
- $40 per month pay while attending the Advanced Course, plus uniforms; pay and paid travel for summer camps.
- Eligibility for free flight instruction at selected schools leading to a private pilot's license.
- A commission as an Army officer, with all of its accompanying benefits, including higher income, greater opportunity for advancement and officer status.
- The personal satisfaction that comes from knowing you're trained to assume leadership responsibilities.

These benefits will put you a step ahead of other college graduates and will pay off for the rest of your life. You owe it to yourself to investigate these new opportunities.

For complete information, see the Professor of Military Science at your school, or send the coupon below.

U.T. To Present Romulus

The University Theatre will present Duerrenmatt's Romulus April 1, 2, and 3, in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. The play will be directed by Prof. Doris Abramson of the University Theatre Staff and the Department of Speech.

In an interview on Tuesday, Miss Abramson discussed the production: "I was in Switzerland in 1959 when I first read a couple of Friedrich Duerrenmatt's plays in German . . . though I missed the New York production of Romulus, I had seen The Visit, and I just knew that Duerrenmatt was my kind of playwright."

The original play is not available in straight translation for use on the American stage. Miss Abramson did secure the rights to the Gore Vidal adaptation, however.

The adaptation has presented some problems, but Director Abramson has solved most of them. As she puts it: "I find after living the Vidal script for a few weeks that it wears better than I had thought it would at first."

She commented that Romulus had been selected as part of the University Theatre season because of the excellent contrast it provided to Julius Caesar, produced several weeks ago.

Shakespeare's serious treatment of emperor Julius Caesar is parodied in Duerrenmatt's handling of the last of the Roman emperors, Romulus.

Miss Abramson described the play as "not unlike a Shaw play, a play with a message that is all but buried in witty lines. I keep thinking of Arms and the Man, partly because both playwrights take a look at patriotism and point out how distorted a view of life can result from too much flag waving.

"I think, too, of Giraudoux's Tiger at the Gates, especially in the third act of Romulus, when Romulus and Ottoaker, the Teuton leader, confront each other and find they have a great deal in common. It is reminiscent of Hector and Ullyses meeting at the end of Tiger, though their dialogue is in a more Shavian vein."

She spoke enthusiastically about the cast and its ability to work well together. "The cast delights me. They show great interest in each other's improvement as rehearsals progress. They talk about the ideas in the play and they make imaginative contributions in terms of stage business.

"Larry Wilker, who is playing Romulus, acted for me when he was a freshman. Since then he has gone on to do a lot of acting for Directors Catalano and Mahnken. He will be long remembered for his low comedy role as Mr. Puffy in Mr. Catalano's Streets of New York.

Doris Abramson, Director of UT's ROMULUS, with Tom Kerrigan (Zeno), Larry Wilber (Romulus), Richard Guerra (Archilles) and Eleanor Caplan (Vula).

"Now he has a chance for high comedy, and he has made the switch very well. He is supported by veteran actor Tom Kerrigan as Zeno, by his wife, Julia, played by Eleanor Caplan, by two old "characters" named Pyramus and Achilles, Ken Feinberg and Richard Guerra."

Miss Abramson has secured the services of New York musician Gene Benton to compose the indidental music needed for the production. Mr. Benton some years ago composed the music used in Oscar Mandel's Island which was presented by the University Theatre in cooperation with the Massachusetts Review. The music for Romulus will be played by a brass octet from the University Band under the direction of conductor Jenkins.

In closing, Prof. Abramson mentioned an informal talk on Monday, March 29, at 8:00 p.m. in the Bartlett Faculty Lounge, by Prof. Murray Peppard of the Amherst College German dept.

Mr. Peppard, who teaches Duerrenmatt, will talk about the author's "comedies."

New Ed. Courses Lead To Jr. College Teaching

In cooperation with the Community Colleges of the area and various academic departments, the School of Education this fall plans to offer a new program leading toward teaching in community colleges (two year colleges).

The program calls for approximately thirty-nine credits of course work to be taken in two semesters and one summer school and comprising approximately twenty-four credits in the teaching area and fifteen in professional courses.

The campus course program is then followed by a paid internship in a community college, the remuneration being either one-half or all of an Instructors salary depending on the amount of teaching. Successful candidates will be awarded the Master of Arts in Teaching.

CANDIDATES WILL BE SELECTED by a committee composed of Community College Presidents and professors from the School of Education and various academic fields. A cumulative average of 3.0 is desired and candidates will be selected from only those fields where vacancies are expected to occur in a year or two in the Community Colleges.

It is expected that a candidate selected by a particular President will do the internship in his institution and if this is successful that an appointment to that staff will be waiting.

Seniors who are interested in this program should contact Assistant Dean Ralph Pippert of the School of Education for further information.

Campus Chest Drive Ends

The annual Campus Chest drive came to a close yesterday. For the past three weeks, representatives of various campus organizations have been soliciting funds from students and faculty, to establish a scholarship fund and contribute to the World University Service and the United Negro College Fund.

Campus Chest is in the process of becoming the University's only charity organization. It is planned that in future years all organizations desiring money for charitable purposes will petition the Campus Chest for such funds.

This year, plaques will be awarded to the men's and women's dorms contributing the largest amounts of money to the drive.

movies and by God they are going to have a Meaningful Experience if it means double pneumonia. This is the way you get to Know Yourself and didn't Socrates say "Know Thyself?" He did, and that is the real reason why they gave him Hemlock.

6—Romantics do not have dates. I knew one Romantic who never had a date — he had Experiences (this is the first step toward a Relationship). Every time he had a date I'd say, "How was your date, George?" He would smile. "It was surrealistic," he said. He is the only guy in the world who ever had 73 consecutive surrealistic Experiences. A surrealistic Experience is when you make out on your first date. The date is called a Soul-Mate. That means she might let you go to bed with her.

7—A Romantic is much too busy to make any social commitments, to understand or participate in the political dialogue, or expend any energy in making the world a better place to live; he is busy learning about himself. The lower animals who are so occupied are called Parasites, and man has spent a great deal of his time trying to rid himself of these useless animals. Pity he didn't start a bit higher on the tree of life.

Dr. Tinder, New UMass-Boston Prof. Speaks On American Conservatism

by Jim Foudy
Staff Reporter

"American conservatism is 19th century liberalism . . . an individualism which believes that the free market regulates human relationships."

Speaking before a large audience Tuesday, Dr. Glenn Tinder, former member of the University's Government Department and recently appointed faculty-member at UMass-Boston, expressed this view of the American conservative movement, one which he feels "isn't going anywhere."

Tinder placed present conservatism on a political spectrum with the classical conservatism of Edmund Burke to its right and 20th Century liberalism to its right—a 19th Century liberalism which holds to free interplay of market and a laissez-faire policy of government economic activity.

Dr. Tinder attributed the "plight" of the conservatives to two possible causes.

He suggests that the American right has been "too closely identified with the classical conservative philosophy which expresses mans inability to change the social order or direction of history . . . a philosophy which does not suit our times."

Dr. Tinder commented that "we are living in a time which demands political creativity, and this is something the conservatives should realize."

Secondly, Dr. Tinder suggests that the right review their role as critics of liberalism remembering their task to challenge policies and ask "where are we going." "If the conservatives give up this 19th Century hostility, what is left?"

Mr. Tinder put forth four aspects of conservatism which he feels the American movement needs to learn:

1. prudence—desire to size up political proposals

2. decor—sense of order in which things ought to be accomplished

3. respect for the past

4. feeling for the authority of private property.

Faculty "teach in" Staged At Columbia University

Something new in demonstrations was tried at Columbia University last night—an all-night faculty "teach-in".

The midnight-to-dawn lecture marathon in Columbia's McMillin Theater was organized to protest United States policy in Viet Nam. Hundreds of teachers and students from other colleges in the New York area took part. held the first demonstration on

The University of Michigan March 24. About 30 more are planned at colleges and universities across the nation such as Harvard, MIT, Yale, Brandeis, Wisconsin and California.

A spokesman for the Columbia "Ad Hoc Teaching Committee on Viet Nam" said it was formed because those on it "believe that further discussion of the dangerous situation in Viet Nam is needed."

The spokesman said, "we expect the program to turn into a debate, as there are varying opinions on American involvement in the war."

FOREIGN STUDENTS

Foreign students are informed that applications for the 16 Foreign Student Tuition Waivers, awarded annually by the Advisory Board for Foreign Students are available in the Office of the Foreign Student Adviser, E-14 Machmer Hall. Current holders of these waivers must re-apply if they wish to be considered for the 1965-1966 awards. Deadline for receipt of these applications is April 15, and they must be accompanied by a letter of recommendation from a member of the applicant's major department.

Intramural Report

by Pete Griff

Last night about 75 people showed up for the I.F.C. championship bowling match between match between AEPi and TEP. AEPi needed all eight points to tie TEP for the crown, but, paced by Bob Sokolove's 202 game, TEP won the first string, thus clinching the championship.

To finish off the season, Monday night there will be an All Star Game, pitting the top 9 from the dorms.

Having completed the season, the top 5 teams in the I.F.C. league and their scores are as follows:

TEP	92-20
AEP	80-32
ZN	73-39
TKE	73-39
PSD	72-40

This week ends the first round play in volleyball. Starting next week the playoffs will begin in all three leagues. Here's how each league shapes up as of now. These teams are still undefeated.

Yan-Con Future In Doubt As Strong Teams Dominate

by John Goodrich

Twice each year, once in March and once in November, an argument arises in the New England area over the future of the Yankee Conference. These two times mark the conclusion of the football and basketball seasons, the two that cause the most grief for the northern New England schools.

For the rest of the year, little is said concerning this topic. In baseball, the honors for the schools are passed around to a certain extent. The champs from 1957 have been UMass, then four straight years for UConn, then Vermont, UConn, and Maine. Of late, New Hampshire, Maine, and Vermont have consistently been in the top three or four spots.

In golf since 1949, only three times has a north conference team won. Massachusetts has won the tennis title 7 of the last 9 years. Maine has dominated the track and field, having won it four years in a row. Before that, Rhode Island had held the title 12 of 13 years.

In cross country, it has generally been Maine and Massachusetts. And so it goes. The schools in the North, however, are usually considered to be threats in these lesser sports even when they do not win.

But in basketball and football, the story is completely different. These two sports enttail a great deal of recruiting, something the three schools just do not do. They are usually content to take what they can get. In basketball, they are usually small teams while in football, they are generally light.

UConn, Rhody, and UMass do not attempt to shield the fact that they are recruiting. The domination by these three schools is almost unbelievable in basketball. In 17 years, Connecticut has won the basketball crown 14 years, Rhody twice, and Massachusetts once. Rhody and UConn tied once.

It is a rare season when any of the other three schools make a good run at the title. Maine, from 1958-61, was the second place team, but just weren't good enough to get by UConn. What does the future hold for this sport? Only more grief for these three schools. The only games these clubs won this year were against each other.

They all had a definite height disadvantage against the rest of the league. While they have good men returning next year they will not be in the class of UConn who lost only Toby Kimball, Mass, who lost Charlie O'Rourke and Charlie Kingston, or Rhody who lost Dennis McGovern and Frank Nightingale. This latter school will not be hurt too badly if Steve Chubin returns to school, while both Mass. and UConn have nearly all their starters plus some good frosh material moving up.

Football has only recently fallen into the lost category. Massachusetts is slowly emerging as the dominate power of the conference. In the last six years, the Redmen were second four times and have won it the last two seasons. Maine and New Hampshire managed to upset the UMass team twice to give them the crown, but it is a rare occasion when that happens. People point to the fine job Vermont has done the last two years, but one need only look at the score when they faced UMass. In 1963 it was 42 - 0 and in 1964 28 - 7. Neither year did the Catamounts face UConn.

What should be done about this situation? The most obvious one would seem to be the breaking up of the league. Yet, this is easier said than done. The schools who are on top find it hard to desert the league where they can consistently be the kingpins.

Connecticut would be down right foolish to walk out of the sure NCAA bid that goes to the winner of the conference for the basketball season. In football, the league has the lowest national ranking of any major one.

Consequently the problem rests with the very teams that suffer the most. They would have to be the ones to initiate the action to dissolve the league. If they did, there is no reason why the southern three clubs couldn't ban together with teams like Boston University, Boston College, Holy Cross, and Northeastern for football, and add Providence and Fairfield for basketball. The ommission of Northeastern would still leave a nice six team league for football and eight team conference for basketball. All of these teams play most of the others at any rate, and it would be a good strong league with real interest, even on a national level.

Yet, here at UMass we should not complain about her position as one of the powers in the area. It just seems that we could improve the complete set up and provide better competition for our teams without the Yankee Conference.

Barry Whitcomb: Future Olympian

by Dennis Magee and Raymond Rogers

The University of Massachusetts has a future Olympian in its student body. Barry Whitcomb, a senior Physical Education major, has aspirations of making the 1968 Olympic weight lifting team.

Whitcomb has a long list of weight lifting accomplishments to his credit. This past February Barry broke the New England record in the light heavyweight class with a press of 275 pounds, a snatch of 235 and a jerk of 345 pounds. Not bad for a person who weighs only 177 pounds. This performance would have qualified Barry to compete in the 1964 Olympic trials.

This summer the 21 year old intends to train with the champions of the York Barbell Club of Pennsylvania. The mentor of this club is Olympic coach Bob Hoffman.

Five years ago, when Barry started lifting, the best he could do was a jerk of 80 pounds. If the training he receives in the future continues to improve his performances as they have, everyone can look forward to seeing this well-rounded young man at Mexico City in 1968.

Social Action—Key To Communist Challenge

by Ann Watkins

"The answer to the Communist challenge to intellectual and moral values lies in this generation and its ability to translate thinking into constructive social action," said William C. Sullivan, assistant director in charge of domestic intelligence for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Speaking to a U. of Missouri audience, Sullivan further stated the need for "originality and boldness in our thinking toward world Communism and certainly students should be the ones to furnish this vision."

na, Al Nordberg, Terry Swanson, Mark Greenberg and Jeff Whitney.

AS FAR AS THE YANKEE CONFERENCE is concerned, Lorden looks to defending champs Maine as the team to beat. The Black Bears surprised everyone by placing third in last year's NCAA Championships at Omaha. A recent preseason poll by a national wire-service placed Maine as the eighth best team in the country, Lorden said that last year's Black Bears were a case of a team that all of a sudden jelled and played well. The only other mentioned threat to the Yan-Con championship was the veteran loaded team of the University of New Hampshire.

He quoted F.B.I. Director J. Edgar Hoover, "this generation will witness the termination of the global struggle between an open or closed society."

In formulating this thinking, Sullivan pointed out the need to consider "the c's—change, challenge, and conflict. We are witnessing transitions so far-reaching that one day they will make the Renaissance and the Industrial Revolution look like minor eruptions."

Confusion has arisen, he said, as to what Communism is actually involved in. The real issues are the concept of the individual, private property and the multi-party system, with freedom and law the central concerns.

In the period following his address, Sullivan answered questions from students in the audience.

When asked about Hoover's statement calling Martin Luther King, "the most notorious liar in the country," Sullivan stated that Hoover "never makes a statement he cannot back up and he can back this one up to the hilt."

In response to another question, he said that while the F.B.I. had not investigated the student protests at Berkeley, he "wanted to make it clear that the overwhelming number of students had no connection with the Communist Party. (CPS)

Coach Lorden Optimistic Of Successful Season

by Al Gray

Varsity baseball coach Earl Lorden said that he feels "optimistic" about this year's Redmen team. "We have veterans returning in key positions and eager sophomores coming up who could really help," Lorden said recently.

ONE OF THE BIG QUESTION MARKS this year will be the pitching staff. The only pitcher returning who started regularly last year is Junior Ross Piken. Coach Lorden says, "Piken has all the equipment to be one of the top pitchers in New England." The number two man will probably be Senior Jim Richie, a relief specialist last season. Sophomore Karl Bateze, the top freshman pitcher last year, is one of several other prospects who the coach thinks can strengthen his pitching staff out.

Captain Carl Kamena heads the list of returning veterans and will in all probability be the starting catcher. Infielders Bill Crane, 2b, Joe Kuczynski, 3b, and outfielders Dennis Dela Pianna and Al Nordberg are the only other regulars back. Dela Pianna picked up valuable experience last summer by playing in what is said to be the toughest amateur baseball league in the country, the Basin League in South Dakota. Some returning players who didn't play regularly last season, but who Coach Lorden feels can help the team this year, are John Peacock, 1b; Paul Caisse, ss; Terry Swanson, outfield, and "Jack" Forst, pitcher.

The coach stated "the sophomores may hold the key to the season for us. They have a lot of spirit and will push the upperclassmen for a chance to be in the starting lineup." Jim Babyack, a varsity basketball player, led last year's freshmen team with a .372 average and will be looking for a chance to start at shortstop. Other leading sophomore prospects are Ed Polchlopek, 3b; Frank Stewart, outfielder; catcher Fran Kruse and first baseman Roy Lasky.

NO ONE WILL PROBABLY BE CUT from the squad until the practice sessions can be held outdoors. Wet grounds and cold weather have forced the Redmen to stay in the "Cage."

The complete roster: pitchers, Ross Piken, James Richie, Mike Brita, William Smith, Kenny Rowe, Karl Bateze, Ken Olsen, Bill Russell and "Jack" Forst. Catchers, Karl Kamena, John Meehan, William Breen, Jim Gromelski, Fran Kruse and Bob Goulston.

Infielders: Paul Caisse, Bill Crane, Joe Kuczynski, John Peacock, Jim Babyack, Roy Lasky, Frank Stewart and Ed Polchlopek.

Trackmen Sixth In UConn Relays

by Terry Carpenter

The University of Massachusetts closed out the indoor season last weekend by participating in the UConn relays. Boston College won the meet which included participants from 26 colleges. The Redmen came in seventh for a creditable performance.

This meet included all the regular events of a track meet besides added relays at varying lengths. The distance medley relay team of Bill Thoms, Gamian Gaffney, Tom Panke and Terry Carpenter took fifth. The sprint medley relay team of Gaffney, Doug Sloan, Art Larvey and Thoms placed sixth. The mile relay team of Thoms, Darryl Brose, Jim Collin and Sloane also took sixth.

IN INDIVIDUAL EFFORTS, Co-Capt. Dave Sadowsky vaulted 13'6" equalling the winning jump but he was awarded third place because he had begun jumping sooner than the victor. Junior Bob Murphy cleared 13' for fourth place.

Doug Renwick was overwhelmed by a wave of excellent shotputters led by IC4A champ and U. S. representatice in the European games, Carl Wallin of Northeastern. Renwick took sixth place with a heave of 46' 8". In the dash Art Larvey took second place followed by Doug Sloane who came in fifth. John Lisack took sixth in the high jump with a leap of 5' 10". In the mile run Terry Carpenter placed third and Mike Sheeley took sixth. Bob Ramsay ran a 9:59 2-mile, his best effort of the year, for sixth place laurels.

THE TRACKMEN now face a layoff until April 24 when they open their outdoor season. Their first meet will be a tri-meet against Tufts and Northeastern on Alumni field at 1:00 p.m.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Associate Sports Editor

It's football time again. Spring practice begins April 3 and will terminate with the inter-squad game May 1. Coach Fusia should expect 50-60 men out for the Spring session. . . .

THE UMASS GOLF TEAM opens their season April 22. Captain George DeFalco will try to lead the golfers to another winning season which would include the Yankee Conference championship. The last time the Redmen won the championship was in 1961. . . .

April 24 is the date for the opening of the Outdoor track season. Coach Bill Footrick's men will be attempting to put together another winning season.

Olympic and world record holder in the shotput, Dallas Long, predicts that 20 year old Randy Matson of Texas A & M will be history's first 70 foot shot-putter. Matson's credentials: 6'7" tall, 230 pounds, and still growing. . . . .

"IF HE TAKES CARE OF HIMSELF and doesn't get hurt too often, Tony Coniglario can be another Joe DiMaggio". This is from the lips of Tony's ex-manager, Johnny Pesky. Last year Coniglario hit .290 with 24 home runs as a rookie. Experts believe that this record would have been more impressive if he had not been out for nearly two months with a broken arm . . .

Let me redeem myself. In the national wrestling championships at Colorado two weeks ago Jesse Brogan was the only wrestler to score on Ron Knoebel of Lycoming as the latter became the national championship in the 137 lb. class. Milt Morin did a creditable job in his class for a person who had lost 15 pounds due to a bug. Here's an interesting note: Mankato State of Minnesota is the NCAA wrestling champion. If you've never heard of this national powerhouse before, hang your head in shame.

SPECIAL ELECTION

Special election will be held April 1 to fill vacancies from Sororities and Brett Dorm. Nomination papers must be returned by March 30.

"We bled a little in the streets and fully expected to get thrown in jail as SNCC workers . . . Montgomery was no picnic."

Civil rights marchers resist attempts by Selma troopers to clear the streets during last week's demonstrations.

We Bled A Little . . .

by Peter Hendrickson News Editor

Dave Walsh returned to UMass Saturday after six days in two Montgomery jails. He was arrested Thursday, March 18 during a voter registration demonstration and charged with "refusal to obey the orders of a police officer."

In Dave's words here is what transpired during his stay in Montgomery:

SATURDAY, MARCH 13—We left UMass with some Amherst College students by car for Montgomery and were directed to the SNCC headquarters at the Benmore Hotel. We had originally intended to go to Selma but were informed that we could do just as much at the state Capitol.

TUESDAY, MARCH 16—This was the day of the most brutality on the part of the Montgomery Police. We held a meeting in the Jackson St. Baptist Church to try to march to the Capitol building to protest the Selma brutality at the bridge. on the sidewalk—we thought that our limited numbers would not offend the police.

We carried signs saying "One Man, One Vote" to technically be voter registration workers. Under the 1960 Civil Rights Act we were sure to be in the right. We knew that Foreman had been arrested once before on a similar charge and the Federal Government bailed him out. We hoped to get arrested and freed under the CR Act.

After the meeting we got wind of a White Citizens Council front group that was planning to launch a counter demonstration and were warned that more violence might result. It turned out that 500 did show up during the demonstration calling us "Commie Beatniks", "Nigger Lovers", and "SNCCniks".

We marched to the Capitol and were confronted by 200 State Policemen who were ringed about the Capitol. They pushed off into the street just as we were getting to the Capitol steps. We formed into a circular picket line and silently marched for about an hour and a half.

Some of the marchers got tired and sat in the middle of the circle and the cops ordered them to keep moving. They ignored the order.

Shortly after they issued another order over the bull horns, telling us that they had tolerated us long enough and that we were blocking traffic — "You've got two minutes to disperse and if you're not gone you're all under arrest."

We didn't leave and they announced that we were under arrest. Half of us went of our own accord into the paddy wagons and myself and others were carried in. They were very gentle with us as the TV cameras were right next to us.

They booked us all and put us in segregated cells in the city jail. We talked over things and decided to go on a hunger strike to protest the arrest and the ensuing segregation. They told us that if we came to lunch we could eat integrated. We went into eat but just sat there.

JAIL: The cells were designed for 16 people but there were usually more than 16. It was so crowded that they moved us to the Kilby State Prison on the outskirts of the city. I guess they treated us pretty well and that any discomfort was more inefficiency than brutality. In the state prison there was one big room with 200 blankets for 50 people and mattresses on the floor. There were few panes in the windows and it was awfully cold.

Most of us continued with the hunger strike but on the fourth day I collapsed in sickness from lack of food. I found that by chewing on gum and drinking a little water I could maintain my consciousness.

The time in jail was terribly boring and the days just stretched on and on without anything like meals to break the monotony. The lawyers brought us cigarettes, cards and a few newspapers. We improvised a chess set. We were allowed to receive phone calls and place one from each of the jails. Most of the time we just lay there wrapped in blankest staring at the walls. We got quite irritable.

BAIL—We had hoped to be bailed out by the Federal Gov't but this didn't work. We were informed by our lawyers that it might be another month before this came about, so we arranged to have the $100 raised from private sources.

Volpe Aide Addresses Young Republican Club

by Steve Gordon Staff Reporter

Elmer Nelson, Governor John A. Volpe's campaign manager in the 1964 gubernatorial election, spoke to the Young Republicans Club last Thursday night.

Nelson began his speech with a history of Republican politics in Massachusetts since Saltonstall's 1938 gubernatorial campaign, which he personally ran.

He gave interesting insights into the workings of political organizations, including the mistakes often made by political workers.

He said that people who are not actually involved in a campaign cannot be counted on to vote any one way, and have every right to change their minds between elections. "They are not solid," said Nelson, "and that's what makes it a ball game."

Nelson condemned the practice of voting for the man and not the party. He maintained that partisanship is necessary for accomplishment. A legislator must be able to offer his party's unified support to any legislation affecting his constituents if he expects any results.

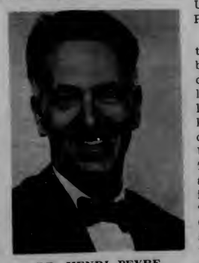
"Nothing happens at the State House which does not have the support of one party or the other," said Nelson, who, himself, was a state legislator.

With regard to the place of college graduates in future politics, Nelson pointed out that "If our educated people do not give politics and government the time it commands, than the uneducated people will take over the running of the government for their own personal benefit."

Noted Author to Speak To UMass Honor Group

Dr. Henri Peyre, internationally known author, critic, and Sterling Professor of French at Yale University, will speak at the installation of the University of Massachusetts Phi Beta Kappa chapter on Tuesday, March 30.

Professor Peyre's lecture, "American Education at the Crossroads," is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. The public is cordially invited.



DR. HENRI PEYRE

THE UNIVERSITY'S PETITION for its Phi Beta Kappa chapter was granted last summer at the society's 27th triennial council. UMass was one of seven colleges and universities awarded permission to operate chapters. Forty-two schools had submitted applications.

Phi Beta Kappa was originally founded on Dec. 5, 1776, by students at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va. The first two chapters were organized at Yale in 1780 and at Harvard in 1781.

A NATIVE OF PARIS, Dr. Peyre was educated at the Ecole Normale Superieure and at the Sorbonne. He received the Docteur des Lettres degree from the University of Paris.

Dr. Peyre is the author of 14 books and scores of articles, scholarly and popular. His best-known works include "Men and Works of the Twentieth Century," published in France, and "Writers and Critics," of which a reviewer said, "Professor Peyre . . . embodies his own theory that scholarship has a duty to the public to lead adventurously."

His recent works include "Literature and Sincerity," "Contemporary French Literature, A Critical Anthology," and "Splendors of Christendom." an illustrated art book published last year.

UM Receives 20 N.D.E.A. Scholarships

UMass has received 20 additional National Defense Education Act graduate fellowships for the 1965-66 academic year, it was announced by Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the UMass Graduate School.

Together with the NDEA fellowships announced by Dr. Moore last November, the additional awards make a total of 43 new NDEA fellowships allocated to UMass for the coming school year.

The University currently has 24 graduate students studying under previously awarded NDEA fellowships. Each fellowship carries a stipend of $2,000 for the first academic year of study, $2,200 for the second, and $2,400 for the third.

The NDEA fellowship program is intended to increase the number of well-trained college and university teachers. Fellowships, renewable for a period of up to three years, are awarded to able students who are working toward the doctorate.

The latest NDEA awards will be distributed among nine University departments.

The Week In Review

PEKING
Communist China indicated that it is ready to send troops to oppose "the United States aggressors" in South Viet Nam if the Communist Viet Cong asks for aid. A Red Chinese newspaper also said that China will send "all necessary material aid, including arms and all other war materials, to the heroic South Vietnamese people. At the same time, we are ready to send our men, whenever, the South Vietnamese people want them, to fight together with the South Vietnamese people to annihilate the United States aggressors".

VIET NAM
A wave of disapproval has swept across much of Asia over the use of American-supplied nauseous gas in South Vietnam. The announcement of the initiated use of gas was preceeded by the announcement that the United States is using incendiary napalm bombs in North Vietnam.

THE NATION

WASHINGTON
The House passed LBJ's $1.3 billion school bill last Friday in a historic vote preceeded by angry exchanges between Republicans and Democrats. The roll call vote (263-153) marked the first time in the House's history that it passed such a broad inclusive program of federal aid for elementary and secondary schools. The bill, now passed to the Senate, would allocate $1.06 billion into 90% of the nation's school districts for special programs for impoverished children. Another 250 million would go towards purchasing library books, textbooks plus grants to state education agencies.

ALABAMA
The Civil Rights "freedom marchers" arrived triumphantly in Montgomery this week. The group, 4,000 strong, marched to Montgomery's capital building, the one without the American flag, in a downpour. They were singing, cheering, singing. Asked why they came on the march from Selma, they all said, "For freedom".

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA
United States citizen Robert M. Shelton, Jr., is the "imperial wizard" of the United Klans of America, Knights of the Klu Klux Klan, Inc. He charged Saturday that the murden of two white civil rights sympathizers in Alabama was a "trumped up Communist plot to destroy the right wing in America." Shelton, an unemployed former tire salesman, said that the Klan Bureau of Investigation is "investigating this lady from Detroit" for possible "Communist connections." This was in reference to Mrs. Liuzzo, shot to death Thursday, during the freedom march from Selma to Montgomery. President Johnson denounced the Klan Friday in a televised news conference, calling them a bunch of "hooded bigots".

THE STATE

WILLIS REPORT
The support which the Massachusetts institutes of higher education had thrown behind the Willis Report bills began to wane last week, as the legislators started proposing alterations of the original proposals. The University administration was most seriously upset by the proposed board of higher education and a board of public school education which would have considerable control over the University.

THE CAMPUS

CIVIL RIGHTS
The various UMass groups and individuals who went to Alabama in past weeks returned to campus last week. The marchers, including faculty, clergy and students, had much to say about their experiences in Alabama. Thursday night saw a panel discussion on the Selma situation. Present at the discussion were Don Johnson, a junior, the Reverends Harold Cooper and John Scott of the University, and Dr. Leon Marx of Amherst College, all of whom have recently returned from Alabama, and Professor David Leonard. The panel was moderated by Ken Hardy, president of the Campus Religious Council, which sponsored the discussion.

POVERTY WORKSHOP
The DVP sponsored a three - day workshop on poverty last week. The program included talks by Michael Harrington, author of The Other America, and U. S. Senator Abraham Ribicoff. Harrington advocated increased social spending and employment of the poor as a cure for poverty. Ribicoff, the former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, outlined the Federal government's role in dealing with poverty. The workshop was concluded with a panel discussion outlining the problems involved in the implementation of an anti-poverty program. The panel, moderated by UMass assistant professor of speech Jay Savereid, included Dr. Martin Deutsche, a social psychologist at Columbia University, Dr. Robert J. Lampman, a professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin, and U. S. Rep. James G. O'Hara.

WILLIS REPORT
Convinced that amendments to the Willis Report bills are "damaging" to the interests of higher education in Massachusetts, the Class of '68 has undertaken a drive to obtain signed petitions asking for the acceptance of the Willis Report bills without amendments. The petitions have been distributed to the dormitories, fraternities and sororities, and are also available in the Student Union for graduate and commuting students. The Executive Council of the Freshman Class will take the petitions to Boston on April 1, where they will meet with Lieutenant Governor Elliot Richardson, House Speaker John Davoren, and Representatives Spumon and Thompson.

Middle East SZO Topic For Tonight

Dr. Horst Wittmann of the German department, Dr. Harold Gordon of the history department, Dr. Haim Gunner, professor of microbiology, and Tamar Golan, representative of Israel, will engage in a panel discussion on Germany's role in the Middle East at 8 p.m. Tuesday night in the Council Chambers of the SU.

The reasons for the program, sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization, were discussed by the treasurer, Al Belsky, in a Collegian interview.

"The rapid succession of events and crises in the Middle East have become so numerous that the average person has stopped paying attention to their significance. However the recent set of tensions, manifested by Germany's role, has evolved a new and more powerful meaning. The exchange of ambassadors between Bonn and Jersualem has far reaching implications: Is Germany's recognition of Israel political expediency or a new morality? What will be the German-Arab relationship? How is the balance of power affected? Has the Jewish conscience forgiven?"

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Censor The Collegian?

Editor's note: The following Editorial is the second in a series of three which were written by Terry Stock, former News Editor of the Collegian. They are the opinion of Miss Stock, and do not necessarily express the viewpoint of the Collegian or its staff members.

Writing in a national magazine, one John M. Harrison said, "College Administrators are not so much concerned that students shall have an opportunity to whet their critical faculties as that students shall not rock the boat . . ."

This simple statement defines very clearly why the "Collegian" constantly has to face the spectre of being censored or controlled by the powers in South College.

We can, if it makes us feel good, defend our right to publish a free newspaper with an imposing list of considerations:

1. Constitutional guarantees debar censorship
2. Intellectual development requires freedom of inquiry
3. Critical inquiry . . . tends . . . towards a heightened attachment to democracy . . . (Harrison)

But who cares about these things, really? We'll tell you who cares: the administration, the very same crew that would love to strangle us if they could do so without the public getting wind of it.

Take our word for it, our administrators are firm believers in Freedom of the Press. If asked any one of them would gladly have a speech written for him to give to students or anyone else on how important a Free Press is to the preservation of all we hold dear. And they would mean it, really they would.

Further, any clever administrator can make mincemeat of the little list we ran at the beginning of this editorial. Look!

1. Sure the Constitution debars censorship, but you can't tell lies or shout "Fire" in a movie house. The former will get you into libel and slander difficulties, and the latter, charges of inciting to riot.
2. Sure, intellectual development requires freedom of inquiry, but how many students have the time to inquire fully into the charges and statements they make in their newspaper? How many of them really dig into the truth, talk to the wheels, sift all the evidence?
3. Critical inquiry leads to a heightened attachment to democracy, eh? Remember what we said in the last editorial about the South College boys having to crawl on hands and knees to the politicians for the money needed to make UMass a really GREAT University? OK—so the University of Massachusetts hierarchy is dedicated to the most education for the most people in the state. Next—to handle every youngster who wants to go to college, the University has to grow, and to grow it needs money, and if the politicians don't like what's going on up here, if they get the crazy idea that there is something not right in the vote-poor boondocks, well, they might just shut our boys off without a penny.

Therefore, the better the image of old UMass (the less that gets out about its imperfections), the better it will be for the people of our state.

In other words, the more the "Collegian" is throttled, the better off our democracy will be. For the price of a few strangled, would-be journalists, the Massachusetts public will have everyone in college before long!

Our administrators, in short, aren't interested in squashing freedom of the press. They are concerned only with empire-building, and anything or anyone that rocks the boat—well, they gotta go, that's all.

The disease of this empire-building, this paranoic dedication to growth, is that it may well be sacrificing some important things on the altar of bigness, some things even bigger than the "Collegian", and, as an element of a truly academically free society, this newspaper is pretty darn big.

Mass Make

There are few things more disillusioning than returning from a disenchanting date. The disillusionment is supplemented by the necessity of pushing one's way through throngs of ecstatic couples. But these couples aren't any happier about the cramped conditions than are the onlookers. No guy is "psyched" by the thought of walking his date to her door, knowing that those final moments together must be shared with 200 couples. They just don't make doorsteps that big. And so as you kiss good night, how sweet it is to rub backs with the couple behind you, or better yet, to rub behinds with the couple in back of you.

To add to the aggravation, at three minutes to curfew, the "bearer of ill tidings", the girl on duty, rushes around flashing the clear-out signal. This means that if you're not out fast your Cinderella could lose a Friday night.

Though we consider the lovers as a group, by closer examination we notice the distinct types represented. In the darkest corner is the couple whispering "sweet nothings". Inside the doorway is the successful-evening couple who hesitate awkwardly before the big play. On the doorstep stands the guy who won't be asked in. His date thanks him and proceeds to do the fastest "bolt" routine he's ever witnessed. But the most outstanding pair is the couple who crashes through the door just bubbling over with "spirits". They manage to briefly disrupt the tranquility of the occasion.

The moment of departure finally arrives and the throng is herded out. Students may acquire an insensitivity to the inconvenience of "communal living", but the annoyance of "Mass Make" still gnaws away a little inside.

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

FOREIGN STUDENTS

To the Editor:

I certainly am sorry that Mr. Dung's first name was misspelled. This was a typographical error, as was the case with the initial in Syed I. Mahdi's name. There were a few changes made in my article due either to the typist or the news editor who handled the article before printing. Yet the quotations themselves, although they may flow badly, are, in point, accurate. These are the same quotations that were read, by request, back to you, including the word "subjective." I don't think the article makes Pineau a racist nor do I think that it gives Dung any cravings for southern life. Both of these are rather strained inferences.

I will say again, however, that I'm sorry your names were misspelled and for any ill references that could be derived from my article.

Why We Are Here

To the Editor:

In regard to your editorial, "Censor the Collegian?" in the March 24, 1965 issue, we would like to call to your attention that the presence of said sons, daughters, nephews, nieces and friends of the politicians of this Commonwealth, aside from demonstrating the liberality of this institution in giving so many a chance to develop their possible, well- hidden, innate potentialities, are also responsible for the long, lovely, tapering slope on the left side of the median of a normally distributed bell curve, thereby enabling many of us who are not sons, daughters, nephews, nieces, or friends of the politicians of this Commonwealth to remain in this Commonwealth's honorable institution of higher learning.

will be after its fourth straight winning season when the Redmen open by hosting Tufts and Northeastern April 24 at Amherst.

Coach Bill Footrick's trackmen have compiled a 16-4 record the past three seasons. The Redmen meet Springfield, Bates, Connecticut and Holy Cross in addition to the opening tri-meet. Massachusetts will also compete in the Yankee Conference tournament at Storrs, Conn., the New England's at Brown and the IC4A's at Rutgers.

The complete 1965 Massachusetts Spring track schedule: April 24 Tufts & Northeastern, home; April 28 Springfield, away; May 1 Bates, away; May 4 Connecticut, home; May 11 Holy Cross, away; May 15 Yankee Conference at Connecticut; May 22 New England's at Brown; May 28 & 29 IC4A's at Rutgers.

The University of Massachusetts varsity lacrosse team will play a 10-game schedule this Spring. The Redmen, coached by Dick Garber, will be seeking their 9th consecutive winning season when they open April 7 by hosting Wesleyan.

Garber's young Redmen could be hampered by inexperience and lack of size. In addition a strong Dartmouth team has been added to the schedule. Perennial lacrosse powers Holy Cross, Amherst College, New Hampshire and Brown remain on the schedule.

The complete 1965 varsity lacrosse schedule: April 7 Wesleyan, home; April 21 MIT, home; April 24 Tufts, away; April 27 Holy Cross, away; May 1 Middlebury, away; May 8 Amherst College, home, May 12 New Hampshire, home; May 15 Brown, away; May 18 WPI, home; May 22 Dartmouth, home.

The University of Massachusetts varsity golf team will open its season April 22 with a home tri-match against Vermont and Rhode Island.

Coach Chet Gladchuk hopes to mold another winning team around Captain George DeFalco. The Redmen golfers have enjoyed six straight winning seasons and have compiled a regular season record of 53-17 during that span. However Massachusetts has not won the Yankee Conference golf crown since 1961.

The complete 1965 Massachusetts varsity golf schedule: April 22 Vermont & Rhode Island, home; April 27 New Hampshire & Amherst, home; April 30 AIC & Connecticut at AIC; May 3 Holy Cross, away; May 7 Yankee Conference at Storrs, Conn.; May 10 Providence & Trinity, home; May 13 & 14 New England's at Groton, Conn.; May 18 Lowell & MIT at Lowell; May 20 WPI at Worcester.

The University of Massachusetts is presently seeking to go "big-time." In the last article, this writer looked at one of the problems confronting the school, the bounds imposed by the Yankee Conference. Today's article deals with yet another problem, that of the good press necessary to build the school's athletic reputation.

Any of the really big and well known state universities in the country have two things that seem to go for it. One is that it is accepted by the people of the state as the university and the second is directly related to this in that the newspapers constantly give the readers a steady diet of the exploits of the teams at the state university.

It can be seen that this build-up is reflected mostly in the midwest with the Big Ten schools. However, it goes equally the same every place else in the country except New England. Perhaps New York and New Jersey could be included but nothing beyond that. The latter has primarily Rutgers and Princeton who share equally, while New York has many schools.

This might be one of the reasons why the University of Massachusetts does not receive better publicity. The Boston area has many schools, but Harvard, Boston U., Boston College, and Northeastern and occasionally Tufts dominate the sports pages. This is only natural, considering these are area schools. What is not natural is that U-Mass is relegated often to a few lines on the second or third page.

This problem is noted in every sport except football. In that sport, UMass has risen to such a lofty position that it cannot be ignored. For two years in a row the club was chosen the best in NE, scoring an undefeated season and earning a trip to the Tangerine Bowl the other. U-Mass got plenty of coverage for this game with East Carolina, but during the season if UMass had a Yankee Conference game it was not given much coverage.

In other sports, it has often seen no mention of the contest in Boston papers. A basketball game never gets much publicity, but then again, neither do any of the Boston teams. The Beantown just isn't a college basketball town, but Bob Cousy and BC might just change all of that. The pro teams dominate the Boston press and that is probably as it should be.

Consequently, the Redmen will have to get their publicity from elsewhere. Springfield then becomes the natural outlet since that is the nearest city. Holy Cross runs Worcester so there is little hope there. But even Springfield presents a problem . . . there are two schools in the city. AIC and Springfield College along with Williams and Amherst will contend with UMass for equal space in the paper.

As if that wasn't enough competition, the colleges have to contend with the Boston pro clubs and the Western Mass. high school teams. That leaves only the local papers that provide ample coverage for UMass but have a limited number of readers.

The best way for a school of any kind is to build up a combination of actual and subway alumni. These people are one of the most vital forces that work for recognition of a school's athletic accomplishments. Naturally, they seem to be concerned only with the major sports, but this is the starting point for any school.

Until the school gets enough alumni to exert a real influence. They will remain in the background. The number of alumni is growing however, as all one has to do is look at the Boston area alumni's football dinner that packed the ballroom of one of the city's largest hotels.

It can be done. The University of Connecticut took the state by storm with its fine basketball team. Hartford is much the same as Springfield with smaller schools plentiful, but it is the Huskies that dominate the sports pages. UConn is considered "our Huskies." Never again can they be forced into the background. All it takes is one top flight season and the press picks up a club. Interest grows in the state and people become concerned with the school in all events. With Connecticut, always a hotbed of basketball, college and high school, the U-Conn team got publicity, even on a national level.

For UMass, the best sport would seem to be football, although basketball is coming fast. If Coach Vic Fusia can come up with another big winner this year despite the loss of 18 lettermen, he could give the school a big boost. Likewise, Coach John Orr is in the process of building a strong basketball squad. This sport offers the quickest road to success with the automatic NCAA berth and national recognition. The gaining of a good press coverage is a slow, tedious process that requires one big boost in a single season. Someday, UMass may the The university in this state.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25—Vic Aronow raised money through Dr. Soltysik who donated $100 to get me out Wednesday night. We had to raise money for the others still in the jug who had not been bailed out. We went to the marchers' camp outside Montgomery to solicit donations. We raised $2,600 for the 26 or so left in jail.

We got a ride back to Montgomery that night with Prof. Lauder and Susan Herman of Smith College and Mrs. Baxter, a local negro woman helping in the Civil Rights drive. We were about half-way back when some local residents pulled up beside us and yelled "nigger lovers" while gulping beer. I knew it was beer because after they spit in the window they threw in the bottles and smashed the rear-view mirror. They chased us all the way to the SNCC headquarters in the city. They saw the crowd milling around there and decided not to stop.

FRIDAY, MARCH 26—We started back to Amherst in a VW, five of us. I switched cars in Richmond and got to New York for breakfast. The others went to Boston so I hitched into Amherst. I'm tempted to go back but I think I'll stick around and finish the semester.

play on a 'one-and-one' situation and invariably the man assigned to him has to receive help from someone else."—Joe Mancisin, Yale University.

"There's no doubt that Toby Kimball is by far the best, big man in the Yankee Conference that I have seen in my eight years as a coach. I strongly feel that he has kept the team together both on and off the floor, not only because of his tremendous competitive spirit, but also because of his great leadership qualities." — Ernie Calverly, Rhode Island.

"I think Toby Kimball is an outstanding, big man. He is exceptionally strong and particularly important to his team. His main asset is his strong work off the boards both on offense and defense." — Joe Mullaney, Providence College.

"I am very glad to see Toby Kimball is graduating. He has been a very fine performer against us, not only because of his strength but because of his very courageous qualities. His competitive consistency wears down the opposition. He is like a big bear that keeps pawing until he wears you down. I think he is a fine leader and we enjoyed competing with him."—Johnny Bach, Fordham.

"Big and rugged. Could be a good pro prospect."—Fred Lewis, Syracuse.

"The best big man we played against in New England. Should make All-New England." — Bill Olson, New Hampshire.

Intramural Report

by Pete Griff

This is a week of championships in Intramurals. Crowns will be decided in Wrestling, Volleyball, Ten-pin Bowling, and I.F.C. Swimming.

The feature will be the wrestling championships on Wednesday night at 7 p.m. at Boyden. Besides the 9 exciting matches, Mr. Gladchuck has arranged a very interesting and enjoyable prelude. It should be a great attraction for everyone.

The volleyball playoffs start Monday night with the campus championship to be contested Thursday. The I.F.C. championship is between LCA and SPE, and that match is scheduled for tomorrow night at 6:30. Grayson, Middlesex, Brett, Gorman, Butterfield and Chadbourne all loom as possible dorm champs, while the stalwarts of the Independent League are the AEP Grads, the Spikers, Buggers I and Vicky's.

The big match—for the campus crown—will be held Thursday at 6:30.

The pins should really be flying tomorrow night at 7, when the campus ten-pin bowling crown will be decided. TEP, the I.F.C. champ vies with Grayson, the dorm champ in a head to head match for all the marbles.

Finally on this week's agenda —The I.F.C. swimming meet will pe held Wednesday night at 7:30.. The fraternities are grouped into 4 strong teams and should put on a great exhibition of talent along with desire to win. It should definitely be something to see and enjoy.

All team captains—don't forget—Softball rosters must be handed in to the Intramural Office by Thursday, April 1. Also, anyone interested in being a softball umpire this spring could contact Mr. Gladchuk immediately.

The University of Massachusetts varsity tennis team will play 11 dual matches plus the Yankee Conference tournament this Spring. Chief aim for Coach Steve Kosakowski's Redmen will be the regaining of the Conference championship.

After annexing four straight Conference titles, the Redmen fell to second place last year as Connecticut copped the championship. Massachusetts has won the title seven times with two second places in the past 10 years.

Army and MIT are new opponents this season. The Redmen will open April 10 by hosting MIT. The Conference tournament will take place May 7 and 8 at Connecticut.

The complete 1965 Massachusetts varsity tennis schedule: April 10 MIT, home; April 22 Fairfield, away; April 24 Holy Cross, home; April 26 Tufts, away; April 29 Rhode Island, away; May 1 Army, away; May 4 Connecticut, home; May 7-8 Yankee Conference, Connecticut; May 10 AIC, home; May 12 New Hampshire, away; May 18 Brandeis, home; May 21 Springfield College, away.

Toby Kimball Called Outstanding by Coaches

Toby Kimball played in 23 games this past season and Connecticut won 22 of them, losing only to St. Joseph's in the NCAA tournament, 67-61. He made good on 177 of 311 shots from the floor for 57% and 101 of 157 free throws. His 483 rebounds gave him an average of 21.0 per game, tops in the nation. His 455 points (19.8 average) placed him at the top of the list of all-time three-year scorers at UConn with a total of 1,361 points in 74 games.

His honors continue to come in. Right now he is All-New England, AP and UPI; All-ECAC; honorable mention All-America, both AP and UPI.

Here are some of the accolades heaped on the senior captain:

"I would classify Toby Kimball as a very good, agile big man. He has grace in his moves. I would say he is a good prospect if he is interested in pro ball because he can move, has agility and has the shots; and he is a wonderful rebounder."—Harry Litwack, Temple University.

"I would love to have had Toby Kimball on my team strictly from a standpoint of attitude alone. I have always been very, very impressed with his wonderful competitive spirit. He is a man who really gives his all. I was tremendously impressed with the way he stayed in the game at a NCAA game at Philadelphia two years ago, despite the tremendous odds against his team's chances of winning. He has great mobility for a big man and of course we all know he is a very strong rebounder."—Floyd Wilson, Harvard University.

"I think Toby Kimball is one of the nation's leading rebounders. Although he did not play against us because of an injury, I did see him play before our game and found him to be a very strong athlete. His infectious personality is an asset as a player. The teammates seemed to enjoy playing with him and his enthusiasm was transmitted to the rest of the team."—Sam MacNeil, Cornell University.

"Toby Kimball is one of the better ball players we have faced this year. He is as rugged a board man as we have been confronted with all year long. I feel his mere presence alone instills confidence in his teammates. He is a tough man to

by Gordon Davidson
Day Editor

Twelve hundred students at Holy Cross marched yesterday from the steps of the library building to the office of Dean of Studies and presnted a petition protesting the changing of a senior's grade from passing to failing by a prof.—after the student had complained about his mark.

The petition demands in part "that the student receive his original mark and that it become official college policy that retroactive change of marks be prohibited."

The protest was made with the "intention that the injustice done to this student never shall be repeated."

Speeches were made on the steps of the library building by Student Congress president Thomas Gallagher, James Murphy, former Congress president, and head of the committee in charge of the demonstration, and Edmund Carey, executive assistant to the president of the Congress.

"We ask that the college administration not regard us as underlings committed to their charge and recognize that truth resides not in the person who speaks it, but rather in what he says," said Carey.

The protest was triggered by Rev. Joseph J. Sea's changing the grade of John T. Hoban to F after Hoban visited the professor five days after marks were posted to register his dissatisfaction with a D+ grade.

The student group said "the college administration has chosen to support the irrationality of the teacher's action . . . because reactionary philosophy and authoritarianism have pervaded this campus for more than a century."

It was hoped that the demonstration will force the students to be taken more seriously by the administration, and prevent the administration from making unfair decisions.

McCormack Cites Need For Party Affiliation

by David Axelrod Staff Reporter

Edward McCormack, speaking as a guest of the University's Young Democrats, Monday, stressed the need for more young persons' interest in politics, and for strong party affiliation by all responsible citizens.

In McCormack's view, the Democratic party has suffered from a lack of strong party structure. The emphasis has been placed on the individual more than his party and platform. In his own campaigns, McCormack recounted the typical problem: after the primaries candidates found little or no party support and financial aid. Each candidate was forced to find his own means for campaigning, with a resulting emphasis on individuals and possibility for funds scandals.

ONLY RECENTLY HAS THE old finance system (the Jefferson-Jackson Committee) been revised, putting the purse strings and control back in the hands of the Democratic party.

McCormack generalized to say that the strength of the nation is in its two party system. Therefore, it is the responsibility of a voter to adopt and support a party and its candidates. Emphasis on individuals, crossing party lines, and passive support of party candidates is not enough.

Similarly the indepedent "is not fulfilling his responsibility of citizenship" because he is not working for either party.

McCormack viewed the political scene from another light commenting on the image of the politician. The old image of the politician as "someone with a dirty hat who stands on a soap box and is not to be trusted" must be revised if qualified young people are to take an interest in government. Revision, rebuilding of the politcal image, is possible through a unified party beyond emphasis on individuals.

In answer to a question from the audience about a legislative pay raise, McCormack also stated that better pay would be one of the more important ways to improve the quality of Mas-

ABCC Agent Discusses Teenage Drinking Problem

by Joan Lezar
Staff Reporter

Quinten J. Cristy, Commisioner of the Alcoholic Beverages Commission spoke last night on "The Growing Problem of Teenage Drinking." Cristy, appointed to the Commission in 1962 by Governor Volpe, was guest speaker for the Political Science Association.

Cristy said that the key to controlling the drinking problem among teenagers is education. He pointed out that schools by law are required to inform students about alcoholic beverages, but not very many schools do enough.

IF YOUNGSTERS were educated to the disadvantages of excessive drinking and the advantages of moderate drinking, the problem would surely decrease.

Said Cristy; "We don't want to lose control; we ask that you observe the laws and regulations and then, when you become 21, use alcoholic beverages with moderation."

The other key factor in controlling teenage drinking is strict law enforcement. It is a prevalent attitude that first offenders in a district should be given "a second chance." They

Beta Kappa Phi Wins Annual IFC Sing

Beta Kappa Phi took first place in the annual sing competition sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council on Monday night as part of Greek Week activities.

The Beta Phi's, last year's second place winners, successfully fought off the traditionally strong TEP entry by combining talent and poise in delivering a stirringly beautiful Negro spiritual entitled "I Hear A Voice A-Prayin' ".

The song, directed by John Gilbert, clearly won the approval of the audience by their applause and that of the judges, by their vote.

TEP finished a strong second, with LCA finishing third. The sing heralded the beginning of Greek Week Activities in which rivalry and revelry make for friendly competition.

Thus Beta Kappa Phi, winner of last year's IFC trophy for overall competitive supremacy, begins this week on a winning and, they hope, prophetic note.

Angel Flight Receives First Place Honor Award

On Saturday, March 20, the John P. Granville Angel Flight attended an area conclave at Boston University. Approximately twenty representatives from Tufts, M.I.T., UConn, B.U. and UMass Flights were in attendance. Round table discussions about area and flight problems and solutions were conducted by Area A-1 Commander Donna Bangs and Executive Officer Francine Carmody.

A highlight of the conclave was the awarding of a trophy to the best Angel Flight in all of New England. Chris Fleming, Commander of the Arnold Air Society's Area A-1 presented the trophy to the UMass Flight.

The major event of the day was the selection of Miss Jan Ferry, the UMass representative for the Little Colonel contest, as the Area A-1 candidate for the Little General conest to be held in Washington during the Angel Flight National Conclave which is from April 11-15. Miss Ferry was selected after competing with other area candidates. The criteria for selection included academic achievements, contributions to Arnold Air Society, Angel Flight and her University, charm, poise and overall congeniality.

AF To Experiment With Atmospheric Launches

Six sounding rockets will be fired from a unique launching pad—the deck of a sea-going aircraft carrier—by the Air Force later this month. The Office of Aerospace Research (OAR) will be trying to learn more about the upper atmosphere's structure and the earth's magnetic field.

The launches will be conducted off the USNS Croatan, a converted World War II escort carrier, sometime after March 15.

The sounding rockets used in the experiment will be launched from locations off the west coast of South America where the vessel's mobility allows for probes from several different positions.

In the upcoming experiment, four Nike-Apache rockets and two Nike-Cajun sounding rockets will measure variations in the magnetic field associated with the equatorial electrojet, a current of charged particles moving at relatively low altitude in the ionosphere.

In these shots, varying from 70 to 140 miles, the rockets will telemeter measurements of positive and negative ion and electron densities, temperatures, and energy distribution back to the mother ship.

sachusetts politics.

IN ANSWER TO ANOTHER question about the advisability of the class of '68 Willis commission petition, McCormack affirmed benefits of a petition informing the legislature of public opinion (although, as in the case of legislative pay raises, the public doesn't always seem to know what is best). McCormack, speaking to a specific point, said he favored a central system at the University, for the awarding of doctoral degrees.

COMMENTING ON HIS own political future, McCormack stated that his previous campaign against Ted Kennedy was like fighting "The President, Attorney General, Ambassador, the Cardinal and who knows who else!" However, he and Kennedy are both working for the party and McCormack is hopeful of his place in Massachusetts Democratic politics.

Three UMass Faculty Members Awarded Fellowships For Work

Three UMass faculty members have been awarded John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Fellowships for advanced work in their special fields, UMass Provost Oswald Tippo announced.

The three teachers are Richard E. Kim, assistant professor of English; Dr. John R. Rowley, assistant professor of botany, and Dr. Robert T. Wilce, also an assistant professor in the botany department.

Kim's fellowship covers the coming summer, and the first semester of the 1966-67 academic year. He plans to visit the Far East in connection with work on his second novel.

Dr. Rowley's award begins with the current semester. Now on sabbatical leave in Bolna, Sweden, Dr. Rowley will work at the Palynological Institute in Bolna.

THE GUGGENHEIM FELLOWSHIP awarded to Dr. Wilce covers a year, beginning this August. His research, into marine algae of the Canadian Northwest and Greenland, will be done in Sweden and at Lerici, Italy.

Kim joined the UMass faculty last September from a position at Long Beach State College in California. He currently teaches literature and imaginative writing at UMass.

His first novel, "The Martyred," was published last spring and greeted by nearly unanimous praise from critics.

"The Martyred" was a choice of the Book Find Club, a reading alternate with the Book of the Month Club, and on the final list of nominees for the National Book Award.

DR. ROWLEY, who teaches cytology and palynology at UMass, has been a member of the University's faculty since 1959. He previously taught at the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Wilce, a UMass faculty member since 1959, is a graduate of the University of Scranton. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Michigan.

The UMass scientist has been conducting a broad program of arctic marine botanical studies for more than 10 years. He teaches both undergraduate and graduate courses in phycology.

Symphony Concert

The University Symphony Band, conducted by John A. Jenkins, will present its Spring Concert in Bowker Auditorium on Wednesday evening, April 7, at 8:00 P.M. This concert is the final event in the contemporary "Fine Arts Festival—1965."

This year's program will feature guest conductor Arthur L. Niedeck of Lenox, Massachusetts, conducting the Band's percussion ensemble in a performance of the Toccata for Percussion by Carlos Chavez. The Symphony Band will perform a program of original band compositions including works by Florian Mueller, Vincent Persichetti, Virgil Thompson, Howard Hanson, and Gustav Holst.

There is no admission charge for this concert.

Why Our Parents Love Us When We Come Home

by Sherry Spear, Feature Editor

With vacation around the next exam corner, The Mass. hoards will soon head homeward. Imagine that moment as you dash through the door into your mothers arms (she hasn't seen you since Christmas and has forgiven you for coming home at 5 on New Years), disentangle yourself as she says "Dark glasses!—It's raining. Take them off. My goodness, what happened to your eyes? You look like you haven't slept since . . ."

"As a matter of fact" you barely have time to edge in as she's off again with . . .

"ALL those books, don't you study at school? Well, tomorrow we visit your grandfather . . ." and you know you're home again. As you first walk in the door, you're a stranger in your home, with all the quirks of school-life, now "collegiate".

At UMass, rain, snow or incidental sunshine finds the sunglass regally perched on everything from noses to hairstyles. Long straight hair, no make-up styles are great for making an eight o'clock class but suffer under the scrutiny of anxious parents who think you're sick being so pale. Parents have been known to stare when a student gets up in the morning and automatically strips the bed for Gordon linen that night.

Ashes on plates at dinner are especially frowned upon as is standing in line at the range for dinner. Mothers are particularly adverse to being called "Hatch lady" (after the first five minutes) but allegedly quite responsive to dimes left by the coffeepot. Hearing the telephone ring can prove quite distracting at first, especially when it's always for your younger sister but at least girls don't have to sign out at night—or do they?

Sonnet (to Orchard Hill)

Ho do I love thee, Orchard Hill?
Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height of all your mud
That my soul sinks into, when reaching for a safer shore,
For the ends of Exams and ideal Quiet.
I love thee to the level of the sixth floor when the elevator works.
I love thee for all your $150 a semester.
I love thee purely, as thee hath no cigarette machine.
I love thee with a passion put to use
In my continual suffering, and with a faith
Blinded by the publicity office of the University.
I love thee with a love I seem to lose
With my necessities (heat, hot water, etc.)—I love thee with the breadth,
Smiles, tears, of all my life!—and, if President Lederle choose,
I shall love thee more after I flunk out.

On Campus

FOR 51 YEARS, tradition at Carthage College, Ill., has been that coeds caught sitting on a large boulder on campus are obliged to submit to a quick but firm kiss. When the college moved to Kenosha, Wis., last summer, some 50 fraternity men hoisted the 2½-ton rock on a truck, and took it to the new campus.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

The Decision Is Theirs

In many countries of the world, college students are as politically oriented as any other segment of the population; indeed, in many cases they are the major force in public opinion making itself felt by the government. In Berkeley, California, college students have recently gained national recognition for their demonstrations in support of political activities. However, what students were demonstrating for at Berkeley, was the right to be politically active, they were not demonstrating as a body for any particular political tenet, nor advocating any particular political proposal.

Certain students at the University of Massachusetts, motivated by some unfathomable impulse, have taken it upon themselves to travel to the State House in Boston to advocate the Legislature's acceptance of the much-maligned and much-supported "Willis Report." Demonstrations may have their place in other areas of activities such as this, but they are totally anomalous in their present context here.

Massachusetts and the United States enjoy a representative form of government. Elected officials are entrusted by the electorate to make decisions for them. The activities of "Willis Report" supporters and opponents have eliminated to a great degree, the opportunity for our elected officials to make a judicious review of the commission's proposals and enact into law those portions of it, or its totality, which are, in fact, the most efficacious means for this state to achieve the ultimate in education for all of its citizenry. If the wrong decisions are made by the General Court in the "Willis" controversy, the fault will lie with the electorate, not with the legislators. Either the electorate was derelict in its duty of appraising and choosing the most qualified candidates for the legislature or an even more reprehensible travesty will become evident; the electorate has not enough faith in its elected officials to allow them to perform the duties for which they were elected.

We cry about corruption in our government; yet we frequently make inroads upon the dignity of the legislature in a terribly self-deluding aura of altruism. A legislator is no less corrupted if he bows to a demonstration of numbers or pageantry than if he accepts a new car in return for a vote. The rapacious attack upon the dignity and integrity of our state legislators being perpetuated by the Freshmen Class Executive Committee's trip to Boston tomorrow is a manifestation of irresponsibility. We must remember that as a body the legislators are entrusted with the welfare of the entire populace of the Commonwealth; while self-interest of his constituency should never be lost from the mind of a legislator, it is his responsibility as well to maintain in his actions an irrefutable sense of proportion.

The purpose of a legislative hearing is and should be for ascertaining FACTS, not for the purpose of voicing opinion and emotion. The "Willis Report" was prepared by a distinguished committee who expended over a quarter of a million dollars in its preparation. They were the fact-finding commission empowered by the legislature; certainly it must be accepted that they are infinitely more qualified to make judgements and proposals than those individuals who are "Jonny-come lately's."

The decision on the "Willis Report" is for our legislators to make. Demonstrations and petitions, rather than enforcing our democratic ideals are instead undermining them. The integrity of our legislators must be respected, if not sanctified. Political activity has its first place at election times. Once our legislators have been entrusted with responsibility, let us not manifest immediate displeasure and take it back. The responsibility for the "Willis Report" decision is theirs, not ours. We gave it to them.

A Look At Ourselves

The Northern Image

In the past few months many students from the University of Massachusetts have journeyed to the South to participate in freedom marches and civil rights demonstrations. I have a great deal of respect for the people who take part in these programs — if they do so out of concern for their fellow man. However, before we ship our next bus load down, we must consider whether these students can be more effective working for civil rights in the South or in the North.

Although many citizens deny there is any racial problem in the North, nevertheless, one does exist. It is, by far, more subtle, and this makes it all the more difficult to solve. The state's newspapers within the past year have been filled with complaints concerning de facto segregation in schools and limited opportunities for integrated housing.

Anyone who has ever driven through the Roxbury-Dorchester section of Boston must admit that some segregation does exist. The cause for this segregation is partially economic. If a man does not make enough money to enable him to move his family to a higher rent district, he will be forced to live in a lower one, and, all too often, these areas lack proper housing and facilities.

If a Negro finds work in Massachusetts, and yet is unable to advance in a business which considers qualification and RACE for promotion rather than qualification alone, how can he lead a life most rewarding to himself and to the community?

If we want Southerners to think of Northern freedom marchers as more than nuisances who don't understand what the problem in the South really is, we must first prove to them that in the North we practice what we preach!

There are many ways UMass students can help to promote a northern image that will command the respect of all freedom-loving people. The state of Massachusetts has already initiated a Domestic Service Corps which operates along the lines of the Peace Corps. I'm sure that many young men and women can use their energy and talents to help local governments build up the run down areas of the state where segregation problems most often exist.

A great number of youth workshops also have encouraged Negro and white youths to work together in service projects which not only help the cities, but also create strong ties of friendship between individuals.

Another aid, and perhaps the easiest of all, would be for students whose families own or operate businesses to encourage their parents to hire Negro employees if they do not do so already.

Let us begin now to make Massachusetts a state that stands for true equality for all in action as well as in word.

Letters To The Editor

Unique Position

To the Editor:

I cannot address this letter "to the editor of the other student newspaper". As the only student newspaper, the Collegian enjoys a unique position on campus, common for campuses, but unique for newspapers. Though some advertisers may do so Collegian "subscribers" do not markedly affect the newspaper's success by increasing or decreasing patronage. . .only by writing letters, or joining the staff. To oversimplify, perhaps, your newspaper does not exist in a freely competetive situation. Some writings of Terry Stock, recently carried on your editorial pages, might imply that it does. Since this newspaper is the sole written news medium of our academic community, this one of the "boys of the administration" (about whom Miss Stock is so vitriolic) can no longer withhold protest. These boys really aren't so bad!

On one point I can agree with our Stock taker; the "newspaper is pretty darn big". During the past days, for example, it has brought us significant coverage of Alabama activities, reports on and by members of our campus community of whom we are proud. Over the year it is the (only) student newspaper to which we turn for the presentation of vital information about our academic world. It is our billboard and our crying towel. It is able to both quell and plant rumors, control opinion, report or fail to report fact. Much of this is not unusual as a newspaper assignment. It seems to me, however, that editorial efforts comparing the Collegian's situation to the commercial press are energy poorly spent. Indeed, what commercial paper has the potential for shaping opinion, policy, and practice? Surely this newspaper must see itself not as a separate entity, but in inextricable partnership with the rest of the University? Cannot it's fullest energies be turned toward the shaping of a Great University? (Unsavory words to Miss Stock).

One area where it seems apparent that communication with students needs to be better is in the University's (not just "the administration's") concern for the needs and aspirations of high school and college students who may not presently be included in our university community. Whether enrolled or not we cannot divorce these students from our consideration. Their presence is somehow felt in every University undertaging. Perhaps some coverage in your pages of this problem would help. Communication is a two way job that needs constant attention at both ends.

Whatever our problems with communication, I wish to express to you and your readers my belief that the goals of the administration, faculty, and students are the same. I hope that these goals are also the Collegian's enjoying as it does so unique a position in our specialized academic world.

Sincerely yours,
William C. Starkweather

LIMBO'S COMING

Former UMass Student Jailed In Narcotics Case

BOSTON—A former University of Massachusetts student studying use of narcotic drugs among fellow students for a research project was sentenced to 15 months in a federal penal institution Monday for possession of marijuana.

Sentence Revoked

An indefinite sentence under the Youth Correction Act previously given Robert P. Weber, 22, of 215 Longhill St., Springfield, was revoked and the more specific term imposed when Weber appeared before Judge George C. Sweeney in U. S. District Court here. Weber recently underwent 60 days of psychiatric study while in custody of the U. S. attorney general's office.

Weber, given credit for the time already served, will be eligible for parole on May 4, according to Chief Probation Officer Daniel F. Griffin.

Weber was indicted with David N. Jacobs, 19, of Needham, formerly of Amherst, for violation of the narcotic drug laws at the University of Massachusetts' campus in Amherst last year. Jacobs was given an indefinite sentence under the Youth Correction Act by Judge Sweeney on Dec. 21, 1964, after he was convicted of selling marijuana to an undercover narcotics' agent.

According to testimony at the trial, the contact for the sale was made by Weber, who was researching a scholastic paper on the use of narcotics by students.

A NEW PROGRAM OF INTEREST TO

MEN

It isn't easy to become an officer in the United States Army. Only the best young men are selected. The training and course of study are demanding.

But if you can qualify—and you should find out if you can—you will receive training which will put you a step ahead of other college graduates. Army ROTC training will give you experience that most college graduates do not get—in leading and managing other men, in organizational techniques, in self-discipline and in speaking on your feet. This kind of experience will pay off in everything you do the rest of your life.

Army ROTC has a new program designed specifically for outstanding men who already have two years of college, and plan to continue their college work. During your junior and senior years in this program, you will receive $40 per month. Want to find out more about the program? Simply send in the coupon below, or see the Professor of Military Science if you are now attending an ROTC college. There's no obligation—except the one you owe to yourself.

If you're good enough to be an Army Officer, don't settle for less

Six Exchange Students Study at U. of N. Mexico

The exchange student program between the Universities of Massachusetts and New Mexico, now in its fourth year, has sent five girls and one young man to study in New Mexico.

The program established in 1961 to attack the problem of provincialisms among elementary school teachers is under the administration of the UNM College of Education.

Exchange students from Massachusetts for the spring semester are Sandra Jeanne Comery, Alice Ann Duesing, Pamela R. Kneeland, Karen L. Patitz, Anita Elaine Russo and Mark John Valencia.

All of the students are juniors. Miss Comery, Miss Duesing and Miss Kneeland are majoring in elementary education. Miss Patitz is specializing in mathematics and is a member of Chi Omega social sorority.

Miss Russo, also a Chi Omega, is a Spanish major. Mr. Valencia, a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, is in geology.

The UNM students participating are Marjorie Clark, Sari Ann Berg, Yvonne Brimhall, Betty MacLeod, Patricia Sperry and Rachel Ann Wary.

The two groups of students wil return to their own campuses at the close of the semester.

are not given any criminal records in the town where they have been tried, and so do not have a record in any other town.

VIOLATORS CAN MOVE from one district to the next, given "a second chance" in each new town. Cristy said no more new laws are needed, but laws presently on the books, if more strictly enforced, are sufficient to discourage violators. "Until the courts get more serious and do something about it, we will be fighting a losing battle."

Cristy explained a bill, originally passed last fall and now on the Governor's desk, which would allow people from ages 21 to 25 to obtain liquor identity cards from the town in which they reside. The I.D. card, designed by Cristy, would cost $2 and would carry the owner's photograph in the lower left - hand corner. It would be the responsibility of the town clerk to establish the age and identity of the purchaser. To prevent tampering with the cards, they would be stamped with the town seal and then laminated.

CRISTY EXPRESSED DOUBTS about the usefulness of the liquor identity cards. He said that no card is foolproof. It is unconstitutional to demand $2 for a privilege belonging to everyone. He pointed out that there would be some unfair exceptions which would prevent people over 21 from obtaining cards—residents of Melrose, an officially "dry" city, would not be able to purchase cards.

The government faces the problem of enforcing drinking laws with but 44 investigators to cover more than 8,000 serving places in the state. The help of local authorities is needed. But, said Cristy, "the real key to the problem is education and better law enforcement."

stated that there is no clause in the trade agreement concerning the condition of the southpaw's arm.

SO THE GUY who hit 66 home runs in the minor leauges is lost to Boston forever. Herman has made it plain that they don't want Stuart back. Somehow, somewhere, the Red Sox must come up with another big man, but Dennis Bennett is not the answer.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

Who holds the organized baseball (major and minor leagues) home run record for a single season? Who would guarantee the club he played for a minimum of 35 homeruns a season, 90-100 runs batted in and a batting average of around .260? Who would give his club a boost in attendance because of his extroverted personality?

THE ANSWER TO ALL THESE QUESTIONS is Richard Lee Stuart. To refresh your memory: Dick Stuart was traded by the new regime of the Boston Red Sox for a pitcher of questionable ability, Dennis Bennett. While in Boston, Stuart proved to the fans that he was capable of breaking up any game at any time with his bat. For two years he was in the thick of the home run and runs batted in races. He gave the Red Sox the punch that they had lacked since the retirement of the Splendid Spitter, er splinter, Ted Williams.

The charge against King Richard was his lack of hustle and deficiency with his glove. Many times Stuart had been quoted as saying that it bothered him just as much as the next guy when he booted a ball, but he wasn't about to show an outward display of emotion as another player might. Because of his below average ability at defense the Boston fans would hold their breath when an easy pop fly was hit his way, and resound with applause when he caught it. This is the color that Stuart supplied for the Red Sox.

Anytime the fans are talking about a player, the front office should be interested because they should realize that the fans are interested. The fans were interested in Stuart. Anytime one player can pick up so many nicknames as "Stonefingers", the "Golden Glove", "Dr. Strangeglove" and "Goldfingers" the person must have some fan appeal.

IF STUART WAS SO VALUABLE, you ask, why trade him? Why was he expendable? The "new regime", under Manager Billy Herman, believed that the Red Sox had enough first base potential without Richard the Great and needed a FRONT LINE pitcher more. The first half of this argument is quickly deteriorating. Tony Horton and Bobby Guindon haven't lived up to their expectations and will probably be optioned out once again. The only "front line" work that Dennis Bennett will see is the line in front of the doctor's office. His last attempt on the mound was at batting practice and his shoulder couldn't even hold up to this test.

Sure, go ahead and improve the team. I have nothing against this. The Sox finished pretty close to the cellar last year and were willing to try anything to improve their position in the standings. Thus far the trade looks like a dud. John Quinn, the General Manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, Bennett's former team, has said that the pitcher's arm satisfactorilly passed a medical examination. He further

UMass Bowling Champions

The following students participated in the first annual Pioneer Valley College Invitational Bowling Tournament: (L-R) Don Tordoff (Capt.) Rick D'Andrea, Ken Hardy, Ed Rojewski, Rick Marco and Al Garsys (IM Office). These men have participated in the Intramural Ten Pin Bowling Tournament at the University throughout the Fall and Winter season. They placed first in a field of over twenty colleges.

Sports Desk Tidbits

University of Massachusetts Assistant Athletic Director, Earl E. Lorden announced two changes in the RedmenSpring Sports schedule.

The May 4 varsity track meet with the University of Connecticut will be played here in Amherst instead of Storrs.

THE VARSITY LACROSSE TEAM'S opening game with Wesleyan was erroneously listed on the spring schedule cards. The game will be played April 7 here at the University.

Veteran golfing great, Sam Snead, said in a recent interview that Jack Nicklaus will not get any better.

"This boy has been playing hard, competitive golf since he was thirteen years old and even though he's only 25, this can't help but take a heavy toll," said Sam. "I think all this pressure and constant tournament play have made him equivalent to a man 35 years of age." . . .

Now that the basketball season has ended for the New York Knickerbockers, backcourtman Art Heyman is once again expressing his discontent in the way he has been handled by the Knicks' management.

HEYMAN, THE TOP DRAFT CHOICE in the National Basketball Association last season reiterated his charges that coach Harry Gallatin will neither play him nor trade him. The hefty 6'4" guard, who was held back by an early season injury, has averaged about 12 minutes of playing time per game, resulting in a 6.2 point scoring average. In 1964, as a starter, Art averaged better than 15 points per game.

The confused youngster admits that he's had his own way most of his life and feels that he may be spoiled. His only comment, "I just want out of here."

Komich Fourth In Mr. Mass. Contest

The weightlifting boom at UMass is starting to produce top-flight competitors to represent the University of Massachusetts.

The latest successful competitor is Norman Komich, a junior Math major. Norm recently competed in the Massachusetts Physique Contest held at the Boston Young Men's Christian Union. He placed fourth in a field of eleven finalists.

THE CONTESTANTS WERE JUDGED on symmetry, muscular definition, intelligence, posing ability and athletic ability.

Komich, a member of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity, plans to participate in the Greek Weekend Olympics. In the next few weeks you will be able to see him in person as he will be competing in the Mister New England Contest in Springfield.

A reminder to all students: the University has a modern weight lifting room at the Boyden Physical Education Building that is at the disposal of any male wishing to become physically fit. The room is equipped with all the up to date apparatus that the weight lifter needs.

Sign up now for required Phys. Education courses before it is too late. Some bona fide students have been turned away in anguish. They will return.

President Lederle Predicts "a great University"

University President John Lederle and Senate President Bill Landis as Lederle finishes his address.

by Jim Foudy
Staff Reporter

"We are on our way to being a great University . . . we are not trying to create an image, we are creating a reality." This is the goal which President John W. Lederle expressed to the Student Senate Wednesday.

Speaking for the first time before the assembly, President Lederle called for support of the Willis Commission's Master Plan for Education, and asked that students accept "mud, lack of elevators, and other problems" as being necessary to insure that "our University is second to none, not even Amherst or Harvard."

PRESIDENT LEDERLE, FOCUSING on the Willis Report, stressed that the state needs a board of higher education to supervise the four necessary systems of education in the Commonwealth:

1. a university with branches and the mandate to grant doctoral degrees
2. a state college system limited to the granting of masters degrees
3. a community college system
4. technological schools.

The proposed Board of Higher Education will gather data and information about the various institutions, and approve or disapprove new program or degrees.

THE PRESIDENT COMMENTED that the Willis Report is "trying to encourage all institutions toward excellence but within their defined areas . . . this will assure organic and logical development of educational opportunities."

Commenting on UMass-Boston, President Lederle stated that "Boston had been the only city of its size without a public university", and that UMass-Boston will elevate some of the University's growing admissions problem.

UMass-Boston is now accepting 1,000 students each Sept. for the next four years and will begin admitting 2,000 per year after 1969.

"We are opening in Boston this September", said the President, "even if we have to have classes in the hallways of the gas company building."

"WE INTEND TO HAVE a first rate university there . . . first rate in terms of admissions requirements, faculty, and a sound curriculum."

In referring to the University's "public or perish" ruling, President Lederle remarked that "we are bringing in great teachers and we do ask if they like to teach, but we need teacher-scholars who continue to stimulate."

Answering a question raised about the Athletic Council, the President told the Senate that the council does not want to administer control over the vending machines, and reminded the Senators not to approach the council or Administration with the attitude that "everything they have done is wrong."

"YOU CAN NOT ALWAYS expect me to do what is right", he said, "but I hope you won't impugn my motives or those of my colleagues in the Administration . . . your objectives and ours are the same."

23 Freshmen Present "Willis" Petition To State Legislators

by Richard Danca
Staff Reporter

The State House visit yesterday of 23 members of the freshman executive council to present a petition in favor of the original Willis Report on education was termed "very successful" by freshman class vice - president Robert Keough.

While in Boston with the 1800 signature petition, the students met with Rep. Anthony Scibelli, House Speaker John Davoren, and Lt. Gov. Eliot Richardson.

The four class officers later discussed the report and petition with Chairman Kevin Harrington of the legislative committee on the Willis Report.

KEOUGH SAYS that "Harrington hopes the original report goes through, but said that the amendments will not cripple the bill."

The petition and trip were in answer to similar trips to the State House by student representatives of Lowell Tech and Southern Mass. Technological Institute.

These two institutes favor the amended version of the bill which calls for several "state universities" throughout Massachusetts.

THE ORIGINAL REPORT, supported by the UMass administration designates UMass as the "sole state university".

"The trip was appreciated by the legislators," Keough also said. "They assured us that they would take the petition into consideration."

On Wednesday, Rep. David Bartley addressed the House to explain certain points about the two Willis bills.

"Confusion has been compounded," Bartley said, "by trying to tie the present . . . (two bills) to the sales tax, to your leadership and to emasculation of the entire proposal."

"We must not be diverted, confused and led adrift from the goal with which everyone is in agreement, namely to improve education."

Save Mount Greylock Topic Of Sunday Meeting

by Dan Glosband
Manager Editor

Before the State legislature presently are two bills which would, if passed, preserve the integrity of Mount Greylock as the most unique natural resource in the Commonwealth.

The enactment of these bills would destroy a 12 year old proposal to develop the area into a tramway-ridden ski resort and provide the basis for a program to improve its value as a resource.

MT. GREYLOCK, situated among the Berkshires in Western Mass., is the state's highest peak and one of its last wilderness preserves. The Mt. Greylock Reservation was established in 1898 to preserve the area as a public park whose principal attraction is nondeveloped, natural grandeur.

Local forces behind the bills are meeting Sunday at 1:45 in Bowditch Lodge (behind Machmer) in conjunction with the Mt. Greylock Protective Association. The meeting is aimed at uniting the friends of Greylock in the Conn. Valley, and gaining the aid of the interested staff, faculty and students of the University.

LOCAL MOTIVATION is centered in the person of Stan Mikelk, coordinator of Sunday's meeting. He is a member of the Mass. Fish and Game Board, the area representative of the Massachusetts Wilderness Soc. and the father of conservation education laws in the Commonwealth.

Featured also will be Dr. J. W. Brainere of Springfield College, Senator Nason, Representative Nolan, and Mr. William Tague, president of the Protective Association.

Mikelk has issued an invitation to all those interested in preserving natural resources to attend Sunday's conference. "Students with an interest in survival have a personal interest in everything we do, everything we achieve," he said.

"The cause is a common cause, the dispute a simple case of profit versus the public good," added Mikelk, "and the battle for survival, an unending one."

HE FEELS that youth is a resource in itself, and can be employed in what is he State's greatest conservation battle in history.

"The University and its inherent wealth of talent can serve as a central rallying point for the cause of conservation and preservation of resources in the area," Mikelk emphasized.

New Dorm Laborers Picket For Wages

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

The new high rise dorms stopped rising yesterday morning when the construction workers went on strike for higher wages.

The strike came to an end shortly after midnight when union officials and state and federal moderators reached tentative work contract agreements.

According to the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette to strike at UM had an echo at Pittsfield and Holyoke, where locals of the Construction and General Laborers Union voted to strike after a breakdown of negotiations with the Building Trades Employers Assoc. in Springfield.

Sympathy strikers did not cross the picket lines established yesterday morning by laborers and mason tenders of Local 596. According to Union steward Andy Healy, carpenters, steel and electrical workers cooperated fully with the strikers.

LOCAL 596 is asking for an 80 cent, three year package raise. The raise is to include 25 cents an hour each year and 2½ cents each the first and second years for the 10 cent hourly health and welfare benefits.

Principal hold outs include D. O'Connell's Sons of Holyoke and George F. Driscoll Co. of New York. Smaller contractors are also involved in the negotiations.

PICKETS carried signs saying "No Contract, No Work." The strikers said that a non-union excavating company from Ware, Was Bros. crossed the line to work yesterday morning. The Union steward said there was nothing the strikers could legally do to prevent them from crossing the lines. There were no disturbances.

Early yesterday morning there were reports that the stadium workers might go on a sympathy strike.

Reports from a usually reliable source indicate that the construction is thus far ahead of schedule.

THE OUTSIDE work goes fairly quickly but the inside finishing work is much more time consuming. It was a plasterer's strike that delayed the completion of the Orchard Hill Complex last summer. Other complications also arose. A different contractor is handling the South West Complex.

Official Notice

Fall Residence Policy Stated

By 1968 the Southwest Residence Area of the campus will house more than 5300 students who will be served according to residence groups, in three separate dining commons. In September, 1965, the first four residence halls in this group will open. Construction progress has been excellent and orders are now being placed for furnishings and equipment. Three of these halls, all of which are of three- and four-floor design, are being assigned to women; the fourth building is being assigned to men.

THE RESIDENTIAL COLLEGE concept of faculty participation in the educational and social life of the student residence halls will be extended to this new area. The smaller size of the living groups (no building exceeds two hundred students), and the introduction of new faculty members into the organization of the group, will probably result in the extension ofthe Orchard Hill concept but with innovations which will be unique to the Southwest Area.

The dining commons which will serve these four residence halls as well as the two closest twenty-two story halls should be completed prior to the start of the second semester, 1965-66. The two high rise residence halls, as well as three others now under construction, are planned for completion in the summer of 1966. The four halls to be opened in September, 1965, and two high rise buildings to the north are all clustered around the dining commons which has been designed to serve only these students. Stu-serve only these students.

THIS PLAN, however, requires that ALL student resident inthese units be participants in the dining plan. While the usual exemption from boarding hall programs will exist during the first semester, 1965-66—namely, for seniors and those over twenty-one years—ALL students in the Southwest Area will be placed on required five-day board plan at the start o fthe second semester.

Rumors to the contrary, there is NO plan for September, 1965, to reassign any residence hall now occupied to other groups than are now in residence. The five high rise buildings now under construction will, however, by summer of 1966, end our seemingly chronic housing shortage. Since each of these buildings contains three separate residence units of 192 students, we will, in fact, be completing the equivalent of fifteen residence halls of approximately the size of Arnold or Wheeler houses in a single summer.

The completion of these high rise buildings in 1966 will permitmany changes in the campus residence pattern. Several residence halls may well be removed from use for a year to permit extensive renovation. Other unit housing students in the County Circle group will be removed from student use.

THE ADVENTAGES TO HAVING both men's and women'sresidence units located in all residence areas seem clearly to outweigh the possible disadvantages and we will continue to move toward greater integration of the residence halls as units. The views of students as expressed through student government and individually will be solicited as will be the active participation of interested students in the development and adoption of these plans.

J is for JAZZ

The Good Sounds

by Rez

. . . Herbie Mann is at the Jazz Workshop all this week in Boston to be followed by Dexter Gordon next week.

. . . Miles Davis has a new album out on Columbia. It's a live session recorded at New York's Lincoln Center in February for the benefit of the voter registration in Mississippi.

. . . LIME-LIGHT, the great new Jazz series from the Mercury folks, has added six new releases. "Cannonball and Coltrane" combining their efforts with Wynton Kelly, Paul Chambers, Jimmy Cobb. The album, a swinger, is a re-release.

. . . "I had a Ball," the great new B'way show, is done up in finest style by Art Blakey, Milt Jackson, Oscar Peterson, Diz Gillespie, Quincy Jones, and Chet Baker. This album features quartets and big band tracks and is the best version of the jazz releases of the show. Album is entitled "We Had A Ball."

. . . Cannonball Adderley's production of "A Portrait of Thelonious" featuring Bud Powell is a very listenable alblm. It features most of Monk's compositions and is a COLUMBIA.

. . . Roland Kirk premieres for Limelight with "I Talk With The Spirits." "Among the better offerings, John Lewis "Django" is offered. Featured personnel include Mike Flemming, Walter Perkins, and vocals by Jay Cee Albert. This is good.

Milt Jackson's "In A New Setting" finds the leader of the MJQ in an upbeat tempo. This Limelight recording features Jackson originals.

Oscar Peterson and the trio are found slowing it on "Canadiana Suite." This Limelight release features Peterson originals and it is very quiet JAZZ.

After a long period of trying, Astrud Gilberto finally has her own album on VERVE. We saw this soft voiced - young lady at Newport lost summer. She sings beautifully and this her very own album features her in the bossa nova style that made her famous. Arranging and conducting for her is Marty Paich. All compositions were written by Antonio Carlos Jobism. This recording proves for sure that Astrud is no longer "The Girl From Ipanema.

TALL TALES

(Reprinted Diamondback)

"I'm sorry I missed the exam," said the student. "You see, I was born in the Okeefenokee Swamp and consequently I suffer periodic attacks of malaria."

That's just one of the wild class excuses University students have offered professors.

A senior, loathe to take a certain final exam, taped a patch over his left eye and told his instructor, "On weekends I play goalie for the Washington Ice hockey team. Last Saturday some guy tried a slap shot and the puck hit me in the eye." However, the student has never been on skates.

Rare diseases are all the rage with class-cutters. Around midterm time mononucleosis usually reaches epidemic proportions. And a freshman coed, forced to explain her ten absences, told her Spanish teacher she had come down with a serious case of —what else?—Spanish influenza.

Morbid Tendencies

Sometimes excuses reveal morbid tendencies. Relatives "pass away" at a student's slightest wish. One fraternity man likens his great-aunt to a cat, because "she's gone into the Great Beyond nine times since my freshman year." However, one school of thought contends it is better to let Grandma lie deathly ill for a couple of weeks; thus the excuse could cover three weeks of cuts.

White Lie Best

An expert at the art of imaginative excuses claims, "It's easy to forge infirmary slips and notes from mother, but somehow that's neither as honest nor as challenging as telling a white lie. Most faculty members have a pretty good sense of humor, and generally they appreciate a good tall tale." Confirming this, one history instructor regards class excuses as offspring of the unique American folk humor.

"Conservatives" might object that excuses are really unnecessary, because students should attend class anyway. Others find that the luxury of sleeping through an eight o'clock or attending an early-afternoon class can often overrule such academic considerations. Moreover, many college veterans prefer make-ups to those given at the regular time.

However, excuses can sometimes backfire; in such cases a certain amount of aplomb is desirable. A current story in campus lore concerns the young man who walked into an upper-level B.A. class with his right arm in a cast and sling and protested that he would not be able to write the exam.

The graduate assistant replied that no make-up would be given —whereupon the student shrugged, removed his cast and sling, and sat down to take the test.

The Biggest Four Year Old

The sounds emitted by the thriving four-year-old have been heard as far away as Florida, and a growing band of Western Massachusetts residents are convinced that the youngster is one of the area's greatest benefactors to the pastime of listening.

Celebrating its fourth birthday this month, the object of all this enthusiasm is WFCR-FM, the Four-College radio station, which first went on the air in March 1961. Supported jointly by Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith colleges and the University of Massachusetts, WFCR is a non-commercial, educational broadcasting outlet which has made devoted friends all over New England in its relatively short lifetime.

A glance at one of the WFCR monthly program schedules gives some clue to the station's growing popularity. There's the Festival of Grand Opera, presenting full-length operas every weekday afternoon, a program of conversational French lessons, talks by distinguished scholars on subjects ranging from poetry to nuclear physics, commentary and analysis of national and world events and even the internationally celebrated "Good Show" featuring British comedian Peter Sellers.

"Our general purpose," says Station Manager Hulsen, "is to extend to the listening 'community' the cultural and educational resources of the four colleges."

To accomplish this, WFCR is equipped with a powerful 34,400-watt transmitter located on Mt. Lincoln in Pelham, Mass. The station's combination studio-office is in the University of Massachusetts' education building. Operating at 88.4 m.c. on the FM band, WFCR has regular listeners is most of the New England states and New York state and has had indications that its programs have been received in places as far distant as Florida.

The station has five permanent staff members including Manager Hulsen, almost all of whom double in brass, performing everything from technical duties to announcing. Volunteer workers from the four-college communities and educational broadcasting from the University provides additional help.

Despite the heavy demands, WFCR staff members, volunteers and Four-College faculty join forces to put together and broadcast an amazingly large and varied range of programs each week.

Lectures, concerts, conferences and panel discussions presented at the four colleges are recorded as they happen and form an important segment of WFCR's schedule. Faculty members from the four institutions lend their talents to programs in their special fields. And interviews with such visiting celebrities as Dean Acheson, Werner Von Braun and Robert Frost have yielded many memorable moments in WFCR's young life.

While the station's programming and audience have grown steadily through its four years of broadcasting, however, WFCR faces a financial dilemma as it enters its fifth year. More facilites and equipment, as well as additional staff, are needed. The four sponsoring institutions have made substantial capital investments in establishing the station and contribute to its operating budget; but like all U.S. colleges, they also face other, ever-increasing demands on their resources.

Anyone interested in learning more about WFCR, subscribing to the program guide or helping continue the station's activities, should write to WFCR-FM, Box 611, Amherst, Mass.

The Fine Decline And Fall Of Rome

Romulus opened at Bowker last night, a highly enjoyable comedy with few flaws.

The least successful actors were more than adequate (a credit to director, Doris Abramson, for her interpretation and coaching) and several performers were outstanding.

Larry Wilker, as Romulus, was a strong lead in a difficult part, always with a casual and fresh demeanor. Tom Kerrigan (Zeno), and Eleanor Caplan (Julia) held their own in the Romulus-centered play.

Julia's forcefulness balanced well with Romulus' c a s u a l

H. P. Lovecraft Fan Club at Work

Far out in a dreary place of Massachus e t t s woodland lie the forgotten remains of the post revolutionary rebel leader, Daniel Shays. The the remnants of a house Shays a b a n d oned in 1787.

Isolated by legal statute and obscured by fading memory the ruins of Shays' old homestead are succumbing to the inexorable onslaught of the forest. Soon, due to the double menace of climate and neglect, all will have vanished.

A group of University students are trying to prevent such a loss. To date, their efforts have generally been successful. Their goal is to recover as much evidence of Shays' habitation as they can from the site before the location is completely overgrown.

Daniel Shays led a brief populist rebellion of western Massachusetts farmers in 1786-87. The movement was directed against farm foreclosures, country court charges, and taxation. After an unsuccessful attack on the Springfield Armory, the revolt collapsed. Shays fled and disappeared.

Despite its failure, Shays' Rebellion is a significant event in early American history. As an attack upon the institution of property and as a storm warning of a more general rural unrest, the revolt cast an influential shadow over the deliberations of the constitutional convention of the next year.

THE UMASS group interested in saving Shays' remains from obscurity is the UM chapter of H. P. Lovecraft Fan Club and Necromacy Society. Though the Society is primarily interested in H. P. Lovecraft, a writer of gothic horror stories who died in the thirties, their interests also extend to local history and folklore.

What drew the Lovecraft Society to the Shays' homestead, however, was the eerie nature of the terraine in which the house is located.

The site of Shays' home lies in the only genuine grost town in the Commonwealth, the Prescott Peninsula of the Quabbin Reservoir.

A broad tongue of land stretching six miles south into Quabbin, the peninsula is the remnant of one of four towns evacuated in the thirties and submerged by the reservoir. Only a small area of the township of Prescott, however, is under water; the rest forms the peninsula.

WHAT IS LEFT of Shays' home is above water.

As part of the Quabbin watershed, the peninsula has been fenced off and—for thirty-five years—banned to the public. The hilly land was once craggy New England farmland, but has now reverted to forest. During the evacuation all evidence of man was removed. Lonely cellar holes are all that remain of a town of fifteen hundred.

Seven members of the Lovecraft Society visited the peninsula March 20 and began an exploration of the area. Special permission for their visit was obtained from the Belchertown station of the M.D.C. at Windsor Dam.

The Society's efforts at finding genuine relics of Shays are hampered by a second inhabitation of the site by a family which took up occupancy after Shays left. In further trips the Society members hope to separate the remains of the second settlers from Shays'.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

The Follies Of Our Day

There has been a sweeping change in values during the 20th century. The heroes of today are the underdog, the common man, the incompetent, and the lawbreaker. Little sympathy and certainly no admiration is given to the rich, the successful, and the disciplined or self-contained man. The rich are scorned for their privileges, and either taxed ninety percent of their income or forced to pay thirty-five percent of it to a good lawyer. The successful are labeled "Darwinists" and tied in a straight jacket of social legislation.

If the heroes of yesterday are not plagued by the scorning of values they knew, they must be plagued by the praise alloted to anti-values. We do not openly declare respect for the law and evil. Yet, we accomplish this, perhaps even more effectively, by praising Negroes for the number of times they've been arrested. By idolizing those who break the law (in the case of the Negro, laws with respect to sit-ins and illegal assemblage, such as the earlier, unauthorized marches, we villainize those who keep it. By praising vice, we discourage virtue. If we fail to see the dangers of our follies today, we shall see them all to dramatically tomorrow when the children old enough to see but too young to understand, become the ruling generation of the world.

We petition for aid for the peoples in slums all over the country. When we see yachts—long, expensive, and certainly unnecessary — at the "Cape," we indignantly ask, "How can they ride in their 'solid gold Cadillacs' while there are people who don't have enough to eat?" Yet, let he who asked this question ask another—"how much does he have beyond substenance?" If it is wrong for one to have a "solid gold Cadillac" while others are hungry and cold, then it is wrong for another to have cigarettes, a coke, or a beer—all unnecessary consumption items—while others are without essentials. Unless one is willing to give up his own consumption of food, clothing, and entertainment beyond necessities, let him not ask another to do so. Values are not relative to degree. Let us not condemn the rich simply because they are rich. It isn't the fault of others if they weren't lucky encugh to be born in Hell's Kitchen to rise out of it! Nobody understands what a terrible handicap it is to be born rich."

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

The Collegian's Obligations

To the Editor:

Registrar Starkweather recently pointed out that the Collegian enjoys a unique position, common on campuses, but unique for newspapers . . ." regarding the Collegian's virtual monopoly in printed campus media.

The statement is in error. For, in the United States, fewer than twelve metropolitan areas have more than one daily newspaper available to the people. Of these dozen or so cities, several are monopolistic, since all the papers are owned by one company. An example is the Springfield Newspapers. There are in the United States a handful over 1700 daily papers.

Thus the Collegian enjoys no unique position in journalism, whether in the daily or less than daily fields.

Further, the Registrar of the University asks: "Indeed, what commercial paper has the potential for shaping opinion, policy and practice?" The Registrar ought to be aware that in large measure, the present position and prestige of the University is due to the reporting and explanation (editorializing) of two Boston Globe men, Ian Menzies and Ian Forman, who in 1960 brought the plight of UMass to the eyes of the commonwealth's citizens in a lengthy series of articles. And no less a figure than former Senate President John E. Powers, who opposed University expansion at that time, attributed his loss in part, of the Boston Mayoral election to the climate of opinion established by Menzies and Forman.

If the printed press is so unlikely to form opinion, practices, and policies, why does the University bother to maintain an Office of Public Relations? For a broader example, can the Atlanta Constitution have had no effect on race relations in its state? Is the influence of the New York Times to be denied? The Registrar implies all this. In fact by writing to the Collegian, he was himself moved (read "practice") to state his opinions.

Indeed, all is not well in professional journalism, and not perfect in collegiate journalism. Yet here the Registrar misses the point when he states his belief that the goals of the administration, faculty, and students are the same—promoting self-consciousness is a legitimate function of the press. Moreover, the means to goal attainment are probably more often questioned than are the goals. Miss Stock in her editorials, has questioned the propriety of the University controlling the Collegian as a means to the Great University-goal.

What is essential here is the understanding that the press, i.e., the Collegian, is a participant in the campus society as a disinterested observer and passionately interested counselor. The administration, faculty, and students each have strictly defined roles; they certainly interact. The campus society is more or less voluntary: no one is forced to participate. Anyone, in any of the three roles, can leave the setup, as sometimes happens when friction arises. In such a case, even before, the role of the newspaper is the role of "communication"—informing the three groups of what is going on, possibly averting friction. The newspaper is clearly in the society, but, just as clearly is not necessarily of any of the three groups.

Briefly, the newspaper "protects and promotes" our freedoms, precisely because of this in-but-not-of situation. This is why democratic societies can be maintained. If democracy is government of the people, for the people, and by the people, the people must have access to the government and to each other. If this is not the case, who is to know what the people want? Who is to know the people?

The Registrar is right in saying the Collegian can fulfill the ". . . concern for the needs and aspiration of . . . college students . . ." but does the Collegian's responsibilities extend to " . . . high school and college students who may not presently be included in our university community . . ."

But if needs and aspirations are to be communicated, the Collegian must remain free (and concomitantly responsible). If needs and aspirations are to be dictated, the administration should move in with buckets of pre-digested pap salted with the herbs of homily and the spices of complacency.

Physical Fitness

I was quite proud to see that Norm Komich, a UMass student, was able to place Fourth in the Mr. Massachusetts Contest. However, I must honestly say that it is beyond my comprehension how he was able to train at all with the facilities available at the Boyden Building. The "modern weight lifting room at the Boyden Physical Education Building that is at the disposal of any male wishing to become physically fit.", is in reality an ill-equipped small room into which it is impossible to gain admittance. If by some chance you arrive when the room is open and some athletic team is not using it, you are welcome to one of the bent bars which necessitates an element of balance as well as strength. Not only are the bars bent, but they are scarce, Just think, guys, if you go down there, you too can wait an hour or so for a barbell.

When one finally gets into the inadequate weight room, procures an inadequate bent bar, he must face a wall while working out, upon which is a childish sign stating that (in essence) unless the inadequate weights are replaced in the inadequate racks, the inadequate weight room will be closed.

We are lucky to have a Norm Komich at this University, but he is not the only person interested in weight training. Not all of us want to become Mr. Mass., but we do like to stay physically fit. The facilities at a University as large as this should be more complete and more available for student use.

PRES. LEDERLE . . .

Highlights of the regular Senate session were:

- Budgets: The Senate passed the 1965-66 budgets for:
R.S.O. Office—$17,970.
Student Senate—$13,314.
W.M.U.A.—$8,104.
Precisionettes—$4,010.
- Motion of Gratitude: A motion by Senator Jim Allen (Commuter) extending thanks to two resigning Senate members was passed by the Senate after meeting some unexpected opposition fromthe floor.
- An attempt was made by senator Dick Wimberly (Brett) to strike the name of Ross Jones from the motion extending gratitude for service to Jones, an active four year member of the Senate, and Wendy Hall, a senator for three years and chairman of Budgets Committee.
- "I have great respect for Senator Jones," said Wimberly, "he has done a great deal of good but also a great deal of bad."
- Senator Kathy Walsh ('66 at-large) defended the resigned senator's tenure in office as one in which "he has given his hard work and services, and deserves this commendation more than anyone."

ROMULUS REVIEW . . .

comedy. Mr. Kerrigan displayed his great talent for comic stage gestures and expressions.

Ken Bordner, doubling as the Chef and Theoderic was amazing—even too strong for his "bit" part—and punctuated the performance with laughter at his every appearance. The others, generally, seemed to forget how funny the play really is. They lacked a certain zest, or enjoyment—call it ham—that would have made the lines much funnier.

The result was a slow pace, or a miss chance for a laugh, or in most cases, simply a laugh from the lines despite the delivery.

Technically, there were, again, the good or at least the "dubious." The music, by Gene Benton, was the perfect balance of dissonance and vitality. The actors' movement and stage lighting were well integrated.

The sets and costumes, characteristic of U.T. this year, were a bit too luxurious. The overbearing impression of "wow-look-at-that" carried them beyond their duty of providing the play with an environment or augmenting its meaning.

This Romulus is good enough to play with a minimum of sets and costumes. This Romulus is too funny to play to a small house (Thursday brought only about 150 people).

If you have the dollar find time to enjoy Romulus, tonight or Saturday.

IS EUROPE?

College life is such a busy one, what with learning the Maxixe, attending public executions, and walking our cheetahs, that perforce we find ourselves sometimes neglecting our studies. Therefore this column, normally a vehicle for innocent tomfoolery, will occasionally forego levity to offer a quick survey course in one of the learned disciplines. Today, for an opener, we will discuss Modern European History.

Strictly defined, Modern European History covers the history of Europe from January 1, 1964, to the present. However, in order to provide employment for more teachers, the course has been moved back to the Age of Pericles, or the Renaissance, as it is better known as.

The single most important fact to remember about Modern European History is the emergence of Prussia. As we all know, Prussia was originally called Russia. The "P" was purchased from Persia in 1874 for $24 and Manhattan Island. This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.

Persia without a "P" was of course called Ersia. This so embarrassed the natives that they changed the name of the country to Iran. This led to a rash of name changing. Mesopotamia became Iraq, Schleswig-Holstein became Saxe-Coburg, Bosnia-Herzegovina became Cleveland. There was even talk about changing the name of stable old England, but it was forgotten when the little princes escaped from the Tower and invented James Watt. This later became known as the Missouri Compromise.

Only last week he invented the German short-haired pointer.

Meanwhile Johann Gutenberg was quietly inventing the printing press, for which we may all be grateful, believe you me. Why grateful? I'll tell you why: Because without Gutenberg's invention you would not have this newspaper to read and you might never learn that Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades are now available in two varieties—the regular double-edge blade we have all come to know and love, and the new Personna Injector Blade. Users of injector razors have grown morose in recent years, even sullen, and who can blame them? How would you feel if you were denied the speed and comfort and durability and truth and beauty of Personna Stainless Steel shaving? Not very jolly, I'll wager! But injector shavers may now rejoice—indeed all shavers may—for whether you remove your whiskers regularly or injectorly, there is a Personna blade for you—a Personna Stainless Steel Blade which will give you more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other brand you might name. If by chance you don't agree, the makers of Personna will gladly buy you a pack of any brand you think is better.

Yes, friends, we may all be grateful to Johann Gutenberg for inventing the means to spread this great news about Personna. The next time you're in Frankfurt-am-Main, why don't you drop in and say thanks to Mr. Gutenberg? He is elderly—408 years last birthday—but still quite active in his laboratory. Only last week he invented the German short-haired pointer.

But I digress. Returning to Modern European History, let us now examine that ever-popular favorite, France.

France, as we all know, is divided into several Departments. There is the Police Department, the Fire Department, the Gas and Water Department, and the Bureau of Weights and Measures. There is also Madame Pompadour, but that is a dirty story and is taught only to graduate students.

Finally we take up Italy—the newest European nation. Italy did not become a unified state until 1848 when Garibaldi, Cavour, and Victor Emmanuel threw three coins in the Trevi Fountain. This lovely gesture so enchanted all of Europe that Metternich traded Parma to Talleyrand for Mad Ludwig of Bavaria. Then everybody waltzed till dawn and then, tired but happy, they started the Thirty Years War. This later became known as Pitt the Younger.

Space does not permit me to tell you any more about Modern European History. Aren't you glad?

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

Is any sports fan able to conceive another professional basketball team besides the Boston Celtics as World Champions? No bombs in the office please, but the reign of the Celtics could be over.

Before the Philadelphia 76ers vanquished the Cincinnati Royals Wednesday night it looked like the Boston team would coast to the championship. Boston Coach Red Auerbach had personally picked the Royals in the East and the St. Louis Hawks as the champs in the West. Both of these teams have been eliminated.

THE UPSTART BALTIMORE BULLETS will probably succumb to the Los Angeles Lakers' combination of Jerry West and Elgin Baylor to be crowned the Western Division Champions. But who will provide the Lakers with their competition in the championship?

It could very easily be the 76ers. Since the acquisition of Big Wilt Chamberlain the Philadelphia entry has soared from a mediocre sub-five hundred team to a strong contender. Even when Chamberlain was picked up in a trade at mid-season Auerbach figured the 76ers would lay low for the playoffs.

But Chamberlain is not the only great on the Philadelphia team. Hal Greer threw in 25 points in the final game with the Royals and Rookie Lucius Jackson added 16. With such veterans as Red Kerr, Al Bianchi and Larry Costello in the lineup, the 76ers have to be rated extremely dangerous.

The point, and a good one it is, that super-star Oscar Robertson was not able to perform at his full capacity cannot be overlooked. But Philly is a team that knows they are capable of taking the big ones and will not let up. They remain as the only team that split the season's series with the Celtics.

Now let's look at the Celtics. This was the year that Sam Jones proved to everybody that he could shoot. Playing in all 80 regular season games, Jones broke the Celtics scoring record for a single campaign.

John Havlicek has moved into the role as the best sixth man in the league but his sore knee may not hold up throughout a tough series. K. C. Jones is one of the fastest guards on the courts. Satch Sanders has always made his presence felt.

AND THE CELTICS CENTER, Bill Russell, is a fairly good ball player. Rus has just been named the League's Most Vauable Player and he'll be out to prove to everyone that he's worthy of the title. A healthy, spirited Russell will mean the difference in the playoffs. Without him it would be Philadelphia all the way in four.

The Celtics have had a long layoff. To them, playoffs are matter-of-fact. They must get psyched up or else be run over by the high spirited 76ers. This is the year of the upset in pro basketball. Going out on a limb and leaving myself open for chastisement, I'll go with Chamberlain and company in a tight seven game series. They will then go on to take the Lakers, winners over Baltimore in four straight, in six games.

The only thing I can pray for is that the series lasts at least until Spring vacation begins and all will be forgotten when classes resume.

Lacrossemen Open Wednesday Against N.E. Champs Wesleyan

by John Cunningham
Sports Staff

The University of Massachusetts Lacrosse team opens its 11 game season Wednesday, April 7 at 3 p.m. when the team meets Wesleyan, last year's New England Champions.

Coach Dick Garber, who has been selected as head coach for the North in this year's North-South All-Star Lacrosse Game, is looking forward to another winning season. Trying to overcome the loss of 10 lettermen, including 4 out of the top six scorers from last year's team, Garber has been working hard to develop replacements.

MOLDING NEW TEAMS is nothing new for Coach Garber. In the 10 years that he has been lacrosse coach at the University he has found only 5 players who had played lacrosse before coming to college. In spite of this he has compiled a 66-37-2 record including 2 divisional championships and the New England Championship in 1963. Former players developed through Garber's tutelage have included 5 All-Star North selections and 7 Honorable Mention All-Americans. Expected to start on Wednesday are: Dick Brown, this year's captain, Jim Mahoney, and Charlie Arakion at midfield; Kevin O'Brien, Bob Edmonston and Howard Goffman on attack; and John Schroeder, Fred Foley and Brod Stokes on defense.

Alternating on attack will be Aikan, O'Riley, and Wanless. Midfieldmen Houde, Pielsiver, Jarrett, and Morgan are expected to see a lot of action along with defenseman Rafferty.

Captain Dick Brown, and Jim Mahoney will carry a lot of weight on their shoulders as the only returning starters from last year's team. John Schroeder, playing his first full season, is expected to be invaluable on defense now that he can devote his time to lacrosse. Bob Lawson, a junior will definitely be the starting goalie due to an injury to the other goalie Ed Flaherty, who will be out of action for a few weeks.

WEDNESDAY'S GAME may

well be a key game for both clubs. Last year Wesleyan beat UMass for the first time in the history of their rivalry and Wesleyan went on, incidentally, to win its first New England Championship.

This year Wesleyan has had the advantage of playing 3 pre-season games against stiff competition while the University has not been able to go on its customary pre-season trip due to the late spring vacation.

The Outlook on Wednesday:

UMass will be sending a good but inexperienced team against an experienced, difficult opponent. However, UMass. is always tough on its home field. Before last year UMass hadn't lost a home game in three years. Look for a hard fought battle, and if the team overcomes this hurdle, they will become a definite threat for the New England Championship. If anyone wants to see a preview of this year's team there will be a game-scrimmage tomorrow at 2:00 against R.P.I. on the lacrosse field.

Intramural Report

by Dick Lowe

BOWLING — In the biggest upset of the bowling season, TEP defeated the Grayson #1 pinmen 6 games to 2 to win the campus championship. Led by Liederman's 188 in the last string, the frat men overcame a 43 pin deficit and won by a total of 35 pins in a thrilling conclusion to the campus bowling season.

WRESTLING — A capacity crowd appeared at the auxillary gym Wednesday to witness the IM wrestling championships. Nine matches were scheduled and the fans were not disappointed as they were treated to high excitement and skillful performances. Nine champions were crowned, including "Slugo" Smith (Gorman-pin), "Smasher" Shulman (TEP-decision), "Brute" Baldwin (Vicky's-overtime decision), "Pug" Pagach (Unattached-decision), "Demon" Doherty (LCA-decision), "Strangler" Sales (Hills South-forfeit), "Cutie" Cowern (TKE-pin), "Fearless" Fitzpatrick (KS-pin) and "Tiger" Toner (Unattached-decision.) KS won the frat title with 25 points, followed by LCA with 15. Gorman and Hills each had 10 points among the dorms, while Vicky's led the independent groups with 20.

SQUASH — Dick Garber, a member of the Phys. Ed. faculty, defeated N. Powell for the Campus Squash Championship in a hotly contested match. The final score was 15-10, 15-8, and 15-10.

VOLLEYBALL — The frat men from SPE defeated the Butterfield Lemons and won the right to meet Vicky's (the independent champs) for the Campus Volley Ball title. This should be an exciting match as the men from SPE attempt to match TEP's bowling victory.

BADMINTON — All badminton players interested in playing in the IM Campus Championship tournament are asked to submit their names to the IM office no later than Friday, April 9. The tourney will start on April 21st.

Vietnam "Teach-In" Scheduled For Wednesday Night

by Pat Petow Staff Reporter

A Dusk to Dawn Teach-In, both to discuss and to demonstrate concern for the war in Vietnam will be conducted for area students by a newly-formed faculty group, with the four college student Committee to Protest the War in Vietnam.

The Mahar Auditorium symposium will take place between Wednesday, April 7 at 9:00 p.m. and Thursday, April 8 at 6:00 a.m. Women Students at UMass and Smith College may attend provided that they sign out for the meeting and us the provided bus service.

A FOUR COLLEGE CHAPTER of the Universities Committee on the Problems of Peace and War, established at a faculty meeting at UMass, Monday, April 4, began its work of "investigating, discussing ,and disseminating" immediately in sponsoring the Teach-In. The three member executive committee will chair the proceedings: Prof. Sidney Kaplan, UMass for the first three hours; then, Prof. Henry T. Yost, Amherst; and finally, Prof. Robert J. Fabian, Smith.

Prof. Henry Steele Commager, of the Amherst College history department and author of The American Mind, will initiate the nine hours.

FOR THE EARLY PART of the program, a faculty panel of Professors Luther A. Allen, UMass; David Leonard, UMass; H. Spiro, Amherst; Eugene Gross Holtz, Mt. Holyoke; and Peter Rowe, Smith is planned.

Robert Francis of Amherst, recent winner of the Prize of Rome, will then continue the poetry readings to be interspersed between the other acivities. UMass English instructors; Joseph Langland, Robert G. Tucker, Leon O. Barron, David R. Clark and Martin Halpern will also read from their works.

The symposium, like its predecessor at Columbia University in many respects, will feature folksinger Barbara Webster of UMass.

IN THE SECOND HALF of the program, Mrs. Teresina Havens, a professor at Greenfield Community College and a student of Buddhism, will discuss religious and social reforms in Southeastern Asia.

Several films, including one of Sen. Wayne Morse and a Viet Cong propaganda release; a panel representing students of the four colleges; and a reporter's view of news coverage in Vietnam, will move the still-flexible schedule to dawn.

Sid Finehirsch of the UMass Young Independents and Elliott Isenberg of Amherst College, the president of the student Vietnam protest committee, hope to bring to the attention of the symposium he plans for the Students for a Democratic Society's April 17 March on Washington to End the War in Vietnam.

The Teach-In, however, is not a protest of government policy in Vietnam. It is a unique attempt to explore the issues.

WMUA, the student voice of UMass, will broadcast the entire symposium live. Special women's curfew arrangements will be announced.

John Birch Society Founder Set To Speak This Evening

Robert Welch, author, philosopher, historian, and founder of the John Birch Society, will speak in the Student Union Ballroom tonight at 8. Welch's lecture, "The Role of the John Birch Society," is being sponsoreb by the Political Science Association.

A native of Belmont, Massachusetts, Welch has been in the candy manufacturing business all of his adult life. He served as a director of the National Association of Manufacturers for seven years.

WELCH GAVE UP most of his business responsibilities in 1957 to devote practically all of his time and energy to the study of communism.

He formed the first working chapters of the John Birch Society in 1959 and serves today as its leader without pay.

The Society takes its name from John Birch, a Christian missionary and member of General Chennault's American Volunteer group in the Chinese Army during World War II. He was killed by Chinese Communists on Aug. 25, 1945.

WELCH has stated in the Blue Book, main guide book for the John Birch Society, that "It is my fervent hope that the Society will last for hundreds of years, and exert an increasing influence for the temporal good and spiritual enoblement of mankind throughout those centuries."

British Physicist To Discuss Space Race

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Britain's Jodrell Bank Observatory and one of the world's leading authorities on the space race, will speak at UMass Thursday.

The British astronomer - physicist's lecture is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the ballroom of the U-Mass Student Union. He is being presented by the University's Distinguished Visitors Program. Sir Lovell's lecture is open to the public.

In his UMass talk, the English scientist and educator will discuss how and where the space efforts of the U.S. and the Soviet Union are headed. Sir Lovell has first-hand knowledge of both countries' programs.

HE HAS BEEN CITED by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for his work with American programs, and former President Eisenhower honored him for his work in tracking the deep-space probe Pioneer V.

He is the only western scientist to have made an extensive inspection of major Soviet optical and radio observatories, Russian tracking stations, and the main Soviet facilities in radio astronomy.

SIR BERNARD LOVELL

At the conclusion of his Soviet tour, Sir Lovell made international front-page news with his suggestion that the U.S. and Russia pool their space exploration efforts.

Educated at the University of Bristol, Sir Lovell lectured in physics at the University of Manchester before World War II.

His comments and views on the space race have been profiled in The New York Times, Saturday Evening Post, Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report, and other publications.

Sir Lovell is the author of The Exploration of Outer Space and The Individual and the Universe.

UMASS PHI BETA KAPPA CHAPTER INSTALLED

by Alan Grigsby
Staff Reporter

The Nu Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in Massachusetts was installed here last Tuesday night, featuring as guest speaker Prof. Henri Peyre of Yale.

Prof. Peyre, a native of Paris, spoke on "American Education at the Crossroads." His rapid discourse was given with lightness and wit, in a slight French accent that was entertaining, as well as informing.

He praised UMass for its progress from a small state college to a fine university. Prof. Peyre said, the development of UMass' leadership, faculty, and facilities has made it one of the best universities in the east.

NOTICE
No member of the University community is permitted to park at any time in Visitor's Areas, Tow Areas and Authorized Vehicle Areas. This includes faculty and all-campus permits.

IN HIS SPEECH on "American Education at the Crossroads," he declared that the United States' position of leadership in the world demanded that we use all our resources to educate our youth to lead and help the world.

Prof. Peyre came to five conclusions about the future needs of American education and the direction in which it should head. They were:

- We need more and better teachers.
- We need more young people of talent going into politics. They will be making the split second decisions of the future and must be well prepared.
- We must have more initiative and see the world in better perspective, this means concerning ourselves with mankind through such endeavors as the Peace Corps.
- We need more intellectual, emotional and spiritual maturing in youth for better citizens to handle the complex problems of the future.
- We need more intellectuals leading the world. The world of today is lead by ideas; more men with information and courage are needed to lead it and prevent the reoccurrence of events as in the years 1914 and 1939.

DR. LEWIS MAINZER of the government department, one of the 48 charter members, said later that the acceptance of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter at U-Mass was an indication of our fine growth and development.

To obtain this charter the school, said Mainzer, had to improve many conditions that were unfavorable in 1954 when the last bid was made. Some of the prerequisites were that the library had to be enlarged, the faculty had to take a greater part in campus activity (Faculty Senate), and the arts and sciences had to join together into one college.

The Week In Review

THE WORLD

VIETNAM

In a dogfight in the sky over North Vietnam, Communist MIG fighters downed two United States Air Force jets last Sunday as the American plans attacked bridges and roads. Another American-piloted fighter was shot down by ground fire and other aircraft were also known to have been destroyed. An American spokesman said, "we have obviously entered a new phase." In Washington the results of the two days of raids were announced by the Defense Department, which said that the "vital" bridges were heavily damaged to the point of being "impassable".

CHILE

More than 400 persons lost their lives last Sunday as one of the worst earthquakes of the past 50 years devastated an area of Chile about 90 miles northwest of Santiago, the capital. Center of the quake was the mining community of El Cobre, where an avalanche plunged into a reservoir. The resulting surge of water smashed a 230-foot high dam and sent a huge wave through the town nestled below. At least 214 persons died here and every house was destroyed.

BONN

Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin was barred by the East German police from traveling on the autobahn to his own city. The East German government also announced that it would bar from the land access routes all deputies and other persons planning to attend this Wednesday's meeting in West Berlin of the lower house of the West German Parliament.

THE NATION

THE SOUTH

Dr. Martin Luther King proposed a dramatic national boycott of Alabama last week. His suggestion that the nation stop buying Alabama's products and that the Government withdraw its contributions was met with firm opposition in Washington. President Johnson said "we must be very careful to see that we do not punish the innocents . . ." Dr. King modified his proposal into a three stage plan, using the boycott as a last resort. However, even the modified version is not likely to gain much support.

WASHINGTON

President Johnson has urged an investigation of the Ku Klux Klan by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Last Tuesday, the House Committee voted for a full-scale investigation, especially of the murder of the civil rights worker Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo. The Action that can be taken against the Klan is not definite, but there exists the possibility of declaring it as subversive.

President Johnson had to borrow money to pay his taxes of $100,000. Said the President: "They have a procedure where they pay it to the President with the left hand and take it out with the right."

THE STATE

BOSTON

The Senate approved a pay raise for legislators Tuesday, by a margin of 25 to 13. Governor Volpe promptly vetoed the bill. Late yesterday the measure was passed by both Houses overriding Volpe's veto. Volpe explained that he had no quarrel with the merit of the raise as far as legislators are concerned. However, he opposed adding more than $600,000 to state expenses before the legislature takes some action on income. Volpe has a plan before the legislature which would bring in added revenue, partly through a sales tax.

THE CAMPUS

YOUNG DEMOCRATS

Edward McCormack, speaking as guest of the University's Young Democrats last Monday, stressed the need for more young perons' interest in politics, and for stronger party affiliation by all reaonsible citizens. In McCormack's view, the Democratic party has suffered from a lack of strong party structure. The emphasis has been placed on the individual more than his party and platform McCormack maintained.

LEDERLE SPEAKS TO SENATE

"We are on our way to being a great University . . . we are not trying to create an image, we are creating a reality." This is the goal which President John W. Lederle expressed to the Student Senate last Wednesday. Speaking for the first time before the assembly, President Lederle called for support of the Willis Commission's Master Plan for Education, and aked that students accept "mud, lack of elevators and other problems" as being necessary to insure that "our Univerity is second to none, not even Amherst or Harvard."

WILLIS REPORT

The State House visit of 23 members of the freshman executive council to present a petition in favor of the original Willis Report on education was termed "very successful!" by freshman class vice-president Robert Keough. While in Boston with the 1800 signature petition, the students met with Rep. Anthony Scibelli, House Speaker John Davoren, and Lt. Gov. Eliot Richardson. The four class officers later discussed the report and petition with Chairman Kevin Harrington of the legislative committee on the Willis Report.

UM Debators Triumph Over Pace College

University of Massachusetts Forensic Society unanimously defeated Pace College of New York in an exciting cross examination radio debate. The debate was aired last Monday night at 10 p.m. on WNYC radio station in New York City. Pace College had won their previous two debates.

Representing the Debating Team were Mike Farrel and Marshall Goldberg. They debated the affirmative side of the topic, Resolved that News Media hurt the cause of justice by publicizing cases before trials are completed.

All 3 of the judges who scored the debate gave a victory to UMass. Judging were Betty Grimmeer, St. John's University Debate Coach, Jack Reddish, Debate Coach of City College of N.Y., and the News Editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

The win by UMass entitles them to meet Seton Hall next Monday in another debate. The topic will be, Resolved that extremist groups should be condemned because they violate the principles on which our country is based.

WMUA, which had originally planned to rebroadcast the taped show on Thurs. evening April 1 at 7:30 p.m., will now air the show next week at an announced time.

College Transcripts Investigated

Inaccurate college transcripts resulted in an investigation by the Stamford, Conn. Board of Education and the March 31 retirement of Stamford's Superintendent of Schools, Joseph J. Franchina.

Franchina, who served in the school system for 33 years, is accused of knowingly signing inaccurate college transcripts and then forwarding them to colleges. This was said to have been done in at least two instances.

In addition, he is accused of taking no disciplinary action on a school administrator who wrote a character reference for a student and signed Franchina's name to it.

In view of his long service of over 30 years in the school system, retirement conditions imposed by the board were light. Franchina is to receive more than $10,000 in severence pay and about $9,000 pension per year.

An anonymous letter last Feb. 19 served to alert the board. Although the board generally ignores anonymous letters it started the investigation because of "the serious nature " of the accusations "involving records of the school system."

Franchina issued no statement on the board's action.

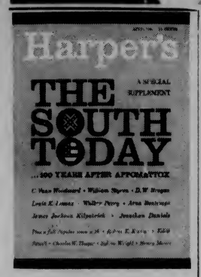
WHAT IS THE SPICE OF LIFE?



Cadet Sergeant Roy K. Whitman is shown being presented the award as the outstanding drillmaster in the recently completed NCO Academy. Col. Albert Aykroyd is making the presentation.

In this special 64-page supplement in the April issue of Harper's Magazine, 14 distinguished writers discuss the delicate relationships between South and North, between Southern white and Negro; the moods and fears of the Southern people; the changing faces of the land and its cities.

Together, they have placed the last century in historical perspective, and created a portrait in depth of the South today that will surprise and inform every American.

Contributors include Southern historian C. Vann Woodward, who shows how the North helped buttress and condone racial segregation; James J. Kilpatrick, conservative editor of the Richmond News Leader, who believes that the South will solve its racial problems quicker and with greater maturity than the North; Negro author Louis E. Lomax observing the changes in both races in his home town of Valdosta, Georgia; Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News & Observer, demonstrating how Southern industrial growth continues to make victims of its people; child psychiatrist Robert Coles investigating the human impact of school desegregation.

Among the other contributors are novelist William Styron, British historian D. W. Brogan, novelist Walker Percy, Whitney M. Young, Jr. of the National Urban League, Negro playwright LeRoi Jones, Louis D. Rubin, Jr. and Arna Bontemps.

27 Cadets Complete ROTC Course

The Army ROTC detachment recently announced the completion of the Non-Commissioned Officers program by 27 sophomore cadets. These individuals are the men who finished the program that started with 52 cadets.

The purpose of the training was to instruct the sophomores who would be conducting drill for the freshmen next year in the proper way of conducting the class. Patterned on the regular Army NCO academies, the training featured concentrated work in the area of fundamentals of teaching, principles of leadership, and care and maintenance of the uniform.

The course was conducted under the leadership of Cadet Colonel David Blodgett and Cadet Lt. Colonel Peter Clegg. The Cadre also did some of the classroom instruction. Part of the program consisted of rigid inspections conducted by the two cadets in charge.

A the completion of the training, each of the men was awarded a diploma and heard a short talk by the PMS, Colonel Aykroyd.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

The Ugly Americans

The Ku Klux Klan has gained a notorious reputation in American history. Since the Civil War it has tried to suppress the Negro in the South through terror and violence. The extent to which this violence can go was demonstrated in the recent slaying of Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo of Detroit who was in Alabama helping civil rights workers.

For a long period of time the Klan remained a clandestine organization. Its activities were carried on at night and in strict secrecy. However, in an attempt to gain white segregationist support, the Klan has finally come out in the open. It has openly staged demonstrations and rallies protesting against civil rights workers. Meeting with little local opposition the Klan has become bolder and bolder in its attempt to prevent integration. Klan Wizard Robert Shelton has even tried to discredit President Johnson by calling him a liar.

The disturbing element of the entire situation is that such an organization as the Klan be allowed to exist at all. Freedom of action and assembly is a valuable human liberty and the government should be extremely hesitant in depriving any person or group of this democratic right. However, the Klan has forfeited its right to function by over-stepping the bounds of legalized human behavior. The Klan has made a mockery of democracy. It has used the freedoms granted by the Constitution as a shield to hide behind and perpetrade atrocious crimes against society.

The Klan has no grounds on which to justify its existence. It demands freedom of action from the government, yet denies this very freedom to the people it terrorizes. Morever, the bigotery, hate, and violence that the Klan so avidly advocates are completely contrary to all that our democratic way of life stands for.

All the talk about Klansmen being patriotic protectors of white integrity amounts to verbal diarrhea. The members of the Klan should be recognized for what they really are—organized hoodlums and nothing more. In order to combat the Klan effectively it is first necessary to remove this fake patriotic halo. Subsequently, it becomes necessary to destroy any mystical attraction it might have for the public. The most effective way to render a death blow to an organization which claims to be fighting for a particular cause is to peel away its ideological wrappings and show that it is merely gangster type organization.

Since the Klan is deeply rooted in the South it will prove hard to eradicate. However, it is the duty of our government to launch a concentrated attack on the Klan and remove this ulcer from our society. Democracy cannot tolerate an organization which practices intolerance.

April Fool's Issue

To the Editor:

Granted, April Fool's Day is nothing more than a joke, and, like most students here, we enjoy good humor. However, we feel that the recent Collegian "extra" was not only ridiculous, but in bad taste, and depicted an example of poor, scandal-sheet journalism.

The banner headline was nothing more than an underhanded "come-on," and although it was clever, it was deliberately twisted to satisfy someone's crude desire to humiliate the administration. There are plenty of scandal sheets for sale; if we wanted those, we would have gone out and bought them instead. Clearly, in this instance the Collegian was wasted student tax money in printing these inane sheets of newsprint.

Granted, we must have a "free and responsible press," unhampered by the administration. But this implies RESPONSIBILITY, not whim. The Collegian owes the student body the consideration of at least an honest attempt at straightforward news reporting. Otherwise, the administration is justified in castigating- and also in attempting to censor our newspaper. This last little "joke" was merely a poor attempt to copy the on - campus trash from Yahoo. It seems they both belong in the nearest garbage can.

Results of Yahoo Poll

To the Editor

For the purpose of investigating student's opinions of the various student publications, the Public Relations Committee of the Student Senate recently conducted a poll. This poll was taken at the residence halls, fraternities, and sororities on campus.

Concentrating mainly on the Yahoo, the poll required students to give their opinions on the following: was the last issue of Yahoo entertaining? should this magazine be supported by tax funds? should it be sold for a quarter? does the Yahoo live up to its function of being a campus humor magazine? does the present distribution of Yahoo and other publications satisfy? should the Yahoo be abolished?

The results were extremely varied. Students were not in favor of abolishing the Yahoo but felt that it was not entertaining in its present state. Several suggestions were given to improve the Yahoo along the lines of Punch, Harvard's Lampoon, M.I.T.'s Voodoo, New Yorker and end the parodies. A large majority of students felt that there was a place for a campus humor magazine. These students indicated no objection generally to off-color jokes but felt that sex was not the only subject to be joked about.

The consensus of opinion demanded that the distribution of Caesura and Yahoo was really inadequate. The sentiment favored two magazines to a room rather than one as the present distribution exists. However, selling the Yahoo for a quarter found mixed opinion. The majority of students felt that the Yahoo would not sell on this "cash and carry" basis but it would guarantee one magazine to one student.

The critics of the Yahoo suggested that the magazine "serves only to accentuate the gross immaturity of, hopefully, a minority of our student." Another felt that "Kennedy's death should not have been jested with." The magazine was considered "too cynical of the administration, and rather radical toward existing norms."

However, the poll suggests, in conclusion, that while the magazine should be improved and revised it should NOT be done away with entirely.

Public Relations Committee
Student Senate

And The Answer

Read on the floor of the Senate, Re: Yahoo.

At a recent meeting, the editors and staff of Yahoo discussed the questions and concerns about their magazine.

In order to revise and improve staff structure and content, Yahoo has decided to forego expansion to a four-issue-a-year status; that is, to continue one more year with three issues, before attempting more frequent publication.

By cancelling the fourth issue, putting off expansion until next year, the extra effort and time for the third magazine should allow considerable attention to points of recent criticism. The cancelling of a fourth issue this year will also save the student body approximately $1,000.

A second and closely related matter concerns the Student Senates poll of Yahoo.

Yahoo vigorously objects to the lack of communication between magazine and Senate. Though both parties are at fault, Yahoo views the circulation of such a poll without contacting Yahoo editors first, as mere petty intrigue.

The duplication (in large numbers) and circulation of a poll that, at best, can only be called negative-biased, seems in contradiction to the purpose of any guiding and supervising board.

Yahoo would like to suggest that future polls and criticisms be discussed and sponsored with the joint effort of the Senate and the organization concerned. Only with such interaction can fair criticism and improvement be made.

A third and last point of the business: Yahoo acknowledges the Senate's just concern for the welfare of the University and Student body (their funds and their image). But Yahoo wishes to remind the Senate that it is not operating to negate, to abolish, but rather to improve.

A publication is the voice of the students; a humor magazine, perhaps, moreso, for its uninhibited format. The Senate should be working with Yahoo not against it, to make it a first - rate humor magazine.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Letters To The Editor

SPEAKER'S ROOM HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVE
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON

JOHN F. X. DAVOREN
SPEAKER

March 29, 1965

Mr. Joel Hartstone, Editorial Associate Chairman,
The Massachusetts Collegian
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts

Dear Joel:

I have read with great interest and deep appreciation your editorial entitled, "Price of Quality" in the March 24th issue of the Massachusetts Collegian.

I would like very much to express to you my very deep gratitude as a legislator and as Speaker of the House, in behalf of each and every member of your House of Representatives. In addition, I am more than pleasantly gratified by the fact that your editorial demonstrates a keen insight into the basic philosophy that lies at the root of this entire problem of adequate compensation for legislators. More so, I might add, than is being currently demonstrated by many of your elders.

I am sure you would agree that it is deeply disturbing to many of the men and women in my House, who are most willing and anxious to serve the public of this great Commonwealth, that find an unreasonable hardship imposed as a consequence of their devotion to public service.

In any event, as is often the case, it is so heart warming to find that some of the youth of our Commonwealth are with us in this attempt to provide for your legislators, an adequate, reasonable and decent compensation for their endeavors.

Sincerely yours,
John F. X. Davoren
SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE.

SMTI—The Other Side

To the Editor:

As a student of the University of Massachusetts and a resident of southeastern Massachusetts, I feel that the students of this university have been given only one side of the argument in the struggle over the Willis Report. Therefore, I would like to give some support to the other side.

The southeastern section of Massachusetts is the most depressed area in the state, including the highest rate of unemployment, the highest tax rate, and the lowest rate of economic growth. Recently this part of the state began to come out of its doldrums and, through the help of vigorous new leadership in business and government, began to make a move forward. One of the most important plans in this step towards progress was the incorporation of an autonomous university to be located in the southeastern Massachusetts area, to be known as Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute. Plans for the university were severely restricted by the original Willis Report, which excluded liberal arts courses and called for science and engineering programs only. Yet 40% of all applications to SMTI for the coming semester are for liberal arts. The situation was corrected by the recent amendments to the Willis Report, which provide for liberal arts courses at SMTI.

Secondly, the supporters of SMTI do not want their institution to become a branch of the University of Massachusetts, because they fear that SMTI will become a "poor little sister" to the main university at Amherst.

As one of its students, I, too, want to see UMass grow, improve, and develop into an even greater institution of learning. But, if the entire state is to benefit from this growth, it must not be at someone else's expense. It is not merely the administrators of Lowell Tech and SMTI, who are battling to uphold the recent amendments to the Willis Report—it is the great majority of the thousands of citizens, residing in southeastern Massachusetts. For them the establishment of an independent SMTI offering courses in liberal arts means the possibility of keeping competent students and future civic leaders from moving out of the area, and hence the chance to bring that section of the state out of the depression, which it has been in for many years. Certainly, the entire state would benefit from the economic growth of such a large segment of its population.

A Question of Policy

To The Editor:

Something must be affirmed, we believe, by way of correcting certain impressions in Joel Hartstone's editorial, "War is War" of March 26th. The gas of which he writes was, to be sure, "a combination of tear gas and vomit gas," but the effect of such gas varies sharply, depending upon the amount absorbed and upon the age of the victim. It is quite lethal in its effect upon children and old people; and neither Mr. Hartstone nor the Pentagon can summarily dismiss it as non-toxic.

We are curious about Mr. Hartstone's assertion, "We should be prepared to defend their (U.S.) lives with every resource available to us short of an all out war which would involve other countries." Does "every resource" include nuclear weapons? Or will Mr. Hartstone be satisfied with supposedly "non-lethal" gas; and with napalm and phosphorus shells, which burn alive; and with anti-personnel bombs which scatter sharp, razor-like fragments over a wide area; and with a new type of bullet which "somersaluts" upon entering the flesh, making ordinarily minor wounds fatal? Can he provide an iron-clad guarantee that the use of "every resource" would not "involve other countries"? Can he so assure us in a situation as unstable and highly volatile as a civil war?

Clearly Mr. Hartstone is correct; it is "our planes which are doing the bombing"; but instead of finding this event astonishing, he affirms the appropriateness of such action. He fails to be surprised at an action which involves bombing the people of a country with whom we are at peace. He does not inquire into the propriety of air raids upon a "privileged sanctuary." At one time, however, Americans did find such raids repugnant to international law. President Truman, for instance, refused to sanction an attack upon Chinese territory during the Korean war, though the military action involved a far greater number of American troops and a far more obvious commitment of Chinese manpower than exists in South Vietnam. It is pertinent, too, to recall the French-Tunisian incident at Sidi Sakhiet El-Youssef, on February 8, 1958—in which French bombers conducted a reprisal raid on Tunisian soil during the Algerian campaign—an action condemned by many highly situated American officials, including senators Hubert Humphrey and John F. Kennedy. Mr. Hartstone, in the course of his exposition, implicitly rejects "the rule of law," which has been a major determinant of our foreign policy since the Second World War. We have always been careful in the past to find a legal basis for our military ventures. The Korean conflict, which Mr. Hartstone mentions, was a United Nations operation. The Cuban crisis (with the exception of the Bay of Pigs fiasco) was undertaken with the full support of the Organization of American States and with careful attention paid to regional security arrangements.

Mr. Hartstone obviously has no use for moral or legal considerations, and allies himself with the machtpolitikniks. Space does not permit us to challenge him on these grounds and to ask about the lawful or ethical basis for escalated military action. Accepting Mr. Hartstone on his own terms, we would expect a "hard-liner" to also ask certain questions. What, for example, is the purpose of these bombings? Have they a military intent? Granted that it is a difficult question to answer since the President has continually fudged. Even Mr. Dulles, however else he erred, was sensible in insisting that a nation should make its intentions clear to an adversary. Mr. Johnson, has failed to do so. May we assume that the raids have a non-military objective? After all, it would seen inconceivable that the Pentagon has forgotten the Korean war which was, as Mr. Hartstone points out, only twelve years ago. China, it will be recalled, sustained a million-man army at the end of a three-hundred mile supply route in the teeth of the best aerial effort the United States could muster. But if the post-Pleiku raids serve political ends, is it not incumbent upon a college student and a working reporter to ask questions about this extraordinary situation—to ask why a conscripted army is in South Vietnam; why gas now, when Korean commanders begged in vain for it in 1951; why the trigger - like willingness now to violate international treaties, national air space, national waters, and the "rule of law"?

Finally, one must challenge the tone of an editorial which offers the extraordinarily uninformed and thoughtless comment: "we have committed ourselves and we must stand firm to that commitment." It is uninformed because its author fails to recognize that the only government to which we had commitments—that of Ngo Diem—we had helped to overturn. It is thoughtless, because it does not suggest to whom and to what we are committed." To the people? The magisterial Walter Lippmann, supported unanimously by informed observers, asserts that "the truth, which is being obscured for the American people, is that the Saigon government has the allegiance of probably no more than thirty percent of the people." Surely our commitment is not to the United Nations? For we have U Thant's proposal for negotiations as if it were presented by a Western Union messenger boy. This assertion of Mr. Hartstone's is only one among many that might be subject to exegetical scrutiny; it is only one in an editorial that, never asking questions, is incompatible with the principles of democracy, and that does a disservice to international law, the cause of peace, and responsible collegiate journalism.

David Leonard
Milton Cantor
Department of History

Editor's Note: It is obvious that several of the points of the editorial in question were missed. Most important of these is the question of commitment. The editorial clearly states in the last sentence, in bold face type, that our commitment is to the people of South Vietnam. That is to say, the people themselves, not any regime which may represent them. Also, the editorial did not question whether the use of gas was good or bad, but whether it was better than conventional weapons which would kill all indiscriminately. Lastly, it can hardly be considered incompatible with democracy to express one's belief that others should remain free. Nor, can it be considered irresponsible journalism on any level to express one's opinions in the form of an editorial, unless we are expected to bow to an all knowledgeable censor to protect us from "wrong" opinions.

More Humor Needed for Yahoo

To the Editor:

What does a college humor magazine need most of? Humor. How much humor is found in our college humor magazine? Practically none. What would you expect in writing done by students of college age? At least a certain amount of intelligence and sophistication. What do you find in the pieces written for Yahoo? Heavy-handed or at best sophomoric humor.

Certainly this campus needs a humor magazine; every college should have some publication for the satire, the humor and wit produced by its students. The question is, where is ours? Yahoo, as it now stands, certainly isn't it. (It usually isn't even funny.) On a yearly budget of several thousand dollars—from money which we were required to pay—the Yahoo staff produces, three times a year, a thin, poorly done publication. This, we are told is our campus humor magazine.

On some other campuses, the humor magazine is not published at the expense of the student body but is financed, like a commercial magazine, by advertising and sale of its copies. Under such conditions, a poorly done magazine would soon fold. The humor and satire of the magazine must satisfy at least a fair number of the student body. While we do not suggest that this is the solution to the problem here, we do feel that some change for the better in the Yahoo is needed. As a representative of the humorous and satiric writing this campus can produce, it doesn't seem—in its present shape, a very satisfactory one.

REVIEW:

Greek Concert OR Little Anthony

By Sherry Spear, Feature Editor

Zeus deserted the Greeks Sunday with their rock 'n roll show finale to Greek Weekend. The sorely tired-footwise, that is — audience waited an hour to get in. A "package" deal brought the Greeks at least one show-stopper, the standing ovation to Little Anthony and the Imperials. A professional oasis in the desert of flash-in-the-pan talent sang the golden oldies of Twist and Shout, Tears on My Pillow, I'm on the Outside Looking In with an excellent back-up group who they unfortunately had never met before. Breathlessly, recalled, they took the laurels of the event and sang Just Two Kinds of People.

The crumbly dirt floor elegance of the Cage was a bane to high heels, allergies and dignity. The program gave us first the Shangri-las, a leather jumpsuited, high heeled boot masquerade who couldn't handle their mikes and should have been left Walking in the Sand.

The next group of a much publicized campaign was the lip synching, gum chewing Streetwalkers, an affront to the professional singers asked to perform. We now know why they have their name but if this was humor we failed to see it — or rather all too well.

THE LAVENDAR and white robed Rev. C.E. Simmons and the Biblicals sang a good jazz version of Have You Got Religion but we questioned the presence of this group at a rock 'n roll concert.

The emcee, Buddy Lowe stalled for time, and in general added little except numerous label and station plugs. A rather tasteless introduction to the hosts of the concert gave the Greek Committee the opportunity to introduce the Queen and her court.

The second victor appeared on stage as beautiful Mary Welles. A soft voiced, rather slow style singer she presented Beat Me to the Punch, My Guy, and Two Lovers.

The Coasters did not appear and were reportedly in "an accident". At this point the emcee felt obliged to entertain a thinning audience with his singing.

It is rather unfortunate that the finale to a big weekend should be so anticlimatical. The audience was never elevated from their foot-weary but patient endurance except for Little Anthony and the fantastic back-up group with their sax player who literally "carried" off the show. — SJS

"L'Annone Faite A Marie": Paul Descombes (Pierce de Craon)

L'Announce Faite a Marie

The Treteau de Paris, a yearly visitor to the University campus, will return on Friday, April 23, to present Paul Claudel's L'Announce Faite a Marie at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The theatre group's production of Claudel's play, called "one of the loftiest examples of poetic drama in French literature" by Wallace Fowlie, will be directed by Pierre Franck, twice winner of the French Drama Circle award.

Lead actress Madeleine Vimes is one of the most acclaimed young stars of the contemporary Paris stage, and Pierre Simonini is one of France's most sought-after set designers.

Reserved seat tickets to L'Announce Faite a Marie will be on sale at the University's Student Union through Wednesday, April 10. The ticket desk is operating from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4 to 5 p.m. daily except Sundays. Tickets may also be obtained by writing the French Corridor, R.S.O., Student Union, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

The Treteau de Paris, currently on its seventh French government-sponsored tour of U.S. college and university campuses, is being brought to UMass this year by the French Corridor.

'We're Back"

The Weed at UMass

by Leslie Thompson
Feature Staff

"Cigarette smoking is a health hazard of sufficient importance in the United States to warrant appropriate remedial action." This statement was published by the Advisory Committee to the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service in January of 1964.

The staff of the infirmiry has taken this warning to heart, as the numerous NO SMOKING signs in the lobby indicate. Also, few of the employees there smoke at all, some only at social gatherings.

Dr. Robert Gage, Director of Health Services, is very concerned with the smoking habits of the students at UMass. He stated that about 50% of the Freshman class enters the university as smokers, and by the time they graduate over 75% of the class has taken up the habit.

There is always a lot of propaganda about the fact that smoking causes lung cancer, but according to Dr. Gage, there is something worse to worry about. Many people are living as cripples because of a disease called emphysema in which the small air sacs in the lungs break down. "It isn't the fact that you will die, but you might have the misfortune to live... disabled."

"IT IS VERY HARD to reach students who smoke because everyone is confident that they will live forever at that age. Even if there is a chance that they might be diseased at 65, their health 25 or 30 years from now doesn't concern them."

The impact should be made in the early school years that smoking is physically harmful. By the time a student has reached college his habits are so well developed that it is almost impossible to break them.

There is a high correlation between the smoking habits of parents and their children. The proportion of students who are smokers and particularly of those who are heavy smokers, is high in families where both parents were regular smokers and low in families where neither parent smokes. Parents cannot argue with their children when they are setting the example themselves.

Dr. Gage feels that warnings on cigarette packs would do some good. "If they could reduce smoking by only 5% it would be of some good." But he also believes that "...we cannot absolve ourselves from educating the public or taking other effective methods. IT'S VERY EASY TO PASS ALL THE RESPONSIBILITY ON TO THE GOVERNMENT, BUT WE CAN'T EXPECT THEM TO CARRY THE WHOLE BURDEN."

— Flying Redmen —

On March 24, the Flying Redmen, the AFROTC cadet trick drill team of the University performed for the Turners Falls Civil Air Patrol. The exhibition was held at the Greenfield National Guard Armory, the regular meeting place of the Turners Falls C.A.P. Squadron. The exhibition was in conjunction with a series of drill and classroom sessions being held by the John P. Granville Squadron, Arnold Air Society, of the University of Massachusetts, for the benefit of the C.A.P. Squadron. The Flying Redmen have been invited and will participate in the National Cherry Blossom Festival parade and drill meet, to be held at Washington, D.C. on the 9th and 10th of April.

The Little Blue Bus

by Alan Weinberg

That little blue bus that carts kids along the Four-College trail should be repainted a deep Kelly green.

The driver of the bus which travels from the Student Union to Amherst to Mt. Holyoke and back is named Pat O'Connell, and with a name like that it is almost unnecessary to add that he is always friendly, smiling and twinkle-ewed.

Pat has been driving the bus since 1961, when the service was started. He took the job after a few months of retirement which did not suit him at all. "I like people and lobster too much," he said, explaining that he was bored sitting around the house and, besides, the extra money let him enjoy life to the fullest.

Pat is pushing 59, but he puts in a 10½ hour day driving the Volkswagen bus up and down Route 116. "It gets a bit monotonous only when there are no passengers to gab with," he said.

O'Connell, who has lived all his life in Northampton, said, "I never knew how many different kinds of people there were until I started driving this bus." But he said, the students he meets are "all friendly and down-to-earth."

He popped a cough-drop into his mouth, patted his paunch and broke into a ruddy-faced grin: "The wife usually keeps me from the sweet stuff, but every now and again I sneak in some candy."

Pat's bus route goes along one of the most beautiful stretches of the Pioneer Valley—through the Holyoke Range from which, on a good day, you can see huge cloud shadows moving across the valley below. Pat recommends the ride, especially in the spring and fall, and, besides, he likes company.

What's New?

On Raids, 'Instant Pudding' and 'Spring'

In spite of the unseasonably cold weather and snow of late March, the spirit of Spring arrived on two New England colleges.

At Dean Jr. College in Franklin, Mass., over 100 coeds got a headstart on the campus males and pulled a switch by staging a surprise panty raid on the men's dorm.

The girls somehow managed to leave their dorm without their housemother's knowledge, slipped across campus and latched onto shorts and briefs.

They returned unnoticed by security police and greeted the would-be avengers by waving their trophies out of dorm windows. Campus police managed to stop the retaliatory strike.

A faculty spokesman dubbed the whole affair "a harmless prank."

At Harvard law school it was spring and the young men's fancies turned to thoughts of a Newsweek cover girl.

A committee, called "Instant Pudding, or the Ad Hoc Committee to Bring Vicki Albright to Harvard" was formed to import the UCLA coed whose picture adorned the "Campus 65" issue of Newsweek.

Miss Albright said she was "very interested" after she had consulted with her agent. He said that this was "one offer she would accept of the many that were made."

The law students have named Miss Albright "Woman of the Year" after rejecting the titles of "Miss Legal Development" and "Miss Due Process."

U. of Mass. Delegates Attend Young Republicans Convention

Eight delegates from the University Young Republican Club attended the first annual convention of the Mass. Y.R. Association this past weekend in Boston.

The convention opened Friday night at Faneuil Hall with a keynote address by the Honorable Gerald R. Ford, Republican leader of the United States Congress. He was introduced by Lieutenant - Governor Elliot Richardson.

IN HIS ADDRESS, Ford said that Massachusetts was very fortunate to have such leaders as Gov. Volpe, Lt. Gov. Richardson, and Atty. Gen. Brooke. He also stated that Massachusetts was "most ably represented" by its delegation to Congress.

He went on to speak on the future of the Republican Party. He said that the party should have a "three-pronged approach" in the fight to remain strong.

- His first point was that the party must be unified. He noted that within the past few months he has become aware of a strong drive in this direction and concluded that "we are on the path to unity."
- His second point was that the party must develop a strong program. He said that Republicans are facing many problems, and that "we must accept the challenge of a problem" and create constructive programs in response to this.
- His third and final point was that no party can be narrow and doctrinnaire and expect to win votes. He felt that moderation would lead the party to greater strength, popular support, and victory.

AFTER MR. FORD'S address the Y.R. delegations elected their new officers for the coming year. John Brandt of Cambridge and Joan Gormalley of Salem were elected president and chairman. They were chosen to replace Richard Mastrangelo and Clara Tubby.

Saturday the convention moved to the Sherman Union at Boston University for a series of conferences. The delegates from UMass attended the College Caucus and President of the UMass club, Fred Cenedella, was appointed College Organizer.

SWANK, NEW YORK — SOLE DISTRIBUTOR

Distinguished American Novelist To Discuss Writing Techniques

by Jim Foudy
Staff Reporter

Bernard Malamud, distinguished American novelist and short story writer, read two of his stories here Thursday following them with a discussion period in which he stressed that "different writing techniques breed different stories."

BERNARD MALAMUD

Malamud stated that it does not matter which is invented first, the plot or the characters, but that it is possible by reworking style or technique to produce a different story from old material.

"You go where the inspiration is," he said. "In some writers it responds to youthful ideas. . . the worst thing you can do is be bound by one source."

THE FIRST STORY Malamud read concerned a New York Jew named Nathan who the author calls both "hero and anti-hero."

Nathan is in love with a Negro woman and believes that "there is only one human color and that is the color of blood." At the end Nathan is beaten, the woman leaves him and Nathan moans, "I gave them my heart and they kick me in the teeth."

In the second story Malamud draws on his art experience — "painting has something to do with my prose" —and creates an anti-hero character named Fidleman who fancies himself a good artist and is forced to forge a master painting.

Commenting on the writer in society, Malamud pointed out that "you can't miss writing about it."

"Every mature writer is compelled to deal with the drama of society. . . it ofers inspirational opportunities."

A F Aid Plan For Students Announced

The Air Force has announced that it will offer scholarships this fall to 1,000 college students entering their first year of advanced Air Force Reserve Officer training.

The ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964, pased in October, allows the Defense Department to establish up to 5,500 scholarships for the Air Force by the fall of 1968. Authorization to offer 1,000 scholarships in 1965 and 2,000 in 1966 has been granted.

Present scholarships will be limited to juniors who have already completed two years of basic AFROTC training. Plans are being developed, however, to expand the scholarship program to other classes in future years.

Scholarship cadets are to receive cost of tuition, books, fees, supplies and equipment plus $50 monthly retainer pay. Quotas will soon be distributed to each of the 186 colleges and universities offering AFROTC training.

Selection will be on the basis of scores on the Air Force Tests, overall academic record and an evaluation by a review board.

LIMBO'S COMING

Lordenmen Open Season Against Columbia Saturday

By Mike Gould

Coach Earl Lorden, in his nineteenth year as Varsity Baseball Coach at UMass is looking upon the coming season with an uncertain, yet optimistic eye.

The veteran coach's uncertainty about his team's success this spring stems from the presence of many sophomores on this years' squad. The fine performances turned in by these second year men as Freshmen players last year, however, gives UMass fans a definite prospect for a successful season.

"THE SOPHOMORES ARE THE KEY," says Lorden. "They will help the club indirectly, by pushing the regulars for their jobs, making them work harder both in practice and during games, and directly, by breaking into the starting lineup and winning ballgames themselves."

Of the eleven sophomores who are out to make the varsity this year, those with the most outstanding Frosh statistics are: Pitcher Carl Boteze, who sported an impressive 1.84 earned run average, a 3-1 won-lost record and 66 strikeouts in 48 innings; Shortstop Jim Babyak, a .372 hitter last spring; third-baseman Ed Polchlopek (.346); Infielder-outfielder Frank Stewart (.346); Catcher Buddy Kruse (.300); and outfielder Marc Greenberg, who led the Frosh in r.b.i.'s last season.

Returning to the varsity squad this season is Junior lefthanded pitcher Ross Piken, who showed great potential as a soph last season and will be counted on to carry much of the burden of this year's pitching staff. Also back from last year's pitching corps is righthander Jim Ritchie, a Senior who saw much action as a relief pitcher last season.

Returning infielders are Senior lettermen Paul Caisse (SS) and Bill Crane (2b), and Juniors Jim Kuczynski (3b) and John Peacock (1b). None of these four batted over .207 last season, and all will be battling for their jobs.

Dennis DellaPiana, a .254 hitter last year, and Al Nordberg (.250) will be the only outfield returnees. Both are solid all-around ball-players. The third outfield position will be filled by one of the slugging Soph's or by Junior Terry Swanson.

Catching should be no problem, with Captain Karl Kamena (.255) backed up by Soph Kruse.

THIS YEAR'S BASEBALL TEAM should be an exciting one to watch. It will score a lot of runs, but will leave much to be desired defensively. The team's fate hangs on the performances of its Sophomores. If they come through, UMass's opponents will have plenty to worry about this spring.

In the Yankee Conference, the team to beat is powerful Maine. The Black Bears finished first in the conference last year and third in the Collegiate World Series. Many of Maine's stars of last year are returning. New Hampshire is a much improved team and should be in contention along with Vermont and Massachusetts.

The first game for the Redmen is April 10, at Columbia. Their first home game is April 19 vs. Boston University

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

Let's take a look at the professional baseball spring training standings to this date. Combining the Cactus League and the Grapefruit League to get the teams organized we find the Cincinnatti Reds on top of the National League with a 15-5 record. The American League leader is the powerful Boston Red Sox with a 10-9 posting.

Ordinarily the sportsfan will glance at the records of the Spring performances and write it off saying, "You can't go by this, forget the Spring records."

But in one sense you can't overlook these records. During the Spring the teams play a good deal of their games against members of the opposing league. The Red Sox, for example, play most of their games with the Chicago Cubs and the San Francisco Giants. The latter team has lost to the Bosox ONCE in the past two spring sessions.

THERE REMAINS A COMPLETE dominance of the National loop over their Junior counterparts. There was a string a few weeks ago when the New York Mets won four in a row over the Yankees. This just can't be written off to Spring adjustments. Any time, and I mean any time, that the worst team in one division can take the best team in another division there's something wrong somewhere.

This carries a little further than Spring training. The Yankees, perrennial kings of the American circuit, handle the opposition in their league with comparative ease. Then the World Series arrives and we find the Yanks taking the pipe to different National League representatives each year. This not only says that the American League is the weaker of the two, but also shows the amazing balance in the Senior League.

This is one subject that can be expounded upon forever. But is there anything that can be done? I can't foresee any realistic approach to remedy the situation. Until the lowly members of the American League build up their farm systems and are able to produce super athletes, the Yankees, or any other team that is lucky enough to win the American League flag, will be dominated by any team from the National League, not only in Spring training, but in the World Series as well.

Bill Casper, 8-1, off to his best start in a long time.

Bob Nichols, 10-1, another strong young player who has the potential to surprise.

Ken Venturi, 30-1, injuries have left him far off his normal game.

Gary Player, 25-1, only foreign player to win over here, but also below his best game.

Bruce Devlin, 25-1, Australian who can really hit the long ball needed on this course.

Bob Charles, 25-1, best lefty ever, a great putter, but uses hook on every drive. Could be a problem.

The selection here is Sanders who has a great winter season after a tough battle with Bill Casper. Sanders won at Pensacola and Miami's Doral putting away over $29,000 already this year. This is a tourney where an unknown, relatively speaking, seldom wins, and where an amateur has never won.

LACROSSE . . .

42 goals and 27 assists last year, and replacements are difficult to find for these three. Look for attack to be a real problem this year.

Poor stick handling and poor conditioning seemed to be the problems for a few players on Saturday. Garber blamed the conditioning problem on Friday night's Greek Ball, and expressed his hope that with more experience the stick handling will improve.

Scoring goals for the Redmen were: Captain Dick Brown, and Dick Pulsifer, both scoring 2 goals apiece; Howard Goffman, Charlie Neary, Wayne Morgan, and Tony Anieri each scoring one goal.

The regular season opens Wednesday at 3:00 p.m. when UMass hosts Wesleyan, last year's New England champions, at the lacrosse field in back of the Cage.

Fusia Ponders New Redmen Candidates

Head football coach Vic Fusia was greeted by 60 candidates for the 1965 version of the Redmen football team last Saturday.

Coach Fusia said that last year's spirit was still riding with the men who kept in good physical condition over the winter. The enthusiasm was quite high and the weather ideal for the opening of Spring practice.

The main problem the coaching staff will be faced with is to find placements for the eighteen seniors who have departed from the squad. One of the starting positions to be filled will be at quarterback, left open with the absence of All-Everything Jerry Whelchel. Fusia rates Seniors Candy Cane, Steve Trbovich, Junior Al Caruse and Frosh Greg Landry as capable candidates for the job.

Landry had an excellent Freshman year and has good credentials and recommendations from his high school playing.

THIS FIRST WEEK OF PRACTICE will be devtoed to 50% offensive work and 50% defensive work. Beginning in the second week of practice the system Fusia refers to as "platoon coaching" will begin. At this time the coaches will see which players will be better suited for the offensive or defensive squads.

The objectives of Spring practice will be to pick the best players regardless of position, and then work with their ability. Outside of this physical objective, the coaching staff will be attempting to build up the morale of the team and maintain this morale throughout the season.

Intramural Report

by Dick Lowe

BOWLING — The Fraternity All-Star team consists of Repeta (LCA), Morrison (PMD), Fortier (PSD), Lerner (PSD) Delvisco (SPE), Liederman (TEP), Goudreau (ZN), Paduchowski (TKE), and Sopel (QTV). The Dorm All-Stars will have Cronin (Middlesex), Tordoff (Middlesex), Hardy (Mills), Tiberio (Grayson), Lipmand and Rojewski from Grayson, D'Andrea (Greenough) and Carleton also and Carleton of Greenough.

DEFENDING CHAMPIONS of last year, TKE and Greenough, will be out to successfully defend their Softball supremacy. The Dorm champ defeated TKE last year for the Campus Championship. A total of 65 teams (which includes the Frat, Dorm, and Ind. leagues) will vie for the championship this spring. Individual trophies to the leading pitcher and the leading hitter will be presented at the conclusion of the regular season.

All students with a background in baseball, who may be interested in umpiring in the softball league are asked to contact the intramural office. League play will start approximately on the 20th of April.

A Badminton tournament will be conducted for students and members of the Faculty. It is a singles tournament, and will start on the 21st of April. The deadline for submitting entries at the IM office is April 9th.

The powerhouse of the Independent league, Vicky's 202, continued their winning ways by defeating the Fraternity Champs SPE for the Campus Volleyball Championship. This is the second Campus Championship for Vicky's, as they also possess the Basketball honor. They now have their sights on the Softball Crown.

Shortly after the Holiday recess the Intramural department will conduct a mixed doubles tennis tournament.

Doug Sanders Has Chance At Masters Golf Crown

by John Goodrich

Every sport has its premier event: the one that is immediately associated with it as soon as it is mentioned. For golf, it is the Masters. More than any other tournament, this event typifies the sport at its best. The prize money is substantial, as is the money for nearly all tourneys these days, but it is far from the highest the sport has to offer.

This year the Masters will be held starting April 8. The race for the famous green blazer has seldom been more wide open. Ninety-three contestants will be seeking the prize this year. These men have earned berths by playing good golf all year. There is an intricate qualifying procedure, in addition to the fact that tourney winners are eligible.

Likewise, when one mentions the Masters, the first name to be associated with it is that of Arnold Palmer. The man from Pennsylvania has won the title four times, the only time in the 29 year history of the event it has been done. He seems to like the even years as he won in 1958, 1960, 1962, and 1964.

ONE OF THE BIG THREATS is the golden boy, Jack Nicklaus, a young bull from Ohio. He removed Palmer from the top money spot last year with earnings of over $113,000.

Yet, while these two men dominate the sport, golf is a game where four good rounds can win a tourney and one bad round can cost the championship. There are many who have a good shot for the top prize, and at the end of this article, there is a spectator's racing odds form for the title, and, of course, a prediction.

The Masters is just one of the abundant number of golf shows that has been on the screen this year. Golf has become so widely seen that even the average housewife can see plenty of golf and adopt a personal favorite. The filmed shows seemed to lose some of the real action. The only sport that features more dead space for the viewers is baseball.

Yet both sports have a staunch backing. A show like the CBS Golf Classic with microphones on the players provides some real insight into the finer points of the game.

The Masters does not have the players hooked up. It relys on the suspense created by live action in pressure situations. One of the most interesting portions of the competition is the sixteenth hole, a par three, that calls for the players to shoot entirely over the water. While few shots hit the water, the pin position makes it tough to go for the pin without having the added risk of water.

THE BREAKDOWN ON PLAYERS is 56 pros, 16 amatuers, and 21 foreign players. The galleries, which run upwards of 40,000 per day are probably the biggest in the sport. Add to this a picturesque course like the Augusta National and the presence of the immortal Bobby Jones, and you have the greatest event in all golfdom. The rundown on some of the top players show:

Arnold Palmer, 5-1, off year so far, but always a threat.

Jack Nicklaus, 5-1, also off to a bad start, but watch out.

Doug Sanders, 7-1, best on winter tour.

Tony Lema, 8-1, it's been a long time since the Champagne was passed around.

Li'l Redmen Set For Season

by Al Rice

One outdoor workout and a few weeks' practice in the Cage have been enough to convince Dick Bergquist that this season's freshmen baseball team will not be lacking in pitching talent.

The final squad selection was made last weekend, and that allowed two weeks plus the vacation before the season opener at Amherst College on April 24. An intra-squad game last Saturday was the first outdoor session for the team, but the team will be out all this week, weather permitting, to allow the hitters to catch up with the pitching.

NIGHT PRACTICE in the cage isn't the best way for a hitter to regain his batting eye, though the pitchers have been doing well so far. The team features strong mound balance with three right handed starters and two lefty starters with another, one of each type, who will split duty between pitching and the outfield. The leading right-handers are Rusty Vitallo, Bob Chapin, and Harry Gould. The southpaws scheduled to see starting action are Dave Katz and John Canty.

There are four candidates for the catching position that will be decided by the next few weeks' batting practice. Ron Shepard, Warren Wetherbee, Ed Machacz, and Bruce Beauvais are all up for the job.

The infield shapes up with two hopefuls at each position except first base where Chuck Goss is the lone candidate. At second Don Ferron and Jim Van Wert are looking for a starting slot in the lineup. The two shortstops are Ted Ferraguto and Hagan Andersen, who played with Vitallo and Vyce on the freshman basketball team this past season.

THIRD BASE CONTESTANTS are Dave Woodcock and Vin Donohue. The outfield will have three full time members in addition to Elias and Vyce. They are Dick Hale, John Lent, and Harry Doten.

The team will have tougher odds than the 1964 edition did in trying to set a new freshmen victory record. Last season the team reached a new high with eight wins in 11 games. The schedule has only ten contests in the four week season. Following the opener at Amherst on the 24th will be road games on the 27th and 28th against Holy Cross and Rhode Island and then a week off before the home opener on May 5th against Springfield College.

Lacrossmen Impressive In Early Season Action

by John Cunningham

Last Saturday the UMass lacrosse team hosted R.P.I. in its second preseason scrimmage. R.P.I. went down to defeat in the regulation 4 periods 7-3. Both teams used their substitutes freely in an extra two period scrimmage after the regulation game, and R.P.I. ended up as the top-scoring squad in the six periods by a total of 9 goals to UMass's 8.

In Saturday's scrimmage, and in Wednesday's scrimmage which Amherst College won 6-4, Coach Garber used his entire squad, enabling him to see some of his lesser experienced players in action.

The Redmen defensive unit proved to be a pleasant surprise. Defense is a question mark this season since none of the defensemen are returning lettermen. But Brad Stokes, John Schroeder and Fred Foley played a hard-nosed game Saturday, constantly harassing and dumping enemy players and never letting up on the pressure.

LEAST OF UMASS'S PROBLEMS is going to be the Midfield Unit. Seven of the eight Redmen goals came from the midfielders. However, the attack is weak. The only attackman who stood out Saturday was Howard Goffman. Three of last year's attackmen were lost through graduation and they were the backbone of the team. Steve Harrington, Fran Casey, and Charlie Glew accounted for

Opinions Clash 'Till Dawn

A standing room only crowd filled Mahar Auditorium early yesterday evening to begin a nine-hour teach-in on American policy in Vietnam. The crowd dwindled to about half as the night progressed with only about 250 of the original 500 left at 6 o'clock this morning.

All who remained, students and faculty from the four-college area, agreed that the activities of the evening had served a purpose and that the teach-in was both successful and effective.

The program ranged from poetry to belligerent expression of opinion, but the spirit of free expression remained evident throughout.

The teach-in was one of some 31 scheduled to take place throughout the nation this week in preparation for the planned student march on Washington on the 17th to protest government policy in Vietnam.

Noted Panelists Discuss Approaches To Vietnam

by Dan Glosband
Managing Editor

Henry Steele Commager, first speaker at the Mahar Auditorium "teach-in," presented an empirical refutation of United States policy in South Viet Nam. The Amherst College professor and noted historian enumerated the basis of what he felt to be the untenability of the U.S. stand in Viet Nam.

Legally, the Geneva agreements of 1954 are being violated in that the issue has not been brought before the Security Council, that free elections have not been guaranteed, and that the U.S. is using gas warfare.

"PRACTICALLY," SAID COMMAGER, "our policies are based on a complex of assumptions." Such assumptions, he said, can lead to the happening of the unexpected, and, "history admonishes that the unexpected precipitates crises."

According to Commager, "We have stumbled into the position of an aggressor, while we would not tolerate conduct such as ours by other countries of this hemisphere." Our position is altruistic, and our assumptions are based upon a more general assumption: "We are a people apart and Providence watches our destiny."

DISTINGUISHED AUTHOR Archibald MacLeish followed Commager. "There are times when a man has to get up and speak his mind, and times when he must admit that he has no mind to speak," began MacLeish. This was such a time, and in light of what he termed his ignorance, the poet-dramatist-statesman told what we should not do in Viet Nam.

"We should not commit acts of war against a country with which we are not at war," he stated, on the basis that they are immoral. An added underpinning is the fact that we are a self governing people, and that the military should not inadvertantly determine our policy.

AS A DEMOCRATIC society, we should know the issues and facts at hand, and not have them concealed from us. "A self governing people has the right to know, whether in peace or in

Faculty Dispute Viet War Solutions

by Steve Gordon
Day Editor

Universal solutions to world problems, with passing references to the Vietnam situation, seemed to dominate last night's Four College Teach-In Panel at Mahar Auditorium.

The panel, moderated by Amherst College student, Brill Walsh, included Luther Allen and David Leonard of the University, Jean Grossholtz of Mt. Holyoke College,and Herbert Spiro of Amherst College.

Allen, a recognized expert on the Vietnam situation, and one-time resident of that country, offered the only real insights into Vietnam. The other panelists used the occasion to apply the Vietnam situation to their own personal world problem solutions, which ranged from calculated interventionism to pacifism.

ALLEN OPENED THE discussion by terming the U.S. commitment in Vietnam as foolhardy. The crisis in Vietnam, he said, is our continued failure to approach our committment from the political point of view. As a result of this failure, we have undertaken an escalation of the war to North Vietnam as "an act of frustration.

The creation of world order as the fundamental American goal was suggested by Miss Grossholtz in her opening remarks. She explained that our policies in Vietnam are in question because our "will, spirit, and committment in South Vietnam are in question."

MISS GROSSHOLTZ went on to cite the main problem in South Vietnam as American ignorance of the socio-political structure of South Vietnam. However, she warned against leaving Vietnam, and defended escalation, for, she observed, even if we abandon Vietnam, the fight will have to be continued elsewhere.

Because of the U.S. policies in South Vietnam, Professor Spiro maintained that he was ashamed to be an American. He blamed this attitude on a combination of the immorality and stupidity of the policies.

HE RIDICULED THE righteous indignation that Americans have for attacks on American installations, both military and

Men Of Morality Bolster Symposium

by Ellen Levine
Staff Reporter

Introduced by Henry Yost, professor of biology at Amherst College, as "men who are paid to think about morality all day," four local clergymen sustained the dusk to dawn teach-in with a discussion of the moral issues of the Vietnam struggle.

Speaking first, Rabbi Ruchames stressed his belief that, when considering action in Vietnam, emphasis be placed on three ideals; democracy, reason, and brotherly love. A concern for basic morals and beliefs is necessary, said the Rabbi. It is time that "swords be turned into plow shares."

The second speaker, Reverend Harold Cooper, also of UMass, urged that an adjustment to the "new paths of existence," be made. The church, he continued, "has too long remained silent." Reverend Cooper remarked that there is too much concern over the death of a few caucasions and not enough concern over the death of many Vietnamese.

Continuing the discussion, John Ratte, an Amherst professor and Catholic layman, questioned the safety of continually trying to please the mob. He referred to the failure of the Athenian civilization after it became overly concerned with

Outspoken Students Disagree At Dawn

by Richard Danca

The student panel near the close of last night's teach-in soon departed from the planned discussion and questioning of the four panelists and became a lively mass discussion from both the stage and the floor.

The original four panelists—three from UMass and one from Amherst College—were soon supplanted by various members of the audience.

Paul Sheehan, of the University, spoke for the U.S. government policies. Sheehan described Gen. Douglas MacArthur as his idea of "a great American," instead of Bob Dylan."

"I am proud to be an American," he said, "because we are the best."

Lynn Greeley, the second of the UMass students, called for an elimination of oversimplifications by both these who propose withdrawal and those wanting to continue present policies.

The third of the originally scheduled student panelists from UMass, Ken Jacobson, disagreed with the bombing which he feels can only result in bombing of factories" oriented toward an agricultural revolution in an agriculturally depressed area."

The Amherst student, Elliot Isenberg, called the Vietnam situation but one of the similar situations where the U.S. "supports the side that isn't going to win."

After the five-minute opening speeches of the panelists several other students were allowed time to give their views.

'Our Job Is Primarily Educational' Founder Describes Birch Society

by Richard Danca
Staff Reporter

"The Communists have beguiled many good Americans," said Robert Welch, head of the John Birch Society speaking Tuesday night at a UMass Political Science Association lecture.

Talking from a shortened version of the speech he gave at the founding of the conservative, anti-communist society in 1958, Welch described the formation, organization, and purposes of the Birch Society.

"Our job is primarily educational," he said. "Our action programs are designed to give education to the American public about the dangers and evils of Communism."

HE GAVE NO EXACT INDICATION OF the size of the group and emphasized the policy of keeping membership lists secret, saying "If you went to a minister in town and asked him for a list of his congregation he would refuse to give it to you."

Welch listed the five goals set out in the society's "Blue Book," the first of which is "to outline the nature and the frightening advance against our nation, against (all) religion, and against our civilization."

HE THEN OUTLINED THE ten categories of works of the Birch Society, including the "dissemination of Americanist books and pamphlets."

He later said that the press "has used the charge of 'secrecy' to harm us," and that notoriety "has been forced upon us."

He said that "the Communists hate us because there is nothing they fear so much as having the truth exposed."

Following the talk, Welch answered questions about the Birch Society.

THE RELATION TO GOVERNMENT, he said "is changing very rapidly and disastrously." He emphasized the need for the American public to realize that the U.S. government is drifting away from the republic set in the Constitution toward a democracy.

He said that "the terrific drive to break down the American republic to a democracy" is due mainly to the Warren Court. He also said that the Birch Society is still pushing for the impeachment of Chief Justice Warren.

He called the U.S. policy in Vietnam "stupid," but insisted that the question which asked if the South Vietnamese would vote to go Communist would only be true "with a dishonest election."

WELCH ALSO INSISTED that even though there are not two per cent Communists in the federal government, "we think that Communist influence has become quite strong in the federal government." He said that this two per cent has a "50 to 70 per cent influence" in determining policy.

diplomatic, by the Viet Cong. We are at war with these people, he said, and cannot claim diplomatic immunity.

With regard to the Cold War situation, Spiro said that both sides recognize the stupidity of nuclear war, and, as such, the weapon has become "will, determination and purpose."

"We are meddling," said a shocked Professor Leonard. Leonard was shocked by the President's speech and by the recognition "that something has gone wrong" in Vietnam.

"THE COUNTRY HAS LOST the capacity to see with feeling," said Leonard. "The crisis is not in Vietnam, but in this country, within ourselves."

Leonard suggested that the dream of America should be "to offer humbly, but not arrogantly, out of innocence and success, the possibility of helping the governments of the world."

Leonard went on to advocate unilateral disarmament on the part of the U.S.

IN REPLY TO A QUESTION concerning South Vietnam loyalty in an election, Professor Allen predicted "a mixed response" of the voters, caused by strong regionalism.

In answering a question addressed to her, Miss Grossholtz suggested that we adopt a "politics of vision", in which we must allow the peoples of the world to choose their own goals, and not impose our goals on them.

pleasing the masses.

Ratte stressed the need to be concerned over the central threat of nuclear warfare. He supported the continuance of the war but did not agree that escalation should continue. He expressed his belief that if a feeling of detachment is lost, the U.S. will lose its ability to be self-critical. "We are faced now with the necessity of restraining (not ending) violence," he concluded.

Ending the panel discussion, Reverend Steven Howard of Greenfield, warned against the tendency of the U.S. to generalize about Communism. He labeled as a misconception the idea that "Communism is a solid, united force with the sole intention of crushing the West." He urged that we think of the communists as human.

"There is a vast confusion of ends and means,' Reverend Howard said, and that "we must ask what we can do as individuals and not retreat into our own private, well - ordered worlds.'

STUDENT DEBATE . . .

brought up at this time was continued following a speech by Michael DeSherbinin, editor-publisher of the Amherst Journal-Record.

Some of the issues included pro and con talk, or the so-called "Civil-Rights hootenany" held at the teach-in, and argument as to what the U.S. had to offer Vietnam.

William Doyle, describing himself as in favor of the U.S. policy, said "we ought to share our liberty" and answered a question of "how" by saying "Force it on them, ram it down their throats."

Other students discussed "words" and U.S. "propaganda", and possible Viet Cong filling of the "political vacuum" left by U.S. pullout.

Seniors To Vote On Metawampe Award

by Jeff Davidow
Staff Reporter

UMass seniors will have an opportunity today to voice their opinions as to what faculty member deserves to win the coveted Metawampe award. A polling booth will be in front of the Student Union Ballroom until 5 p.m. this afternoon. There all members of the class of 1965 will be able to express their preference and to help choose the individual who satisfies best the spirit of the Metawampee award.

Established by the class of 1963, the Metawampee award, a miniature statue of the Indian spirit of the University, is awarded to that professor who, in the opinion of the graduating class, has done the most to improve student-faculty relationships.

THE FIRST RECIPIENT OF the award at Student Leaders Night in April of 1963, was Professor Albert Madeira of the English Department. A popular campus figure, Professor Madeira had served as an advisor to numerous campus organizations and individuals. At the time of his sudden death in January of 1964, he was advisor to the Collegian, the Index, the Roister Doisters, and was serving as coach of the University's College Bowl Team.

The second recipient of the award at last year's Student Leaders Night was another member of the University's English faculty, H. Leland Varley. Professor Varley has taken upon himself a number of tasks designed to promote a healthier academic and non-academic environment for UMass students.

The third annual Metawampee Award will be presented this year at Student Leader's Night on Tuesday, May 4.

NOTICE

Permission can be granted for Special Scheduling for Bona Fide reasons of employment only. Students whose continuance at the university is dependent upon such special scheduling should report to the appropriate student personnel dean prior to pre-registration (Counseling Day, May 11) and substantiate their request with a letter from their employer. Schedule exception cannot be granted at the time of registration.

It is incumbent upon all students to plan ahead carefully and to make requests for schedule exceptions at the time of pre-registration. Any major change in a student's personal circumstances which might justify any schedule exception following pre-registration should be reported to the appropriate personnel dean in writing at once.

ACCION Worker Here To Interview Students

by Joan Lezar, Staff Reporter

Miss Cristina Downey, now on leave from her work with ACCION in Caracas, Venezuela is visiting UMass April 6 to 9. She will be available to talk with interested students in the Placement Office, first floor Machmer Hall.

ACCION, Americans for Community Co-operation in Other Nations, was organized in 1960 by Joseph Blatchford, graduate of the University of California at Berkely. It is a privately financed organization somewhat like the government-supported Peace Corps.

CHRISTINA DOWNEY GRADUATED from Mt. Holyoke College in 1964. She spent a year of undergraduate study at the University of the Philippines, and has traveled in 22 countries. She learned to speak Spanish in 6 weeks for her work with ACCION and she can speak French, Russian, some Tagalog and Swahili.

Christina works in Barrio 12 re Octubre, just outside Caracas. Her co-worker is an architecture student who according to Christina is "very dedicated to the work, as well as perceptive about people and problems, and almost psychic in his ability to anticipate situations that invariably arise."

ACCION WORKERS LIVE IN the "barrios" or slums of Caracas, Maracaibo, and other Venezuelian cities. Their purpose is "not to give people alms, but to give them confidence in their own ability," as one member put it.

After generations of living in the slums, the people are overcome with a sense of helplessness; they have no incentive to try to help themselves. The Accionistas, or workers, are there to act as catalysts, "to help start the action that gathers momentum," to help the people of the "barrios" realize that they themselves can improve their standard of living. The accionistas hope to work themselves out of their jobs—eventually the whole organization will be run by Venezuellans themselves.

As of January 1965, there were 150 members of ACCION —105 men and 45 women. They are paid about $150 a month and must live on their salary without any other aids. There is no "nestegg" waiting for them after they return from service as is the case in the Peace Corps.

ONE OF THE MAIN PROBLEMS in Venezuelian barrios is lack of water. Water must be shipped in and costs 40 cents a barrel. Residents spend about one third of their weekly salary on water. Pipelines are desperately needed.

Accionistas get close to residents by organizing volleyball and baseball teams. Recreation areas are common and usually are one of the first projects to be completed, even before the pipelines.

BUILDING A COMMUNITY center for meetings and classes is another important project and usually one of the first to be completed. Elementary classes for children, sewing classes for women, gatherings for men, health and sanitation classes, and meetings to plan other community projects are held at the center.

SEVENTY PER CENT OF the budget for ACCION comes from private Venezuelian contributors. The Voluntary Dividend the work on ACCION. United organized by Venezuelian industries, who have agreed to pool 2 to 5% of their profits towards the work of ACCION. United States firms also contribute.

Other Latin American countries have expressed interest in having ACCION programs for their own slum areas. In Venezuela, 200,000 people in 80 communities are affected by ACCION. In a few months the number will double. Blatchford expects to be replaced by a Venezuelian, Arturo Pardo. As soon as he is replaced, Blatchford will start programs in Brazil, Peru and Chile. Slowly but surely, the people of Latin America are taking over the initiative themselves.

Angel Flight Set To Open Rush Program

When the Angel Flight returns from the annual Conclave and Spring Vacation, it will begin a rush program which will continue during the last two weeks of April.

Angel Flight is an honorary service organization of selected women from leading colleges and universities across the nation. It is recognized by the United States Air Force, and exists to further the cause of the Air Force Society, and the respective college or university. Flights across the nation also act as service groups in the community.

ALL GIRLS WHO ARE INTERESTED in learning more about Angel Flight, are invited to attend two informal meetings. The first of these get-acquainted meetings will be held Tuesday evening, April 20 at 7 p.m. It will feature Captain Close, the Flight advisor, who will explain the purpose and function of the Flight.

The second meeting will be held Thursday evening, April 22 at 7 p.m. Both meetings will include refreshments and will be held in Memorial Hall. An additional tea is planned for the following Saturday afternoon.

POSTERS WITH ADDITIONAL information will be placed in all woman's dorms soon. All girls who are interested are invited to atend these meetings and meet the Angels.

Profs. Spiro, Grosshodtz, Leonard and Allen dispute avenues of U. S. action in Southeast Asia.

Fr. Corridor Scheduled For Men

A men's French corridor for selected upperclassmen will be formed next year in Webster House with a graduate student from Franch for its counselor.

The French Corridor is aimed primarily at men interested in preparing for Foreign Service work, for business positions abroad and to improve French.

The program will also allow more men to participate in the Orchard Hill Residential College experiment with a specific interest.

Interested students may call Prof. Richard Haven, Preceptor, in Bartlett 489 MWF 1-2:30 at 2575, or Prof. Luther Allen at 2438 or AL 3-7935.

Formal admission must be completed by April 27-28.

New Concept In Education

Last night's Four College Teach-In sponsored by the University was extremely informative, and very well presented. Many points of view were presented, and most of the faculty and guest participants of the program endeavored to be informative rather than persuasive in regard to any one point of view.

The audience, however, was primarily composed of students and faculty who had preconceived notions and opinions about what action the American government and people ought to take regarding the Vietnam situation. As a result, their reaction to the speakers was based on their point of view, rather than the presentation of the material. The greatest benefit by far was gained by those who went to learn rather than to protest or actively agree.

One very disturbing factor was the response to the President's speech. The audience demonstrated a great amount of disrespect, laughing, hissing, and booing at any point with which they were not in agreement. Unfortunately, many of those responsible for this action were faculty, and the example which they set was far less than exemplary.

Perhaps the most objective and informative speaker of the evening was Archibald MacLeish. His major point, which was very well taken, was that the U.S. government owes the American people an explanation for its present policy. This can hardly be denied, no matter what point of view one takes regarding escalation or reduction of the war in Vietnam.

The different views and opinions about how to proceed in Vietnam, from the point where we stand now, were best illustrated in the panel discussion. All stands were well represented and very informative, but again, the speakers were accepted or regected on the basis of their opinion.

The Teach-In represents a new concept in education. No other form of teaching has been able to accomplish the very difficult task of interesting students in important problems of current events, and, holding their attention long enough to present an informative and complete discussion of the topic. This practice would be a worthy of expansion to cover other topics of study, and the University would do well to continue it in the future.

A Lack Of Privacy

The recent announcement that all undergraduates living in the new Southwest complex next year must eat in the Southwest dining commons is a big step towards making the dormitory the center of all student life, including classes and relations with the faculty. But there is one aspect of college living which has been completely neglected, and without which the dormitory will never become the student's "second home"—social life.

The problem of parietal restrictions has been debated to no avail on many campuses, the Harvard controversy being particularly noteworthy. Of course, the problems at UMass, a coed university, are different from those at Harvard, an all male university. For one, the administrators at Harvard rightly feel that since the students do not have female companionship during most of their classroom hours and average work week, they are entitled to special visiting privileges from girls on weekends. Because students at UMass have the opportunity to cultivate friendships with the opposite sex before, during, and after classes, they do not have this problem. But other difficulties do exist.

The most obvious problem is lack of privacy. Students have become so accustomed to crowds that the jokes about "mass make" and "grassing" have become the most popular on campus. But underneath the good-natured exterior, many students are grumbling.

For example, the other night, while leaving Van Meter, I passed a couple, kissing good-night in the doorway. The poor guy probably thought he finally had a few moments to be alone with his girl, until I disturbed everything simply by walking through. Although this episode may even seem humorous at first, it is such little annoyances, added to the already mounting pressures from schoolwork and marks, which can make college life miserable.

What I wish to propose as a solution to this problem is not immoral; it is not shocking; and it is already being used at many universities throughout the nation without any resulting consequences —simply to allow, during specified hours, girls to enter boys' rooms, or boys to enter girls' rooms, or both. There is already precedent for such action at this university. During Homecoming weekend boys were allowed to bring their dates up into their rooms for a few hours on Sunday afternoon. Just before Christmas vacation the open houses held from 7-9 p.m. on Friday evening at the girls' dorms in the Orchard Complex were very successful. The boys could meet their dates right in their dates' rooms, and from there bring them down to the dance, all making for a most enjoyable evening.

The exact conditions and time for parietal hours would have to be decided over the debating table. I was thinking that Sunday afternoons from 2-6, and Friday and Saturday evenings from 7-9 would be good hours. Opinions on this may vary, but it is a proposal worth thinking about.

A Sense of Humor?

To our five outspoken critics,

Allow me to grant rather questionable thanks for your little vendetta. It serves to prove your literacy, but denies the existence of a sense of humor, which you claim to enjoy.

Allow me also to differentiate between scandall-sheet journalism and satirical farce. Granted, our headline was a come on, and was meant to be no more than that. However, the "Enquirer" style aimed only at further perpetuating the actual jest, not at satisfying anyone's "crude desire". Perhaps you have never taken the time to note the often morbid content of the poor, scandal-sheets you so blatantly compare us to. Certainly we must plead not guilty to this unjust charge.

We never intended to exacerbate relations with the administration by humiliating them. Rather, our intention was to deal humorously with their lighter side. If you feel that this necessitates censorship, then I must ask you to re-evaluate your concepts of press freedom.

Anyone in a public position is subject to criticism, and rightly so. He should be happy that it comes only in jest. This might indicate that serious, concrete criticisms are relatively unnecessary, and could even stand as a de facto commendation. Regardless, it is the right of the press, within bounds, to criticize. Farce is within these bounds.

You refer to poor taste. Taste is entirely relative to individual opinion. I believe that the terms of your billet were in poor taste. "Underhanded, crude, trash," stand out particularly.

You accuse us of being nefarious, but we are innocent. You accuse us of being barbarous, but perhaps it is you who are being atavistic.

I cordially invite you to undo a bit of your straight-lacing and laugh with the rest of us. You'd be surprised, it might be enjoyable.

With no ill will,

The Poor Rich

To the Editor:

Re: "The Follies of Our Day" by Carol Neilon.

Somehow, Miss Neilon, deep in our hearts, we know "what a terrible handicap it is to be born rich." And we also know what a terrible handicap it is to be born poor in a materialistic society. UMass Teach-In

To the Editor:

Re: the Teach-In last night. The following is a quote from an article on the military situation in the Far East by Air Commodore C.N. Foxley, D.S.O, O.B.E, M.A., R.A.F.:

"Yet the internal situation is bad and deteriorating. Why?

"There are many reasons and contradictory factors (in South Viet Nam). The borders of the country are geographically indefensible against infiltration, and its neighbors are hostile or indifferent. Its mountains and jungle-covered terrain, varied with large areas of swamp, is ideal for guerilla operations, and for terrorization of isolated communities. Its people are ignorant, susceptible to propaganda, duped and deceived on the actual issues, and at best apathetic to their government. The government, forbidden by treaty to ally itself formally with American or any other major Power, cannot be supported by actual armed forces from abroad. Its troops are often unskilled, unenthusiastic, and underpaid. The battle is against a fanatical, highly trained, and subtle enemy. Malaya has shown us that such a battle can be won. But it also showed that the victory can only come by long and intensive effort, suitable tactics, and exhaustive training; and, above all, that it must be won in the hearts and minds of the people as well as in the field. All this remains to be done in Viet Nam. The Americans appreciate this, and it is hoped that they will be able to inspire the Vietnamese and instill the necessary skills and spirit before it is too late. Time is running short.

"Finally, we must never be deceived by mere geographical distance into the delusion that we are not vitally interested in any part of the world. Czechoslovakia in 1938 was a 'small, little-known country,' but it was there that the wedge of Nazi aggression was inserted and the series of events started which nearly destroyed us. We must ensure that Communism is not permitted to repeat this tactic in the Far East."

May I add that Commodore Foxley-Norris wrote this article in May of 1962. Professor Leonard sir, the handwriting was on the wall back then, must we still turn our backs and refuse to read it?

As I See It

The Spiritual Agora

Editor's Note: The author of this column, Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials concerning the differences between American and European students.

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

Smily Apollo's disc hangs in the middle of the blue cupola of the Attic sky; gleaming, the sun rays bathe softly in the magic of the Aegian; and up on the hill of Acropolis, the Pantelic marble sparkles with beautiful finesse.

Down around the olive tree, the young faces seem dreamy; the eyes, the spirit, are absorbed within one focus: The Master. Plato is speaking slowly; his words, ideas, concepts, fall softly in the fertile ground of the young intellects.

Within arm's length the other group is pacing rhythmically; no rushing is necessary. Aristotle speaks in pauses. Each phrase becomes a premise; from each set of premises a conclusion is drawn, carefully . . .

The mystique of learning, at its best!

• • • • •

But that's past, gone, never to return. Modern Greek Universities, and European also, have lost this mystifying quality of intimacy in the act of learning and teaching.

To a regretful extent education has lost its intrinsic value of being something beautiful, an intellectual pursuit.

The spiritual agora lays now, forever concealed behind the shadows of the eclipse; the eclipse that Urbanism produced.

Greek and European Institutions of learning are conceived under one premise: To Serve the ELITE. The small percentage of those who can afford it, compared to that of the young minds who are ready for it, who could profit by it, is overwhelmingly depressing.

• • • •

In the U.S., fellow student, you are fortunate. Your social philosophy rich with Democratic ideals, both by necessity and by the efforts of unique minds (see Dewey et al.) has made education available to the Public at large.

This is something in which America has excelled and as a Nation you deserve both the due credit and respect.

But whether modern American Institutions of learning are examples of the "true" Spiritual Agora, is something debatable. I will not attempt to discuss it.

I will make one concluding remark, however, concerning the merchant (the professor) who displays his "goods" in American Universities.

The American Professor is a unique being. And this characteristic uniqueness of his, happens to be a common denominator for all, the Giants and the Retailers in this "spiritual agora."

He is simple, friendly, most of the times understanding and concerned with his students as much as he is concerned with his intellectual endeavors.

His European counterpart is, unfortunately for the European student, preserved, withdrawn, self-centered and unapproachable.

A student might sometimes have to fill out an application form in order to have a conference with his professor!

This unique quality, that I as a European student, find invaluable in the personality of a professor in the U.S., seems to be disappearing lately.

It would be a shame, if the "humanity" of the American professor gets lost in the shadows of the "eclipse" that Urbanization brought forth.

It is unique and wonderful. IT MUST BE PRESERVED.

WMUA — YESTERDAY,

Election Night Coverage — An All Out Effort

by Bill Johnson

With people running back and forth, paper rustling, typewriters clicking, and hollow sounding voices barking instructions over the intercom system, WMUA prepared to go on the air with its election night coverage.

Sitting behind the microphones and gathering material that had been gleaned from the wire service over the past few months, were the three heroes of the night: Ken Moon, Norm Ryan and Bill Johnson.

Out in the control room sat the brains behind the whole affair, Ron Engel, who had courageously taken the job of coordinating the utter confusion that reigned throughout the station.

This was the scene that night of national elections.

Election coverage had been a regular four year event at the station, but never on so large a scale as this. In addition to the three announcers at the station, there were also several reports by a network of college radio stations.

As one person who inadvertently stumbled into the station said—"What the hell is going on?" "I've never seen so much confusion and chalk dust in all my life!"

I suppose that's about as good a description as any I've heard about that night. A brief account of the evening will prove my point.

In the master control room sat the director, Ron Engel, wearing a pair of earphones, looking over cue sheets for the network, with people all around him telling him the latest developments. To his left sat the engineer behind all his dials and switches. Hovering over everyone was the technical director, monitoring meters, making adjustments, and filling out logs.

In the main studio, were the announcers, doing what every good announcer should—talking. Helping these three stalwarts was the student who recorded the latest tallies on a blackboard and on the large picture window between studios. Staffers did rewrite work and some monitored the teletype to bring in the latest information.

In the observation room were those people who made coffee in a comandeered coffee pot, and some others who just stood and watched.

8,000 Records to Satisfy The Discriminating Listener

by Mike Duggan

WMUA, as an established member of the national educational broadcasting community, maintains subscription services with many of the large national record companies and distributors. A substantial portion of WMUA's annual budget is earmarked for the purchase of new records. This extensive program has, over the years, supplied the station with a comprehensive collection of the latest recordings in all of the various programming areas.

Currently, WMUA's record library contains approximately 4,000 L.P. albums and nearly the same number of 45's. The station has, however, received many more albums than these figures indicate. To date, WMUA has received almost 12,000 45's, but as these become outdated, many still in good condition, are donated to various groups and organizations. Similar donations of L.P.'s are made.

Last year, WMUA donated a number of albums to the Student Union. Chances are, the music you hear while waiting for the Thursday night movie is from an album supplied by WMUA. In past years, the station has donated many recordings to the Belchertown State School, where they are greatly appreciated.

These donations are just one more way that WMUA tries to serve the campus and the community.

What's Next?

What does the future hold for WMUA? This is a difficult question to answer. However, WMUA does have some far reaching plans for the future. As an important facet of a rapidly growing University, WMUA plans to keep pace with this growth. The new antenna which was installed this semester has doubled the station's area of coverage. WMUA and the Collegian have instituted a program of campus-oriented news broadcasts in an effort to improve programming.

But these innovations are for tomorrow. Tomorrow is uncertain. Nevertheless, WMUA is planning. The new addition to the Student Union may house a modern suite of broadcasting studios for the WMUA of the future.

EDUCATIONAL TELEVISION is a fast rising field. As early as 1956, WMUA was considering a combined radio-television broadcasting facility. Due to lack of space, these plans were abandoned. However, future studios may provide necessary facilities for open and/or closed circuit television broadcasting.

Granted, these plans are not certainties. They are only speculation. We can be sure of one thing, however; whatever the future holds for the University of Massachusetts, WMUA will play an increasingly important role on campus and in the community.

Programming Variety Meets Diverse Interests

by Don Weaver

WMUA is a "middle of the road" radio station where programming is concerned. Our programming includes a wide variety of shows. Music ranges from classical to rock and roll—the news covers the world and the campus. Educational programs vary from panel discussions to dramas. These formats are designed to appeal to both campus and community tastes.

The programming on weekdays begins at 7:00 a.m. with up tempo popular music and lively chatter that is bound to wake up any student. In the evening, two hours of classical music is presented for study purposes and is followed by soft, easy-listening music. To end the broadcast day, a variety of folk, popular, and show tunes is offered.

WEEKEND PROGRAMMING begins on Friday night with "Oldies but Goodies" and the rock and roll request show, "Crazy Rhythms". Throughout the rest of the weekend, a well balanced mixture of popular, classical, folk and broadway music is presented.

Student announcers are D.J.'s for all the shows, and within the limits imposed by the show's format, they choose the music to be played. Whenever posible, these announcers are assigned to shows that suit their own musical tastes.

THE WORLD, THE NATION, and the campus community are covered in the WMUA news spectrum. On weekends and weekday mornings, newscasts are broadcast on the hour, and every evening there are comprehensive 15 minute news and sports roundups.

This year, the 9:55 p.m. news is solely campus oriented. Of course, campus announcements are often given during individual programs. These announcements take the place of commercial messages which cannot be used by an educational broadcasting station.

INFORMATIONAL PROGRAMMING is offered in the form of panel discussions, D.V.P. lectures, interviews, and dramas. When significant issues are to be presented, the Student Senate meetings are broadcast live.

Next year, the variety of music will remain, but individual shows will specialize in particular forms of music. Also, in order to provide a greater service to the University community, programming will be more campus oriented. Overall, WMUA will continue to offer a broad spectrum of programming.

The WMUA Story — Sounds, Places and Faces

by Tom Gagnon

FM broadcasting at WMUA began in October of 1952 when the station was the fourth non-commercial FM station in New England, and the first student operated collegiate station in the same region. However, WMUA history begins further back than 1952.

During the pre-World War II days at Massachusetts State College, broadcasting activities were at work in the small studios in the tower of South College five flights above the busy campus. A series of dramatic programs were produced to be aired over a network of several western Mass. radio stations. The war took the men from the campus and along with them went campus radio.

It was not until the veterans were back and the war over that student radio returned. This time it was closer to a real radio station. On the Amherst campus students founded a small carrier current station called WMSC, for Mass. State College. At the veterans branch campus at Fort Devens, WFDM was established on similar lines.

By way of explanation, a carrier current station uses the power lines for an antenna and is theoretically restricted to them. The Devensmen first tried using a system of loudspeakers, but this failed for two good reasons. Annoyed students stole them and the faculty found out too late that the boys could speak as well as hear over a few of the more well-placed speakers.

IN 1948 THE VETERANS were moved to the college and left Devens and the old guardhouse studios behind. But the equipment came with them and up it went to the fifth floor studios of South College. WMSC and WFDM were united, and after long hours of work into the night, the radio band at 640 kc (AM carrier current) came alive with the new station bearing call letters that remain to this day. WMUA—Massachusetts University, Amherst.

WMUA soon became a charter member of the Pioneer Broadcasting System including Amherst, Smith, and AIC in Springfield. This is believed to be the first true intercollegiate radio network in the U.S. using telephone lines to exchange programs.

LINES TO SKINNER AND BOWKER auditoriums extended the studios here on campus in addition to a line to Alumni Field and Curry Hicks Cage. In later years, lines were used to carry all the away football games and many of the basketball games. And so WMUA grew with the University until 1952.

At this time it was realized that college stations were soon to be asked to leave this semi-legal status on AM and become licensed on the FM band. The FCC found the AM band too crowded and college stations were, in reality, not as restricted as the law provided. Under aid and advice from a willing group of faculty advisors, the trustees of the University purchased the FM transmitter and licensed WMUA.

IN OCTOBER OF 1952, the curtain on the FM stage opened for WMUA with the first broadcast on 91.1 mc FM. True to form, those AM college stations which did not go FM were soon forced to leave the air.

In 1956, WMUA moved into brand new studios in the Engineering Building. These studios were hailed by many as the best in New England. Somewhat sheepishly, the station members revealed that the new studios were modeled after the old guard-house at Fort Devens. These studios are still in use today supplying the campus and surrounding area with WMUA, The Voice of the Students and the University.

AS AN EDUCATIONAL station, WMUA holds to a unique, fresh policy. The direction of education is towards the large staff of students numbering near the one hundred mark. Most educational stations attempt to educate the public at large. Here, in an atmosphere where the college student may feel that he is a number, marking time before going out to meet the world, an opportunity is offered to try his wings, test the theory and see a job well done.

Converters—A Sore Spot In FM Broadcasting

by Tom Gagnon

Periodically, WMUA members hear the complaint that those students who are not fortunate enough to own an FM radio cannot receive WMUA's programming. They feel that the answer to this problem is dorm converters. Converters, they maintain, would transfer the WMUA signal to the AM radio band in the dormitories and increase WMUA's audience.

The tech department of the station is the first to acknowledge the existence of this problem. Unfortunately, however, converters are not the answer. Over the years, many different types of converters have been installed on an experimental basis. In all of these cases, the cost of installation and maintenance of the delicate instruments has been prohibitive. For this reason, converters have not been installed in all of the dorms.

Until a serviceable converter is designed, we will have to bear with the restrictions imposed by FM broadcasting.

WMUA Invites New Members To Entertain a Growing UMass

by Tom Gagnon

Ten years ago, the campus was blanketed by the "Sound of the South College Studios". Wisecracking students invited students to "defy gravity and drop up and see us some time". Those days are gone now, but WMUA is still around, bigger and better than ever. Our studios are in the northeast corner of the Engineering Building basement now, but announcers are still inviting students to visit the station.

When you have some spare time, stop by WMUA. Any of the station members will be happy to give you a guided tour and to explain some of the functions of the station.

If you have an interest in any aspect of radio broadcasting, there is a place for you at WMUA. There is an urgent need for announcers, technicians, copywriters, and record librarians. Experience is not a prerequisite. WMUA wil train you to take an active, important part in YOUR radio station.

U.S. Postmaster To Speak At SBA Building Dedication

U.S. Postmaster General John A. Gronouski wil be the principal speaker at dedication ceremonies of the new School of Business Administration Building Tuesday, April 13.

A Honda needs a mere 3'x6' space to be perfectly content. And that puts an automobile on a spot, about a mile away from its destination.

There are other sides to Honda, too. Hondas are fiendishly frugal. A gallon of gas will carry you up to 200 mpg, depending on which of the 15 Honda models you're driving. And insurance bills shrink to practically nothing. As for upkeep, a Honda needs little.

The shining example above is the remarkable Honda 50. It sells for about $215*. And there are 14 more models to choose from. Look them over.

Massachusetts Crime Commission Preview Report Published

by Steve Gordon
Day Editor

A preview of the Massachusetts Crime Commission's report, published in Tuesday's Boston Herald, said that the University was investigated by the Commission, but that these investigations were discontinued "because of a lack of available personnel."

According to the Herald, the Commission will call for "a thorough investigation of the capital expenditures of the University," and an investigation of contracts made for "items used for the maintenance and operation of the University generally."

Also on the Commission's list of future investigations is the alleged theft of grain, and the activities of the University of Massachusetts Building Authority.

Kenneth W. Johnson, treasurer of the University was not immediately available for comment. However, University secretary, Robert J. McCartney, gave the Collegian the following statement:

During the visit last year to the campus of members of the Crime Commission, the University extended every possible degree of cooperation. No formal notification has been received that the Commission found anything out of line on campus. The University does not feel that they will find anything out of line.

Yesterday's premature disclosure of the Commission's preliminary report has been termed by the Crime Commission Chairman "a public disservice"—and all public officials have been counseled editorially to reserve comment until the Commission's final report, representing a balanced assessment of their findings, is released later this year.

The editorial to which McCartney referred appeared in the Boston Globe Wednesday.

The State House New Service stated that the draft of the report which the Herald printed was unofficial, and might be subject to significant change before the Commission releases its findings.

A spokesman for the Herald city desk told the Collegian that the comments of other papers and news services merely indicate "competitive jealousy." The other news media, acording to the spokesman, were "mad that we beat them to the story by a couple of country miles."

He admitted that the report was not final but called it 99+ per cent pure." When asked if reference to the University in the Herald report indicated possible reference to the University in the final report, he replied, 'almost definitely."

war what the truth of the situation is. The end never justifies the means in a democratic society, THE MEANS ARE THE END.

Speaking after MacLeish was Ramon E. Ruiz of the Smith College history faculty. He visualizes the Viet Nam struggle as a part of "the upheaval of our times."

"People want to rule themselves, for better or for worse," he said. These developing peoples want to reject dependence and develop their own economic system, a system which might easily follow the dictates of Marx.

THEY DON'T see these criteria as evil, but rather as viable political and economic philosophy. There is (to them) no moral issue involved between the West and the Soviet or Sino-Soviet camps," said Ruiz.

In this context, the people of Viet Nam are seen as full of hopes and with rampant nationalism. While this nationalism may not develop in the style of American democracy, it should be allowed to develop apart from the dictates of either side.

Ruiz closed, "We are not going to dictate any longer, our arms aren't going to win for us."

UT Director Announces "Glass Menagerie" Cast

Director Cosmo Catalano today announced the cast of The Glass Menagerie. This famous Tennessee Williams play will conclude the current University Theatre season on the evenings of May 6, 7, and 8 in the Student Union Ballroom.

There are four characters in The Glass Menagerie. The four chosen for roles in this production are well known performers from past University Theatre productions. Paula Norton will play the mother, Amanda Wingfield. She will be remembered for characterizations in The Twin Menaechmi and in Born Yesterday.

Sheila Ferrini, another senior and a theatre-speech major, will play the part of the daughter, Laura Wingfield. Sheila has played such varied roles as Mrs. Alving in Ghosts, Calpurnia in Julius Caesar and the woman in The Boat.

The role of Tom Wingfield, the narrator of the play, has been assigned to veteran actor Ken Bordner, fresh from his two roles in Romulus. Ken is a graduate student in theatre as well as dramatic literature. Earlier this year he played the part of Harry Brock in Born Yesterday.

Phil Bedaw, a government major who has been active in University Theatre, will be playing Jim O'Connor, Laura's gentleman caller. His most recent role was as the Teutonic prince, Odoaker, in Romulus. He appeared last spring in Robert Fenn Warren's All the King's Men.

Rehearsals are underway for this arena production.

Nothing can take the press out of Lee-Prëst slacks

Not that it's on his mind right now. And it needn't be. Those Lee-Prest Leesures can't help but stay crisp and neat. No matter what you put them through. They have a new permanent press. So the crease stays in. The wrinkles stay out. Permanently. And that's without ironing. No touch-ups, either. They're made from Lee's special blend of 50% polyester and 50% combed cotton. For wash and wear... with conviction.

Incidentally, that permanent press is the only change we've made in Leesures. They still have that lean, honest look... smart, tailored fit. New Lee-Prest Leesures. Test their permanent press yourself. It isn't necessary, but it's a great way to spend an evening. From $5.98 to $7.98.

Golf Coach Looks For Successful Season

by Dave McIver

The varsity golfers open the 1965 season April 22nd against Vermont at their home course, The Orchards Country Club in South Hadley.

Coach Chet Gladchuk is very optimistic about this years team which has plenty of talent returning from last year's squad. Among the returnees are Captain George DeFalco, Dave Wells, Bob McNeil, Frank Pluta, and Howie Atkinson. DeFalco was the most consistent scorer on last year's team (won 9 - lost 3) shooting steadily in the 70's. Junior Dave Wells was the high point winner. Dave won 10½ out of a possible 12 match points. He was followed by DeFalco with 9 points and Charlie O'Rourke also with 9. O'Rourke is a doubtful starter because he is now practice teaching. Another reason for Gladchuk's high hopes are two members of last years frosh team (won 4- lost 1), Jim McDonald from Springfield and Jerry Grala of Housatonic. With all this material Gladchuk hopes he can form another winning team and bring home the Yankee Conference title.

Some of the big events on the varsity schedule are the New England Intercollegiate Golf Assoc. tournament and the Yankee Conference on May 7th at Storrs and the N.E.I.G.A. on May 13 and 14 at Groton.

The freshmen team will play a 7-match schedule. Seventeen candidates have signed up for the preliminary try-outs which have been delayed because of the poor weather conditions. Notable candidates include Bob Nowak from New Bedford, Marty Jacobson from Woodbridge, Connecticut, and Gary Gasperack, last year's Western Mass. schoolboy champ, from Springfield.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

One of the most grueling of any track events is the ritual-enthralled marathon. April 19, Patriot's Day, is the date set aside for the running of this 26-mile, 385 yard extravaganza in the city of Boston.

This year there will be a little UMass color in the marathon. Ralph Buschman, a 1961 grad, will be attempting to cop the laurel wreath from a field of over a hundred participants, including a host of foreign runners.

In his stay at the University Buschman held just about every distance record on the books. These included the Frosh and varsity 2-mile and mile records. Naturally records are made to be broken and Ralph's were no exception.

Upon graduation Buschman entered the service and continued training and running while in the Army.

At the present he is employed as a chemist in North Wilmington, but still maintains the physical stamina for marathon racing. He is a member of the Spartan A.C., an organization that is heavily populated by U-Mass track grads.

This past Saturday Ralph competed in the Hyde Shoe race in Cambridge and won the time prize. After this preformance the UMass coaching staff felt that there is only one person entered in the Boston race that can beat Buschman; this is Abebe Bakila the Olympic champion.

Last year Ralph was the fifth American across the finish line and the consensus here is that there is no reason why this Olympic team alternate cannot rake in the marbles next week in Boston.

Just about every track grad from the University wil be lining the route from Framingham to Boston to give him encouragement. Right now the best encouragement he could get is the news that Bikila, under contract with the New York World's Fair will not be able to participate.

clutch player I've ever coached . . .or ever seen, for that matter."

He is not alone in his praise. Another NBA coach who would like to remain nameless said, "He's a killer, you get his team on the ropes and he slips away and sticks a knife in you. Forget my name, I don't want to offend my own players, but I got to admit this guy is the greatest clutch player ever, just unbelievable in the last minutes of a close game."

It would appear that West has transferred his pressure play to the full 48 minutes of action rather than just the closing moments.

Last night West and the Lakers played Baltimore again, this time in Baltimore. West and his mates should go on to win the series and meet the winner of the Celtics-Philadelphia series. If the opponent is the Celtics, it is unlikely that West can carry his mates by the Irish. There is just too much team balance. But you can be sure of one thing, West will leave a mark or two on the opposition as he continues to pull out great clutch performances for his team.

Stokes played a fine game on defense.

The Redmen served notice that they were not going to be pushed around during the course of the season. Wesleyan had the experience and UMass did a creditable job. The inexperience of the Redmen showed when they were in tight situations. The next UMass home game will be against M.I.T. April 21 at 3:00.

Redmen Lacrosse Team Bows To Wesleyan In Season Opener

by John Cunningham

In a hard fought battle last year's New England champs, Wesleyan, eked out a 9-7 victory in a lacrosse game played yesterday afternoon.

In the first period the Redmen won the faceoff but Wesleyan immediately stole the ball and scored quickly on the first play. Wesleyan went on to score four goals in the first period before the Redmen defense could tighten up. Just before the end of the first quarter John Schroeder, UMass defenseman, picked up a loose ball, ran down the field past the Wesleyan defense and scored the only UMass goal of the period. So at the end of the first quarter the score was Wesleyan 4, UMass 1.

Dick Pulsifer battles swarm of Wesleyan players for ball in lacrosse game played yesterday.

In the second period, heads up play by the midfieldmen and a stronger defense put the Redmen back in the game. Dick Brown, UMass captain, scored on an empty net early in the quarter and banged in another unassisted goal a few moments later. Dave Jarret scored the other UMass goal of the period while Wesleyan's Burt and Brown scored one goal each. At the end of the second period it was Wesleyan 6 UMass 4.

Dick Pulsiver opened the third period scoring by faking his way through the Wesleyan defense and slamming a shot into the net. Right after this Tony Arnieri tied the score at 6-6 with an unassisted goal. But Dyer and Healy put Wesleyan back on top and the third period ended with UMass down 8-6.

The final quarter opencd with a confused scramble in front of the Redmen net. In the midst of the confusion Wesleyan's Burt managed to push the ball through the mass of legs. Fighting harder the Redmen came back once again on a goal by Kevin O'Brien after he took a good pass from Brown. This was it for the afternoon though as the Wesleyan defense refused to yield. The final score once again: Wesleyan 9, U-Mass 7.

The game was highlighted by the heads - up play of Jim Mahoney, Dave Jarret and Dick Brown. These three never let up while they were on the field. Schroeder had his hands full with Wesleyan's Burt and did an outstanding job covering him. Fred Foley and Brad

by Dick Lowe

This past Monday the Fraternity Bowling All-Star team defeated the Dorm All-Stars 3-1. High single honors went to Deivisco (SPE) who threw a magnificent 219. Next in line was Hardy (Mills) with a 202. The final tallies showed the Fraternity team on top by 174 pins.

This marks the third All-Star game this year that the IFC has dominated. The first was in football, next came basketball and now bowling.

STILL ON BOWLING, a UMass representative team of Tordoff, D'Andrea, Marco, Misky and Rojewski recently placed fifth in a field of 35 teams in the New England Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament held in East Providence, R.I. The total pin fall for the team was 2629. Another team, composed of IFC members, placed 14th in the competition.

A Badminton singles tournament will begin April 21, so sharpen up on your badminton over vacation. The deadline for entries is tomorrow.

Another racquet sport to think about is tennis. Guys, get your girls in shape, 'cause the mixed doubles tennis tournament will begin after vacation.

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

What makes one individual stand out above others in certain clutch situations? That is the question that has been asked over the last few days with specific reference to one Jerry West, a guard of many talents on the Los Angeles Lakers.

West is in the process of living up to the claim that was made about him in a recent issue of a sports magazine. While not particularly prone to believe all that is seen, Jerry West has made this writer a believer in his past two games.

Before one can say whether West is truly great under pressure, one has to examine the personal conditions in the last two games.

The Lakers are pretty much a two man team, as far as scoring goes. West and Elgin Baylor rank as the most potent one-two punch in the National Basketball Asociation, although the Wilt Chamberlain-Hal Greer tandem and the Oscar Robertson-Jerry Lucas duo are pushing them for the honors.

The rest of the Laker cast is good, if not outstanding. Dick Barnett is a fine sub guard. Rudy LaRusso is noted for his aggressive play in the forecourt and Jim King is an average guard. Leroy Ellis and Gene Wiley are adequate men for the bucket. The help is there, but there are other clubs with stronger personnel.

Their opponents in the current Western division championship series are the Baltimore Bullets. This club features a tremendous first five with Bellamy, Ohl, Loughery, Howell, and Johnson.

In the first outing of the series on Saturday night, the Lakers won 121-115. This was not an unexpected victory, but the way in which it was accomplished was most unusual. Baylor, early in the first quarter, fell heavily on his right knee, and suffered a detached kneecap. He was forced to leave the game, and underwent surgery Sunday. His future in basketball is still a question mark at this time.

So how did West respond to the challenge? He scored 49 points, quite a feat for a guard in the NBA. Yet, this is just one instance. Monday night the second game took place, and Baylor on the sidelines made the Bullets a strong threat. The Lakers withstood the challenge to win 118-115, to go two up in the series. The ever present West had 52 points to conclude the second half of a pair of performances that rank with the greatest the league has seen by a guard.

Not even the great Oscar Robertson has been able to put two such games together under such circumstances. West was fully aware that the scoring burden fell on his lean shoulders and he accepted that challenge with a pair of clutch performances. This is the type of playing that separates the good player from the great one.

It was once written that a player either plays his normal game under certain pressure conditions or he "chokes". This was the reason given for the so-called great performances. Yet, a player like West seems to have surpassed his normal game and reached new heights during the series.

His coach, Fred Schaus said, "In all honesty, although I've had other great players, I have to say that he is the greatest

15,000 Students March on Capitol in Viet Protest

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

Photos by Lawrence

Students numbering 15,000 demonstrated Saturday in Washington to protest the government's policy in Vietnam and plead for an end to the war.

The sign - carrying students, adults and children, arrived from colleges all over the country. Approximately 100 traveled from the four - college area in two chartered busses that left Friday night and returned to Amherst Sunday morning.

The demonstration started about 9:00 Saturday morning on the sidewalks behind the White House. President Johnson was at his Texas ranch where 200 students were demonstrating. They, too, were protesting the Vietnam war. In Washington an early morning crowd of 1000 swelled to about 12,000 by early afternoon. The Capitol police force was doubled to 2000 to insure that order would be maintained.

THE MARCHERS ATTRACTED counter demonstrators who paraded on the other side of the street. George Lincoln Rockwell's neo-Nazi storm troopers carried signs reading "Peace Creeps Go Home" and "We Want Dead Reds." The sequence of pictures above the story shows a belligerent Nazi who attacked a lone counter-demonstrator sitting in front of them playing Bob Dylan records.

The khaki-clad storm trooper broke out of the well-protected parade line and crushed the portable record player. A group of alert policemen tackled the Nazi and dragged him to a roving paddy wagon. He returned to march about an hour later.

The young man who was playing the records explained, "I don't like the war."

ONE PASSERBY asked his wife what the marchers thought they were accomplishing. He answered his own question—"Sore feet." Another group of counter-demonstrators joined students who called themselves Young Americans For Freedom. They carried signs that said "Peace Is Worth Fighting For" and sang "Rally Round the Flag Boys" and "My Country 'Tis Of Thee". These America firsters seemed to draw more sympathy from the crowd than did the Nazis. People stood about the Nazis as though they couldn't believe they would be carrying the American flag.

A grad student from Thailand said they couldn't demonstrate in Bangkok. He was surprised that so many divergent groups could march on the same street without riots. He didn't think that the U.S. should pull out of Vietnam. An elderly lady called the peace marchers a "disgrace to the country." A hobo watching the demonstrations called all the groups phony and advocated that they all read the Bible for the "true answers".

AT 1:30 THE DEMONSTRATORS marched to the Sylvan Amphitheatre beside the Washington Monument for an afternoon of speeches from Sen. Gruening of Alaska, SNCC workers and the SDS sponsors of the march.

At 4:00 the crowd filed from the Amphitheater and marched in a phalanx up the Mall to the Capitol building to deliver a peace petition to Congress. A girl affixed the petition to a capitol door and a policeman ripped it down, explaining that there is a federal ordinance that forbids carrying signs on the capitol grounds and affixing signs to the Capitol building.

The foot-stamping crowd disbanded at about 5:30 when they were assured that the petition would be delivered to the Police Board of Commissioners Monday who would present it to the congress when they reconven. The gress when they reconvene. The a great deal of difficulty convincing a few students that to remain on the steps when no one was inside would bring no results.

Treasurer Answers State Auditor Charges

by Ray Abbott Staff Reporter

Charges by State Auditor Thaddeus Buczko that the University of Massachusetts owes the state over $300,000 by improperly withholding funds were answered recently by University treasurer Kenneth W. Johnson.

THE STATE AUDITOR'S REPORT pointed out that funds totalling $214,995, representing money paid from federal and industrial research grants during the 1964 fiscal year, had not been remitted to the state treasurer. This money is a so-called "overhead allowance."

—Another $100,000 involves money collected from students for additional charges on certain courses.

—In addition, $13,000 in auto registration fees which the Attorney General ruled eight months ago should be turned over to the commonwealth are still retained by the University.

AUDITOR BUCZUO ALSO took issue with the practice of using a non-interest bearing checking account in a Boston bank which at times contained over $400,000.

University treasurer Johnson said the auditor's views, as expressed in his own words in the report, represented only "opinion and contention."

Johnson pointed out that, under Chapter 75, Section II of the General Laws, the University is authorized to handle trust funds in the manner questioned in the auditor's report, and indeed has been doing so for decades.

The statute says in part, ". . . The trustees may, from time to time, establish and manage trust funds for self-amortizing projects and self-supporting activities . . . All income received from such projects or activities shall be held in trust by the trustees and expended for the purpose for which the trust fund was established . . . Any unrestricted balances remaining in a trust fund upon its termination shall be used as directed by the trustees for the general purposes of the university. All receipts from student activities . . . shall be retained by the trustees in a trust fund or trust funds and shall be expended as the trustees shall direct in furthering the activities from which thereceipts were derrived."

JOHNSON SAID THAT regarding the sum of $400,000 deposited in a non-interest bearing account in a Boston bank, this account is

FINALS SCHEDULE TO BE PUBLISHED MONDAY

Important Bill Tabled At Senate Convention

by Richard Danca Staff Reporter

Three bills acted on at the sparsely attended Constitutional Convention Wednesday night prior to the regular weekly Senate meeting. One was tabled after two hours of debate, one was passed and one defeated.

Quorum calls were made for many key votes, and quorum was often reached only by inclusion of the non-voting president and ex-officio member from the Stockbridge Senate.

Tabled was a bill for establishment of permanent rules to fill permanent absences of the vice-president, secretary and treasurer. (Contribution and By-Laws Revision Comm.).

MUCH OF THE FUROR over this bill concerned a defeated amendment proposed by treasurer Joe Piecuch which would prevent an appointed vice-president from assuming the presidency by appointment.

The defeated amendment called for elimination of student tax funds from RSO groups "for any political purpose or by any political organization."

The passed amendment merely placed the requirements for publication of Senate agendas into the By-Laws, so that these rules can be more easily changed.

The tabled amendment may possibly not come up for a vote again until next year, since the Constitution requires only two Constitutional Conventions in an academic year.

AT THE REGULAR meeting, the Budget Act was again tabled, and this bill, which will finalize all RSO budgets, will come up at the next meeting.

Several Senators say they suspect that the Act may be divided, and that each of the budgets will again have to be voted on separately.

Also tabled were two bills in favor of suspending the women's Handbook exams (Chambers-Peristein).

One of the bills passed was for the Senate to recommend to the President and the Trustees that men and women counselors be given full room and board (Chambers).

A motion to eliminate "testimonials for individual students" from the Senate floor was defeated by a roll call vote (David-Donovan-Piecuch).

Govt. Grad. Student 1st German Intern

John Kriendler, a master's degree candidate in the University government department, will be one of the first two U.S. students to participate in a summer internship program in the West Berlin city government, it was announced today.

Kriender and Suzanne Wilson, a Connecticut College senior, will spend approximately ten weeks this summer working in the West Berlin information office and observing operations of the city's government.

THE FIRST PROGRAM of its kind for American students in Germany, the summer internship was initiated by Prof. George K. Romoser of Connecticut College in cooperation with the German Academic Exchange Service in Bad Godesberg and Berlin.

Kriendler and Miss Wilson were selected by Prof. Romoser from applicants at Connecticut College, Mount Holyoke College, Smith College and the University.

A native of New York City, Kriendler is a Cornell University graduate. Before entering UMass as a graduate student in government, Kriendler served as a U.S. Navy officer for several years.

Sisters Will Sing Dixie Tunes at Pan-Hel Sing

Panhellenic Council will sponsor the annual Intersorority Sing Sunday, April 25 at 2:30 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom. This year's theme will be "Songs of the South." Each sorority will sing one song contiguous with the theme plus one other selection.

Each presentation will be rated on such criteria as choice of numbers, group appearance, tone quality and balance, and expression. Direction of the performances is by members of the sororities.

Last year's winners were Kappa Alpha Theta, Chi Omega, and Sigma Sigma Sigma. The results of this Spring's competition will culminate Sunday.

Methodist Minister to Speak

This Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m., April 25th, the Protestant Christian Council is sponsoring a lecture by Dr. Harold Bosley, one of the outstanding leaders in the Methodist Church in the area of Civil Rights and Social Justice on "The Role of Civil Disobedience."

DR. BOSLEY

He is the author "The Philosophical Heritage of the Christian Faith", "The Quest for Religious Certainty", and "Main Issues Confronting Christendom." Presently, Dr. Bosley is the Senior Minister at Christ Church "Methodist" in New York City.

The lecture in the Council Chambers will be followed by a discussion period.

made up of federal funds, and that under federal law, this money cannot draw interest for the Commonwealth. By using these federal funds to maintain a minimum balance in the bank, the University saves the taxpayers money since there is no charge for other UMass banking services.

Johnson noted that the $13,000 collected from motor vehicle registration fees that the Attorney General said should be returned to the Commonwealth, referred to the prior fiscal year. Following the Attorney General's ruling, the University changed its system of collection.

Money previously collected, however, had already been used to purchase bumper identification stickers, traffic rules and regulation booklets, and to secure part time help to administer the program. The purpose of the University's collection system was to save the taxpayers' money, since the UMass trustees did not feel that the public should pay for a parking program instituted for the benefit of University employees.

On the steps of the Capitol Building in Washington are the 23 members of the AFROTC Flying Redmen Drill Team. The team, which placed second in the annual Cherry Blossom Festival parade, is here accompanied by Congressman Silvio Conte, Lt. Col Roy D. Simmons, and Capt. Gailey. Team Commander, Cadet Maj. Carlton Stidsen. The group will next be competing in the AFROTC Invitational Drill Team Meet in New York this Saturday. The crack drill team will be trying to strengthen its long-standing record of ten first place awards in the last eleven years.

ROTC Jrs. Eligible For A.F. Grants

The first 1000 Air Force ROTC scholarships will be awarded to selected cadets to enter their junior year this fall.

The scholarships, termed by the Air Force as Financial Assistance Grants, will be given to students who excel in the Air Force Officer Qualifying Test; who have maintained or achieved a good grade average (cume); and who appear before a scholarship review board.

COL. ROY D. SIMMONS, professor of Air Science here, has said that there will be six scholarships available at UMass this fall for qualifying cadets.

When the Financial Assistance Grant is awarded to a cadet, the Air Force pays all tuition, book, lab fee, supplies and equipment costs in addition to a $50 monthly retainer fee. There is no obligation incurred by those cadets who get the scholarships.

These first 1,000 scholarships are part of a program of Air Force scholarships which will total 5,500 by 1968.

S.U. Rec. Comm. Reorganizes

The Recreational Activities Committee of the Student Union is in the process of reorganizing its program for the coming year. It is this committee's job to plan and organize the various tournaments held during the year, such as bowling, billiards, bridge, chess, and table tennis.

Its activities for H.E.R. Weekend will include bowling and billiards tournaments, at discount prices for couples. Also included will be volleyball, badminton, and frisbee areas behind the Union for Saturday (May 1) afternoon, and softball for those interested.

The Committee is in need of more members and new ideas. Anyone interested in joining can contact either of the co-chairmen: Lynne Spencer in Dwight or Russell Salk in Baker.

H.E.R. Weekend

Attention GUYS

Again this year the Student Union Program Council is sponsoring that enjoyable weekend for the guys, knwn as H.E.R. Weekend (His Economic Relief). One of the highlights of the weekend is the dance to be held on Friday night, April 30, from 8:30-11:30 p.m. This year the dress for the dance will be semi-formal. Gus Perfito and his orchestra will delight us with his rhythmic music. During the intermission the King for H.E.R. Weekend will be crowned. He will be chosen from the five men who become the finalists after a campus wide vote on Monday, April 26. Tickets for this dance will be sold daily, beginning Monday, April 26, in the Student Union Lobby, the price being $1.50 per couple.

Also included in the festivities for this year is the traditional picnic to be held at 5:00 p.m. on Saturday, May 1. This is where the girls cook dinner for the guys. You roast your own hotdogs and marshmallows over an open fire in the bonfire pit outside the Union.

Rounding out the events on Saturday, May 1, will be a post-concert movie. Immediately following the concert by Oscar Brand on the South Terrace, the crowd will be given a chance to stretch and move to the East Terrace. There the movie, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," will start about 9:30. Both the concert at 7:30 and the movie at 9:30 are offered free of charge.

If it rains all of these events will be held in the Student Union

PROFILE:

Name: LORNA SASS
Class: 1967
Hometown: New Hyde Park, New York
Major: English
Activities: President of Alpha Lambda Delta, member of Sophomore Advisory Council, Counselor of Spanish corridor.

Did you know that the Spanish corridor in Mary Lyon owes its formation to the Campus Chest? The explanation is as follows:

Last spring Lorna Sass knew that she and 19 other New England students would be travelling to Peru as representatives of the World University Service. She would be speaking Spanish during her stay but would not have time to take any Spanish courses on returning to UMass. The problem—how to keep up her Spanish. The solution—the Spanish corridor.

Under the sponsorship of the Campus Chest Lorna spent two months last summer in Ayacucho, Peru, working at the University of Huamango.

Lorna discussed the possibility of a Spanish corridor with Jan Clement in Housing and Dr. Greenfield of the Spanish Department. Ads were placed in the Collegian and interested students were signed up.

September 13 girls entered the newly formed corridor. (It's interesting that about half of the girls are Spanish majors and the others are majoring in courses from English Lit. to Pre-Med.) The corridor attends Spanish functions as a group and eats supper with a department member on Monday and Thursday. Lorna invites anyone interested "to join us for supper any Monday or Thursday at 6:00, line four, at the old commons.

Criticism Comes Cheap

Once again it is time for the elections of the officers who are to lead us through the coming year. A few students will seriously consider the candidates and will make a special point to be at the polls on election day to cast their ballots. Unfortunately, however, most of the campus population will leave the choice to their peers and wait until next year to complain about the poor job which is being done.

What do they complain about? For the most part they yell about the people being unqualified for the job or that they were elected only because of their popularity. Another often heard remark from these all-of-a-sudden public spirited University citizens is that the Student Senate and Class Executive bodies are merely "rubber-stamp" organizations which bow to the will of the administration.

They may sometimes be right — BUT WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

Your complaints mean nothing next year. Your ballots can mean the difference now. If responsible and qualified students are elected this year, we will have leadership next year. Only in this way will we have the people necessary to make thase bodies into the powerful organizations which they should be and which they could be.

The word "incumbent" beside a candidate's name does not mean that he is any better suited for the job than any of his opponents. It ONLY means that he has served in the position before — for better or for worse. If you see "incumbent" printed beside a name which you never heard before, that is all the more reason to question the candidate's qualifications. He may well be the best choice, but he may have done nothing worthy of being made known.

This is certainly not to say that all of our officers are unworthy of their positions. Many do excellent jobs. It is the responibility of each student to find out what the people representing him are doing and, if the answer is nothing, replace him.

Good leadership is not the responsibility of the officers alone. It is the responsibility of every student at the University. If the students are apathetic now, when they have a chance to show what kind of officers they desire, and what kind of things they want done, then they have no right to criticize the actions of those elected.

It is easy to criticize . . . It is harder to do. Students who intend to be critical next year, and feel that this is their right, should realize their obligation now and take an active part in campus affairs. And, anyone who feels the "even he could do a better job," should run for the position and try it.

Letters To The Editor

History of Spring Day

To The Editor:

The name "Spring Day" means virtually nothing to the students on this campus—unless, perhaps, it recalls memories of last May 11th, when there was an unsuccessful attempt to revive it. But there is a Spring Day—at least there was such a day—that goes much farther back, that has its roots in something called tradition.

Spring Day, as we understand it to have been, was a holiday for the sake of having a holiday. It wasn't the birthday of any great man; it commemorated no national event. It was simply a spontaneous day off from classes that gave students and faculty alike the chance to let their spring fever run rampant. It also provided a much-needed break in the long period between spring vacation and finals.

The campus pond was a focal point for Spring Day activities. The atmosphere was presumably that of a day-long picnic. Activities weren't limited to the campus, however. Students would take off for parts unknown—say, Puffer's Pond or Cranberry Pond—to raise their own kind of hell.

It is easy to see the difficulties that could—and did—arise from such a situation. The high incidence of drinking on campus led to trouble, especially after the University "went dry."

What finally killed Spring Day, however, was the over-eagerness of the students. As I understand it, a group of students, dissatisfied at the lateness of Spring Day, jumped the gun and rang the Chapel bells some days earlier than scheduled. All might have been forgiven but for the fact that some Boston legislators were (allegedly) in town, and were not too happy at the sight of some thousands of students sprawled around the campus pond drinking beer.

The Administration's subsequent ban on Spring Day can hardly be condemned. And thus it is that Spring Day lives on only for those that have heard, and for those that wish it could have turned out otherwise.

Free Thought In Education

As we sit in our modern classroom today, staring at the reflections of an overhead projector, it is difficult to conceive of the characteristic "little red schoolhouse" of a century ago. Yet despite the modernization process our school systems have undergone, the shades of convention continue to exist. Students are still subjected to grading systems, and mandatory class attendence, and more important they continue to be subjected to their teachers.

The student enters the classroom for the first time, perhaps at the age of six, and from this day forth he learns to respect a symbol of unquestionable authority, the teacher. While respect for authority can not be labeled unhealthy, this respect should be expanded to a more reciprocating level. That is, the student must not only respect the teacher but the teacher must respect the student. This respect for the student can only be obtained when the teacher recognizes the importance of vesting his student with the freedom to think for himself.

Dr. Ralph Pippert, Assistant Dean, School of Education, at the University expands upon this conviction in light of the students attitude towards learning. According to Dr. Pippert, "the meaning of what is learned is the pupil's—The teacher's task is to help the student see the meaning." Ultimately, the student learns only that which he desires to learn and material that is forced upon him loses much of its significance. The moment the element of force is applied by the instructor the natural reaction of the learner is rebellion. This situation in turn restricts the process of learning. There are a number of instances that may create this resentment in the learner.

The pressure for grades becomes an obsession for many students. If he finds himself doing poorly the student may develop a hostitality towards his teacher. Or, if he does well, he may find himself memorizing a collection of meaningless facts or, even worse, feeding back a set of lecture notes. Dr. Pippert feels that the teacher who lectures merely to report information may as well send his students home and let them read the material in a book. The student can read more rapidly than the lecturer can speak.

The problem of adhering to educational convention is not futile. Just as the renovation of the physical structure of our institutions is possible, so the renewal of the psychological framework of the student-teacher relationship is equally feasible. Dr. Pippert proposes that the relation of the student and teacher should be a relationship of two learners—"The value of the liberally educated teacher is not so much that he teach his knowledge of a subject for itself, but that the student is seeing a teacher as a knowledgeable person with a very earnest commitment toward learning."

Once the student and the teacher are placed upon this level of communication, so that the student no longer must look up to an image of authority, the process of education will be achieving its goal. We will no longer have the teacher who analyzes that his students have no motivation, for as Dr. Pippert sees it, this is as absurd as "the doctor who complains that his patients are sick."

'65 Chevy II Nova Sport Coupe

'65 Corvair Corsa Sport Coupe

If you've been sitting tight waiting for just your kind of car, with just your kind of power, at just your kind of price—wait no longer!

Chevrolet. It's a bigger, more beautiful car this year. Which is why that handsome silhouette could be mistaken for cars costing a thousand—even two thousand—dollars more.

Chevelle. This one's got lively looks, spirited power, a softer ride—and remarkable room atop a highly maneuverable wheelbase. No wonder it's today's favorite mid-size car.

Chevy II. No car so trim has a right to be so thrifty. But thrifty it is, with money-savers like brakes that adjust themselves and a long-lived exhaust system.

Corvair. Ask any '65 Corvair owner how it feels to drive a car with such easy steering, tenacious traction and responsive rear-engine power. And be ready to do lots of listening.

Mahar Dedication To Honor Its Namesake

The late Sen. Ralph C. Mahar will be honored at the formal dedication of the auditorium bearing his name on Sunday, April 25, at 3 p.m.

UMass President John W. Lederle will preside at the ceremonies in Mahar Auditorium. The public is cordially invited to attend the ceremonies.

COMMEMORATIVE REMARKS will be given by Sumner G. Whittier, executive director of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults and the Honorable John E. Powers, clerk of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court for Suffolk County.

A bronze plaque honoring Sen. Mahar will be unveiled by his widow. The plaque will be mounted in the auditorium's foyer at a later date.

Sen. Mahar was a prime advocate of state aid for school construction, school regionalization and new legislation designed to assist small towns construct better schools.

HE WAS INSTRUMENTAL in gaining legislation that changed Massachusetts State College to the University of Massachusetts in May of 1947. The senator helped further the freedom bill legislation of 1956 by which the University of Massachusetts was given the means to recruit an outstanding faculty.

Sen. Mahar was one of the leading supporters of legislation that gave UMass trustees greater fiscal authority. One of the senator's last official acts was his support for a UMass Medical School.

He was a graduate of Orange High School, Tufts University and Northeastern Law School.

Gridmen Set For Spring Game

by John Goodrich

In the week prior to spring vacation, Coach Vic Fusia greeted 60 candidates as the University of Massachusetts football team began its spring practice sessions.

These workouts have a special importance this year as Fusia and his staff will be trying to replace 18 departed lettermen who carried the club to a 22-5-1 record over the last three years. This includes one undefeated season and a trip to the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Florida.

In addition, Fusia will be making the necessary changes to shift to platoon football. The new ruling by the NCAA is that clubs can once again play two-platoon ball, one offensive and one defensive. This transition will not be as difficult for the Redmen as it is for other teams because Fusia used a modified form of the platoon football for the past several seasons.

Current plans call for two teams on offense and two on defense with about six players capable of going both ways. While this system will allow the greatest number of players possible in a game, it should give the Redmen an advantage during the year since many of its foes will not have the manpower to compete against the multiple teams available to Fusia.

THE PRIMARY PROBLEM confronting Fusia seems to be the filling of the backfield slots left by the graduatoon of Mike Ross, Ken Palm, Phil DeRose, and, of course, Jerry Wheichel. The hardest slot to fill will be that of quarterback and Mr. Wheichel. In his senior year, Wheichel received the New England player of the year award.

The heir apparent to this position is Greg Landry, the star of this year's frosh. He supposedly can do everything that Wheichel can and in a year or so will be ranked in the same class. This season he is being pressed by Dick Cain and Steve Trbovich.

At the halfback slot, Bob Ellis, Leo Biron and Don Durkin are the leading candidates with Dick Benoit and Phil Vandersea at fullback. The latter figures to play the halfback slot as well.

The ends are well set with the twin tigers, Milt Morin and Bob Meers back to do service. These two men alone make this one of the strongest positions on the squad.

The tackle position was well depleted by graduation, with only Bill Connor returning from the first two squads. Soph Mickey Bailey figures highly in the plans for guard, but has a hard task ahead of him to beat out the likes of Bob Santucci, Bob Gogick, Larry Spidle and Rod Brooks.

The center slot will most likely by manned by Bernie Dallas. Most of his action will probably be on the defensive unit with sophomore Dan Harrington doing the offensive chores.

The squad is scrimmaging daily in an effort to get ready for the coming season and more immediately for the game that will mark the closing of the spring sessions.

ON MAY 1, Fusia will have a clinic for the high school coaches in the morning with a game in the afternoon. This contest will be divided into two segments. The first of these will match the present team against a team of Alumni ball players, including the 18 graduating seniors. This is an innovation here at UMass, but is used at many midwestern schools. The second of the two contests will be an intra squad game. This game will provide a good opportunity for the senior students on campus to get a look at the group that played during their four years here and see the squad they will be supporting as Alumni of the school.

The scrimmage is open to all of the campus and a large turnout is expected for the game.

Redmen Over UConn

Smith walked 11 BU batters while Fox gave UMass but one walk.

For the second game in a row a Redman infielder suffered a bone injury. Second Baseman Frank Stewart broke his jaw upon colliding with Big Terry Swanson on a pop to short right in the second inning. The loss of Stewart and Bill Crane leaves Coach Lorden with little infield depth. Paul Caisse took over at second after Stewart's mishap.

Right Fielder Swanson hit the longest ball of the day, a bomb to straight-away center which was caught not far from Bartlet Hall. Terry also made a defensive gem, one-handing a drive hit by BU's Scanlon in the seventh.

Behind the masterful two-hit pitching of Carl Boteze, UMass recorded its first victory of the season, whipping the University of Connecticut 3-0 at Alumni Field.

Boteze struck out nine and walked five, as he evened up his record at 1-1. The soph right-hander showed good speed and a great curve, as he handcuffed the previously undefeated Huskies. Oddly enough, the only hits off him were triples. The first was a fly to short right which was misjudged by right fielder Swanson in the fifth. The second came in the ninth and was solidly hit.

The Redmen attack was led by Al Nordberg. The left fielder singled in the first and hit a tremendous home run over the right center field fence in the sixth. The solo blast give U-Mass a 2-0 lead and disposed of UConn starting pitcher Horozy.

Never in the game did UConn have more than one man on the bases. In fact, not a Huskie reached second base, outside of the two triples.

UMASS SCORED A RUN in the third on singles by Peacock, Babyak and Swanson and finished the game's scoring in the sixth on three walks and a hit batsman.

Jim Babyak continued to look good at the plate with two singles. The soph shortstop has had little chance to demonstrate his fielding ability to the home fans, for but one grounder has come his way during the first two home games.

Two Redmen were caught napping on the basepaths in the early innings. Swanson was caught with too big a lead off first base and run down in the third inning. He escaped embarrassment when the UConn second baseman erred. Kamena was caught dozing off first in the fourth inning and was tagged out.

Boteze, Redmen Best UConn 3-0 In Yan-Con Opener

by Mike Gould

The Redmen outhit their opponents seven to three and committed no errors to Columbia's two, but the boys from NYC crossed the plate once more than did Earl Lorden's nine and were 2-1 victors in a game played at Columbia, April 10.

This was the season's opener for UMass, and but for some tough luck on calls at the bases it might have been successful. This was not to be, however, as Redman runners were thrown out at home and at third base in a vain attempt to make up an early two run deficit.

With Carl Boteze on the mound, the home team scored their two runs on only one hit. The bases were loaded when Shortstop Jim Babyak made a great stop of a grounder and threw to second to start an inning ending double play. The force was made, but Frank Stewart's relay to first was just late, and Columbia had their first run. A double steal brought the second run across.

The Redmen run came in the eighth when Boteze doubled and scored on a passed ball and an error.

THE REDMEN received a jolt before gametime when veteran infielder Bill Crane suffered a chipped bone in his left thumb during batting practice. The slick fielder will be out of the lineup indefinitely.

On the brighter side, soph Babyak looked great at ss, John Peacock stroked two hits from the leadoff spot, and the fine performance of Boteze gave Redmen fans hope for a strong pitching staff this season.

The Redmen starting lineup in the opener saw Peacock, Stewart, Terry Swanson (rf), Al Nordberg (lf), Babyak, Dennis DellaPiana (cf), Jim Kuczynski (3b), Captain Karl Kamena (c), and Piken.

A four run third inning, during which one ball was hit beyond the infield, gave Boston University a 6-2 victory over UMass in the latter's home opener.

The score was tied 1-1 when, with one out in the third, U-Mass pitcher Jim Ritchie walked BU pitcher Dave Fox. As so often happens, this led to UMass downfall. The next three BU batters hit swinging bunts in front of the plate. All three reached safely, the first reaching as an attempted force play failed, the later two being credited with singles. With one run already in, and the bases still loaded, BU's Mahoney hit a grounder to Jim Kuczynski at third base. Jim hesitated, then stepped on third and threw to first, too late. Two runs followed on singles by Allen and Petrone.

THE FOUR MAN DEFICIT was too much to overcome, as lefthander Fox showed great control and mixed his pitches well in stifling the Redman attack.

Both teams scored tainted runs in the first inning. BU scored on a single, a stolen base, an error and a sacrifice fly. U-Mass countered with a run on an error and Al Nordberg's triple. The home team's second run was scored in the fourth on Jim Babyak's run producing double. BU finished the scoring in the eighth, as reliefer Jack Forst forced in a run with a walk.

Bases on balls hurt the Redmen. Ritchie, Forst and Bill

NETMEN TAKE MIT 5-4

The UMass tennis team came through with an upset 5-4 victory over MIT the Friday before vacation.

Coach Steve Kosakowski

This was the first Redmen win over the Engineers ever, and marked the eighth consecutive victory for Coach Steve Kosakowski dating from last spring. Seven of the nine matches were drawn to three sets with Bill Martin and Bob Neal, posting wins in the singles competition.

Gerry Johnson was the outstanding player of the match, coming from behind to take his singles match and giving the team the momentum to carry it through the doubles matches.

In doubles, Neal and Mednicov beat John Gutt and Roger Harper to insure victory.

Senator Mahar Honored In Dedication Ceremony

by Steve Gordon, Day Editor

Sumner G. Whittier, former lieutenant governor of Massachusets, and John E. Powers, Clerk of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, were the principal speakers at the formal dedication of the Ralph C. Mahar Auditorium yesterday.

President John W. Lederle presided over the program, which was attended by many dignitaries.

Lederle called the late Sen. Mahar "a man of foresight and vigor." He called the dedication a "simple, sincere tribute" to a "true friend of education."

Whittier, a personal friend of the late Senator, recognized "an immortality of Ralph C. Mahar in the gratitude of his neighbors." Mahar, said Whittier, "saw the future of Massachusetts in the students."

A former president of the Massachusetts Senate, Powers expressed the hope that all the students who used the auditorium would know that "the building was dedicated to one who was the epitome of honesty, decency, and dedication."

Powers said that Mahar had made "the greatest contribution to the Commonwealth in the last quarter century." He went on to call Mahar "the greatest man I ever met in government."

UMass Represented at Boston Civil Rights March

by Richard Danca, Staff Reporter

There were lots of people, lots of singing and even a little rain in Boston last Friday when ten UMass students traveled there to join 20,000 Civil Rights marchers in Martin Luther King's protest march.

The students represented the University's Protestant Christian Council and Young Independents.

THE UMASS STUDENTS, along with several from Smith, were with the original 5000 marchers who left the Carter playground in Boston's Roxbury section two hours behind schedule for the three mile walk to the Boston Common.

The remaining marchers joined the trek along the route or at the Common rally where King spoke.

A racially mixed group led the gathering in singing Civil Rights songs before the speakers arrived.

On the bandstand with King and other prominent Negro men and women was former Gov. Endicott Peabody.

King's 20-minute speech several times repeated the theme, "Now is the time."

In the speech, the rights leader said, "The time has come for all Americans to take a stand against evil."

"WE MARCH TODAY because we will not tolerate racial segregation. Segregation in Selma or in Boston is a new form of slavery."

"We will not sell our birthright for a mess of segregated pottage."

Prior to King's speech were other speeches by other important Civil Righters. Lt. Gov. Elliott Richardson spoke for Gov. Volpe.

ONE OF THE SPEAKERS, Dr. Ralph Abernathy, vice president of King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said, "None of us will be free until all of us are free."

He also told the crowd "you must march here in Boston until the walls (of segregation) come tumbling down."

Following the rally, King led a delegation to deliver his message to Boston's Mayor Collins at the City Hall, one of the stops on Boston's historic "Freedom Trail."

Original Willis Bill May Lose Support

Editor's Note: The views expressed in this article are taken in a large part from an article by the Boston Globe's Education Writer Ian Forman.

The battle over the Willis Report bill to revamp and improve Massachusetts education is hidden behind the closed doors of the House Ways and Means committee.

UMass, claiming that it is fighting for the basic principle of the higher education master plan in the original bill, is threatening to withdraw support of the present bill unless three amendments or changes are deleted. If the University pulls out it would be a serious, perhaps fatal blow to the bill.

TWENTY OF THE 22 assorted state colleges are backing the UMass fight on the first two amendments, while Lowell Technological Institute is the chief opponent.

Against the third amendment or re-writing, UMass is right now battling alone—and may end up wrestling the Willis Commission itself.

THE FIRST AMMENDMENT would simply allow the governor to appoint an all - new lay board. Opponents of Lowell Tech say L.T.I. wanted this because a new board might be more sympathetic to Tech's aims.

The second amendment makes it no longer necessary for any other state institution to give a doctorate program jointly with and approved by U-Mass.

THE THIRD AMENDMENT UMass is challenging has to do with how much power the new Board of Higher Education should have. It now has power to eliminate any existing degree programs anywhere. University officials feel this gives the board power to overthrow the outlines of the "master plan" itself and in essence create a super-board. They want the board's power to pass judgment confined to any new programs proposed for the various institutions.

Featuring the works of Beethoven, the University Symphony will perform this evening in Bowker Auditorium. The program will also include the appearance of the Boston Trio, three distinguished members of the Boston Symphony.

University Sociologist To Lecture in India

Dr. Edwin D. Driver, University professor of sociology, has received a Fulbright lectureship award to teach at Madras University in India during the 1965-66 academic year, UMass Provost Oswald Tippo announced today.

Dr. Driver will occuppy the first sociology chair at the Indian University and will also assist in establishing a social science research center at the school.

The Fulbright award is the second for the UMass sociologist. In 1957-58, Dr. Driver was a Fulbright lecturer at Negpur University in India.

In addition to Fulbright awards, Dr. Driver has administered several grants from the UMass Research Council, a grant from the Population Council, Inc., and a grant from the Ford Foundation with his colleague, Dr. C. Wendell King of the University's sociology department.

Dr. Driver's "Differential Fertility in Central India" was published in 1963. The University of Massachusetts Press this year published his latest work, "The Sociology and Anthropology of Mental Illness: A Reference Guide."

The UMass scholar has also published several articles and book reviews in sociological journals.

He joined the UMass faculty in 1948 after working with the Pennsylvania Department of Public Assistance.

UM Grad Killed in Viet Nam

A University graduate, Arthur F. Hennessey, Jr., 25, of West Falmouth, was killed in a U.S. helicopter hit by Viet Cong groundfire in South Viet Nam Monday, April 21. Hennessey is the first University graduate to be killed in the war in Viet Nam.

Spec-4 Hennessey said he "wanted to be in helicopters." He majored in geology and graduated in 1963. Hennessey's mother said that her son enlisted in the Army 18 months ago and had requested helicopter duty.

THE WORLD

VIET NAM

The United States has announced that it is prepared to use small nuclear weapons if the Chinese Communist government comes into the Vietnamese war directly. This policy may mean the risk of Soviet intervention and emphasis on nuclear readiness in case of a major battle. However it has been suggested that if nuclear weapons were used in North Viet Nam the resulting drift down would either kill many innocent pople there or hurt morale in an already war ridden country. It is unlikely that atomic bombs would be used against gorilla warfare in South Viet Nam. After President Johnson's offer of "unconditional discussions" was rejected by the Communists, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara conferred last week in Honolulu with Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. Maxwell Taylor, U.S. Ambassador to South Viet Nam where it was decided to increase the present number of Vietnamese troops of 575,000 men by 160,000 and to add several new American divisions.

THE NATION

STEEL STRIKE

Negotiations among the United Steelworkers of America and eleven major firms continue this week in an attempt to meet the May 1 deadline for a strike. The strike would affect 425,000 union workers. The Union has asked for a pay-boost package that may or may not fall within the limit set by the Presidents' Council of Economic Advisors.

FIOOD DAMAGE

The Mississippi flood took 15 lives last week. The water rose all the way from Southern Wisconsin to north of St. Louis. At LaCrosse, Wisconsin, the water was 5.7 feet above the usual flood mark at a total of 17.7 feet. In the past three weeks, 35,000 persons have been driven from their homes and the damage is estimated at $100 million. Much of Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota are now disaster areas and are awaiting federal aid.

SUBWAY FELONIES

New York's Mayor Robert Wagnes reports that the 1000 extra policemen on overtime duty have brought about a dramatic decrease in the number of subway felonies.

WORLD'S FAIR

The New York World's Fair reopened last Wednesday. There was good weather for the 150,000 attending.

THE STATE

MASS. TURNPIKE

Members of the Mass. Turnpike Authority were indicted last Thursday on charges of conflict of interest, larceny and conspiracy. The late William F. Callahan, and John J. Toomey, and Charles L. Patrone were among those indicted. Since the Crime Commission was organized in 1962, 50 people have been indicted.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King came to Boston last week and led a demonstration of 20,000 Negroes, protesting de facto segregation in the Boston area. During his two day visit, King spoke with Governor Volpe and addressed the state Legislature. He told the state body that segregation must die if American democracy is to live. The School Committee, headed by Mrs. Louise Day Hicks, listened to Dr. King but refused to hear any of the other 13 leaders who accompanied him.

PRUDENTIAL

The dedication ceremonies for the $152 million, 52 story Prudential Center were held last week in Boston. 35,000 people were in attendance. United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson and the former prime minister of Britain, Sir Anthony Eden, gave speeches on world affairs.

THE CAMPUS

SENATE

Three bills were acted on at the sparsely attended Constitutional Convention last Wednesday night prior to the regular weekly Senate meeting. One was tabled after two hours of debate, one was passed, and one defeated. Tabled was a bill for establishment of permanent rules to fill permanent absences of the vice-president, secretary and treasurer. The defeated amendment called for elimination of student tax refunds from RSO groups "for any political purpose or by any political organization." The passed amendment merely placed the requirements for publication of Senate agendas into the by-laws, so that these rules can be more easily changed.

STATE AUDITOR'S CHARGES

Charges by State Auditor Thaddeus Buczko that UMass owes the state ofer $300,000 by improperly withholding funds were answered recently by the University treasurer Kenneth W. Johnson. The money involved was collected from students for additional charges on certain courses, auto registration fees, and money in a Boston checking account.

GERMAN INTERN

John Kriendler, a master's degree candidate in the government department, will be one of the first two U.S. students to participate in a summer internship program in the West Berlin city government.

SPORTS

Behind the masterful two-hit pitching of Carl Boteze, UMass recorded its first victory of the baseball season whipping the University of Connecticut 3-0 at Alumni Field. In previous games, the Redmen faired less well in suffering losses to Columbia and Boston University.

Concert Mon. To Feature BSO Artists

Two members of the Boston Symphony orchestra will be among three distinguished soloists featured as guest artists with the University Symphony Orchestra on Monday evening, April 26, at 8:15 in Bowker auditorium.

The Boston trio consists of Roger Shermont, BSO violinist; John Sant Ambrogio, BSO cellist, and Phyllis Moss, concert pianist who has appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Boston Pops and the orchestra of New York City radio station WQXR.

The performance, open to the public at no charge, will feature Beethoven's Triple Concerto for Violin, Cello and Piano. In addition to this rarely-performed work, the UMass group will also play Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture and Haydn's Symphony No. 88.

The concert will be under the direction of the orchestra's founder and musical director, Ronald Steele.

L'Announce Faite a Marie

by Pat Petow,
Staff Reporter

L'Annonce Faite a Marie, written by Paul Claudel with the stage direction by Pierre Franck was performed by Le Treteau de Paris, in cooperation with Le Theatre de L'Oeuvre at Bowker Auditorium, Friday evening.

Like a medieval mystery, the drama, sponsored on campus by the UMass French Corridor, was the seventh annual such performance brought to American universities.

The story draws on the peasant-life around Le Tardenois in northern France that Claudel observed growing up. Interwoven too is the effect of his own conversion to Catholicism on Christmas Eve 1886. First performed in 1912, Claudel's play, according to the 1948 revision, is considered a modern classic.

The fast-moving piece, set in the time of the Hundred Years' War and of Jeanne d'Arc, reveals the struggles of two sisters; one, Violaine, played by Daniele Delorme, who seeks a closer union with God; and the younger, Mara, played by Madeleine Vimes, who, bitter and jealous, marries Jacques, Violaine's fiance. In Violaine, the struggle is spiritual against temporal; in Mara, temporal against temporal.

Violaine's death, at the end, is peaceful and joyous for herself, but symbolizes great sorrow for the others.

Perhaps the last scene expressed best that gulf between the human and near-divine.

VOYAGE TO THE BOTTOM OF THE BARREL

As everyone knows, thirteen-twelfths of the earth's surface is water. Thus we can see how important it is to know and understand our oceans. Toward this end American colleges last year embarked on a program to increase enrollment in oceanography. I am pleased to report that results were nothing short of spectacular. In one single semester the number of students majoring in oceanography rose by 100%—from one student to two!

But more oceanographers are still needed, and so today this column, normally a vehicle for slapdash jocularity, will instead devote itself to a brief course in oceanography. In view of the solemnity of the subject matter, my sponsors, the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade Co., makers of Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades which give you more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other brand you can name—if, by chance, you don't agree, the makers of Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades will buy you a pack of whatever brand you think is better—my sponsors, I say, the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade Co. will today, because of the solemnity of this column, forego their usual commercial message.

We begin our study of oceans with that ever-popular favorite, the Pacific. Largest of all oceans, the Pacific was discovered by Balboa, a Spanish explorer of great vision. To give you an idea of Balboa's vision, he first saw the Pacific while standing on a peak in Darien, which is in Connecticut.

The Pacific is not only the largest ocean, but the deepest. The

. . . the Pacific was discovered by Balboa, a Spanish explorer of great vision.

Mindanao Trench, off the Philippine Islands, measures more than 5,000 fathoms in depth. (It should be pointed out here that ocean depths are measured in fathoms—lengths of six feet—after Sir Walter Fathom, a British nobleman of Elizabethan times who, upon his eighteenth birthday, was given a string six feet long. Many young men would have sunk in a funk if all they got for their birthday was a string six feet long, but not Sir Walter! String in hand, he scampered around the entire coast of England measuring seawater until he was arrested for loitering. Incidentally, a passion for measuring seems to have run in the family: Fathom's grandnephew, Sir John Furlong, spent all his waking hours measuring racetracks until Charles II had him beheaded in honor of the opening of the London School of Economics.)

But I digress. Let us, as the poet Masefield says, go down to the sea again. (The sea, incidentally, has ever been a favorite subject for poets and composers. Who does not know and love the many robust sea chanties that have enriched our folk music—songs like "Sailing Through Kansas" and "I'll Swab Your Deck If You'll Swab Mine" and "The Artificial Respiration Polka.")

My own favorite sea chanty goes like this: (I'm sure you all know it. Why don't you sing along as you read?)

O, carry me to the deep blue sea,
Where I can live with honor,
And every place I'll shave my face
With Stainless Steel Personor.

Sing hi, sing ho, sing mal-de-mer,
Sing hey and nonny-nonny,
Sing Jimmy crack corn and I don't care,
Sing Stainless Steel Personny.

I'll harpoon whales and jib my sails,
And read old Joseph Conrad,
And take my shaves upon the waves,
With Stainless Steel Personrad.

Sing la, sing lo, sing o-lee-a-lay,
Sing night and noon and morning,
Sing salt and spray and curds and whey,
Sing Stainless Steel Personning.

H.E.R. Weekend

OSCAR BRAND

Round-up time is here girls and you only have one week to lasso your "King". H.E.R. Weekend has arrived!

As a special treat Thursday, April 29, at 6:00 and 8:00 p.m., the movie "Two Women" with Sophia Loren will be shown.

Friday the fellas will have to shine their shoes and drag out their ties because all the girls will be dolled up for the semi-formal dance. By ready to swing from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. to the music of Gus Perfito and Orchestra.

Even though Friday evening holds many surprises, Saturday, May 1, promises to be even more eventful. The afternoon will begin with badminton and volleyball around the pond and other sports indoors in the Games Area, featuring reduced prices. At 5:00 p.m. all the gals will round up their guys and lead them over to the Bonfire Pit where they can roast their own hot dogs and marshmallows over an open fire.

Following the 7:30 p.m. concert by Oscar Brand on the South Terrace, the movie "Seven Bridges for Seven Brothers" will be shown on the East Terrace. The concert and the movie are free of charge for your enjoyment.

Closing out the weekend will be an Intercollegiate Sing on Sunday, May 2, at 2:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Music will be provided by groups including the Logarithms (M.I.T.), Statesmen and Musigals (University of Massachusetts) and V 8's (Mount Holyoke).

So guys be on your best behavior because it's not every weekend that a girl treats you to a weekend of fun.

Mili Ball

A military weekend, highlighted by the Military Ball on Saturday, May 15, will be held by the cadets of the Air Force and Army ROTC units here at the University.

The feature of the Mili-Ball will be the internationally famous Airmen of Note, the official US Air Force Dance Orchestra from Washington, D.C.

The "Notes" was organized in 1950 to carry on the tradition of the famous Glenn Miller Band which toured the United States and Europe during Wold War II.

This band has made personal appearances at spots including the 1958 World's Fair, Brussels, Belgium, performed with such greats as Bob Hope, Joe E. Brown and Eartha Kitt.

AIRMEN OF NOTE

AT THE SPECIAL request of Mrs. Glenn Miller the "Notes" portrayed the Glenn Miller Orchestra in the Universal International motion picture, "The Glenn Miller Story".

THE MILITARY BALL, with the theme of "A Pass into Paradise", is open to both military and non-military students. The tickets at $4.00 per couple provide for favors at the door, refreshments, and free color photos of men and their dates.

The Ball is the highlight of the military weekend which is in conjunction with Armed Forces Day. The weekend will include the annual Spring Revue on Friday evening, May 14, at 7:00 and a cocktail party-dining in at Westover AF Base on Saturday evening, May 15, from 5:00-7:30.

TENNESSEE WILLIAMS

"Glass Menagerie"

On May 6, 7, and 8 the University Theatre will present Tennessee Williams' highly aclaimed play The Glass Menagerie.

The production as directed by Cosmo A. Catalano will be staged in full round in the Student Union Ballroom.

The play deals with life of the Wingfields, Amanda and her children Tom and Laura. The three of them live in a small tenement apartment in St. Louis. To this extent the play is highly atuobiographical. Tennessee Williams, although born in Mississippi, moved to St. Louis when he was twelve. Williams describes his feelings at the time: "It was a tragic move. Neither my sister nor I could adjust ourselves to life in a mid-western city. The school children made fun of our southern speech and manners. I remember gangs of kids followed me home yelling "Sissy!", and home was not a pleasant refuge. It was a perpetually dim little apartment in a wilderness of identical brick and concrete structures with no grass and no trees nearer than the park."

This "dim little apartment" is recreated as the setting for The Glass Menagerie. Designer Dale Amlund has solved the difficult problems that arise in designing for the arena stage. His setting reflects the sparse, dark, moody quality of the play and still provides the unobstructed view required in arena staging. Mr. Amlund is also designing the costumes for the production.

The Student Union Box Office will open at 10:00 a.m. on Monday, April 26. Since the play is being staged in the ballroom there will only be 400 seats per performance. Students are advised to get their tickets well in advance of opening night.

Attention Candidates

Election Forum

The Collegian, in an atempt to sponsor a more responsible election procedure, is devoting a portion of the Editorial Page on Wednesday, April 28, to the candidates in the forthcoming elections.

Any candidate running for a class office may submit a letter to the Editor. All letters must pertain only to the author's qualifications and any reference to another candidate in the letter will exclude it from being printed. Candidates should include their experience in campus affairs, and their plans for dealing with the responsibilities of their respective offices.

Due to a limited amount of space, all letters must be under 15 typewritten lines typed at 60 spaces per line. Priority will be given to class offices in the following order: '68, '67, '66. If space permits, letters will be accepted from candidates for the office of Senator-at-large in the above order.

The deadline for these letters is noon on Tuesday, April 27th. NO LETTERS SUBMITTED AFTER THIS TIME WILL BE PRINTED.

Price of Religion

Last week the Jewish population of the University of Massachusetts celebrated the holiday of Passover. This holiday requires abstinence from all food products made with flour for eight days, and the eating of Passover foods. Unfortunately, since these students are at the University, many were forced to forego the observance of this holiday. This plight did not rest well with the students nor would a similar problem be taken lightly by any member of another faith.

It is sad to see that despite the appreciable number of Jewish students on campus the University administration made no effort to fulfill their spiritual needs. The dining commons seemed to have politely disregarded the holi*day entirely. This seems in sharp contrast to the attention* given to foods during the Lenten season, during which fish is served every Wednesday to comply with this religious holiday.

Instead, the whole problem was left to the Hillel Organization which ran a small line in the upper portion of the North Commons. This organization made a very good attempt at serving the students needs; however, due to its small size it was unable to supply the correct foods without quite a bit of expense to each individual student. An expense of $17.50 for 5 days is one that many students simply could not afford. One might also question, why the students should have been made to pay again for food services already supposedly taken care of in their semester bill?

This problem could have been averted by a solution easily adopted by the University. At the beginning of every second semester a special Passover food cost could be substituted for—not added to—the regular cost of meals for that week for those who wish it. The University would then be able to cut down the extra cost because of the large number of students who would participate. This would be a great aid to the students financially, and would allow them to keep the holiday appropriately. There would still be only one line needed, but its services would be increased.

There is no need for this holiday to be neglected, nor for Jewish students, who are unable to afford the unnecessarily high cost, to be forced to trade their religious traditions for a college education.

Magazine Drive Coming

Route 66 in Northampton is a little known highway among our University community, and on a grassy hill on that road is a little known institution. The forgotten institution is the Northampton State Mental Hospital.

From April 26 to May 1, APO, the University service fraternity, will be sponsoring a magazine drive for the Northampton State Mental Hospital. Magazines are an important source of contact with the outside world. Their influence can spread much farther through the hospital than can the limited numbers of Volunteers. Any reasonable magazines that are in readable condition will be greatly appreciated. Let old magazines that are just lying around serve a useful purpose, rather than just throwing them out.

One person in ten will spent part of his life in a mental hospital. Look around. Mental illness is not incurable. But the return to normalcy is so much easier when one is aware that people do care.

Message from Men's Judiciary

Stealing has been a problem on this campus, as everywhere, in the past. Last year the Men's Judiciary Board tried to remedy the problem by automatically suspending a student who was caught stealing.

Stealing is definitely wrong, but even more so for college students and college graduates than for others. Supposedly a college student is a member of the ellte, not only here in the United States but in the world. Less than ten percent of the people in the United States have gone to or are going to college. Is stealing the type of action that will set a good example for those people who look up to this elite group?

For one reason or another some college students feel that it is quite all right to steal a book from the racks in the dining commons, money from a student in the dormitory, fraternity, or sorority, or steal from the Student Store. The first two types should be obvious as an infraction against the individual, the third is also. The Student Store is owned by the students on this campus. Students often wonder why the prices are so high when the store is a non-profit business. One of the reasons is that it has to compensate for the thousands of dollars lost to stealing each year; of which each student has to suffer.

With the information given above, let's hope that the Men's Judiciary Board will not have to reduce the great amount of stealing that has been done on this campus this year by suspending students from school.

Men's Judiciary

What Purpose?

To the Editor:

As a graduate of the University and a citizen interested in quality education in the Commonwealth, I feel compelled to comment on Mr. Zalkind's letter which appeared in the April 6 edition of the Collegian.

Reading the letter, one cannot help but get the impression that the author's main interest is in the economic welfare of southeastern Massachusetts. He sees the growth of a second "university" there as one more push in that area's development. In doing so, Mr. Zalkind has placed the welfare of this section of the state above that of state as a whole.

While his concern for the area's economic well - being is a legitimate one, he allows it to obscure the real reason for the restrictions on SMTI contained in the Willis report: the development of quality education. He is, of course, not alone in his error; for a number of state legislators (who should know better) are taking the same tack. For if the goals of economic welfare for one or two sections of the state are placed paramount to those of quality education, the result will be regression to the second-rate education which for so long characterized public higher education in the Commonwealth.

The establishment of a "university" at SMTI might be a victory (however hollow) for southeastern Massachusetts, but it would definitely be a great defeat for those citizens of Massachusetts who see top quality higher education within their grasp.

Sense of Fun

To the Editor:

It will be a difficult task to have a successful Spring Day—with or without administrative sanction. Let us assume for the moment that the Chapel bells have rung, that many thousands of students are streaming towards the campus pond for their day of fun and frolic. What is there for them to do?

This first Spring Day will have to be an exceptionally responsible one for students. Any unpleasant incidents will kill Spring Day again—and probably forever. It becomes clear, therefore, that there must be no drinking on campus. Those who will drink should feel free to find their own little corner—off campus.

What is there for those students who elect to stay on campus to do? At this stage of the game there can only be suggestions. There will most probably be a rock 'n roll band set up on the south terrace of the Student Union. It may also be possible to provide a rope pull across the campus pond —and perhaps set up a softball game on the athletic field.

Whatever other fun and games there are on campus will depend primarily on the students. It is possible to make a good time out of practically nothing. It depends on whether the students are willing to make a good time for themselves or not.

The need for responsibility must be mentioned again. Too many dunkings in the pond lose their charm. Too many people "sneaking" in beer and waving it around generate disgust.

As for those people who are availing themselves of the local swimming holes, need they be reminded that too much trash left behind is going to lead to ill feelings somewhere.

There will—hopefully—be a Spring Day. Those who organize it can do only so much. It is up to the students to make it successful. With the proper senses of fun and responsibility, it can be done. See you 'round the pond!

By solving problems in astronautics, Air Force scientists expand man's knowledge of the universe. Lt. Howard McKinley, M.A., tells about research careers on the Aerospace Team.

(Lt. McKinley holds degrees in electronics and electrical engineering from the Georgia Institute of Technology and the Armed Forces Institute of Technology. He received the 1963 Air Force Research & Development Award for his work with inertial guidance components. Here he answers some frequently-asked questions about the place of college-trained men and women in the U.S. Air Force.)

Is Air Force research really advanced, compared to what others are doing? It certainly is. As a matter of fact, much of the work being done right now in universities and industry had its beginnings in Air Force research and development projects. After all, when you're involved in the development of guidance systems for space vehicles—a current Air Force project in America's space program—you're working on the frontiers of knowledge.

What areas do Air Force scientists get involved in? Practically any you can name. Of course the principal aim of Air Force research is to expand our aerospace capability. But in carrying out this general purpose, individual projects explore an extremely wide range of topics. "Side effects" of Air Force research are often as important, scientifically, as the main thrust.

How important is the work a recent graduate can expect to do? It's just as important and exciting as his own knowledge and skill can make it. From my own experience, I can say that right from the start I was doing vital, absorbing research. That's one of the things that's so good about an Air Force career—it gives young people the chance to do meaningful work in the areas that really interest them.

What non-scientific jobs does the Air Force offer? Of course the Air Force has a continuing need for rated officers—pilots and navigators. There are also many varied and challenging administrative-managerial positions. Remember, the Air Force is a vast and complex organization. It takes a great many different kinds of people to keep it running. But there are two uniform criteria: you've got to be intelligent, and you've got to be willing to work hard.

What sort of future do I have in the Air Force? Just as big as you want to make it. In the Air Force, talent has a way of coming to the top. It has to be that way, if we're going to have the best people in the right places, keeping America strong and free.

What's the best way to start an Air Force career? An excellent way—the way I started—is through Air Force Officer Training School. OTS is a three-month course, given at Lackland Air Force Base, near San Antonio, Texas, that's open to both men and women. You can apply when you're within 210 days of graduation, or after you've received your degree.

How long will I be committed to serve? Four years from the time you graduate from OTS and receive your commission. If you go on to pilot or navigator training, the four years starts when you're awarded your wings.

Are there other ways to become an Air Force officer? There's Air Force ROTC, active at many colleges and universities, and the Air Force Academy, where admission is by examination and Congressional appointment. If you'd like more information on any Air Force program, you can get it from the Professor of Aerospace Studies (if there's one on your campus) or from an Air Force recruiter.

A Honda needs a mere 3'x 6' space to be perfectly content. And that puts an automobile on a spot, about a mile away from its destination.

There are other sides to Honda, too. Hondas are fiendishly frugal. A gallon of gas will carry you up to 200 mpg, depending on which of the 15 Honda models you're driving. And insurance bills shrink to practically nothing. As for upkeep, a Honda needs little.

The shining example above is the remarkable Honda 50. It sells for about $215*. And there are 14 more models to choose from. Look them over.

VIEWPOINT

by John Cunningham, Sports Staff

The championship bout between Sonny Liston and Cassius Clay, scheduled for May 25 at Boston Garden, has run into another snag. District Attorney for Suffolk County, Garret H. Bryne, has decided to investigate both Liston and Inter-Continental, Inc., the promoter of the fight, to determine whether or not the match should be allowed to be held in Massachusetts.

Citing Liston's criminal record, Byrne said, "Is it in the public interest to have a man with this background as a boxer in Massachusetts?" Any boxing fan's answer should be yes.

If we are going to consider records, then the first record to look at is Liston's boxing record, not his criminal record. Before the Clay fight Liston had lost only one fight and he revenged this loss in his next fight by knocking out the same fighter who had beaten him previously. He defeated all the top-ranking boxers during his rise to the championship. Floyd Patterson, who had been champion for six years, could not even last a total of two rounds in two fights with this man. The overwhelming superiority of Liston made Patterson look like an amateur. I think everybody will have to agree that his boxing record passes inspection.

Now we come to Liston's criminal record. Liston served time back in 1950. But the thing to keep in mind is that he served his time. Instead of giving Sonny credit for being able to rise out of this background and succeed at his given profession, the majority of boxing writers and officials have always held this background against him.

IT IS TRUE that Liston has been charged recently with crimes has been convicted of, however, has been a drunken driving violahas been convicted of, however, has been a drunken driving viola? tion. Now Sonny would be the first to admit that he isn't exactly the image of the All-American Boy. But Mr. Byrne should be told that fighters like Joe Palooka and Big Ben Bolt exist only in the comic strips. For sure Liston is a crude, probably stupid man, but he is no criminal.

Irregardless, however, of whether he is a criminal or not, if Sonny Liston is the best heavyweight fighter in the world then he deserves the chance to regain his title. Being a criminal does not detract from a man's fighting ability. A boxer should only be asked to prove himself in the ring, and Liston has done this. He should not be subjected to investigations by officials who have no other reason for investigating him except for the fact that he has a criminal record.

The heavyweight championship loses its meaning if any worthy challenger, who has proven his worth in the ring, is denied the opportunity to fight for this championship.

Frosh Over - Li'l Jeffs

A home run by Hagan Andersen started off the freshman baseball team on the way to a 5-1 win in their season opener at Amherst College Saturday.

Three UMass pitchers combined to limit the Jeffs freshmen to five hits. The winning hurler was starter John Canty who struck out ten in five innings while giving up three hits and two walks. Harry Gould pitched the next three and fanned six while giving up two hits. Dave Katz hurled the ninth and was wild. Amherst reached him for their only run with three walks and a hit batsman. Katz had a 3-2 count on the final batter before he grounded out to end the game.

THE MASS. SCORING began in the first inning when Andersen, as second batter, lined a long belt down the left field line that allowed him to circle the bases easily. In the second, the Redmen added two more runs with the help of an RBI and single by leftfielder John Lent and an Amherst error.

Wildness forced the Amherst starter out in the seventh when one run was walked across. A passed ball enabled the Redmen to score an additional run earlier in the game. The Amherst help in the scoring was appreciated by the Redmen because their hitters weren't clicking as they were expected to. One who did come through, however, was John Canty who had two hits in two trips before leaving the game.

hits and 12 runs to outlast the Birches 12-11. The Barracudas and the Broncos each hit safely four times, but the Barries took this one 5-3.

HERE'S HOPING that all the girls on campus are in good shape! The IM mixed doubles tournament begins May 3 and entries are due by 5:00 tomorrow. This will be a single elimination tourney with the losers shooting their girlfriends and the winners receiving trophies.

Frosh Lacrosse coach, Frank Shields, has announced that he is pleased with goalie Ron Bumpus who made 18 saves in the teams opening game 4-1 victory over MIT. The scorers for the Li'l Redmen were Marty Kalikow (2) and Gary Palardy, Mike Brown with one apiece. John Kelleher picked up an assist in the game.

place. Morio Shigemetsu led his teammates to a one, two, three, five, six sweep. Shigemetsu set a new record with a two hour, sixteen minute, and thirty-three second clocking as all the first five finishers were under the old record of two hours, eighteen minute, fifty-eight seconds set in 1963 by Vandy.

Barring injury, or some other unforeseen incidents, Buschmann should win the national championship at Yonkers next month. This would undoubtedly establish him as America's number one marathoner. Since Ralph is only 26 years old we hope he'll turn out to be America's future hope for the 1968 Olympic games.

Smith Stars As Lordenmen Split with UVM, 3-1, 2-4

Continuing to get superb pitching but little offensive punch, the UMass Varsity Nine split a two game series with the Vermont Catamounts at Burlington, April 23 and 24.

Friday the Redmen beat Vermont 3-1, behind the four hit hurling of junior right-hander Bill Smith. With the temperature hovering around the freezing mark, Smith made his varsity debut a success, as he walked only one, while striking out six, in a complete game effort.

The Redmen jumped off to a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning. John Peacock opened with a triple. Jim Babyak walked. Peacock scored, and Babyak took third as Terry Swanson's grounder was booted. The second run scored on a balk.

Vermont scored their sole run in the first on a bunt single, Smith's only walk, a sacrifice bunt, and a sacrifice fly.

IN THE EIGHTH, Dennis DellaPiana collected his third single and went to second on a throwing error. The UMass centerfielder displayed a bit of daring baserunning on the next play as he scored from second on a ball hit by Paul Caisse. The grounder was fumbled into short left by the Vermont Shortstop, Whittier. DellaPiana never stopped running as the stupefied Vermont SS hesitated just long enough for Dennis to make it home safely with a head-first slide.

The Redmen left 10 men on base during the game, as they could not get the big hit to break it open. This put great pressure on pitcher Smith, and he responded with a great clutch performance. The best example of Smitty's nerveless exhibition came when, with UMass ahead 2-1, Vermont's Cronin reached second on Jim Kuczynski's two base error at third. A bunt put the tying run on third with one out. Smith then retired UVM's fourth and fifth batters without the run scoring.

The win temporarily put the Redmen in first place in the YanCon.

Saturday the shoe was on the other foot, as Vermont got a great pitching performace from Charlie Foster and defeated the Redmen 4-2.

Bases on ball killed the Redmen and pitcher Carl Boteze, as all four runners who crossed the plate for Vermont had originally reached base via walks.

The Cats opened the game's scoring in the first. Boteze delivered eight straight balls in walking the first two batters. Jim Kuczynski's error preceded a two run single by UVM's Tartera.

UMASS TIED THE GAME in the third when Paul Caisse singled, Boteze reached on an error, and Terry Swanson belted a triple.

Again in the third, Boteze walked two batters, this time with two outs. Both scored as rightfielder Swanson lost a fly in the sun, which went for a double and two runs.

Neither team could scored after the third, as both hurlers settled down to pitch shutout ball the rest of the way.

It was the second tough loss of the season for Boteze, a sophomore, whom Coach Lorden must count on heavily until Ross Piken's elbow loses its soreness.

The Redmen have seen fine performences by righthanders Smith, Boteze, and Ritchie. The return of lefthander Piken would give the Redmen staff both balance and depth. Coach Lorden's situation is much like that of Red Sox Manager Billy Herman. Both have been pleasantly suprised by their young righthanders and disappointed by injuries to heir ace southpaws.

The Redmen are presently 2-1 in the YanCon, 2-3 overall.

The leading hitters on the club are Al Nordberg (.333), Dennis DellaPiana (.263), and Jim Babyak (.263).

Their next game pits the Redmen against slugging Holy Cross, Tuesday at Alumni Field.

Softball Season Opener—Dean of Students, W. Field, pitches first ball to Assistant Dean of Admissions R. Doolan.

Intramural Report

Last Wednesday night marked the opening of the 1965 Intramural softball season. With Dean of Students Wild Bill Field throwing out the first ball, the season was bound to have a zany beginning.

Zany it was! A Gallant Phi Sigma Delta team piled up six runs on ZERO hits as they succumbed to TKE 20-6. TKE benefited from umpteen bases on balls.

In aother wild pitchers duel Keppa Sig gave up 14 walks as they were dropped by PMD 11-1. The strongest hitting team was AEPi as they piled up 12 safeties in their 11-9 victory over ASP.

IN THE DORM LEAGUES the Garfields managed 17 hits to pit the Cherries 13-1 as the Maroons toppled the Lemons 18-1. The Bruins hooked the Barracudas 14-2 as the Pines slipped the Palms 18-15.

In independent action the NRSA went wild with 19 hits as they shot the Jays 21-5 and in a game of brotherly love the AEPi grads took an AEPi independent team 14-10.

Thursday night's activity saw the Redmen chalking up 20 hits to chop the Elms 21-1. Two of the tightest games of the young season the Lemons picked up 17

Netmen Win Two Meets

The UMass tennis team extended their two season win streak to ten this past weekend with victories over Fairfield University (9-0) and Holy Cross (8-1).

Fairfield had been undefeated but the Redmen handled them with ease in their 9-0 win. All matches were won in the minimum two sets except one. That was Harvey Enditall, who still shows signs of the long winter. Mike Rose won the first singles position 6-0, 6-2. Bill Martin took #2 position 6-2, 6-4. Then everything went smoothly until Enditall's hair raising victory 4 - 6, 6-2, 9-7.

In the doubles matches Rose and Martin won the first duels followed by Neal and H. Gooseneck in #2, and Gerry Johnson and John Gutt in #3.

Ralph Buschmann 7th In BAA Marathon

Ralph Buschmann, a 1960 UMass graduate, placed seventh in the 69th annual running of the Boston Marathon on Patriots' Day.

Buschmann, now doing chemical research in Wilmington, Mass., was the first American to finish. His time of two hours, twenty minutes, and twenty seconds is the second fastest American time ever in the 26 mile grind. John Kelley, a previous winner (1952) registered only 15 seconds faster.

Buschmann's tremendous effort was overshadowed by the coup of the Japanese contingent. The Nippon Harriers, who brought snickers when they said they were going to take the first five places, narrowly missed their prediction when Vandendroessche of Belgium, the defending champion, took fourth

Campus Satire Cancelled — Varieties Price Slashed

by Joe Bradley

In an attempt to attract a larger audience Campus Varieties has slashed its admission price fifty cents. Admission to the performance of two original one-act plays is now one dollar, it was announced last night by a spokesman for the sponsoring group, the Revelers.

The Plays to be staged are The Performance by David Axelrod and The Gift by Joe Augusta. Both writers are senior English majors at the University.

Another originally scheduled one-acter, The Follies of Land Grab U., has been cancelled because of "overwhelming" production problems.

Individuals who have already purchased tickets at the original price of $1.50 may receive their fifty cent refund at the C.V. ticket desk in the lobby of the Student Union.

The Curtain for the production rises at 7:30 p.m. on Friday and 8:30 p.m. on Saturday. The performances have been so scheduled to allow the audience to participate in other H.E.R. Weekend activities; the dance on Friday and the Oscar Brand concert on Saturday.

The Performance features an original score by Reiner Bertrams, a sophomore chemical engineering major. It is a dramatic poem and stars Dave Blaisdell, Carol Willard, David Kaplan and John Childs.

The Gift is a drama in the traditional theatre, and stars Betsy Thorin, Peter Goodman and Peter Hopkins. It concerns the inward about face of a young man offered a small gift at a crucial moment.

Adelphia Announces Student Leaders Night

by Jeff Davidow, Senior Reporter

That annual pertormance of leaping and screaming, Student Leaders Night, will soon be at hand.

On Tuesday night, May 4, Curry Hicks Cage will be the scene for the tapping of those individuals who will wear the blazers of the campus honorary groups for the next year.

According to the group's presidents, the Revelers, Scrolls and Maroon Keys have made their final decisions on who they will tap. According to an informed source, the Adelphians are still thrashing through a long list of names. That group will select a total of twenty junior and senior men.

ADELPHIAN DENNIS BUSCHE, chairman of the Student Leader's Night activities, has informed the Collegian that the program will be "hopefully shorter" this year than it has been in the past.

The Interfraternity Council will initiate a new honor group on campus, the first members of which will be tapped at the ceremonies. The membership of the group will be confined to individuals who will be Junior members of fraternities next year. Known as Campus Guides, the group will serve as official welcomers and tour directors for visitors to the University.

Linda Fisher, chairman of the Metawampee Award Committee will tap a member of the faculty to receive the coveted Metawampee award. The first award was made two years ago to the late Albert Madeira. Last year the second award was given to Dr. H. Leland Varley, director of the Orchard Hill Residence College Plan. Criteria for the recipient of the award include outstanding excellence in the classroom and devotion to the development of the individual student both within and without the framework of organized student activities.

IN THE PAST Student Leaders Night has been marked by notable excesses of leaping and screaming as girls, especially those tapped as Scrolls, join with their friends in shouting, yelling, fainting and otherwise articulately expressing their joy.

According to Bushe such activity is welcomed and helps to give color to the events of the night.

A number of campus organizations will also make known the recipients of various scholarships that they are offering.

The activities will commence at 7 p.m. this coming Tuesday evening at the Curry Hicks Cage.

To be featured this Thursday evening will be the new University Trio, consisting of Ronald Steele, violinist, Isolde Haas, celloist, and John Duke, pianist. The trio will play Hayda's Trio 1 in G major, a trio by Philip Bezanson, and Trio in C minor, by Brahms. The concert will take place at 8:15 in Bartlett Aud. and is open to the public.

Trustees Control UM-Boston Site

Trustees of the University of Massachusetts won an important legislative battle Monday as the State Senate voted against transferring control of the new Boston branch from the trustees to the State Department of Education.

The control amendment, which would have required the approval of the Dept. of Education on all fiscal contracts, was attached to the $16 million appropriation bill to allow UMass to buy the Boston Gas Company for the new Boston branch.

The amendment was offered by Sen. Kevin B. Harrington (D-Salem), chairman of the Willis Commission, as an attempt to strengthen the State Education Department's hand in overseeing state education.

It would have given control of the building site, and thereby the branch, to the education Department which would then have leased it to the University for a token fee of $1 a year.

The Boston branch is scheduled to open in September for 1000 students at the 100 Arlington street site of the Boston Gas Co.

Med. Site By June

There will be no final decision on the site of the UMass medical school before June, the Trustees of the University learned Monday after a meeting with management consultants Booz, Allen and Hamilton, regarding the site and details connected with the establishment of a University medical school.

There will be another meeting May 7, as efforts are made to speed up a decision on the medical school site.

It had been hoped that a final decision might be made in May, but that prospect seems unlikely at this time.

It was learned Monday night that trustees are exploring all possibilities with the firm which was hired two months ago to make a complete survey and offer a comprehensive report on the site selection.

Mili Ball: May 14-16

by Tom Donovan, Staff Reporter

This year's Military Ball, highlight of the May 14-16 military weekend, promises to be the best and most unique in the University's history.

Professor of Air Science, Lt. Col. Roy D. Simmons, Jr., has stressed that, "This is going to be the best, the very best, ball our University community has ever experienced. The cadets have worked hard on this one. It's all theirs and we are proud of them."

Bandleader
Lt. John O'Seekee

The honored guests for the ball will include Gov. and Mrs. John A. Volpe, Chairman of the Board of Trustees Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boyden, President and Mrs. John W. Lederle in addition to other University officials. Military personel attending are Col. John J. Stefanik, Commander, Air National Guard, and Lt. Col. Thomas Mitchell Sr., Commander of Otis AF Base.

Tickets for the Military Ball, which begins at 8:30 p.m. on May 15 in the S.U. Ballroom, are now on sale in Dickinson Hall from 8:45 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. The $4.00 per couple cost provides for favors, refreshments, and free color photos for all men and their dates.

May 1 Launching For Labor Relations Center

The University of Massachusetts will formally launch its Labor Relations and Research Center this Saturday, May 1, with a conference on "The Role of the University in Labor Education."

Approximately 150 participants are expected from Massachusetts labor organizations and Bay State schools.

The conference will open at 10 a.m. in the School of Business Administration building at UMass. The program is designed to solicit ideas and recommendations for the development of a comprehensive labor program in the fields of extension services, academic course work, and research, with emphasis on the needs of the laboring people of Massachusetts.

University President John W. Lederle will open the meeting. State Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, Salvatore Camello, president of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, and Joseph A. Salerno of the Massachusetts Board of Education will also speak.

The conference keynote address will be given by University of New Hampshire President John W. McConnell.

Dr. Leo F. Redfern, acting director of the Labor Relations and Research Center, will present tentative plans for the center, and its operation.

H.E.R. King Finalists

The H.E.R. Weekend King finalists!!! The time is once more upon us to recognize the cream of the crop of the male gender. The six finalists will appear at the dance Friday night so come one come all to see whom will be crowned King.

The finalists are:

Frank Antonnucci, a sophomore from Worcester, Mass. Frank is a government major, a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity and plans to attend law school after graduation.

Tom Bridges, a sophomore from Holyoke, Mass., is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, majors in business and upon graduation plans to go into the field of business.

Majoring in Pre Med, John Carlson, a junior from Dover, Mass., is a member of Beta Kappa Phi fraternity and plans to go into the Medical Services Corp.

Lennie Charest is a senior from Agawam, Mass., majoring in government. Lennie is a member of Theta Chi fraternity and will be teaching on the high school level after graduation.

John Robinson, a freshman from Natick, Mass., and majoring in English, is president of his class and upon graduation plans to attend law school.

Majoring in economics, Mike Smith, a senior from Wellesley, Mass., is a member of Theta Chi. Mike plans to go into management and marketing after graduation.

Cuba Moves To Mahar

Dave Dellinger, who has made repeated visits to Cuba before and after the revolution, will lecture tonight at 8:00 in Mahar Aud. on the topic, "What Is Cuba Really Like?"

Dellinger's latest visit in Cuba was the month of May, 1964. His trips to Cuba were made with State Dept. permission, for Dellinger is a journalist on the editorial board of Liberation Magazine, a journal of liberal opinion.

Dellinger graduated from Yale in 1936 with honors in economics and was a Henry Fellow at New College, Oxford, the following year. The talk is being presented by Young Independents, the UMass chapter of SDS.

Two members of "The Glass Menagerie" cast shown here reflecting upon their respective roles.

An Inside Look At "The Glass Menagerie"

When the lights come up on Dale Amlund's evocative setting for The Glass Menagerie, to be produced next weekend by the University Theatre, two of the campus' most talented and versatile actresses will be seen in the roles of Amanda and Laura Wingfield.

Seniors Paula Norton and Sheila Ferrini are well known for their many fine performances.

Miss Norton will attempt the difficult role of Amanda played so brilliantly by Laurette Taylor on the Broadway stage. In preparation for the role Miss Norton learned to speak in a modified southern drawl and to adapt her 21 years to more than twice that. This will be Miss Norton's third role of the current season. Last fall she appeared in Born Yesterday as the hilarious Mrs. Hedges. In February she was seen as Mrs. Smith in The Bald Soprano. In seasons previous she has appeared in Oedipus Rex, Twin Menaechmi, Something Unspoken, also by Tennessee Williams, and in summer stock productions.

Sheila Ferrini, a Glouster Speech-Theatre major who boasts an A average in her major, will play the part of Amanda's daughter Laura. Unlike the roles she has usually done, Laura is a light, delicate, young girl. The character provides an excellent challenge for an excellent talent. Miss Ferrini recently returned from New York City where she auditioned for the Royal Academy of Acting in London, England. Previously this season Miss Ferrini was seen in two one-act plays: The Jewish Wife and The Boat.

Tickets for the production are on sale now at the S.U. Box Office.

UMass Prof. Awarded Lectureship

Dr. Bruce R. Morris, professor and acting head of the department of economics at the University of Massachusetts, has been awarded a Fulbright lectureship for the 1965-66 academic year, UMass Provost Oswald Tippo announced today.

Dr. Morris will teach courses in economic growth and economic planning at the University of Baghdad, Iraq.

A member of the UMass faculty since 1948, Dr. Morris teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in development, planning and consumer economics. He also advises the student International Club.

He is a graduate of Western Reserve University and received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Illinois.

Before coming to the University, Dr. Morris taught at Amherst College, Washington and Jefferson College and Hiram College.

He served with the Office of Price Administration from 1942 to 1946.

J is for Jazz

Basie Arrives!

by Rez

After a hectic vacation, we're back with more news from the world of JAZZ.

We got a chance to see Count Basie and company Sunday night the 18th at the Kimball Towers in Springfield. The group proved once again that the big band is far from dead. They rolled through such standards as "I Can't Stop Loving You" and "Every Day I Have the Blues." The setting was in a night club style. The crowd was a little noisy, but for the type of setting, this was expected. Other coming attractions at this bistro include George Shearing (May 2) and Duke Ellington on June 6.

As for new records, this is the month for Jazz it seems. On PRESTIGE, Miss Pat Bowie premieres in fine style. "Room for one More" on Verve features the fine vocal styling of Irene Reid. Jimmy Smith (Verve) with a new offering "MONSTER." The album features a too much version of "Goldfinger."

Over at FANTASY, Bola Sete and Vince Guaraldi are together for the first time. A fine effort by these two greats in the Jazz world. As for the Jazz Crusaders, they are back on Pacific Jazz with a new offering, "The Thing."

Billy Taylor's "Midnight Piano" is the featured Jazz offering from Capitol. This former WNEW dj is backed with Oliver Nelson and the big band.

1. Counting your riches? That's a laugh.
2. How so? The way I figure it, I can hardly afford to wake up tomorrow morning.
3. I thought you were loaded. I have exactly a dollar thirty-two and three pages of green stamps.
4. Call your dad. He always comes through. Not since he found out about that pair of elephant tusks I bought for $198.50.
5. Didn't you tell him tusks were in? He told me I'd have to demonstrate a more sensible attitude toward money before he'd shell out anything above the subsistence level.
6. That's no problem. Next time you get some dough, get yourself a Living Insurance policy from Equitable. It's one of the most sensible things you can do with your money. It guarantees security for your family, builds cash values you can always use, and by getting it now, when you're young, you pay less. I'll do it! But don't tell dad about my new stuffed alligator.

For information about Living Insurance, see The Man from Equitable. For information about career opportunities at Equitable, see your Placement Officer, or write to Edward D. McDougal, Manager, Manpower Development Division.

H.E.R. Weekend

Supercalaphragylisticexpyaildocious.

That's exactly what H.E.R. Weekend is, and it is fast approaching. At the semi-formal dance, Friday, all the girls will find out who is the "KING" of the campus, as a result of the voting on Monday.

Saturday afternoon will be spent around the pond, playing volleyball, badminton and other activities. Inside, couples will be playing pool, table tennis and bowling in the Games Area, featuring reduced prices.

Before the concert the girls will roast hotdogs and marshmallows near the bonfire pit at 5:00 p.m. The movie, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" will be shown on the East Terrace after the concert

The highlights of the weekend will be the singer-guitarist, Oscar Brand, who will appear Saturday night at 7:30, outside on the South Terrace of the Student Union.

This Canadian-born folk singer will entertain with his sharp wit and his natural singing talent on his twelve-string guitar. His "wonderful sense of humor" turns up on albums. He has written a Broadway musical, composed hit songs and made personal appearances at innumerable concerts, turning up among such performers as Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Josh White and Lee Hays.

H.E.R. Weekend will be an eventful one, so take your special "KING."

"The Amazons"

Women seriously engaged in athletics are in for a sound ribbing by sportswriter Brian Glanville in, "The Amazons," May, of Mademoiselle). He comments that when women participate in sports it is not, in the last analysis, well done, and that it can often be very strange, even grotesque, to see it done at all.

Having Covered the Olympic Games in Tokyo for the London Sunday Times, Glanville found many of the women participating in the events to be oversized, overly aggressive, and anything but feminine. Describing the Rumanian girl who won the gold medal for the javelin throw, he called her "hulking . . . with a Butch crew cut, thighs like a heavyweight wrestler" and a "virile exuberance." For a girl to devote her life to hurling spears—or to be profoundly distressed at losing an event—"take the thing beyond the bounds of reason."

The winning of the shot put by 215-pound Tamara Press he characterizes as "the reductio ad absurdum." When this "gargantuan" girl puts the shot, he says, "her mouth opens and she gasps like an expiring whale." In fact, Glanville has few complimentary remarks about any of the competitors in women's events.

SWIMMING: "Pool swimming is one of the less interesting subcultures of female sport, because most of those who practice it are so ridiculously young."

TENNIS: "Miss Smith (Margaret Smith] clumps about the court with her fine, masculine stride, hitting fine, masculine shots . . ."

The only ladies engaged in sport who meet with Glanville's approval are the ones who either play up their femininity or who make it clear that they don't take sports all that seriously. "You can, of course, devote yourself obsessionally to sport and still remain feminine, but if you do, you are merely the exception who proves the rule." Mrs. Mary Rand of Great Britain, who won three medals in Tokyo, "failed miserably in the long jump in Rome because she was a giddy girl and, by her own admission, didn't take it seriously . . . one would see her sitting soulfully on the ground, in the Olympic Village, pretty pink face, pretty pink jersey, thinking of things which clearly had little relevance to long jumping or hurdling . . ."

Summed up, that: "Women, it is perfectly obvious, are bound to pay a higher price than men . . . But men, by nature, are aggressive and competitive. For women to compete with the same intensity must lead to imbalance, psychological stress, and sometimes physical distortion."

PAM

Her name is Pamela. She shimmies, she shakes and she crawls on her belly. She's a 4-foot, 9-inch boa constrictor.

The Maine Campus, University of Maine, told about her this way: Steve Seabury and Miller White, wanted a snake for a pet. White had had snakes for pets before and had intended to bring one back from Texas next fall. But they decided they could not wait that long and ordered a Columbian boa constrictor from a supply house in Florida.

But they didn't tell their Tau Kappa Epsilon brothers what they had done. So when the curvaceous, brown-eyed beauty arrived at the TKE house she wasn't greeted with open arms. In fact, White and Seabury were besieged by requests not to open the snake's box.

As soon as he boys opened her traveling case, however, Pamela charmed the brothers into letting her stay. After all, they thought, she is perfectly harmless and only two years old.

SINCE PAM arrived she has borne the brunt of much rude gossip. Rumors have circulated that a 20-foot pyhthon had moved into TKE and as a result one of the brothers has been missing for five days.

A frantic University Park mother called TKE and said her children would not walk past the house because they heard there was a man-eating snake there.

Seabury said she has cured most of the brothers' fear of snakes and some have actually picked her up (the housemother was unavailable for comment.

"We have all found her quite fascinating to watch, especially when she slithers up the stairs and around pipes," he said.

Still, someone always checks her cage before going to bed—but just to make sure she is comfortable. (ACP)

Election - 1965 - The Candidates Speak

Due to a series of mixups, there have had to be some changes made in the dates of the scheduled Spring elections. These changes have had to occur in order to facilitate the constitutionality of these elections. The new and final schedule as established by the Student Senate Elections Committee is as follows:

1. The special election for commuter and sorority senators will be held on Thurs., April 29 from 8:15 to 5:30 as planned.
2. For those Class Offices where there are more than two candidates, a primary election will be held on Thurs., April 29 from 8:15 to 5:30. The Primaries will be for, Vice Pres., class of '67, and Pres. and Secretary class of '68.
3. The final elections for all Class officers will be held on Tues., May 4 from 8:15 to 5:30.
4. In order to correspond with the elections of class officers, all Senator-at-Large elections will also be held on May 4 from 8:15 to 5:30.

Both primary and final elections will be held in the Student Union Lobby.

Class of 1968

President

RICHARD DANCA

Although my name may not be widely known, I would like to make it clear that I am a concerned member of the Class of '68. I am running for president on the platform of responsible, objective leadership. As a Collegian staff reporter and an outspoken Executive Councillor, I have become dissatisfied with the present proceedings of the class committee, and I feel that a change is needed. If you, too, are dissatisfied, vote for me, Richard Danca. I feel that vote for me is a vote for organized change under responsible objective leadership.

Thank you for your consideration,
Richard Danca

ROBERT KEOUGH

My name is Robert Keough, present Vice-President, and I am a candidate for the office of President of the Class of 1968. It is my hope if elected that we will return to the spirit which we had when we first arrived. I believe that besides having an Exec. Board, our class needs a representative in each dorm who can not only relay the class activities to you, but also can relay your ideas and suggestions to the class officers. This plan would enable the class officers to work closer together with you and for the class activities to proceed in a more orderly manner. The record-breaking plurality which you gave to me in our first election was flattering. The success of my idea of a trip to Boston in support of the Willis Report was gratifying. The wonderful reception that I have received from many freshmen has shown me that others realize that I care very much about our class. Please care enough to vote on Thursday.

Robert Keough

JOHN ROBINSON

As usual, election time has caught me without enough money to campaign with properly. I am, therefore, taking this opportunity to announce to those who do not already know that I am very much in the running for re-election.

I have only one new qualification which I did not have last October when I first ran for President—my experience. I, along with my other officers and executive board, have co-ordinated three successful programs: the Christmas Carol Sing, support for the Willis Bill, and the Class Picnic which is to be held onMay 15 and which is in the final stages of planning.

I hope to be allowed to continue to serve you in my capacity as President.

Sincerely,
John Robinson

Vice-President

AL DAVIS

My name is Al Davis and I am a candidate for the office of Vice-President of the class of 1968. I am presently a member of the Executive Board and I have participated actively in the preparation and coordination of the various class activities this year. As vice-President it would be my desire to establish permanent committees comprised of executive board members in order to facilitate a smoother working apparatus which will save valuable time, add efficiency to our meetings, and make our class events more successful. I urge you to please consider the candidacy of Al Davis for the office of Vice-President of the Class of 1968 and to please vote on Thursday, April 29, in the student union lobby.

Al Davis

Secretary

JANET SPRING

I would like to offer myself as a candidate for the office of secretary.

Next year, as sophomores, we will take a more important role as a functioning class. There will be the traditional class banquet, participation in an all-school event, and, often unrealized, the training and preparation needed for the next year's Winter Carnival. Able and competent qualtiies combined with interest and willingness, are all required to promote successful achievement of class endeavors. I am willing to accept this challenge.

I would like the opportunity to serve as your secretary, Class of 1968, in making the biggest class the greatest. Thank you.

Janet Spring

Senator-At-Large

RICHARD P. MORIARITY

For the past year I have served as a Senator-at-Large from the Class of 1968 — a truly rewarding experience. I am at present the chairman of the Senate Public Relations Committee, a member of the Senate Executive Committee, and an ex-officio member of the Freshman Class Executive Council.

I have tried to represent you to the best of my ability, and I hope that you will consider my candidacy for the reelection to the position of Senator-at-Large from the Class of 1968.

Thank you,

Richard P. Moriarty

Commuter Senator

DENZIL G. HANKINSON

The commuters have had a history of outstanding representatives in the Student Senate. A vote for Denzel G. Hankinson is an assurance of continued aggressive and responsible representation.

I have resided for a majority of my life in Amherst, and feel that I have a maximum insight regarding the campus and its activities. I have attended the majority of the Senate meetings during the current semester and am familiar with the issues now before the Senate. I realize that a commuter may not feel that he is as much a part of the university community as he might like to be. If elected I plan to keep the senate aware that we constitute about one tenth of the student population and are not to be forgotten.

Denzel G. Hankinson

President

JOHN R. MULLIN

The Class of 1967 is about to enter its third and most important year on campus. In its past 2 years, the class has sponsored the Freshman Carol Sing, the Lo-Lo Luau, the Sophomore Picnic, the Kingsmen at the Kettle and the Sophomore Banquet. I have worked as both an Executive Councillor and as Vice President on every one of these events. Next year we face the task of organizing a Winter Carnival that will rank among the best of the nation's campi. I would welcome the chance to lead the class in its preparation for this event.

The past few days have been quite shocking to the sophomore class because of the sudden change of events that has occurred I was quite sorry to hear that the President would not be running for re-election. However, in regard to the presidency, I quote a famous man:

"I do not shrink from this responsibility; I welcome it."

Acting Class President — 1967
John R. Mullin (K. G.)

Vice-President

JAMES WILKEY

It is imperative that our class becomes a more closely knit group. I realize that this can be very difficult on such a large campus. However, I shall do everything in my power to see that more students are able to take part in class activities. As I have been an executive board member these past two years, and committee chairman for numerous events, I feel that I am in a position to see just what problems face our class in the near future. One of these problems is a lack of communication between the class machine and the student body.

If I am elected, I will do all in my power to see that: 1. every student has a knowledge of class activities; 2. the executive board be enlarged; 3. we, the class of '67, shall have the greatest Winter Carnival in the history of the University of Massachusetts.

James Wilkey

RUSTY SWARTZ

As the class of 1967 prepares the most important phases of its contribution to the University, we are faced with a void in the Vice Presidency, as the incumbent is the now acting President.

Because of my experience in organization and legislative matters, I would like the opportunity to assume this position. My experience involves participation in the following: Maroon Keys, Student Senate, Senate committee for Academic Affairs, Ad Hoc committee for investigation of Honorary Societies, Winter Carni Committee—1964, Winter Carni Publicity Committee—1965. I would appreciate your utmost consideration at this time and also at the voting polls.

Thank you.
Rusty Swartz

Secretary

HELEN CASSOLI

Having actively participated on the Executive Council for two years, I feel I am qualified to serve our class in the capacity of Secretary. Through my past experiences, I have helped with the following activities: Carol Sing, Lo-Lo Luau Ticket Chairman, Sophomore Banquet Chairman, Soph-Frosh Picnic, SWAP, and Executive Council.

In exchange for your vote I will be a "supercalyphragylysticexpyalodacious" Secretary.

Helen Cassoli

Treasurer

PAT MEEHAN

As a member of the Executive Council of the class of '67 for the past two years, I have been active in the areas of: Christmas Carol Sing, Lolo Luau Personnel Chairman, Soph-Frosh Picnic and Kingsmen at the Kettle Co-Chairman. I feel the working experience I have acquired qualifies me for the office of Treasurer. In addition to performing the obvious duties of the office, such as paying the bills, and maintaining up to date books, I believe it is also curcial to be a central core of your Executive Council. In this capacity I hope to serve you next year.

Reduced Entrance Requirements Urged

Students with marks below entrance levels should be admitted to college as a way of testing admission, suggest two professors at the University of Alberta, Canada.

This statement parallels one by an official of the U. S. Office of Education that high school students from low income families should be directed toward a college education as early as the ninth grade.

DR. P. E. HUNKA and Dr. F. J. Kelly of the University of Alberta say that they "want proof that acceptances of low level students actually do minimize, in the long run, the losses to society, the individual and the institution."

The U. S. Office of Education stated that high school counselors and college admissions officers should work together to identify, recruit and counsel talented potential college students in low-income homes.

HOWEVER, THE BIGGEST BLOCK standing in the way of parents who say they want their children to go to college is the question of money.

Financial worries and adequate high school grades are cited as comprising 80% of the problem. Only 25% of parents earning under $5000 a year expect their children to go to college. Those who are most certain that their children will go to college are those families who earn over $10,000 a year.

UMOC Runs Trail Hikes

by Dave Moore,
Staff Reporter

The UMass Outing Club has announced that it will sponsor trail hikes every Sunday for the remainder of the semester.

The Amherst area has many scenic trails unknown to most of the campus. Among these are the Sugar Camp and Roaring Brook Trails to the summit of Mt. Toby and the Metacomet Trail extending the entire width of Massachusetts.

THE METACOMET passes over the nearby Horsesheds, Devil's Garden and Seven Sisters, all geological curiosities nicknamed by club members since 1927. Many of these hikes will be over old logging roads, a source of many of Robert Frost's poems.

Trips will leave from in front of the Student Union every Sunday at 2 p.m. No sign-up sheets or transportation fees will be necessary as in the past.

FRENCH CORRIDOR

There are still vacancies for the French Corridor for men planned for the Second Floor East in Noah Webster House.

M. Gilles Six of Caen, France, will serve as counselor. Qualified students moving in from less expensive dormitories can expect to have difference covered by applying for student aid.

All men interested in an opportunity to use French in daily life are urged to get in touch with Professor Richard Haven of the English Dept. or Professor Luther Allen (Tel. AL3-7935) of the Govt. Dept. by Wednesday, April 28.

UM Receives Kellogg Grant

The University was one of the six New England state universities to receive a joint grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation to establish a regional center for continuing education at the University of New Hampshire. The announcement was made by Dr. Francis H. Horn, president of the University of Rhode Island and chairman of the Educational Service Committee of the New England Council.

The New England Regional Center will be the eighth such which the Kellogg Foundation has helped create and the first to join several universities in a major geographical region.

Each of the Yankee Conference universities received funds to support specialized projects. The University will develop programs in two areas—student culture and state university assistance to two-year colleges.

. . . from the Booth

by John Goodrich

The basketball season has reached its usual conslusion with the Boston Celtics winning the NBA championship over an outmanned, and disorganized Los Angeles Lakers quintet.

A few observations on the series might be in order at this time. The first of these was that it was obviously the rebounding of the Celtics that made the difference. Also the steady pressure of a full court press took its toll. The one game in which LA got control of the rebounds, they won. Otherwise they were beaten soundly both off the offensive and defensive rebounds.

The defense of the Celtics was simply to keep the pressure on the Lakers all over the court and to keep the ball away from Jerry West.

For some reason, the Lakers did not seem to adapt to the pressure too well, which is most unusual in a professional team. With Elgin Baylor out, and Jim King and Dick Barnett ailing, the Lakers were in trouble. Walt Hazzard saw much service in the backcourt and performed well.

In fact, the press was handled well by the Lakers when Hazzard or Barnett brought the ball up one-on-one with Sam Jones. When West, or one of the big men, had to bring it up, they were in trouble because of the little pest, K. C. Jones.

The trouble came in the forecourt. The Lakers were organized, and are organized so that the guards will do the bulk of the scoring. Consequently, the Lakers kept forcing to get the ball to West and K. C. kept stealing it.

To be objective about it, and in this state its sometimes hard, the constant triumphs of the Celtics take the edge off the pro sport. Fans around the country get tired of seeing the same club win constantly. Look at the Yankees, and the rest of the American League. True, the Yankees draw well home and on the road, but overall, the National League with its rugged competition is always slightly ahead. On one recent weekend, the Mets outdrew the entire American League.

So Boston basks in its victories as they pile up, while some of the teams loose attendance. The League figures show attendance up 25% over the last two years, but not in San Francisco where 2,000 fans was above average. Its hard for fans to keep interested even during playoffs when they know that there are always the Celtics waiting. Most fans in the cities which have teams in the playoff attend games as they cling to the dream that the Celtics can be beaten, a dream they see smashed yearly.

The Boston dominance does not seem likely to end soon. Red and his cohorts always seem to draft just the right man to fill a spot.

The reason the Celtics have remained so good is that the new men have had time to develop prior to going into full time service. This is the key to the future of the Boston Celtics.

Now on the horizon is the possible break in the armor of the Celtics. Russell, Heinsohn, Sanders, the Jones boys, and even Willie Naulls are on the plus side of 30. Not even the Celtics could sustain the blow of a mass retirement by two or more of these players. The question is simply whether they will stay around long enough for rookies such as Mel Counts and Ren Bonham can develop into NBA caliber players.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

With all the fuss that is being made about the perennial world champions of the basketball world, the Boston Celtics, the public is overlooking the optimistic opening of the perennial losers in the baseball world, the Boston Red Sox.

The first week of statistics show the Bosox leading the league in runs produced with 32. Most of these were piled up against what is supposed to be one of the best pitching staffs in the league, the Baltimore Orioles.

Earlier in the season this column said that the Boston entry must find a big gun to replace Dick Stuart at first base. Yesterday's batting average, with three homeruns and 10 runs batted in eight statistics show Lee Thomas, present first sacker, sporting a .324 games. If Thomas can maintain this pace he will have the Boston fans forgetting the verbose Stuart very quickly.

PITCHING was said to be the main problem with the Sox this year. If Dave Morehead's opener was not a fluke and if Dick Radatz can regain his effectiveness the team will produce a better pitching staff than was hoped for. Rookie Lonborg impressed most critics with his debut although his early wildness ruined him.

The batting is talking for itself. The regulars have a combined average of .297 led by Tony Conigliaro's .424 and Carl Yastrzemski's .355. The only regulars that have not been too effective with the bat are catcher Bob Tillman (.118) and rookie shortstop Rico Petrocelli (.115). Tillman will loosen up shortly and Petrocelli is now batting from the right side against all pitchers so he should start to come around.

OFF-SEASON PICK up Lennie Green is doing much better than expected in centerfield and veteran Frank Malzone, who seems to have tenure at third base, is batting at .323 clip. Felix Mantilla is out to show the Sox management that last year was not a fluke and is coming through with the timely hits.

It looks like an interesting season for Herman's Herd and unless the men fizzle as they did two years ago, the American league race will also be an interesting one.

Netmen Win

The UMass tennis team ran its string of consecutive victories to 11 yesterday as they defeated Tufts college 6-3. Winning matches for the Redmen were Bob Neal, Bill Martin, Harvey Mednicov and Gerry Johnson, in singles, and Mike Rose paired with Martin along with Mednicov and Neal in doubles.

Bob Ramsay took third and fourth.

NU finished the meet by setting a new field record in the mile relay with a clocking of 3:27.9. UMass was last in this event.

IN THE FROSH MEET Tufts showed that they'll be stronger in the future as they prevailed prevailed with 64 points. UMass was second again with 61 and NU third with 57. Steve Burrell was the standout of the meet as he tied the record in the 100 and broke the record in the 220. Bill Tindall broke the record in the high jump and placed second in the triple jump.

Renwick Double Winner

Trackmen 2nd In Tri-Meet

by Terry Carpenter

Eight record breaking performances highlighted last weekend's track meet against Northeastern University, the New England Champs, and Tufts College. NU prevailed with 96 points. UMass was second with 75 and Tufts third with 13.

Outstanding performers for the Redmen were Art Larvey and Doug Renwick. New school and Alumni Field records were broken by Dave Sadowsky and Bob Murray. Both jumped 13'6" in the pole vault.

The Redmen started fast. Renwick threw the shot 49'4" to break his own personal record. This was the first time he had ever beaten Northeastern's Post who heaved the weight 46'3". Karagosian and White took second and fourth in the hammer throw to capture some points in one of NU's stronger events.

Dupee of NU took the high jump as he set a field record with a jump of 6'3". Clarence Hill was just an inch off the top with a leap of 6'2". Co-capt. John Medeiros was third at 6' even. In the broad jump Medeiros, Hill and Larvey swept one, two, three to pile up the points for the Redmen. Delve and Connor took second and third in the javelin.

THE TRIPLE JUMP saw another field record broken by Walker of Northeastern. Medeiros and John Lisack were third and fourth. Renwick took the discus throw with a record heave as Curt Basset was second.

After Sadowsky and Murray broke the pole vault record the Redmen looked like they had the meet wrapped up, but the running events were to be their sore spot as Art Larvey won the only races.

Co-capt. Tom Panke was third in the mile followed by Mike Sheeley who was fourth. NU took the first three places in the 440 and Tufts grabbed fourth.

At this point Larvey ripped through the 100 yard dash in record tieing time of 9.9 seconds. Doug Sloane and Medeiros were third and fourth. Bill Thoms ran his fastest time in the half mile but it was only good for second. Larvey then ran a 22.2 220 to complete his double for the day. Sloane placed third.

Dunsky and Kneeland of NU outclassed the field in the two mile as Terry Carpenter and

Whelchel Returns For Alumni Game

by Peter Pietz

The first Annual Alumni football game will be played this Saturday on the Lacrosse Field. The first half of the game will be a scrimmage between the regular varsity ballplayers and the second half will feature the varsity vs. the alumni.

The alumni game has been initiated in conjunction with the reorganization of the Varsity "M" Club. The latter will consist of Varsity letter winners and all supporters of varsity football. The objectives of this organization are to aid in recruiting and to institute various projects such as obtaining blazers for the team members. The club will hold annual meetings on Homecoming Weekend and the weekend of the Spring game. The overall purpose of the organization is to promote the Redmen football team.

THE COACHES of the alumni team will be former football coach Chet Gladchuck and former UMass quarterback, and present professional ballplayer, John McCormick. The alumni team will consist of 14 members of the class of 1965 who played on last year's Yankee Conference champions, plus 14 returning lettermen. These alumni will include Noel Reebenacker, whose records were broken by Jerry Whelchel; John Burgess and Ed Forbush (ends); Bob Foote, Paul Graham and John Hartnett (tackles); Dick Eger and John LaFontane (guards); Al Hedland, Bill Maxwell, Dick Warren and Pete Sullivan (backs); John Bamberry will kick the extra points and do the kick offs.

The opening kickoff will be at 2:00. Students must show ID's. The game is open to the general public for $1.00.

Birdmen Face Title Defense

This Saturday at Orange Airport the UMass parachute team will compete in the Intercollegiate Sport Parachuting Competition.

The Redmen team will be defending their titles of first and third places achieved in last year's meet.

This year's competition will feature an Eastern and a Western division. There will be no outright collegiate championship awarded because of this new setup. What will result is a playoff between the division champions in Texas later in the year. The winner of this meet will win the Gavin Gavel, symbolic of first place.

Hopes of retaining the Gavel ride on the more experienced first team consisting of Richard Fillmore, Philip Bedaw and Ed Dory. The returning members of the second team are Thomas Rice and Richard Hazel. They will team up with newcomer Richard Nadolink.

HER Weekend: Big Chance For Dirty Old Men

Male students will benefit from the traditional spring fever this weekend when U-Mass coeds will pay the bills for their "Kings."

H.E.R. Weekend will open with a dance in the ballroom with Gus Perfito providing the music. The king will be crowned during intermission.

While the sun shines, outdoor activities will be oriented around the pond on Saturday. A hotdog roast will follow at 5:00 p.m. When appetites have been satisfied, a concert by folk singer Oscar Brand will be held at 7:30 p.m. outside the Student Union. Amused by Brand's sharp wit and humor, the couples will then move to a showing of "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" at 9:30 p.m. on the East Terrace.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. the traditional Intercollegiate Sing will be held in the Student Union Ballroom. This year's groups are: the Springfield College Heathertones and Scotchmen, the Bluettes of Simmons and The Bowdoin Bachelors, the Logarithms from M.I.T., and the V-8's of Mount Holyoke College. Also appearing at Sunday's Sing will be the University's own Musigals and Statesmen. The Statesmen, a men's singing group, has been singing for the past 40 years on and off-campus. They were featured at the PanHellenic sing last Sunday.

TO REMIND ALL COEDS of some of the important rules —"She must walk on the outside of the street, to avoid her date from being hit by garbage" and "she must put out his chair."

Third Annual Metawampe Award Slated For Tuesday Presentation

Provisions for a one thousand dollar stipend and a lectureship to accompany the annual Metawampe Award have been approved by the Senior Class Exective Council.

The third presentation of the award, this year with the accompanying stipend check, will be made at Student Leaders Night on Tuesday, May 4, at the Curry Hicks Cage. Linda Fisher, chairman of the Metawampe selection committee will make the presentation at the senior class-sponsored evening.

The award is given to that teacher who in the opinion of the graduating seniors has demonstrated outstanding dedication to his students both in and out of the classroom. The first two recipients of the honor were Albert Madeira and H. Leland Varley.

IT WAS EXPLAINED that the recipient of the award might use the thousand dollar stipend to finance personal research and/or traveling for the preparation of the lecture he will present to the University community next fall. However the money need not be used for such purposes.

The philosophy behind the establishment of the lectureship was stated as below to the members of the class of '65 executive council which met on Tuesday morning.

"It is apparent to all of us," said the spokesmen for the Metawampee selection committee, "that the next few years will be the most critical in determining the course of evolution that this University will follow. Whether we become a diploma mill or a viable educational institution will rest, to a large degree, on how we define our goals and interests over the next few years."

"It also seems apparent that those individuals best qualified to speak and aid in this process of definition are those same men who have demonstrated their interest in education at this University through their dedication to their students."

BY ESTABLISHING THIS to these individuals a podium of presitge from which to express themselves on topics relating to growth of this University and the course which that growth will take."

It was further explained to the Executive Council that "although the recipient is not obligated to use the stipend for the preparation of his lecture it would be unfair and unwise to give a person the opportunity of occupying this podium of prestige and then not giving him funds to allow him to prepare the best possible presentation."

The executive council was also informed that certain officers of the junior class had expressed their approval and interest in the stipend and lectureship and had voiced assurance that if started by this year's senior class it would be continued for at least one, and probably many more years.

"IT IS DIFFICULT," reported the Metawampee committee, "to state definitely whether the lectures will always be a success, but based on what

Long Senate Meeting Passes 65-66 Budget

by Jim Foudy, Senate Reporter

In a five hour meeting punctuated with debate and barely maintaining a quorum, the Student Senate abolished the women's Handbook examination, debated the question of designating senatorial status on election ballots and approved the 1965-66 Student Government Association budget of $182,745.

The Women's Handbook examination, previously requiring all women to pass a written exam on residence regulations, was abolished by the Senate.

The Senate, in ceasing to be the distributor of the examination, upheld Senator Linda Peristein's belief that the tests were "a waste of time."

"MANY OF THE GIRLS STUDY the book only for the exam," she pointed out, and explained that the exams will be replaced by a "strong orientation" for freshmen women and a "review" of rules for upperclassmen.

During presentation of the budget, Senator Dick Wimberly (Brett) attempted to add an amendment to the Collegian Budget by requiring the Collegian to print all election notices on its front page. The amendment arose out of a mix up on the printing of yesterday's priary election notices.

Late appearance of the notice forced a waivering of the usual gap between primaries and final elections and resulted in what Vice-president of the Senate Larry Rutstein called a "condemnation of the Collegian for an accident."

THE AMENDMENT STATED that "any election notices by Elections' Committee Chairman, Men's or Women's Affairs Committees shall appear on the front page of the Collegian in at least 10 point type."

Defeating the amendment, the senators seemed to support Senator Rutstein's comment that if "we (Senate) tell the Collegian how to format their front page . . . then we are telling the Collegian how to write their paper."

The Senate also gave consideration to the question of allowing class officers to designate their positions by putting "incumbent" after their names on ballots or senators from doing the same with the words "present senator."

Senator Wimberly opposed

Precisionettes Journey To World's Fair Show

The UMass women's drill team, the Precisionettes, performed this past weekend at the World's Fair. They performed as part of the Fair's program which invites different bands and drill teams to appear at various points on the grounds.

The girls left Amherst at 6:30 Saturday morning with their advisor, Captain Bruce Nilsson, Drillmaster Paul Anderson, Commander Anita Handaliah, and drummers under the direction of Lawrence Hirsch.

The party arrived in New York at 11 AM and performed at 1:15, 1:30, 3:15 and 3:30. The girls received a special request to perform in front of the New England Pavilion. The team then toured the Fair until closing time.

The Precisionettes marched at the Unisphere in the center of the Fair, at the New England Pavilion, and the Massachusetts Pavilion. Each girl received a certificate of appreciation from the World's Fair Corporation. Large crowds at the performances showed their enthusiasm and appreciation for the series of precision drill routines.

Cinema X Offers Students Campus To Theatre Bus

A direct "campus-to-theatre" bus service between Cinema X, Springfield's fine arts theatre, and the area's four colleges, will be tried on an experimental basis this weekend.

A special Peter Pan bus—or buses—chartered by CINEMA X, will carry collegiate movie goers from the campuses of U-Mass, Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges directly to CINEMA B. Round trip bus fare will be one dollar.

The current feature is ZORBA THE GREEK, which in addition to winning three academy awards, has received considerable critical acclaim. The schedule will be set up to allow time Friday and Saturday for a burger break after the film before leaving Spingfield.

"A number of students from the four campuses have told us they would like to come to our theatre more often, but lament the lack of direct, inexpensive transportation," explained Mrs. Sheila Malloy, manager of CINEMA X.

"So we've decided to subsidize the transportation and make it direct to the theatre," she went on. "We want very much to do this, but we will be able to only if there is a strong expression of interest and student support in the form of movie-going bus riders. Lacking this support, the project will die."

Friday and Saturday, the bus will observe the following schedule:

1) UMass — Student Union 5:30 p.m.

2) Amherst — Peter Pan Depot (N. Pleasant St.) 5:40

3) Smith — Green Hall (Elm St.) 6 p.m.

4 Mt. Holyoke — Mary Lyon Gate — 6:20 p.m.

Passengers will be discharged directly in front of CINEMA X. Busses will leave on return trip at 9:45 p.m. from the adjacent parking lot, following a break for a snack.

Monday departures will be one-half hour later, with return at 11 p.m. Monday's program includes the weekly "Film Classic" (this week: SAVAGE EYE).

Commonwealth Service Corps Meets Summer Need Of Poor

The Commonwealth Service Corps was established to meet the needs of the 700,000 Massachusetts citizens living in poverty, recognizing that every resident must accept responsibility for their problems. In developing a program to meet the unique summer needs of the poor, the Corps realized that college students can provide a great service because of their abilities, intelligence and flexibility. The programs include work with migrants, potential and real high school drop-outs and mentally retarded children. Emphasis has been placed on training and supervision to provide good service and at the same time to give learning and working experience to students.

The four summer programs run from July 6 through August 27, including a One-week training period with live-in accomodations provided, beginning Monday, June 28. Workers are paid $80 a month. The Corps hopes that the exciting nature of the programs can compensate for the limited funds available.

The first of the programs, on Inner-City Work and Recreation, has as its goal to bring together in Community efforts people who live in the same block. Ten college students will supervise 50 high schoolers in a Worcester Park program. Holyoke offers the Park progam plus landscape work with college students also supervising. In Boston eight students will work in the summer-camp atmosphere of the United South End Settlement. All of these programs run five days a week, and Boston provides room and board.

The Migrant Education Program will conduct an intensive educational program for migratory farm laborers, with a statewide citizenship training included.

An Education Program is designed to help meet the needs of deprived children from the inner city, involving both remedial and enriching education. Boston wants six part time college students to teach remedial math four nights a week, expecting these volunteers to return next year for work in another project. Eight full time (or 16 part time) students will tutor high school students in Springfield, five days a week.

The goal of the Mental Retardation Program is to attempt new methods of approach in the understanding and treatment of retarded children. Students will work five days a week at two institutions where room and board is provided.

UT's Glass Menagerie Features Seasoned Graduate Student In Lead

One of the major contributors to this season's University Theatre productions has been graduate student Ken Bordner.

In next week's The Glass Menagerie Mr. Bordner will play the demanding role of Tom Wingfield. Tom is both character and narrator weaving in and out of the action, now relating to other characters, now addressing the audience.

It was twenty years ago this spring that the original Tom as played by Eddie Dowling stepped forth on the stage of the Playhouse in New York and began, "I have tickets in my pockets—I have things up my sleeve—. . ." Thursday evening Mr. Bordner will have his chance as Tom.

In preparation for the role Mr. Bordner has been rehearsing with other members of the cast since early April. Before that he acted roles in Romulus and Julius Caeser. During the first semester Mr. Bordner created two memorable characters. In the season's opening production he played the part of Harry Brock. Garson Kanins' Born Yesterday was centered around this tough little gangster. In the December production of The Streets of New York Mr. Bordner was once again the villain, playing the wicked Gideon Bloodgood.

In addition to these fine acting accomplishments, Mr. Bordner is a constant member of the production staff. He stage managed last season's All the King's Men and this year's Julius Caesar. He has been assistant director and lighting designer. At present he is directing a one-act play for Campus Varieties.

Mr. Bordner expects to receive his M.A. in English this June and an M. F. A. in Theatre next June.

Tickets for The Glass Menagerie are on sale at the S.U. Box Office.

A definite sign of Spring and an indication that summer is on the way . . . those lazy, hazy, crazy days are approaching. Students and faculty take advantage of yesterday's weather as academics and enjoyment are combined in an outdoor class in front of Bartlett Hall.

UM Campus Varieties: Three Original Plays

HER weekend at UM, the weekend when the gals must finance the guy of their choice, is to host Campus Varieties—a unique evening of experimental theater.

Last semester seven undergraduate playwrights submitted scripts to critics who selected Dave Axelrod's dramatic poem, The Performance and Joe Augusta's "drame' (a serious but not tragic play), The Gift. The winners each received a cash prize from the Revelers, a cheerful group of students devoted to generating campus spirit.

A third play satirizing campus institutions, was written and directed by an administration member. By midweek, he ran into "unsurmountable" production problems" and decided to cancel it. The admission price was accordingly dropped.

Joe Augusta, a senior English major, explains that his characters are "too absorbed with the past to live in the present and that 'The Gift is to be able to look ahead.'

' The director, Ken Brodner, a graduate student, is working with a very simple set meant to suggest a tobacco shop but it is a set that is nowhere and everywhere.

Joe admitted that he daydreams a lot and that writing dialogue is no great problem. He has just finished writing a medieval folk tale, The Wheel.

Axelrod's poem, The Performance, is to have a drugged and dreamlike quality. "A young man faces the problem of right or wrong in a narcotics situation and paradoxically becomes an addict of his own mind," he explained. There is no hope.

The three works are to be presented Friday, April 30, at 7:30 and Saturday, May 1, at 8:30.

Alabama Police Fire Over Heads of Student Marchers

Police fired over the heads of a crowd of 400 demonstrating students here on the campus of Alabama State College for Teachers.

The students were protesting the arrest of civil rights worker Willie Ricks of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC).

Over 20 students have been jailed since demonstrations began April 21, 1965.

The arrests grew out of student protests over the school administration's attempt to punish students who participated in rights demonstrations here. Some 9 students were suspended for taking part in direct action here.

Students faced police, throwing rocks and bottles. The all white police retaliated by firing over the students' heads.

One girl was reported injured when she fainted after being burned from the blast of a firing pistol.

On the previous night, 400-500 students sat in front of the president's house, where student leaders called for a boycott of classes.

The protests flared up after a faculty-administration committee hearing charged 17 students with insubordination, willful defiance of authority, and conduct prejudicial to the college and unbecoming a student and future teacher.

Thirteen students were arrested here earlier after a 13 hour sit-in at the office of the president.

Workers for SNCC helped organize demonstrations here protesting the lack of the right of free assembly, and police brutality in Selma.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

A Worthy Cause

In its last session before vacation the Student Senate, led by the efforts of senior senator Phil Berlin, unanimously passed a bill, providing transportation funds for the Belchertown Volunteers. Because of the charitable nature of the organization which it supports, there was no open controversy over the bill, and, hence, very little mention was made of it outside the Senate. Yet this bill is one of the most significant pieces of legislation passed by the Senate all year.

The University has been represented in intercollegiate and outside affairs by many fine organizations, all of which have received their deserved acclaim from the student body. But there are other organizations, representing UMass, composed of students who quietly and without recognition sacrifice time and energy each week to serve the less fortunate in society. The Belchertown Volunteers is such a group.

Every Saturday a number of students from UMass travel to the Belchertown State School for Mentally Retarded Children to devote a couple of hours in the afternoon to aiding a praiseworthy undertaking. The late President Kennedy initiated a nationwide program to overcome the superstitions associated with mental retardation and to find cures for those afflicted with the illness. In the meantime, until such cures or preventatives are found, groups such as the Belchertown Volunteers will continue to do as much as possible to make life more meaningful for the mentally retarded.

But the truly regretful part of the situation is that out of nearly 10,000 students in the University, barely twenty volunteer each week. The Belchertown Volunteers ask that you give up only two to three hours of your time on Saturday afternoon. There are no dues, and you are not required to go every week—only at your own convenience.

This Saturday the new bus transportation to Belchertown will go into service, as provided for by the recent Senate bill. The bus will leave the North Dining Commons parking lot at 1.00 P.M. For those of you who are looking for worthy causes, you may not get the same headlines as those who ventured down to Selma, but you will get a feeling of inner satisfaction that will well make up for it.

"Honor" Societies

Picture, if you can, an honor society with a cumulative average requirement of 2.0, a group of leaders who can't think of anything to do, and an open organization which is nearly 100% Greek by precedent. These qualifications are filled by the sophomore honor socity—Maroon Keys.

This society has a cume requirement of 2.0. APO could probably more than match this, if not by requirement, then by fact; yet it isn't distinguished by calling itself an "honor society". A 2.0 organization is not an honor society; 2.0 students are not honor students. This distinction should not be given to prestige seeking service organizations.

Yet, one wonders if this group of "selects" should be called a service organization. All that they are asked to do by the Dean's office is to be ushers and sell tickets. Yet, they, along with Scrolls, have reported to the Senate that this task is beneath their dignity. They have further reported that their apparent lack of activity is caused by an inability to think of anything else to do, and the need to organize which occupies a majority of their time.

A society with no ideas is not a society of leaders. Yet these students, who call themselves leaders can't think of anything to do —with the exception of organizing. An organization which exists for the sole purpose of perserving its own existence, can hardly be called a service group. To whom is it a service? Under the present system, the only answer possible is—"to Maroon Keys".

The application system for membership—a result of their year long involvement with organization, no doubt is good. Yet, the ratio of Greeks to non-Greeks is hardly representative of the percentage of Greeks on campus, the relationship of the Greek cum to that of the non-Greek, or Greek contributions to the campus as opposed to that of non-Greeks.

As in the case of Scrolls, it has been suggested by members of Greek houses that each house has its unwritten quota in the sophomore honor societies and that if three members of a given house leave the society, three new members from the same house will usually be invited to join. This can hardly be called fair selection; yet under the present lack of requirements for membership, one can expect little more. Neither can one expect members of Maroon Keys to perform efffectively the task of orientating freshmen when a majority minimize interaction with freshmen by living in houses.

Maroon Keys should seriously examine their present position with respect to membership requirements and organizational functions. Under the present system, they should hardly expect the respect that their unwarranted titles ask from the rest of the campus.

NEWCOMERS WELCOME

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Spring Day Appeal

If you have read the articles on Spring Day appearing in the paper, you will know the aims and plans of those students who would like to see the return of Spring Day to the University of Massachusetts. The plans as they stand now are tentative, at best. But the spirit which underlies them is not of the trouble-making variety. We would like to have a Spring Day which is both fun and responsible.

If however, Spring Day takes place in an atmosphere of rebellion against the Administration, it will become increasingly difficult to avoid trouble. If we have time to plan, time to bring the entire campus into the proper spirit, then any unpleasant incidents will be a very definite minority.

We cannot, as things stand now, promise a trouble-free Spring Day. With your cooperation, we would be in a much better position. With your sanction, plans could be made openly and responsibly. The campus at large could be more enthusiastic, less dubious; no one would have a better idea of what aspects to play up and what aspects to play down. A joint administration - student committee could iron out a lot of problems that we have perhaps not considered.

It is a large order to ask of you who still remember the orge that the previous Spring Days became. But we who are still young and blooming with irresponsible idealism would like our chance to prove the feasibility of Spring Day. May we try?

Correction—Re: Passover

PASSOVER REBATE

It has come to my attention that students who have eaten Passover meals under the aegis of the Hillel Foundation will receive rebates from the administration. I also understand that the Hillel Organization in providing Passover meals has received the cooperation of the administration. I regret any misunderstanding that may have been brought about concerning this issue.

— NOTICE —

Ever notice those cute little bugs floating around in your water? Yes, they're in there allright, but don't worry; they are harmless. According to Doctor Gage of the University Health Services, all the water in Amherst contains many minute crustaceans called cyclops. Amherst is fed its water from three reservoirs (two in Pelam and one in Shutesbury) and it has been discovered that it is to the Shutesbury Reservoir that these creatures can be traced. Yet both Dr. Gage and Mass. Bureau of Public Health assure us that there are no harmful effects. The only real problem presented is that the bugs are a nuisance. The reason for the great number of these bugs this year is the exceptionally low water level, for with fewer fish not as many of the insects can be eliminated.

Again, remember that despite the color or content of the water, it is perfectly safe to drink it. "The only problem I can see," says Dr. Gage, "is one of aesthetics."

Letters To The Editor

A Day Of Chaos?

To the Editor of the Collegian:

Recently about the campus there has been increased discussion about an abstract concept referred to as Spring Day. Spring Day from what I have been able to learn is a rather haphazard, disorganized affair hardly much more than a general nuisance. In an effort to make Spring Day a more meaningful event in the years to come, I would like to discuss briefly the successful program of our northern neighbor the University of Maine, which has turned their Spring Day from an abstract concept into a thrilling reality.

The University of Maine's special day is referred to as "Maine Day". For over 20 years this day has been observed annually on the campus. It receives full support and co-operation from the administration. It is held the first Wednesday in May. Actually "Maine Day" activities involve the whole first half of the week. On Monday and Tuesday a massive campaign is carried on for the campus mayor—the rally leader for all major vorsity sports. On these two days between classes in front of the Union, humorous skits are held throughout the day on behalf of the mayoralty candidates. Tuesday night just after supper, a large cavalcade of 80-100 cars; all decorated, parade around the campus calling for the election of their candidates. The cavalcade ends at the Memorial Gymnasium where the students pour inside to hear mayoralty speeches. (Last year over 300 of the University's 4500 students heard the mayoralty speeches.) Amidst the pandemonium of wild demonstrations and thunderous partisan applause for the mayoralty candidates, the students release the tensions built up over the year in a completely harmless fashion.

On Wednesday "Maine Day" begins. All classes are suspended. In the morning there are faculty-student athletic contests, volleyball, tennis and other athletic tournaments. Lunch consists of barbequed chicken cooked in open fires in the stadium. Almost 2000 students eat their lunch sitting in the stadium seats. In the afternoon a big rally is held in which the new mayor is announced.

To conclude, it is a thoroughly planned for, carefully worked out event which is indeed one of the highlights of the school year at the University of Maine.

If the University of Massachusetts is ever to have a worthwhile Spring Day it should take a few hints from its northern neighbor.

1) Such an event must receive the full support and co-operation of the Administration.

2) Such an event must be carefully planned long in advance as are Homecoming Weekend, Greek Weekend, and Winter Carni.

3) This event should be held every year on a particular specified date agreed upon by the Administration and the Student Senate.

Counselling Day for example would be an excellent time to hold our Spring Day because it takes only 10-20 minutes to register. The rest of the day could be spent enjoying Spring Day activities.

As Spring Day stands now it is just a day of chaos; an excuse for skipping classes. If Spring Day can't improve upon its present status it should be done away with entirely

Price Is Right In Book Store

To the Editor:

We have long been under the impression that the various concessions in the Student Union exist primarily for service to and convenience of the serious doubts as to the purpose of the Student student body. The following incident we feel raises Union Bookstore.

On Tuesday morning a student sold a paperback to the bookstore for twenty-five cents; exactly two hours later another student went in to purchase the identical book, and the price was $1.85. The book was originally purchased from the Student Union Bookstore for $2.15, which no doubt included a substantial profit.

We feel that it is time that the goals of this organization were redefined especially with regard to used book purchasing procedure.

Dennis Stackhouse
Edward Nagus
William Foster

Editor's Note: After checking this through, we were able to come up with the reason for the large mark-up. Paper back books are usually reprinted every year, making the last printing obsolete. As a result, many of the paper back books, which the Book Store purchases from students second hand, must be given away, as they can not be sold. In order to simply break even, a large mark-up is needed on used paper backs.

The Home Front

To the Editor:

As responsible citizens, we feel compelled to take a cursory glance at the current Vietnam situation as it is being fought on the "Home Front", or more accurately, "they also serve, those who stay at home and picket." These patriots of note, namely 2,500 ministers, 300 Columbia students, and our own inimitable saviours of the human race, "The Young Independents" (the above categories being coincidentally draft exempt).

They cry for responsibility in government and fail to extend the same principle through their own ranks. To illuminate this point, we need only quote portions of the reprint the Young Independents are presently distributing with the suggeston that they read more than just the parts they want to. For instance, "A University is not a grammar school. Its function is to produce mature men and women who can assume positions of responsibility in a democratic society."

This generation may have produced the best qualified group of protestors and anarchists in this nation's history. To this end we propose that a Secretary of Protest replace the obviously ill-suited post of Secretary of Defense. No one would possess the qualifications to handle such a job. Abolish the job now and use the money saved more effectively in such projects as herein importation, urban renewal on Fire Island, and the like. Who would you assume to be more capable and mature—the picketing zealot, or the pilot of an F-105 daily risking his life for the vary people who would abuse his trust in their faith?

The voices of the dissenters ring loudest, but the voices of America's present destiny are spoken softly into a field telephone or through the mike in front of a pilot, and they ultimately will win or lose for the self-appointed saints of "freedom and peace."

"Cantilenam eandem cano" i.e. in English, I am singing the old song: "quid faciendum?" . . .

For a few months I have been walking around our campus, carrying along candy-wrappers, empty cigarette packs and other items worth a waste basket.

Pourqoi? Well simply because there "ain't" a single waste basket from Boyden Gym to the New Commons and from SBA to the Education building.

That is, I haven't seen any.

How tragic it would be if you'd inform me that there are some and I've missed them all since September 1964.

Or even earlier?

Then, mon ami, Que est le mot de l'enigme?

University Doctor Discusses Psychological Effects of Smoking

In the opinion of Dr. Dean A. Allen, Chief Clinical psychologist at the Infirmary, smoking is so involved with a person's life that it isn't like an solated habit, it becomes an integral part of what he does.

It has also been established that smokers are almost always drinkers. They tend to be outgoing, self-confident and happy. Their personality trait of not caring leads to taking chances.

There are a number of methods which have been tried to cure people of the habit. There is a doctor in Northampton who claims to cure smoking with hypnotism. Drugs are also substituted for the bodily need smoking satisfies. Like Dr. Gage, Dr. Allen believes that the only effective method of cutting down on smoking in the United States is a massive campaign in the public schools.

People who stop often find it quite easy for a time but they also find it easy to go back to smoking. It is almost like alcoholism. Dr. Allen says that it is necessary to completely stop, that is the only true method.

Smokers have various ways of supporting their habit. They aren't as extreme as in the addiction to heroin, but they are very real.

No one has actually discovered the psychology of smoking. In college surveys it was found that smokers rationalize their habit by denying it is a very serious problem.

In efforts to find out other differences between smokers and non-smokers very little was found. The only definite point made was that smokers are generally less atheletic than non-smokers.

Dr. Allen said that from his observations more people in social sciences than math and engineering smoke.

THE WAR ON POVERTY:

a message to the Nation's college students...

Inspiring causes have always fired the imagination of students.

Today the United States is committed to the greatest humanitarian cause in its history—a massive counterattack on the causes of poverty, which are robbing 35,000,000 Americans of the opportunities most of us are free to pursue because we had the advantage of a decent start in life. That start has been denied to one-fifth of the nation's people. Thirteen million of them are children.

This is a moment in history for the fortunate to help the least privileged of their fellow citizens. You can help this summer, or for a full year if you choose, as a volunteer in the War on Poverty.

In July and August, 30,000 volunteers will be needed in their own communities to assist four- and five-year-old children of the poor through Project Head Start Child Development Centers. Thousands more are needed to live and work among poor families by enlisting in VISTA, the domestic Peace Corps.

In Head Start, volunteers work side-by-side with teachers, social workers, doctors, and other professionals to give pre-school children advantages which can change the patterns of their lives. Many of these children have never held a doll, never scribbled with crayons. Meager environments have blunted their curiosity. Some are spoken to so rarely that they are unable to form sentences.

Head Start volunteers will read to children, take them on outings to zoos and parks, organize creative play for them, and help build the security and self-confidence they need to succeed in school. The rewards come when a withdrawn child begins to ask questions or responds to the affection for which he has been starved. Without such help, many of these children would be headed for school failure and the poverty cycle which trapped their parents.

Many young people who are 18 or older and can serve for a year enroll for training in VISTA—both to help others and to enlarge their own capacities for teaching, social work, or careers in sociology, economics, law, and other fields.

Home base for VISTA volunteer groups can be a city tenement row, a struggling farm community, an Indian reservation, a migrant labor camp, or a mental hospital. Volunteers may counsel school dropouts, organize recreation programs, tutor children who are behind in school, explore job opportunities for the poor—in short, do whatever is needed to help people find their way up from poverty. Volunteers become respected members of the communities where they work.

The pay is nominal—living expenses plus $50 a month paid at the end of service. But the opportunities are great: you can help pave the way for an America in which the democratic ideal is big enough to encompass everyone.

Will you lend your abilities to people who live in need? Join the War on Poverty today!

The Final Crisis

by Dorris Alderman, Feature Staff

Dr. Gage on Life With Exams

The student who finds every exam a crisis is not realistically approaching life, according to the University's Director of Student Health Services.

Helping such students—and all others—to restore and maintain health and happiness of mind and body is the job of Dr. Robert W. Gage.

The doctor does not recommend stay-awake-stimulants at exam time. "It is a mistake to rely on things of this sort", he said. Only "occasionally under exceptional circumstances" (crisis at home for example) does he sanction their use.

According to Dr. Gage, it would be better for the student to get a good night's rest and use his "imagination".

When it comes to emotional problems, Dr. Gage does not feel that the college student is under any greater stress than another age group. But, said the doctor, "the student's values are more flexible — making stress harder to combat."

The suicide rate on this campus is low, averaging one a year, said Dr. Gage.

And hypochondriacs are a rarity. Dr. Gage said students apply the term too loosely to any student exaggerating illness.

A hypochondriac is a mental case with "the obsession that something is wrong with his body", he explained. He cited the case of a student who prepared a three page report on his heart beat for three consecutive days.

An uncommonly high rate of mononucleosis cases has been recorded on this campus, more than 150 cases last year. That's a high frequency, Dr. Gage said. The reason? It may be that cases are often wrongly diagnosed by physicians as sore throats, the medical chief said. However, "we give a lab test here," he said.

Dr. Gage listed these common mono symptoms: sore throat, enlarged lymph nodes, itchy rash and a tired feeling.

The doctor said that after every major vacation, students tramp back to school with new colds. For example, he pointed to the record high 85 bed patients after the last semester break—all with colds.

Dr. Gage said the staff — six physicians and 16 nurses — serves 250 to 300 patients a day, loading them with ammunition (22,000 aspirin last year) to combat their worst enemies.

The serious doctor smiled as he commented, "I enjoy working with students. They're a stimulating and rewarding means of practicing medicine."

CLUB & CAMPUS FASHIONS

By CHIP TOLBERT, ESQUIRE'S Fashion Editor

IN SPRING, a college man's fancy turns inevitably to thoughts of the summer holidays that lie ahead. After long, cramped, winter months indoors, campus life moves outside, takes a deep breath and relaxes. And there's no better time than now to bring your spring sportswear up to date.

SPRING FEVER and rising temperatures are a perfect backdrop for the resurgence of seersucker. Spring '65 will see some significant variations in the classic seersucker line, though the blue and white stripe will continue to be the odds-on campus favorite. Sport jackets and walk shorts will be bolder and brighter in stripes, checks, and plaids, particularly Glen plaids. In suits, the Natural Shoulder, single-breasted styling will predominate, but the double-breasted seersucker suit will put in an appearance.

SEERSUCKER PLUS BLUE PLUS—the complete range of blues from pale to Navy coordinated with yellow tones from pale lemon to deep, dusky golds—adds a lively note to your spring sportswear. Colorful shirt jacs and traditionally styled button-down shirts will feature a very fine pin stripe. And, incidentally, an excellent addition to your spring/summer wardrobe is a colorful seersucker robe for dormitory and beachwear.

WHERE THERE'S A WILT, there's a way to combat it. Generally, lightweight seersucker and cool linen blends are perfect fabrics for hot weather wear since they maintain a trim, neat appearance longest. Wash and wear features, standard in spring and summer suits, offer college men a definite and practical fashion bonus. And although Spring is a time for casual dress, it's not a time for a casual attitude toward your personal grooming habits: a neat, fashionable appearance is mandatory the year 'round.

IN LINEN APPAREL crease resistance is enhanced with a linen/polyester blend. Another plus for linen is its slightly heavier weight which makes it ideal for the Shaped Look, an important styling trend that tends to follow more closely the natural contour of the body in suits and sport jackets. Light, natural shades will predominate, but brighter colors and bolder patterns will be seen particularly in an unusual yellow-orange tone. The color coordinated linen suit with, for example, a tan and natural checked jacket and neutral toned slacks is a perfect coordination scheme. An excellent combination is the Navy blazer with white or barely discernible muted plaid slacks.

MADDER MADRAS will splash onto the campus scene in brilliant colors and striking patterns. India bleeding madras in which the colors tend to blend after washings still rates first choice in walk shorts and sport shirts. A solid madras patchwork design—the "crazy quilt" patterns—will continue to be big campus favorites.

Next month we'll round off the academic year with a survey of summer shorts, lightweight suits, summer blazers and beachwear. See you then.

Toothers and Teeth

New York, N.Y. (ED) — Ever heard of Rhazes the Persian? Or the two Arab scholars, Avicenna and Albucasis? Every time you go to your dentist you have these men to thank for their contributions to the science of tooth care.

In the ninth century, they discovered methods of filling cavities and deadening the pain of toothache with drugs made from herbs. Albucasis is said to have performed corrective operations for irregular teeth, and to have made dentures.

Even before this time, there were indications that dedicated men were hard at work in the field of dentistry. A Hieroglyphic inscription, dating from 3,000 B.C., lists a man named Hesi-Re as chief of the "toothers" and physicians. Hesi-Re's peers in Assyria used a tooth pick that was as serviceable as 20th century models.

As early as 300 B.C., Greek "toothers" were extracting teeth with pincers much like those used by dentists today. Their method, however, was considerably more crude, and often several "dental assistants" were needed to hold down the flailing limbs of "patients."

But during the Middle Ages—sometimes referred to as the Dark Ages—search for knowledge came almost to a standstill. It was actually considered evil to discover scientific truths and those who tried were often tortured and burned at the stake.

Thus dentistry then lay stagnant and mere tooth-pullers were its only proponents. You went to your barber if you wanted a tooth extracted. Or, if you could, you waited for the itinerant dentist to come riding your way.

In those days it was common practice for dentists to make the rounds of the countryside and administer their services to townspeople. Everyone would gather in the public square where one by one each was relieved of his toothaches—and his teeth—and often the roving dentists never bothered to dismount from their horses. Sometimes they pulled teeth to the accompaniment of music, a practice not uncommon today, but then the dentist had to round up his own musicians.

In the Middle Ages the superstitious also believed that a walk around a church at midnight would quiet a hurting tooth. It was common belief, too, that teeth continued to grow during one's lifetime. And if a child was born with fully developed teeth, he would know more than his share of ill fortune.

With the end of the Dark Ages, progress in dentistry began anew. Five hundred years ago, an Italian professor named Giovanni D'Arcolani created 10 rules for the preservation and care of teeth. One of these rules, still advised by all dentists, said: "The teeth must be cleaned at once, after every meal, from the particles of food left in them."

The Chinese gave us the tooth brush in 1498 which supplemented the use of the age-old tooth stick, but man was still without that precious item we take so much for granted—toothpaste!

The past 200 years have given us more ways to take good care of our teeth than all previous history combined. Practically all of the dental troubles that once plagued man are now arrested before they ever begin. Nowadays the combination of a good dentist and a good toothpaste can mean a lifetime of fewer cavities, and a brighter smile all around, too!

What's In Room 12?

by Grace E. Clark

It's about time the University of Massachusetts became informed. No, not about sex, not about Vietnam, and not about the mating habits of the northern Kalmanian tsetse fly. It's time this campus was informed of the existence of a room, about the size of an average dormitory room, in the basement of the School of Education. Most students who chance upon this room stand amazed and respond with an incredulous "I didn't know this was down here!" Do you know what's located in Room 12 of the School of Education?

Room 12 is the home of Four College Radio—WFCR—the FM educational radio station (88.5 on the dial) sponsored by Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and Smith Colleges, and the University of Massachusetts. In this room, not only do the staff members keep office, but the broadcast studio, record and tape libraries, and recording and editing equipment are also housed in this cozy corner.

What does this mean to you? Remember the Four College Civil Rights Conference held a while back? Did you wish you could have heard some of the speakers: Ossie Davis, Jesse Gray, William Strickland? WFCR broadcasts tapes of these speeches, and many other vital and interesting lectures and discussions in the Four College Area. Do you like symphony orchestras or do you have a music appreciation course and no music to appreciate? The New York Philharmonic and the Boston Symphony Orchestras are heard in concert weekly on WFCR. Opera, poetry, current events—whatever your interest, WFCR has something for you.

Be certain of one thing. WFCR is not in competition with the student radio station, WMUA. University news, campus "Interaction," and rock 'n roll are not heard on WFCR. There is room for both stations on campus — or, at least, one room.

WFCR has a listening area of fifty miles in all directions and, with its affiliation with the Eastern Educational Radio Network (WGBH-FM, Boston; WAMC-FM, Albany), reaches almost all of New England and part of New York State. This is no local operation. This is a far-reaching, valuable link in the growing network of educational radio stations, bringing music, lectures, and vital information to many people.

We should be proud to have it located here at UMass. We should at least be aware of its existence—in Room 12, School of Education.

Italian Food

The Dining Commons last Tuesday night saluted the Italian people and food, featuring selected foods prepared in the Italian style.

If student reaction is favorable, there will be additional "nationality nights" featuring foods native to other cultures. Within the limitations imposed by the feeding of nearly 5,000 students, every effort will be made to introduce students to new foods and eating customs.

Rose L. Sorce, author of The Complete Italian Cook Book, said, "The food he has wrested from nature is not only food but an affirmation of the joy and goodness of life... Italian feast days are feasts indeed ... with the native ingredient of Italian cookery being gusto."

The food served in the Dining Commons included Minestrone Soup, Chicken Cacciatore, chicken prepared in a clear Italian sauce. The sauce from the spaghetti was prepared with traditional Italian seasoning, and took two days to prepare. Another feature was the dessert, Spumoni, meaning "big foam," a traditional Italian ice cream. Ice cream originated in Italy.

Students leaving the Commons were full and pleased.

Editor Discusses Cuba

Dave Dellinger, editor of Liberation Magazine, spoke in Mahar Auditorium on Wednesday on the subject of Cuba under the sponsorship of the Young Independents. Mr. Dillinger has made numerous trips to Cuba, the latest being in 1964.

In his speech, Mr. Dellinger accused the U.S. of inaccurate reportage of happenings in Cuba. Admitting his dissatisfaction with some developments, he nonetheless compared Cuban spirit with that of the civil rights movement in the South.

UM Sociology Prof. Gets Awards For Book

Dr. Milton M. Gordon, professor of sociology at the University, has received two national awards for his book, "Assimilation in American Life," published last year by Oxford University Press.

A selection committee, composed of Ashley Montagu, Pearl Buck, Lillian Smith and Oscar Handlin, selected his book for an Anisfield-Wolf award. Dr. Gordon also was selected to receive the Brotherhood Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, Inc., for his book.

The Anisfield-Wolf awards in race relations, sponsored by the "Saturday Review," are presented each year to the authors of outstanding "works in every field which in any way contribute to the betterment of race relations." Awards are given for both scholarly and creative works.

Past recipients of Anisfield-Wolf awards include Gunnar Myrdal, Alan Paton, Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., and the distinguished geneticist Theodosius Dobzhansky.

The National Conference of Christians and Jews, Inc., cited Dr. Gordon's book as an "outstanding contribution to the cause of brotherhood and better human relations."

The national conference cited Dr. Gordon's "Assimilation in American Life" as a work which "penetrates far below the surface elements of cultural pluralism and a 'melting pot' concept of American society to open new vistas in the field of human relations."

Dr. Gordon will accept the NCCJ's Brotherhood Award at a luncheon in New York City on Friday, May 21.

Before joining the sociology department at UMass, Dr. Gordon taught at the University of Pennsylvania and at Haverford College. He has also been a visiting professor at Wellesley College.

He is a graduate of Bowdoin College and received his Ph.D. degree from Columbia University.

A Guggenheim Fellow in 1960-61, Dr. Gordon has served as a consultant of race relations to the city of Philadelphia, to the Albert M. Greenfield Center at the University of Pennsylvania and to Brandeis University.

Racial Imbalance May Lose Hub's School Aid

BOSTON — Legislation was filed late Tuesday by the State Board of Education which would allow the state to withhold all state money from communities having racially imbalanced schools. The measure will require a four-fifths vote for admittance at this session of the General Court.

$4 Million in Boston

If the legislation becomes law, Boston could lose $4,000,000 a year; Springfield could lose $1,500,000. In addition to these sums, under the proposal, all aid for school building construction could be withheld by the state.

A recent study of an advisory commission to the state Board of Education said that Boston and Springfield have racially imbalanced schools.

The legislation proposes that the state Board of Education be empowered to judge whether a city or town has a racially imbalanced school. The definition in the legislation is "a ratio between Negro and other students in public schools which is sharply out of balance with the racial composition of the society in which Negro children study, serve and work."

Would Change Areas

The legislation would have all school committees in the state review attendance areas and change attendance areas to eliminate or reduce racial imbalance. The state Board of Education would notify a school committee when racial imbalance exists in its system, giving details and specific recommendations. The board would state the time in which the imbalance should be eliminated or reduced.

If the school committee fails to act within the specified time, the state Board of Education would notify the appropriate state officials to withhold all or part of funds for aid to education. The school committee would be given 30 days in which to appeal from the state board decision in proceedings with the state board.

In another section of the proposed law, the state Board of Education would notify the School Building Assistance Commission not to give money for new schools if the community has not made every effort to eliminate or reduce racial imbalance. The same appeal procedure to the state Board of Education is provided.

In the final section of the legislation, the state Board of Education is empowered to establish an advisory committee on racial imbalance which would serve without compensation other than expenses.

Forms Ready For Men's Judiciary

Applications are now available from Heads of Residence for Area Judiciary.

Each house council, upon receiving the application shall review all applicants and forward the applications with remarks to the Men's Affairs Committee of the Senate. For areas 1 and 2 there will be three juniors, three sophomores and one freshman.

The Area Judiciary, the assisting body to the Men's Judiciary, will have the power to try all violations of University Regulations in its own specific area which are referred to them by the appropriate officials.

Applictions must be returned by 5 p.m. on May 5 and selections will be made on May 8 at 1 p.m. in the Council Chambers.

UM Co-ed Wins Award For Fashions

Pamela Joy Shaw, current winner of the Singer Sewing Young Stylemaker Contest, has recently been chosen out of a group of over 200 girls to occupy a position on the Jordan Marsh 1965 College Fashion Board representing the University of Massachusetts.

As a member of the board, Pamela will assume certain responsibilities over the coming summer months. She will do informal modeling in and around the Boston stores, she will help sell new fall fashions to perspective college girls, and will help these girls to coordinate their college wardrobes.

A Fashion Retailing major at the University, Pamela feels that this opportunity will leave her with much invaluable experience to be used in future years.

Army ROTC Has New Ceremonial Rifle Squad

The Grenadier firing squad is shown rehearsing prior to participation in a local military funeral. With the large number of veterans reaching old age and with a shortage of local military units, the Army ROTC has been called upon to assist in the performance of military funerals for deceased veterans.

To be selected as a member of a firing squad or as a body bearer is one of the most cherished duties a member of the Armed Forces can perform. These prerequisites were applied to the members of the Grenadiers and Bay State Special Forces who have volunteered for and have been selected as the Ceremonial unit.

Lacrosse Men Lose Twice

by John Cunningham

It has been a frustrating week for the UMass Varsity Lacrosse Team as the team dropped a close game, Saturday, April 24, to Tufts (7-6), and was defeated Tuesday, April 27 by Holy Cross (9-4). These two losses give the Redmen a 2-4 record for the 1965 regular season, with six more games left to play.

Four goals in the fourth quarter were not enough for the Redmen to be able to neutralize the Tufts attack. The men from Medford were led by Bob Frost, who scored 3 goals including 2 in the last quarter. UMass was never more than two points behind in the game, but, after Faraci of Tufts broke the 2-2 tie in the second quarter, the Redmen could not find the back-to-back goals that they needed in order to pull even with Tufts. For the remainder of the game they had to be content with alternating between being one or two goals behind. Dick Pulsiver scored the last UMass goal at 10:12 of the fourth quarter. However Tufts managed to hold on for the final five minutes to win 7-6.

• • • •

Holy Cross started too quickly for the Redmen and picked up its first win of the season. At the start of the second half, with the Crusaders leading 6-1, Dick Pulsiver scored two goals in succession. A third goal by Kevin O'Brien put the Redmen within two goals of Holy Cross. However, O'Brien's goal proved to be the last for the Redmen as they were shut out in the fourth quarter, while the Crusaders scored three more to put the game on ice.

UMass goals were scored by: Dick Pulsiver (2), Howard Goffman and Kevin O'Brien.

the measures because they create a "degree of inequality."

HE POINTED OUT that "there are non-senators who have a good deal of knowledge about the Senate," and proposed that they also be given some recognition on ballots.

The Senate passed both amendments, however, and the words "incumbent" and "present senator" will appear on subsequent ballots.

Early in the meeting Senator James Allen (Commuter) announced that the Faculty Senate vetoed a Student Senate recommendation for a trial Spring Day.

Senator Allen cited the faculty's justification that as a state university we have to answer to the state legislature for any "closing down."

Allen concluded his report by saying that "there will be no legal Spring Day this year."

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the Senate recommended that more information concerning the proposed hockey rink be presented, and postponed bringing a bill requiring dormitory dues before the trustees for final approval.

The postponement was due to objections put forth by dormitory presidents, so the proposal will be put on a one year trial basis before final approval.

Vitalo Sharp

Frosh Nip Rhode Island, 2-1

by Al Rice

Superb pitching carried the freshmen baseball team to its second win of the season Wednesday when Rusty Vitallo threw a no-hitter for eight and a third innings in winning 2-1 at Rhode Island.

The Redmen scored a run in the first inning and then held on to a one run lead until they fattened it with one more score in the top of the ninth. It proved to be a valuable run because the Rams took advantage of a walk, a wild pitch, and a passed ball to score in the bottom of the same inning.

Hagan Andersen started off the first inning with a one out single to left and John Canty followed with a long double to right that sent Andersen to third. The cleanup batter, Don Ferron, hit a fly behind first that three men went after. The Rams first baseman caught the ball while falling, but Andersen had tagged at third and was waiting for the catch. He scored the run easily because of the difficult throw the first baseman had to make.

THE REDMEN clung to the slim lead the rest of the way until a few more base hits added a ninth inning run. Dick Hale singled and Vin Donohue grounded a single into the hole that the shortstop knocked down but had no play on. Vitallo laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt after two unsuccessful attempts in earlier innings. With two men in scoring position John Lent grounded a ball toward shortstop by way of the pitcher's beg that was booted around letting Hale score.

The second run was helpful since Vitallo was touched for another Rhody score. He had been in trouble in the second with two walks and a hit batsman, and in the fourth on an outfield error, and 2 walks but both times plays at the plate ended the threat. In the second a cut-off throw by Hagan Andersen nipped Jack Coppolino trying to score on a double steal. A little grounder in front of the plate in the fourth ended that frame and began a string of 14 straight men retired by Vitallo.

The streak ended when Coppolino walked with one down in the ninth and Bob McKenney followed with a base hit over second. A passed ball moved both men into scoring position, and a walk followed that filled the bases. A pitch to Ralph Grizzi sailed in the dirt in front of the plate and rolled to the backstop letting Coppolino score. A pop to short and a bounder to second ended the game.

Smith Blanks Rams

Redmen Regain Yan-Con Lead

by Mike Gould

The Redmen ran into a tiger in Holy Cross pitcher Bud Knittel and succumbed to the Crusaders, 3-1, in a game played April 27 on the UMass Freshman Field.

Knittel, a converted outfielder, was overpowering. He struck out 10, walked none, and gave the Redmen four hits in an unforgettable performance.

The Holy Cross hurler had to be great to win, for UMass' Jim Ritchie was also superb on the mound. The Redman righthander was a victim of some shabby fielding, without which the game would have completely changed its complexion.

Holy Cross started off as if they wanted to wrap this one up early. A throwing error by Jim Babyak, a walk, and a single loaded the bases with none out in the first. Ritchie then threw called third strikes past HC's Wendelken and Brassil and forced Manning to pop to third base.

The Redmen also loaded the bases with none out in the first. John Peacock singled to right and reached third as the HC first baseman could not handle a throw on Jim Babyak's grounder. Babyak took second on the play. Terry Swanson was passed, loading them up for Al Nordberg. Al's best was a grounder to the right side which was turned into a force play at second. Dennis DellaPiana ended a great opportunity to break things open by grounding into a double play started by the shortstop.

THE REDMEN missed another good chance to score in the second when neither Paul Caisse nor Ritchie could score Karl Kamena who had tripled with none out.

Ritchie left two Crusaders stranded in the second, but in the third inning, with two outs and nobody on, the visitors rallied. With Brassil on first via a single, HC's Manning looped a fly into short center. DellaPiana, UMass centerfielder, tried to make, of all things, a bare handed catch of the ball. His attempt failed, and when leftfielder Nordberg, backing up the play, failed to pick the ball up on his first try, Brassil scored, and Manning took second. HC catcher McCarthy scored Manning with a line single to left.

These two runs were all that Knittel needed. The tall righthander easily retired 15 Redmen in succession after Kamena's triple.

Not to be overshadowed, Jim Ritchie retired 14 Crusaders in a row, from the fourth inning to the ninth.

UMass' best chance to tie the contest came in the seventh when, with one out, DellaPiana beat out an infield roller. Curiously, Kuczynski tried to sacrifice the runner to second. Knittel fielded the bunt and threw wildly to second, DellaPiana reaching third. Knittel then bore down, fanning Kamena and forcing Caisse to ground into a force play.

Holy Cross upped its lead to 3-1 in the ninth on a two-out double by Armstrong. This was the only extra base hit of the game off Ritchie.

The Redmen got the tying run at the plate in the ninth when DellaPiana beat out his second infield hit, but pinch-hitter Mike Brita's hard shot was hit directly to the shortstop, who threw to first to end the game.

It was a deserving victory for HC's Knittel and a tough loss for UMass' Ritchie. Tough losses are becoming all too frequent for Redmen pitchers. The team has not been producing the key hits and is making costly errors on the field.

Soph pitcher Bill Smith.

Holding Holy Cross to three runs was quite an accomplishment, as was scoring against them. Holy Cross had shut out their opponents 35 - 0 through their first three games.

The Redmen have yet to win a game out of the conference. They have lost three.

Bill Smith ran his string of scorless innings to 17, as he shut out conference foe Rhode Island, 1-0 April 28 at Kingston.

The junior righthander threw just 22 called balls out of the 86 pitches he threw during the nine innings, while notching his second victory without a defeat. Smith walked none and gave up eight hits.

THE REDMEN were held to just six hits by URI's Nick Stenhouse, but managed to score the necessary run in the fifth on consecutive two out triples by Babyak and Swanson. The Redmen stranded men on third base three times during the game, as they failed to provide Smitty with any breathing room.

The Rams nearly turned things around in the last of the ninth. With two outs and the bases empty, the home team suddenly came to life. A pair of singles put the tying run on second base. Smith ended the game by snaring a hot shot off the bat off Stenhouse.

Pitching has thus far dominated Redmen Yankee Conference games. In their four conference games, the Redmen have given up but five runs while scoring only nine.

UMass is now 3-1 in the Yan-Con, 3-4 overall.

Bill Smith leads the Redmen pitching staff with these awesome statistics: two wins, no losses, .500 e.r.a., one walk, seven strikeouts. Carl Boteze has pitched 23 innings and sports a 2.35 e.r.a. Jim Ritchie's e.r.a. after 16 innings is 3.37. The above figures indicate a strong Redmen pitching staff.

Unfortunately, Earl Lorden has not been getting the hitting which he expected. The Redmen averages are as follows: Della Piana .308, Peacock .259, Swanson .259, Nordberg .250, Babyak .231, Caisse .215, Kamena .182, Kuczynski .083. The overall average for the eight regulars is .225. The team has not collected more than eight hits in a single game and is averaging 1.71 runs per ballgame. The Redmen, however, are tied for the Yan-Con lead!

Chadbourne Dorm; IM champs in football and basketball. Chet Gladchuck presented the dual award to the dorm in a ceremony held Tuesday night.

Intramural Report

A major upset highlighted the softball action in the IFC Leagues as AEP outlasted TKE, last year's campus champs, in a 3-2 thriller. QTV, ASP, and PMD used 14, 13, and 12 hit barrages respectively to overwhelm PSK, ATG, and PSD, 18-3, 13-7, and 14-5. In other action TEP and BKP had some big innings to get by TC and ZN, 10-3, and 6-1. As a result, the leaders in Leagues "A" and "B" are QTV, TEP, LCA, PMD, and AEPi, with identical 2-0 records.

THE OLD TIMERS, Vicky's, and the Arnold Air Society climaxed the Independent League schedule by squeaking out one-run decisions in the last inning over the Pitmen, the Breadwinners, and the Chem Club. The C. E.'s erupted for 17 hits as they bombed the Inn Keepers 17-9. The hard luck story of the night went to the I. E. M. E. Club, who outhit the Foresters 14-13, but lost 15-2.

University Announces New Advisor to Pre-Law Students

by Paul Rodman, Staff Reporter

The Provost's office recently announced the appointment of Kenneth J. Suid as Pre-Law Advisor to University students.

In conjunction with the Pre-Law Association, Suid will coordinate law school admissions procedures. This new procedure is scheduled to take effect next September to benefit law school candidates of the class of 1966.

Suid will meet with students planning to apply to law schoo' beginning this week on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 2:00 p.m. until 4 p.m., to collect background material on each student and begin his individual files.

THE NEW PROGRAM will centralize the processing of law school recommendations. Faculty members will be asked to write only one recommendation for each student. The Pre-Law advising office will then make copies to distribute to law schools to which a student has applied.

A library is now ready in Suid's office on the third floor of South College containing bulletins and sample applications from all accredited law schools in the country.

In addition to counseling students and keeping records of University graduates' law school performances, Suid plans to personally introduce students to law school representatives when they visit the campus under the asupices of the Pre-Law Association.

"THE DYNAMIC GROWTH of the University," said Suid, "has made imperative the development of a smooth, efficient application processing procedure that will still retain individual rapport among students, faculty and law schools."

Suid is a graduate of Princeton University, class of 1962. In addition to graduate work at the University of Wisconsin, he was involved in pre-law advising there. Before coming to the University in January of this year to work with the Provost's office, Suid worked for the federal government in Washington.

FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES and juniors are requested to sign up in Suid's office in South College on either of the three days mentioned above as soon as possible so that a file may be begun for them immediately. "This is especially important for members of the class of 1966," remarked Suid.

The registration of pre-law students will continue until the end of the present academic year, but it was stressed that it was to a student's benefit that he register as soon as possible.

Senate To Investigate '4.0' Grading System

by Peter Hendrickson, News Editor

An Ad Hoc Student Senate Committee is investigating the advisability of changing the U-Mass 4.0 grading system to one which will indicate a more accurate representation of grades.

Co-chairman Jerry Benezra's committee has polled administrators in other colleges to find out their experience with a straight numerical or the "plus minus" system that the committee is to propose.

The polls have shown that a new system "is easy to administer but difficult to initiate." Benezra commented that this "is not a just criterion for keeping a system." He continued saying that "those that found the 4.0 unsatisfactory thought that it was not the best indication of the student's work."

"PRESSURE FOR CHANGE from the students is to be expected with any system though," said Benezra, whose commitee will poll both faculty members and students this week to gauge the campus opinion on the grade system.

The commitee needs a good return as a small one would invalidate the poll. They urge students and faculty members to give careful consideration to the polls which may be obtained from Senators.

Faculty will get the polls through the University bulletin and commuters may use the poll to be published in the Collegian. The committee requests that the polls be returned to senators or to the senate office in the Student Union.

RESEARCH HAS BEEN done in Educational Journals to discover the pros and cons of the many types of marking systems. The committee has also received professional assistance from Raymond Castlepoggi of the Office of Institutional Studies.

Tappings Set For Tuesday At The Cage

Red, white, blue and striped jackets will be changing backs at a quick pace tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The campus honor societies will tap their members for the 1965-66 school years. The final decisions on who will wear what jackets next year have already been made by Mortarboard, Adelphia, Scrolls, Revelers and the Maroon Keys.

A new honor society will see its first initiation this year as the Interfraternity Council will designate a number of sophomore fraternity men to be known as Campus Guides. The new group will function as the official undergraduate guides to visitors to the University campus.

The Revelers and Adelphia are the only two groups to tap their new membership from more than one class. Revelers taps men and women from the sophomore, junior and senior classes. Adelphia taps junior and senior men.

In addition to the tappings much else is scheduled for the evening. The third annual Metawampe Award, signifying outstanding teaching ability and dedicated interest in the welfare of students will be presented to a University faculty member. The first two recipients of the award have been Albert Madeira and H. Leland Varley.

Bob O'Leary will open the program by welcoming the audience to the event which is sponsored by the senior class. O'Leary is president of the class of 1965.

Joseph Marcus, assistant Dean of the School of Engineering, will deliver the keynote address of the evening.

A number of scholarship announcements will also be made. Dean of Students William Field will present the Distinguished Service Awards to members of the graduating class. According to Dennis Bushe, chairman of

IFC Raises Sammy To Chapter Status

by Steve Gordon, Day Editor

The Interfraternity Council last week recognized the Sigma Alpha Mu Colony as a full member of that body. The IFC recognition of Sammy followed closely a similar move by the University administration.

Bruce Bernstein, President of Sigma Alpha Mu Colony, told the Collegian that "we are pleased with all the help the administration and the IFC have given to us, and we look forward to becoming an integral and responsible part of the University's fraternity system."

BRUCE BERNSTEIN President Of SAM

According to Bernstein, the fraternity "is making plans for immediate installation by the Sigma Alpha Mu national."

Both the University administration and the IFC were favorably impressed by the progress the Sammies had made this year. They cited the Sammies' excellent housing situation, along with their achieving fourth place in this year's Greek Week pageant, as prime examples of this progress.

The Sammy Chapter at Umass, founded as a colony by seven men on January 13, 1964, will be the second New England chapter, the other being at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The Sammies now number 35 men, and will house a majority of them in the fall at their house at 387 No. Pleasant St.

Sigma Alpha Mu, a large National fraternity, was founded at the City College of New York in 1909. Including the UMass chapter, Sammy is now represented on 54 campuses in the United States and Canada.

Among the more famous Sammies are Alan Sherman, of recording fame, and Charles Goren, a world famous bridge authority.

National initiation will culminate a year-long drive by the Sammies to show the IFC, the University administration, the Sammy National, and the University community as a whole that they are capable of handling the responsibilities of a fraternity.

Viet Nam Poll Data Compiled by Students

Graduate and undergraduate students in Dr. John Fenton's Public Opinion course have recently compiled data from a public opinion survey of the UMass student body conducted in March.

The survey was a random sample consisting of 1% of all University students and was designed to reveal student opinion on Viet Nam.

Efforts are now being made to correlate opinion with such background factors as religion, soecioeconomic status, political affiliation, degree of interest in current events and substantive knowledge of the situation in Viet Nam.

As a result of the sampling technique used, the following results of the survey should be statistically valid. Only 20% of those interviewed were satisfied with U.S. policy in Viet Nam, and 53% did not think that the public had been getting enough information.

62% felt that the U.S. should stay in South Viet Nam, and in another question, 64% indicated that negotiations should be pursued if possible.

49% believed that the U.S. could stop a Communist takeover in South East Asia, and 49% also thought that the U.S. might be drawn into war with Communist China over South Viet Nam.

The most frequent reason given to explain U.S. assistance to South Viet Nam was to "protect people from alien rule."

Finally, six individuals favored the employment of nuclear weapons in Viet Nam.

One section of the questionnaire was designed to determined how well respondents were actually informed about the situation in Viet Nam.

10% were well informed (correctly answered at least 8 of ten simple questions), 20% were informed (5-7 correct) and the rest were uninformed with six students answering no questions.

The 19 pledges of Sigma Delta Tau joined together in a car wash last Saturday. The pledge project was to raise money for the house library fund.

The Week In Review

THE WORLD

THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

The United States sent 4,000 troops into the Dominican Republic last week to protect American lives threatened by rebel forces trying to gain power. Since 1865 this country has been ruled by a series of strongmen presidents interspersed with acute chaotic political periods during one of which the U. S. entered into the picture in 1916 when U. S. proposed fiscal reforms were opposed by certain leaders. This led to a U. S. establishment of military government until General Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina was elected president. In 1961, after a 31 year rule, he was assassinated. Since then a new period of chaos reigned, leaving the country with a succession of four new governments in three years. In 1963, Dr. Juan Bosch was elected president in the first free election in 38 years. Then, after seven months he was ousted by a pro-Castro group led by Dr. Juan Cabral, who failed to gain support of the people. Last Saturday pro-Bosch supporters seized the government's Santo-Dominican radio and another radio station and declared the government under Dr. Bosch again. Street fighting broke out. Since then 2,500 Americans have been evacuated and over 1,000 Dominicans have been killed, and the U. S. faces the problems and accusations of intervention.

THE NATION

ECONOMY

In his annual economic and budget message, President Johnson told the nation in January that, "The state of our economy is excellent. However, some economists expected more unemployment and a steel strike. Last week President Johnson said, "Our expanding economy will produce higher Federal revenues this year than we estimated." This is the result of an increase in business pace and a decrease in spending is expected to strengthen our government's economic position. Also, the United Steelworkers of America and major steel companies reached an interim agreement thus diverting a steel strike temporarily. In order to arrange this the companies have agreed to a 11.5 cent increase which is half of the wage increase demanded by the unons. The strike deadline is September 1.

THE POLL TAX

The controversy over a quick abolition of poll taxes was threatened by new controversy last week. The bill is based on the 15th ammendment which prohibits discrimination on account of race or creed. Attorney Gen. Katzenbach argued that it might be difficult to prove that the poll tax was used to discriminate. Instead it has been decided that legal action will be instituted to get a ruling from the Supreme Court.

THE STATE

REDEVELOPMENT

The Boston City Council met last week to discuss rehabilitation of Charlestown and the removal of the "El" structure under the direction of the Boston Redevelopment Authority. There were violent discussions, led by Mrs. Katherine Craven, against the BRA plans because of the fear of replacing low rent districts by high priced apartments such as those in the West End redevelopment project.

SALES TAX

Governor Volpe campaigned in Worcester for a limited sales tax on non-essential products while attacking proposed Democratic alternatives to his revenue program. So far, he has received little support from many community leaders, because this would include a boost in income tax and a one-cent increase on gasoline.

CRIME COMMISSION

The Legislature is now considering lengthening the existence of the Crime Commission, headed by Alfred Gardner, scheduled to terminate in June. Atty. Gen. Edward W. Brooke in an unprecedented closed meeting of the Legislature told the lawmakers that they must either change their image or settle for another crime commission. Brooke asked for more power for his office, hinting that without it the Crime Commission could not be terminated.

THE CAMPUS

MAHAR DEDICATION

Sumner G. Whittier, former lieutenant governor of Massachusetts, and John E. Powers, Clerk of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, were the principal speakers at the formal dedication of the Ralph C. Mahar Auditorium last week. President John W. Lederle presided over the program, which was attended by many dignitaries. Lederle called the late Sen. Mahar "a man of foresight and vigor." He called the dedication a "simple sincere tribute" to a "true friend of education."

UNIVERSITY TRUSTEES

Trustees of the University of Massachusetts won an important legislative battle as the State Senate voted against transferring control of the new Boston branch from the trustees to the State Department of Education. The control amendment, which would have required the approval of the Department of Education on all fiscal contracts, was attached to the $16 million appropriation bill to allow UMass to buy the Boston Gas Company for the new Boston branch.

METAWAMPE AWARD

Provisions for a one thousand dollar stipend and a lectureship to accompany the annual Metawampe Award have been approved by the Senior Class Executive Council. The third presentation of the award, this year with the accompanying stipend check, will be made at Student Leaders Night tomorrow at Curry Hicks Cage. Linda Fisher, chairman of the Metawampe selection committee will make the presentation at the senior class-sponsored evening.

This Week's Senate Preview

by Jim Foudy, Senate Reporter

Besides the swearing in of new class Officers and Senators-at-large, the Senate Chambers will be the scene of Senate-officer elections Wednesday. The four posts of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer are open to any Student Senator.

The Senate will also consider legislation by Senators Donovan and Berlin proposing that the Student Senate join the United States National Student Association.

The bill calls for a $100 appropriation for national and regional dues to insure membership until Oct. 1, 1965.

The Senate will also take up a bill to continue the life of the Ad-Hoc Committee on the Publication Board. The board is being extended so that a policy statement for a Student Communications Board may be drawn up and presented to the Senate by Nov. 15, 1965.

'The Sublime To The Ridiculous'—Review of Campus Varieties

by Dave Moore, Feature Staff

Campus Varieties opened HER Weekend for the first time in two years Friday and Saturday at Bowker Auditorium minus a publicized one-act play and one-third admission charge. A two-act last minute conscription replaced the anonymous campus satire along with two other previously scheduled plays by University students.

Reveler-sponsored, the evening was a three-act progression from the sublime to the ridiculous.

DIALOGUE FOR The Performance, a dramatic poem by David Axelrod, was weighty and overwritten with the attempt at a "drugged and dreamy" effect frustrated by a belabored depth of conversation and soliloquy.

The narcotics situation and the moral relationship conflicts faced by Peter (David Blaisdell) and Jean (Carol Willard) succeeded as the "presentation of ideas . . . and images." But in an effort to handle one of life's struggles in a unique way, "The Performance" failed to embrace the audience, to involve it emotionally in the struggle. It lacked a stage vehicle, and the power of its significance was consequently lost.

"THE GIFT" had a strong impact well directed by graduate student Ken Bordner. Joe Augusta, a senior English major, effectively juxtaposes the war-hardened spiritual strength of a frail tobacco store proprietor with the hard crust of a town bully. The result is thoroughly captivating with a well written twist to the reforming theme.

Peter Goodman, as shop keeper Jonah, does an admirable job portraying the war horrors which bring him to offer "The Gift" to Bart, played by Peter Hopkins. Peter held back during his final "break," but is otherwise a convincing bully.

VICKY, THE DAUGHTER, is a fine example of a world "too absorbed with the past to live in the present . . ."

Staging of "The Gift" is dynamic in its simplicity. Make-up and costuming represented a clear exaggeration of character types in a universal context.

"The Ice Cream Parlor," by Joe Krausman, follows as a ridicuous musical farce. The theme, a study in the worth of one who lives an undecided existence between heaven and hell and the worth of taking a stand in life, is good. The production itself is a skit par excellence.

KRAUSMAN'S WIT AND satirical ability must be applauded. His worth as a playwright could be questioned. That "The Ice Cream Parlor" may have stepped on a few religious or prudsh toes is of minor consequence, and no basis for artistic judgment. The many puns and ludicrous lines could have been written by a fifth grader, with sufficient wit.

1. Now that graduation's getting close, have you given any thought to the kind of work you'd like to do?

I want to work for The Good of Mankind.

2. I might have suspected.

I'll probably grow a beard.

3. Is it required?

It helps. And I'll certainly need a pair of sandals.

4. What do you expect to earn?

All I ask is the satisfaction of knowing I'm helping to Build a Better World.

5. I'll be doing much the same thing. I've also lined up a job that affects society in a positive way. And if I do good, I'll move up, and my decisions will be even more important in the scheme of things.

But where's your beard? What about sandals?

6. You don't need them in Equitable's development program. All you need is an appetite for challenge and responsibility, and the desire to do the best possible job. The pay is tops, too.

You know, I'm afraid a beard would itch—could you get me an interview with Equitable?

Finally Fine Arts, Until . . .

In a large university, the so-called "cultural" aspects surrounding the student tend to be smothered by the more immediate demands upon him — particularly his studies and extra-curricular activities. As a result of this situation our university has made a sincere attempt to make the pleasures of fine arts easily accessible to the student. The most obvious example of this practice is the numerous art exhibits on display in Bartlett Hall.

Until this past semester the program has been successful, simply by students examining the works as they pass by to classes. Unfortunately, the situation has been altered this semester by a few irresponsible individuals who have stolen pieces on display. The thefts include a ceramic piece by Berity, a photograph by Callahan, and most recently two water colors by Professor Amlund.

As a result of these thefts, the most recent exhibit was taken down, and understandably so; for, no person wants to sacrifice an item to which he has devoted so much time, only to have someone walk off with it, perhaps to decorate his room, or simply to take it on a childish whim.

The general consensus of the members of the art department is that the displays are too valuable an educational measure to sacrifice, consequently, the exhibits will continue. However, there will be a slight change. Guards will be on duty as often as possible to watch the coming exhibition beginning May 9th and running until the 22nd. Since it would be impossible to keep the lobby of Bartlett guarded constantly, it is hoped that a repeat of the thefts will not occur. In the event that it should, it will be necessary to stop the displays completely. This would mean that the entire college community would suffer because of a few individuals.

Since it is unfortunate for such a large number of people to be punished because of some thoughtless person, it is hoped that those persons at fault will realize the serious- of the situation, and that there will not be a repeat performance of these thefts.

On the college campus it seems hardly an unreasonable demand to ask each member involved to be responsible for his own conduct, particularly, when it concerns the property of others.

Spirit of Spring Day

May...80 - degree weather...sunbathing...swimming...spring fever and the full moon.

The anticipation and the restlessness...Wake up in the morning—is this the day? Listening for the bells...not today.

Finally the bells...is it really true? The smiles, the whoops and the hollers...pick up the books and go. The relief—a day with no worries about impending finals, work to be done...

Infectious enthusiasm which spreads across the campus—down to the pond! Leaping and screaming and nobody minds...Music on the south terrace...the throbbing rhythm of the band...let your hair down and dance.

Blankets making splashes of color among the green of the grass ...transistor radios alternating with twanging guitars...sunshine and blue skies.

The long hot afternoon...a lazy swim...occasional noisy outbursts from the more energetic groups...

Off to the woods or back to campus...Take a shower, get the sand from between your toes...dressed and off to town for supper... a hundred newly sunburned faces and scraped knees...

Back to campus...more dancing...friends and fun... a full moon... noise near and far...

The night must end—and does so, reluctantly...back to the dorms ...Goodnight, its been a wonderful Spring Day.

Counseling Procedure

Students who want help from their advisors in settling on courses for the fall term, 1965, have been asked to consult their advisors during office hours in the week preceding Counseling Day, May 11.

Representatives of the Student Senate met with Associate Dean Wagner and the assistant deans of the College of Arts & Sciences in order to press certain student concerns about Counseling Day in particular and academic advising in general. It was agreed that counseling prior to pre-registration should be strengthened.

The chief advisors of the College, in their meeting on April 22, decided that students should be encouraged this semester to use the established office hours to get certain decisions made before the rush of May 11. The chief advisors also asked that students and their advisers make appointments in the week following May 11 in any cases which call for some further consideration of the pre-registration decisions.

Games Area Critique

The bowling pins fall over by themselves; the pins are split full-length; and the caps fly off! This is but part of the despicable condition of the Games Area.

After bowling, students are seen going to wash the dirt and grime off their hands acquired from dirty bowling balls. Why are they dirty? Because the pin setters were not cleaned last year as they should have been. Well, maybe ping-pong would be better.

However, one is immediately presented with a choice of wooden paddles that are well abused. Upon closer inspection it appears that they are not wood but at one time were covered with sandpaper! Of the two or three rubber paddles, all have the rubber peeling off. The ping-pong balls are readily observed to be of cheap construction. They have no action, are easily dented or split. The tables are in equally bad condition being chipped on the edges, Pool anyone.

Alas! The cues are warped, held together by masking tape, or broken at the tip. The cloth on the tables is ripped, the banks are uneven, and in many places the cloth is worn away completely.

According to informed sources the bowling pins should have been replaced at the beginning of this semester and the pool table cloths should have been replaced six months ago.

These despicable conditions may be argued on the basis of profit but the Games Area is not run on a profit basis. It is paid for by the students for their enjoyment. Profit should be considered only secondary to the quality of the facilities.

S.C.O.P.E. Project:

To be black in America is unfortunate: to be black in the South is a crime. The penalty for this crime is certain and severe—life imprisonment in a gigantic cell. Outside the cell, people go to school and college, run the government that decides your fate and make enough money so that their children can follow in their footsteps. Inside the cell you watch and—having no vote, no school and no money —you do the best you can, and wait.

In the last four years, some cracks have been made in this wall. The Summer Community Organization and Political Education (S.C.O.P.E.) project intends to widen these cracks. The SCOPE project is part of the program of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's Voter Registration and Political Education Department, headed by Mr. Hosea L. Williams. SCOPE is recruiting 500 or more persons from academic communities of America to work for ten weeks this summer in 75 black-belt rural counties and six urban counties. A major goal of SCOPE is to establish links between communities in the South and college campuses throughout the nation.

The SCOPE project will be an intentional community involved in a task of breaking down the walls of political disfranchisement, educational deprivation and poverty—and to help local leadership develop and organize the community.

On Wednesday evening, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union there will be a meeting for those interested either in helping the program on this campus or desiring to become a S.C.O.P.E. worker in the South this summer.

Art Thefts

To the Editor:

During the past week two pieces of art were stolen from the University Theatre's exhibition in Bartlett Hall Lobby.

Our designer, Mr. Almund was kind enough to loan us more than twenty scene designs from his personal works. He and other staff members spent much time in preparing the display.

It was therefore with much regret that we withdrew Mr. Almund's fine exhibition.

We find it difficult to believe that members of this community could be responsible for such actions. We would hope that a college education could at least foster a respect for art if not for personal property.

It is quite possible considering the experiences of the Speech and Art Departments that this type of exhibition will no longer be made available to the students.

If anyone has information [illegible] please contact the Speech Department or the Campus Police.

UCLA Botanist Here To Lecture For Week

Dr. Karl C. Hamner, professor of botany at the University of California, Los Angeles, and an internationally known authority on plant nutrition, will be in residence at UMass this week, May 3 through May 7.

The UCLA scientist's visit is being sponsored jointly by the Universty and Mount Holyoke College.

During his stay, Dr. Hamner will present technical talks to students and staff members at both schools.

He will also give three public lectures. The first of these, on "Photoperiodism and Biological Clocks," is scheduled for Tuesday, May 4 at 4:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Morrill Science Center.

Dr. Hamner will speak again in Morrill auditorium on Tuesday at 8 p.m. on "Biological Clocks."

On Thursday, May 6, at 7:45 p.m. Dr. Hamner will lecture on "Time Measurement in Biology" at Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College.

A University of California (Berkeley) graduate, Dr. Hamner received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago. In addition to teaching at UCLA, he has taught at the University of Chicago and has held positions with the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Hamner has contributed numerous articles on plant nutrition, photoperiodism and circadian rhythms to leading scientific journals.

Major Change Meetings Scheduled

The College of Arts and Sciences will sponsor six meetings for students who are considering a change of major. The meetings will be held in Bartlett Hall at 11:15 a.m. on Tuesday, May 4, and Thursday, May 6.

At each of the six meetings, a faculty spokesman for each of the majors will make a brief statement of the professional opportunities in his field and the requirement to complete the major. Then there will be time for students to ask questions of each of the speakers.

It is expected that these meetings can be helpful to the students, primarily freshmen and sophomores, who question their present choice of major and are considering a change. Students are invited to move from meeting to meeting as their interests may dictate.

There will be three meetings on each of the two days. The schedule is at right.

UMass Music Chairman Appointed to Summer Post

Dr. Philip Bezanson, head of the University music department, has been named composer in residence this summer at the Chautauqua Institution, Chautanqua, N. Y.

The UMass music chairman will teach courses in music composition and theory at Chautauqua's school of music, in operation from July 5 to August 20.

Dr. Bezanson's Plano Sonata won the Fromm Foundation award in 1953. In 1960, his Prelude and Dance for Brass Sextet won the national composition contest sponsored by the National Association of College Wind and Percussion Instructors.

His works have been performed in Carnegie Hall and at Composer's Forum in New York by college and municipal orchestras, and over the Voice of America.

Dr. Bezanson's "Golden Child," an opera written on a libretto by poet Paul Engle, was televised nationally on the NBC's Hallmark Hall of Fame program.

Dr. Bezanson joined the University faculty in Sept. 1964. He previously taught composition at State University of Iowa.

He is a graduate of the Yale University School of Music and received his Ph.D. degree from State University of Iowa.

A New Star For Glass Menagerie

Prof. Cosmo A. Catalano, director of The Glass Menagerie, announced late last week that Paula Norton '65 will be replaced by her understudy Patricia Long '65 in the role of Amanda.

Miss Norton entered the University infirmary on April 24 with an acute case of laryngitis. Several days later physicians said that Miss Norton's condition had worsened and that she was suffering from an infection of the respiratory tract.

On Wednesday Mr. Catalano conferred with Miss Norton by phone and the decision was made that she would not play the part.

THURSDAY MISS NORTON left for her parents' home in Brookline where she is now recuperating.

In a telephone conversation Friday Miss Norton said that "I regret not being able to play Amanda. It is magnificent role. But since Pat (Miss Long) has been working with us as my understudy and assistant director since we began rehearsals, I have no qualms in leaving the show. She will do a great job, I am sure."

MISS LONG HAS BEEN rehearsing as Amanda since Miss Norton's departure. Mr. Catalano is most pleased with her progress. He said Friday, "The show will go on and it will be good."

Dr. Dilkes To Go To U.S.S.R.

Dr. Thomas P. Dilkes, assistant professor of history at the University, will participate in the cultural exchange program with the Soviet Union in the 1965-66 academic year.

Sponsored by the U. S. State Department, the Ford Foundation, and several cooperating universities, the exchange program annually enables some 35 American scholars to visit the U.S.S.R. while their Soviet counterparts study the U.S.

Dr. Dilkes, a specialist in Russian intellectual history, will carry on research in Russian historiography at Moscow State University and at Leningrad.

In the summer of 1960 he did similar research in Moscow and Leningrad under a grant from the Southern Fellowship Association.

A native of Philadelphia, Dr. Dilkes is a graduate of New York University. He received his Ph.D. degree from State University of Iowa.

Before coming to UMass in 1963, he taught at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tennessee, and at Illinois State University.

Dr. Dilkes is a member of the American Historical Association and the American Association for Advancement of Slavic Studies. He has also contributed to the American Historical Review.

5 Demonstrators Sentenced

Five UMass students, arrested in April for demonstrating against American involvement in South African apartheid, were sentenced Friday.

Ray Abbot, Sidney Finehirsh, Bill Dore, Donna Kahn, and Kathy Nolan pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct consisting of sitting on a sidewalk and using abusive language, and received suspended sentences of five days in a workhouse. Charges of resisting arrest were dropped for those pleading guilty.

Others of the demonstrators are still awaiting trial.

UMass Tour, Discussions Highlight 'Homemaker's College' Program

"Homemakers College" is the name of a special two-day program sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service at UMass to be held at the School of Education on Thursday and Friday, May 6 and 7.

The event is designed to provide an opportunity for continued education, to meet the faculty, and to see the campus of the State University.

Beginning with registration at 10 A.M., Thursday, the participants will have their choice of classes ranging from a discussion of "The Consumer in Today's Economy," to a film and talk on "The Young American" by UMass family life specialist Joseph D. Burroughs. Dr. Howard Quint, head of the UMass history department, will discuss "The Talkative President," the first volume published by the University of Massachusetts Pres., which he co-edited.

A talk in the afternoon on the value of the forthcoming UMass medical school by its dean, Dr. Lamar Soutter, will be followed by a business meeting and program of the Massachusetts Homemakers' Council. The remainder of the afternoon will be given over to a presentation of the topic, "The Homemaker and Her Goals" and a second film and talk on parents by Mr. Burroughs.

Events planned for the evening include a dinner at the Student Union, followed by a University Theatre play, "The Glass Menagerie."

On Friday, homemakers will have a choice of classes in fashion, nutrition, family life, consumer problems, or an explanation of growth, development, and admissions at UMass by David P. Lawrence, UMass Associate Director of Admissions. An additional offering will be a reading and discussion by Amherst poet, Robert Frances.

The day's activities will close with a tribute to Amherst literary figures Noah Webster, Eugene Field, David Grayson, and Emily Dickinson, and a guided tour of the growing UM campus.

Tennis Team Beats URI, Loses to Army

The University of Massachusetts tennis team had their win string snapped at five by the West Point Cadets this past weekend.

The cadets ran up a 6-0 score at the end of the singles matches before the Redmen got in the plus column. It took superb efforts by John Gutt and Roger Harper, at number one doubles, and Mike Rose and Bill Martin, at number two, to enable the UMies to come out of this match with a score of 7-2.

The Redmen were not able to contend with the overall Army strength, but were able to squeak by a University of Rhode Island team last Thursday by a score of 5-4.

Playing without number two man, Martin, the Redmen got excellent matches from Rose, Harper and Gerry Johnson in the singles. Johnson was down 1-4 in the third set, but came back to win 6-4.

In the doubles it was Harper and Gutt at the number one position and the Johnson boys, Jerry and Steve, at number two who won the necessary matches for the win.

Tomorrow the Redmen play their first home match of the season against UConn.

Trackmen Drop Two Close Ones

by Terry Carpenter

The UMass track team continues to drop close meets. Last Wednesday the team dropped a close one to Springfield College 82-67.

Winning events for the Redmen were John Medeiros in the broad jump with a leap of 21' 8½"; Clarence Hill in the high jump at 6' 2"; Bill Thoms in the 440 with a time of 51.4; and Art Larvey in the 220 at 21.9.

Damian Gaffney won the 440 intermediate hurdles with a clocking of 57.8. Terry Carpenter finished in a tie in the 2-mile event with a time of 9.43.

Doug Renwick continues to overwhelm opponents in the weight events as he won the shot put with a heave of 50' 4". This was the first time that Renwick has broken the 50 foot barrier as he improves with every meet.

Saturday saw the closest meet of the season come to a disappointing climax as the Redmen were nosed out by Bates 74-70.

FOOTBALL . . .
balance, recovered, and with the men hanging on him, still managed to find Hudson.

The varsity stopped the drive there and started one of their own as Landry again hit Meers. Leo Biron gained seven before a clipping penalty wiped out the threat. Landry did hit Milt Morin for 14 yards and Milt proceeded to run over three men until Joe Morris halted him.

Landry put on a display of his own scrambling ability as he was trapped by Ed Forbush and Paul Graham for a big loss, but escaped them and turned the play into a three yard gain.

NOEL REEBENACKER, the great qb of the early fifties, played for a while in this period completing a pass to DeRose but having the varsity intercept a deflected pass.

The rest of the game was mostly running by the varsity as Benoit, Don Durkin, Phil Vandersea, and Landry lugged the pigskin. The Alumni did not have another good threat as Whelchel's long bombs were just out of reach of the intended receivers.

Coach Fusia was happy with the performance of his charges. He should have been as Landry completed 5 of 9 passes and ran well. Jim Mitchell, Mickey Bailey, Bob Santucci, Ed Toner, and the rest of the line performed well. The starting backfield of Ellis, Benoit, Durkin, and Landry is strong with men like Vandersea, Biron and Kelley capable of filling in. Kelley had four clean tackles from his linebacker position as he continues the fine play he began during last season.

Whelchel of the Alumni had 7 of 15 passes, but many of these were of the desperation variety late in the game. The last play of the contest saw Bailey breaking through to nail Jerry for a loss.

The players on the field for the varsity Saturday, combined with Bernie Dallas and Terry Swanson who did not play, should provide a strong club for Fusia in '65.

Crane, Swanson, Nordberg Have Big Bats For Redmen

Boteze with a 15 hit attack and whipped the University of New Hampshire 12-1 in a game played at Alumni Field, May 2.

Boteze gave the Wildcats just four hits and struck out ten as he boosted his record to 2-2 and lowered his e.r.a. to 1.97.

Terry Swanson, Al Nordberg, John Peacock, and Jim Kuczynski were the batting stars for the Redmen. Swanson and Nordberg each had three hits and three r.b.i.'s while Peacock and Kuczynski each drove in three runs with two hits.

UMass picked up single runs in the second and fifth on a pair of r.b.i. singles by Kuczynski.

The Redmen exploded in the fifth, knocking out UNH starter John Strobel with five straight singles for four runs. The home team scored four more in the seventh. The inning featured singles by Bill Crane and Terry Swanson and a two-run double by Al Nordberg.

Terry Swanson capped a fun-filled afternoon for UMass with a tremendous two-run homerun into the trees in right-centerfield in the eighth.

The Redmen really fattened their batting averages over the weekend as they went 33 for 79, for a .418 average.

BATS COME ALIVE!

Boteze Leads Redmen By UNH 12-1

by Mike Gould

Making a complete turnabout from its usual pattern of good pitching and poor batting, the Redmen Nine dropped a thriller to Amherst College, 11-10, April 30 at Amherst.

UMass paraded four ineffective ptichers to the mound in the three hour contest with reliefer Mike Brita taking the loss. The Redmen collected 18 hits to Amherst's 11. Eight UMass hits accounted for seven runs in the ninth inning as the visitors nearly pulled out what looked to be a lost cause.

The score was 11-3 when U-Mass went to work in the ninth. Pinch hitter Jeff Whitney led with a single and took third on Bill Crane's double. Jim Babyak walked and was erased at second as Terry Swanson grounded into a force play. Al Nordberg rescued Crane with a single and Swanson scored as Dennis Della-Piana singled. Ed Polchlopek followed with another safety scoring Nordberg.

A WILD PITCH allowed Della-Piana to score, as Polchlopek took second. Roy Lasky kept things going with an r.b.i. single. Karl Kamena followed suit with another hit and the Redmen were down 11-9 with runners on. Against Amherst's third pitcher first and second and one out. of the inning, Whitney popped to second, for the second out. Bill Crane walked, loading the bases for Babyak. The shortstop delivered his third hit of the game, a shot to leftfield which was hit too hard for the lumbering Kamena to chance a dash home from second. This made it 11-10 and set the stage for Swanson, but Terry's best was a game ending fly to center.

The game marked the end of a poor hitting spell by the Redmen which had plagued them since opening day. Babyak, DellaPiana, and Nordberg collected thre hits apiece for the Redmen.

Walks again hurt Redmen hurlers. Ten Amherst batters were issued bases on balls, and five of them came around to score. UMass got only three walks off the three Amherst moundsmen.

. . . The Redmen have yet to win a game out of the conference. . . . They have lost four. . . . The 10 runs scored by the Redman was only two shy of the number they had score in their first seven games.

Schroeder and Burke Under Pro Contracts

Jack Schroeder, a member of the Redmen football team for the past three years, has signed a professional football contract with the Holyoke Bombers of the Atlantic Coast Football League.

Schroeder, a native of East Meadow, N. Y., played strictly on defense this past season. In his sophomore and junior years he alternated at quarterback with Jerry Whelchel. Next fall he will be attending graduate school at the University while playing for the Bombers.

Schroeder is the second member of the 1964 Redmen to sign with the Holyoke team. Bob Burke, a tackle, had signed a contract previously. Burke will be teaching at Holyoke High School, his alma mater, while he plays pro ball.

Alumni Succumb to Varsity 6-0 In Spring Scrimmage

by John Goodrich

On a pleasant Saturday afternoon, a substantial portion of the student body gathered with high school students and coaches on the hillside overlooking the soccer field, to see Coach Vic Fusia's 1965 edition of the Redman football team. Those who came were not disappointed.

Despite an abundance of penalties, the contest between the 1965 varsity and a fine group of alumni was interesting and relatively well played. The Varsity prevailed 6-0 as Dick Benoit drove over the left side of the line from five yards out to ring up the only touchdown.

The game was played in two 15 minute periods, and the lone score came about midway through the first. The fans saw plenty of action after that, as the respective quarterbacks matched talents. Jerry Whelchel of the Alumni and Greg Landry, the heir to Whelchel's position, put on quite a passing and running show for those in attendance.

There was no kickoff, so the alumni took the ball on the 20 yard line. From there, they proceeded up field behind the running of Phil DeRose until Bob Ellis of the varsity snagged a Jerry Whelchel pass at his own 40.

THE VARSITY then began the drive that netted the TD. Landry rolled to the right for 20 yards, but an offside penalty wiped that out. He then passed to one of the M-boys, Bob Meers for 12 yards. A personal foul pushed the club back 15, but Landry again connected, this time with defensive specialist Dave Kelley who was in at fullback. The short screen went for 35 yards as Kelley moved down the left sidelines.

Landry then found Meers again, this time at the sidelines near the ten. From there Benoit took the ball over for the score on the second try.

Landry was set to kick, but the snap was fumbled and Greg was tackled just short of the conversion.

Whelchel then put on a display of his talent that had earned the New England "Player-of-the-Year" award this past fall. He completed five out of six passes as he moved the Alumni to the varsity 40. He hit Dick Bourdelais twice, ran Mike Ross up the middle, ran for three himself, added seven more on a brilliant pass to John Hudson, hit Ken Palm for five, sent DeRose around end for four and finally hit Palm for one more. The pass to Hudson was a thing of beauty. Whelchel was hemmed in by three tacklers, was knocked off

STUDENT LEADERS NIGHT: 1965

Amid squeals of excitement and shades of disappointment many of the student leaders for the 1965-66 school year were tapped. Dennis Bushe, Chairman of Student Leaders' Night, opened the evening followed by a welcome from Robert O'Leary, Senior Class President. Professor Joseph Marcus delivered the opening address concerning the activities of the Orchard Hill Complex.

Scholarships were awarded by the following groups: Campus Chest, Pan-hellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, Maroon Keys, and Scrolls.

Coleen McLaughlin presented the Interdorm awards to the outstanding girls' dorms of the 1964-65 school year. First place honors were won by Emily Dickinson; second place went to Lewis; Brooks and Dwight tied for third place.

The third annual Metawampe award was presented by the Senior Class. This award is given to an outstanding faculty member. This year the award is accompanied by a $1,000 stipend. Linda Fisher presented Professor Joseph Marcus, winner of this year's Metawampe award, with the plaque.

A new service society was organized this year by the Interfraternity Council. The group will be known as I.F.C. Guides. Those tapped were:

Lincoln Shaw	Fred Molander	Bob Milgroom
Robert Fleischner	Alan Hoban	John Hendrickson
Robin Glackin	Greg Goodwin	Dan Grieco
Rick Parmenter	Jack Murray	Rusty Swartz
Herb Lach	Chip Wyser	Gilbert McNeil
Andy Reid	Mel Fisher	Bob Hilson
John Gilbert	Robert Pederzane	John McGuire
Chuck Williams

President Lederle was on hand to present the Distinguished Senior Awards. The Seniors thus honored were:

Judy Crooker	Sheila McRevy	Sue Ryback
John Francisco	Mike Mendelsohn	Mike Smith
Sue Glickman	Dave Podbros	Ted Weinberg
Art Labrie

Two years ago a group called the University Community Service Foundation honored three Seniors with the University Community Service Award. This award is not given every year, but only when the committee feels there is a deserving senior. This year the committee felt there were two outstanding people. The co-recipients of the award were Jeffrey Davidow and William Wilkinson.

It was at this point in the program that the excitment began to build, for it was time to begin the tapping.

Ann Williams, President of Motar Board, commenced with the tapping for that group. Those tapped were:

Joan Bracker	Teresa Joseph	Ann Schwalenstocker
Mary Ann Brady	Lesley Lazin	Janet Kay Smith
Elaine Corsi	Mary Ann McAdams	Elizabeth Veneri
Karen Garvin	Deria Montanari	Roberta Bernstein
Sandra Haynes	Gail Moran	Carol Woodcock
Nancy Jansen

Truck Driver Killed As Forest Fire Rages . . .

Driver Plante of Worcester was killed and trapped in the cab of his truck until the crane from the University came to lift the beams onto another truck.

Firefighter handles hoses on smoke filled Belchertown road to halt the fire that burned nearly 2000 acres of forest.

by Joe Bradley,
Senior Reporter

Three hundred University students answered a call for volunteers Monday to fight a fire that ravaged 200 acres of Belchertown woodland and indirectly contributed to the death of a 29-year-old truck driver.

Edward L. Plante of Worcester was killed instantly when three prestressed concrete T beams shifted as he abruptly stopped his truck in the fire area.

POLICE SAID PLANTE came on the fire about 2 p.m.—45 minutes after it began—on Rte. 9 on his way to the new football stadium where the beams were to be used for seats.

Two of the seven-ton beams crashed into the cab of the truck. Plante's body was pinned in the cab for two hours until a derrick from the stadium site could remove the beams.

PLANTE LEAVES HIS wife, Marion, and three children.

The blaze was apparently started when a Central Vermont Railroad diesel threw sparks into the dry woods alongside the CVRR roadbed.

The appeal for volunteers was announced at Dining Commons here during the supper hour. At the same time dormitories were notified by the Dean of Students Office. About 10 p.m. Belchertown Fire Chief Louis Fuller said the blaze was under control.

UMass students returned to campus at 10:15 p.m. They were fed then at the North Commons.

HAMPSHIRE COUNTY DISTRICT Forest Fire Warden Hubert Robert told the Collegian Tuesday, "The students were great, a real big help."

Tuesday, with temperatures in the mid-eighties and a fresh northerly wind blowing, Chief Fuller said, "I'm keeping my fingers crossed."

THE FIRE SPREAD over a ten mile-long and three mile long fingers of flame and 12,000 feet of hose were laid, according to Warden Robert.

Firemen were hampered Monday when the wind shifted. Also for a few tense moments after the volunteers arrived, there was some difficulty in getting enough equipment into play against the flames.

THE SPARKS SHOT from the diesel result from a carbon build-up beneath the motors when the locomotive is idling, Warden Robert explained. When the engine is in motion the glowing carbon is spattered along the roadbed.

Student Senate To Elect Officers For Coming Year

by Jim Foudy,
Senate Reporter

One of the chief contenders for the post of Student Senate President is Robert Cripps (Mills) Chairman of the Senate Elections Committee and member of the Academic Affairs and Cume Investigation Committees.

A twenty-five year old government major and law school hopeful, Bob's primary concern this year was with the revision of the election rules.

Faithful to his duties as senator, Bob hopes to make the Senate more than just a dispensing agent for student funds, rather a true representative of the students.

OPPOSING SENATOR CRIPPS will be the present Finance Committee Chairmani Richard Dacey, also a government major and a two-year Senate member.

In his capacity as senator, Dick has served on the Men's Affairs and Public Relations Committees and this year has worked at revising the Financial Policy Booklet and sponsored the bill appropriating funds for the Civil Rights Conference last February.

SENATOR DACEY FEELS a need for some revision within the Senate to "increase its efficiency."

"The Senate needs greater responsibility," he feels, and it must "present a new face and define for itself a responsible image."

Former president of the Stockbridge Senate and Chairman of the Activities Committee, Jim Allen (Commuter) is running for the post of vice-president with the belief that there should be a close working relationship between the executive officers.

A food economics major and member of the R.S.O. Social Activities Committee, Jim brought forth the Afro-Asian studies this year.

ALSO IN CONTENTION for the vice-presidency is the Chairman of the Women's Affairs Committee Karen Garvin (Arnold).

A government major and member of the Student Senate for two years, Karen was co-originator of the bill recommending an investigation of the grading system and is a member of the Cume Investigation Committee.

Karen told the Collegian that she feels the role of the vice-president should be of "co-ordinating and increasing productivity of the committees, and he should act as a laiason between the administration and the students."

IN THE SECRETARIAL race Linda Perlstein (Eugene Field) is opposing Linda Shapiro (Johnson), and Gary Bombardier (Gorman) will run for treasurer.

GRASSERS BEWARE

The University begins summer spraying of the Orchard with poison this week to prevent destruction of fruit by insects, and wishes to warn the students that drivers of spray trucks may not see people lying in the grass and they could get doused by the spray, or possibly run over by the trucks.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

For A Job Well Done

It is a rare event when the student body receives praise rather criticism on the editorial page. Response to the call for volunteers during Monday's forest fire in Belchertown was immediate and outstanding, and is truly deserving of such commendation.

Within an hour of the two P.M. call for aid, over 300 university students had responded and were bused to the scene. According to Hubert Robert, District Fire Marshall for Hampshire County, "The students were young and in good shape, willing and capable. They worked with hand equipment and carrying hose, and were really a great help."

The administration is also to be lauded for arranging and facilitating activities and cooperating in every possible way, even to the extent of providing eating facilities until 12:00 A.M. for the returning volunteers.

Nothing serves to better University relations with the community more than such unselfish assistance in time of need. A well deserved "Thank You" goes out to all concerned.

Dan Glosband,
Editor in Chief

Recognition Of Our Leaders

Student Leader's Night, probably the only time when the leaders of the campus are properly recognized, took place last night.

For a brief moment, each student who was honored was in the spotlight, and everyone's attention was on him. Few students however realize the tremendous amount of work involved in becoming a "student leader". They realize less the great responsibility which is placed on a student who must remember at all times that he is a representative of the University as well as himself.

The students who were honored last night were not just lucky; nor, did they just happen to have the right friends. They worked hard for an uncertain goal, not knowing until last night whether or not they worked hard enough.

To all those who received recognition last night, and to the many more who are still working for the goal which may never be reached, we extend our most sincere congratulations and thanks.

Joel Hartstone,
Editorial Chairman

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

What Are You Doing?

To the Editor:

On Thursday, May 6th, Isogon Chapter of Mortar Board will initiate its campaign to beautify the University of Massachusetts' campus. The opening event will be a tree planting ceremony which will take place outside the Student Union at 2:00 p.m.

Miss Victoria Schuck, a professor of political science at Mount Holyoke College and a former Trustee of our University, will plant three trees which she has donated to the University. Miss Schuck has always been interested in both the architecture and the landscaping of the University.

The administration and other interested persons like Miss Schuck are constantly trying to improve the grounds of our campus. Frequently students are upset when they find hedges and trees blocking their well-worn paths. Students do not stop to think how we are damaging the appearance of the campus. How often we just toss papers about — unthinkingly. But each of us should just stop for a minute and look at our campus — look at the refuse — the worn paths across the lawn. Is this the sight which we want legislators, prospective freshmen, and guests to see?

The Senior Class has donated a patio to the University as their class gift. Miss Schuck is donating trees to beautify the campus. But what are you — an individual member of this campus community — doing to improve the campus?

Mortar Board

Letters To The Editor

Personal Thanks

To the Editor:

It was with great pride that I learned of the splendid service provided by more than 350 men of the University student body who responded within forty-five minutes of the initial call to aid in combating the serious forest fire in Belchertown. Conditions of drought and high wind made this fire potentially explosive and the active participation of additional men, either on the fire lines or on standby reserve, was absolutely essential.

I would like to extend, on behalf of the University community, my personal congratulations to all who contributed their efforts or volunteered their services at this critical time.

Cordially yours,
John W. Lederle,
President

An Appeal

If you have read the articles on Spring Day appearing in the paper, you will know the aims and plans of those students who would like to see the return of Spring Day to the University of Massachusetts. The plans as they stand now are tentative, at best. But the spirit which underlies them is not of the trouble - making variety. We would like to have a Spring Day which is both fun and responsible.

With your cooperation, we would be in a much better position. With your sanction, plans could be made openly and responsibly. The campus at large could be more enthusiastic, less dubious; no one would be looking for trouble. Also with your cooperation, we would have a better idea of what aspects to play up and what aspects to play down.

It is a large order to ask of you who still remember the ogre that the previous Spring Days became. But we who are still young and blooming with idealism would like our chance to prove the feasibility of Spring Day. May we try?

Selrahc Nosnhoj

Congratulations to our New Class Officers

Parks anywhere

You can stand on your head looking for a place to park on most campuses. And all you end up with is a headache. But not if you ride a Honda. It needs only as much elbow room as you with an armload of books. So you can squeeze in a little closer to that 8 o'clock class than your 4-wheel competition.

A Honda helps keep you solvent as well as sane. Prices start about $215*. You'll get up to 200 mpg, depending on the model. And practically never need service. The star performer above is the CB-160. Just one of the 15 Honda models. With its 4-stroke, twin cylinder engine and 16.5 HP, this showoff does better than 80 mph. Look into a Honda soon. No more headaches.

See the Honda representative on your campus or write: American Honda Motor Co., Inc., Department C3, 100 West Alondra Blvd., Gardena, California 90247.

Pre-Med Hosting Moore To Speak on Transplants

One of America's most noted surgeons, Francis D. Moore, M. D., Chief of Surgery at Harvard Medical School and Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, will give an address this evening at 7:30 p.m. in Morrill Auditorium, sponsored by the Pre-Med Club.

Dr. Moore's trial by fire was the Coconut Grove disaster of 1942. Since that time he has been recognized as one of America's most prominent physicians, a surgical pioneer. He is the surgeon most directly responsible with perfecting organ transplants, particularly the kidney transplant.

He was chief surgeon at last year's famous Kenneth Knowles case in which a severed arm was first successfully reattached.

IT IS THROUGH such work that he has gained national prominence in feature articles in Time, Newsweek, Fortune, and the Saturday Evening Post. "Because of his own contributions to surgery's body of knowledge, his phenomenal ability, Francis Moore ranks as one of history's great surgeon,": Time.

His address this evening will be primarily concerned with the advances being made in the transplant and reattachment fields. Refreshments and discussion will follow the address.

Sociology Professor Receives Two National Awards

Dr. Milton M. Gordon, professor of sociology at the University of Massachusetts, has received two national awards for his book, "Assimilation in American Life," published last year by Oxford University Press.

A selection committee, composed of Ashley Montagu, Pearl Buck, Lillian Smith and Oscar Handlin, selected his book for an Anisfield-Wolf award. Dr. Gordon also was selected to receive the Brotherhood Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, Inc., for his book.

The Anisfield-Wolf awards in race relations, sponsored by the Saturday Review, are presented each year to the authors of outstanding "works in every field which contribute in any way contribute to the betterment of race relations." Awards are given for both scholarly and creative works.

PAST RECIPIENTS of Anisfield-Wolf awards include Gunnar Myrdal, Alan Paton, Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., and the distinguished geneticist Theodosius Dobzhansky.

This year the "Saturday Review" Anisfield-Wolf awards carried a cash award of $750.

The National Conference of Christians and Jews, Inc. cited Dr. Gordon's book as an "outstanding contribution to the cause of brotherhood and better human relations."

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE cited Dr. Gordon's "Assimilation in American Life" as a work which "penetrates far below the surface elements of cultural pluralism and a 'melting pot' concept of American society to open new vistas in the field of human relations."

Dr. Gordon will accept the NCCJ's Brotherhood Award at a luncheon in New York City on Friday, May 21.

Before joining the sociology department at UMass, Dr. Gordon taught at the University of Pennsylvania and at Haverford College. He has also been a visiting professor at Wellesley College.

At the University of Massachusetts Dr. Gordon teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in race relations, social relations, social stratification, and sociological theory.

Poll Next Week For Outstanding Teacher

At each Fall Convocation for the past three years, an Outstanding Teacher Award with its emphasis on teaching has been presented. Both faculty and students are polled and nominations made are accompanied by reasons for the choice. Final selection is made by a University selection committee from all schools.

In the past three years the award has been presented to Dr. William Ross of the physics department, George Richason of the chemistry department, and Dr. H. Leland Varley of the English department.

Ballot boxes and ballots will be available in the Student Union lobby on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Students are urged to submit their nominations with reasons for their opinion.

"Fun and Frolic" Slated for Senior Week

The Senior Class Executive Committee has announced the schedule for Senior Week Activities to be held Wednesday, June 9 through Sunday, June 13.

The committee's original plan was to take the entire senior class off campus to a resort area such as Mt. Snow, Vermont, or Cape Cod. After much research and deliberation, however, it was decided that this plan was impractical if not impossible, (for example a conservative week at Cape Cod would cost between $75.00 and $100.00 per senior.) Therefore the committee has spent much time and effort in planning a Senior Week on campus which will be inexpensive and convenient, can be attended by every senior.

The activities commence on Wednesday, June 9th with a picnic at Forest Lake Park in Palmer. The afternoon of "recreation and frolic" will be highlighted by the appearance of Barry and the Remains of 1965 Winter Carnival fame.

ON TUESDAY THE ACTIVITY switches to Springfield and the beautiful Schine Inn for Senior Class Banquet. The class has reserved the facilities of the Inn from 12:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. and the day will be highlighted by a semi-formal dinner dance in the evening.

On Friday, June 10th, the New Prince Spaghetti Minstrels will appear on the green at the Student Union and there will be a spaghetti dinner immediately preceding the concert. Friday night the class will sponsor a "mix" at the Hatfield Barn featuring the Eccentrics.

Then on Saturday, the annual Class Night ceremonies will take place in the Student Union Ballroom with traditional Hatchet and Pipe Orations, and films of University highlights as main features. Later in the evening a mix appropriately entitled "The Night Before" will be held at the Quonset Club in Hadley.

SUNDAY MORNING seniors and their parents are invited to University President John W. Lederle's reception and then . . . graduation at 2:00 p.m.

All of this will hopefully make for an unforgettable last week and the exciting part is that the cost per student for the entire week will be a low $5.50. Housing for men and women will be provided in dormitories (Leach and Hamlin for women and all men's dorms except Butterfield, Brett, Grayson and Webster). There will be no curfew for women from Wednesday, June 5th, through Senior Week.

Tickets go on sale Monday, May 10, in the Student Union Lobby and will be on sale Monday through Friday from 10:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. until May 26.

Give Blood May 10

For the fifth consecutive year the University Women are sponsoring the Blood Insurance Program which is underwritten by the Hampshire County Red Cross and the Cooley Dickinson Hospital. This program operates for the benefit of the entire staff and faculty of the University.

Blood for transfusion for Hampshire County residents is available without replacement only through membership in the Red Cross Insurance program. Residents who are not covered by this program will be asked to replace pint for pint when blood is used.

The premium for a year's insurance is one pint of blood payable by donation on Monday, May 10 from 12 noon until 5:45 p.m. in Arnold House Recreation room. The return on the investment is free blood for the donor and his immediate family (living under one roof) should they require it during the next twelve months.

Any person who wishes to replace blood or to donate it in the name of another is welcome to do so, for example, there is a specific need for the donation of blood in the name of two Amherst women who will be undergoing heart surgery within the same week, and who will require much blood for the operation.

Persons who would like to donate blood for either of these residents may do so by calling Mrs. H. W. Watts at 253-5396.

Coed Wins

A Univ. coed, Justine Metrick, was the winner of a $500 cash award in the second annual Educational Fund Awards Program, an international competition sponsored by Great Books of the Western World. The winners—58 young adults from 27 states, Australia and Canada—were announced by Dr. Mortimer J. Adler.

Presentation of the cash award to the local winner, plus a 54-volume set of the Great Books of the Western World to her school in recognition of this achievement, will be made at a time set by school officials.

Those playing for the University were: Carolyn Burt, Rosemary Connolly, Joanne Gillis, Betty Gilligan, Marzie Hall, Toni Hartrich, Karen Longhi, Nancy Smolen, Pat Thomas, and Lois Woocher.

VIEWPOINT . . .
I am not campaigning for a complete scholarship program in any or these sports. This would be a liability to amateur athletics. What is needed is recognition. Yes, recognition, and a bit more effort by the gentlemen in charge of our athletic teams to give the men on these teams an incentive to perform.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Casting Team Needs Talent

Are you interested in fly, bait or spin casting? Fly fishing? Salt water fishing? Would you like to represent the University in a casting and angling tournament?

If the answers to these questions are YES, then read on. (If your answers are no, read on anyway, you might become interested.) The competition which will be held within the next few weeks will include fly, bait and spinning accuracy on the College pond against other college teams. In addition there will be competition on a local stream for trout fishing.

Those representing the University will be selected to participate in the annual tuna fishing tournament to be held in Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, next September. This affair involves five Canadian and five American universities in three full days of salt water competition.

The only necessary pre-requisite is interest. Some background in casting and fishing is desirable, but no previous tournament experience is needed.

Anyone interested is asked to contact Mr. Brosky in Room 222 of the Boyden Physical Education Building as soon as possible.

Redmen Lose 4-1

The University of Massachusetts baseball team dropped a tightly contested game to UConn yesterday 4-1 at Storrs.

Bill Smith started the ball game for the Redmen and was relieved by Ross Piken in the seventh. All four Huskies runs were charged to Smith.

The Redmen took the early lead in the fourth on a single by Paul Caisse and another single by Brita. These were two of the three hits the team could muster off UConn starter Steve Gulyas. The game remained tight until the seventh when the Huskies picked up three runs.

The loss brings the Redmen's record in the Yankee Conference to 4-2 and the win makes UConn 4-3.

Next games for UMass are this weekend against defending conference champion Maine at home.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

Taking a quick look at the records of the Spring sports teams it is easy to see that the hierarchy at Boyden must allocate more time and attention to what are designated as "minor sports."

There aren't too many sports fans who have yet to come to the realization that the University is embarking upon a new era in the collegiate sports field.

The recent success of the Redmen football team speaks for itself. The schedule the basketball team had this past winter was equal in difficulty to any around. The baseball team is off to a good start in the Yankee Conference. (The baseball team can lose every game out of the conference and still go to the Collegiate World Series in Omaha if they capture the conference crown.)

NOW LET'S take a look at the minor sports. The only team that is having a good year is the tennis team. Steve Kosakowski seems to come up with a perennial winner regardless of the material he has to work with.

Believe it or not the University HAS a track team, a lacrosse team, a golf team. The trackmen have yet to win a meet this season. They have had quite a few excellent encounters but have fallen short all the time. Coaches Footrick and Cobb do what they can to give the University a winner in this sport, but when they are regarded as a "minor sport" they don't receive the attention that they should rightfully get.

Because of the new administration building going up on Alumni Field (ground has yet to be broken) there was only one home track meet this season. Any sports fan knows the advantage of performing at home.

Coach Gladchuck recently had the privilege of seeing his golf team drop a 5-4 match to one of the most powerful sports institutions in New England, AIC.

COACH DICK GARBER will have trouble to get his lacrosse team to break even this season. The fault cannot lie in the coaching, especially in lacrosse. Garber is regarded as one of the best in the sport and was recently selected as a head coach for the collegiate lacrosse all-star game this summer.

At the present moment there is not one scholarship man this team. Garber said earlier in the season that he doesn't feel he needs this aid as long as the team does well against other colleges that don't allocate scholarships.

An "unidentified" student scaled the tower of Old Chapel shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning and rang the bells that officially marked the opening of Spring Day 1965. He escaped with the help of the crowd.

Injuries Mar Spring Day; Wildness Called Inherent

by Pat Petow, Staff Reporter

Long-awaited Spring Day 1965 finally arrived Thursday, May 6, at UMass. Beginning auspiciously under brilliant sun, it promised a successful day for its participants gathered at 10:00 at the Campus Pond. Moving to the Rifle Range, the fun continued but suddenly became serious and far from juvenile with a serious accident involving two University students. One received a fractured leg and the other, freshman Joyce Cassidy, suffered severe head injuries.

Early in the morning, a yellow sign before the Student Union Building, reading "Spring Day-Cut Classes Not Exams" was posted.

Students congregated on the terrace-side of the Union to listen for the 10:00 bells. Only the usual ten were sounded then, but in a few minutes a car pulling a four-piece band rolled onto the lawn. Spring Day began.

A plane flew overhead twice dropping explanatory sheets of proclamation to the cheers of the students. At about 10:15, the bells of Old Chapel tolled ten times and more. En masse the students moved cheering the "toller" who slid down as a campus policeman stood by.

The "band-wagon" was labelled "The Ad-Hoc Comm. for Spring Day Presents the Venturas." The performers were identified as Bernie Schranz on the guitar, Ronnie Fink on the rythmn guitar; Leo Bouchard on the bass guitar; and, John Hunt, on the drums.

A rock and roll show progressed on the lawn for an audience of several hundred class-cutting UMies.

Noted Alumnus Selected For Commencement Address

UMass alumnus William Manchester, author and former managing editor of the Wesleyan University Press, will be the principal speaker at University commencement exercises this year.

Manchester will speak on Sunday, June 13. The topic of his address will be announced later. Approximately 1100 graduating seniors will receive degrees at ceremonies closing the University's 102nd year. About 225 advanced degrees will also be awarded.

A FREQUENT contributor to Holiday and other leading magazines, Manchester is the author of seven books. He has written four novels—"City of Anger," "Shadow of the Monsoon," "Beard the Lion," and "The Long Gainer." Two of his major biographical works were "Disturber of the Peace—The Life of H. L. Mencken," and "A Rockefeller Family Portrait."

His most recent book, a study of the late President Kennedy, entitled "Portrait of a President," was published in 1962.

WILLIAM MANCHESTER

Last spring he was selected by the Kennedy family to write the family-authorized story of the late John F. Kennedy's assassination. He is currently working on this book, while on leave from Wesleyan. University Publication is not expected for several years.

A NATIVE of Attleboro, Manchester attended Springfield schools and entered UMass in 1940. After World War II service with the U.S. Marine Corps, he returned to graduate as senior orator in the Class of 1946.

Manchester did graduate work at Dartmouth and went on to receive his M.A. degree from the University of Missouri.

HE JOINED the staff of Baltimore Sun in 1947 as a police reporter. Within seven years he had been promoted to associate editor. During that time he served as a foreign correspondent in England and throughout the Near and Far East.

After serving as private secretary to H. L. Mencken for a

Hundreds of students gathered near the pond to listen and dance to the music of the "Venturas," before journeying to the rifle range for further activities. The Charlie Johnsons who planned Spring Day hoped more students would gather near the pond in the morning. Students were thrown in the pond in keeping with UMass tradition. Unfortunately a freshman girl was injured when doused. At noon rides were available to the rifle range, but many walked the two miles in the bright sun to dance and cavort for the remainder of the afternoon.

Many students were moved to dance as a Spring Day spirit permeated the crowds that had been summoned by the chiming of the Old Chapel bells.

across the Pond in his teeth, and a tug-a-war commenced ending immediately, however, when the rope broke.

Smiling administration staff were ambling around the area. One said, "It's very well organized this year. Much better than last year." Another declared that, "Good? Yes, its good. I'm a Spring Day fan myself."

Activities on campus were mainly orderly, but two girls received slight injuries when tossed in the Pond by ebullient participants.

Nancy Wood, a sophomore from Emily Dickinson dormitory, received lacerations of the back yesterday morning.

When contacted by the Collegian, Miss Wood said, "I'm not mad at all. I was enjoying getting thrown in and everything. If I hadn't wanted to get thrown in, I wouldn't have let them do it. It's just a piece of bad luck."

She explained that there was a rock in the shallow water where she landed. As a result, she received six stitches in the interior muscle layer of her back and 13 stitches on the outer layer.

Miss Wood described her condition, "Oh, I feel great. I had a lot of fun despite the injury. The only thing I don't like are the Infirmary pajamas they gave me to wear."

Miss Wood is scheduled to be released today.

Shirley Turner, a freshman from Van Meter North, also received cuts, believed to be from glass in the Pond. Dr. McBride of the Infirmary reported that her condition was good and that she would remain there overnight.

About 12:30 the band led the students to the Rifle Range which was obtained for the private party. The band continued its show there, and it was observed beer flowed freely. C&C's, an Amherst package store, reported greater than usual sales; personnel at other package stores were unable to judge.

After several hours of dancing and only minor incidents, a serious accident marred the culmination of Spring Day. In the early evening, Michael Rivers, '66 of Springfield, driving his BMW motorcycle carrying Joyce Cassidy, a freshman from Dwight, on the back seat hit a ditch on the field near the dancing area. Reliable observers said the vehicle moved almost 40 feet at an estimated 60 mph before crashing.

Miss Cassidy was rushed to Cooley Dickinson Hospital with severe head injuries. She was admitted as an intensive car patient, and the hospital informed the Collegian that her parents were expected from Brockton to be with her late yesterday. No telephone calls to her except from the immediate family would be accepted.

The driver, Rivers, fractured his left leg; he was taken from the scene after a splint inflated with air was applied. He was given surgery in the emergency room for some time. He will remain there overnight.

Dean of Students, William F. Field, told the Collegian that keeping so large a group of people, with "fringe" elements, orderly and in bounds was a sheer, physical impossibility. He reiterated his disavowal, like that which resulted in the withdrawal of administrative sancton five years ago, of the wildness inherent in Spring Day.

He indicated that if University rules were violated, the ordinary treatment would be accorded offenders. Saying he had nothing on his desk, the Dean promised an investigation in whatever area necessary.

An organizer who along with several persons may have composed the fictional Charles Johnson, described the activities, before the motorcycle crash, as a "revolt against bureaucracy;" another thought it contained a number of so-called horror shows; and a third expressed general approval.

As of 12:00 midnight the Amherst police reported that there had been no complaints registered from either Rifle Range area residents or the owner of the Range.

UCLA Students Balk At Activity Fee Rise

CPS—Students faced with tuition increases must feel a sense of helplessness—after all, the financial standing of the university is a complex issue, and very often the reasons for tuition rises are apparently justifiable. But in many cases the anger at ever-increasing financial demands is taking another course—opposition to the "student fees" that are as common, if not as high, as tuition costs.

Student fees are collected to support various activity: campus athletics, student government, student publications, social and cultural events, and as a discount service. In some schools the fee is optional; in most schools it is exacted just as the tuition fee is. Students are questioning the way these funds are allocated, and even the necessity for such fees at all.

At UCLA, students have vehemently opposed a projected increase in student fees which would be used to build an $800,000 recreation center and a $4 million football stadium. The students signing a petition against the proposed increase resented allotment of their fees without their consent, according to the originator of the petition, Joel Siegel.

Many students also claimed that the UCLA move was designed to make the school indirectly a tuition-charging university; it has been predicted that incidental fees will eventually reach $200 a term. In the future, Siegel said, "that stadium will hang like an albatross around the necks of those who believe in free education."

At the University of Colorado, the finance board (composed of an equal number of students and administrators) is considering a dual system—one fund would be voluntary, the other required. The basis for this dual system is the feeling that some services, such as the campus newspaper, should operate on a voluntary subscription system. On the other hand, few students deny the need for a student health center and a student union.

In some cases, students have sought vainly for evidences of additional services in return for increased fees. At St. Mary's college, San Antonio, the fee was raised from $6 to $10 and, one student claimed, "there has been a definite decrease in the available activities."

UM Proposed For Takeover Of Financing

BOSTON—Rep. Francis J. Bevilacqua, chairman of the legislative committee on counties, proposed Monday an end to county administration of agricultural extension programs.

He suggested the University of Massachusetts take over the programs by which thousands of farmers throughout the commonwealth obtain information, services and some materials.

Principal advantage of the proposal, Bevilacqua said, would be relieving county taxpayers of the burdens of the extension-service administration.

He proposed telling UMass officials, "you people got a lot of money, and you know the revenues you can get off the federal government."

Rep. Fred F. Cain of Wilmington, backing the plan, emphasized, "we're not trying to kill these programs—we're just trying to refinance them."

Rep. John D. Barrus of Goshen, not a member of the committee, but attending the Hampshire county budget hearing at which the question arose, declined to back the plan pending further study.

Rep. Lester J. Gates of Scituate, supporting the plan, urged persons concerned with extension work make their interests known within the next week, warning action may be swift after that time.

Good,/ also present for the Hampshire hearing, declined to go on record for or against but urged, "deliberate study," because the measure would result in another area of government being, "one more step removed from local areas."

Bevilacqua replied taxpayers in the counties still would be the one to benefit from the programs, to which Barrus rejoined that state-wide administration would result in taxpayers of areas making little use of the plan paying more heavily for it than those where the program is widely employed.

By evening the rifle range had been littered with hundreds of cans and bottles, and students in various stages of repose. The Spring Day Committee has promised to have the area cleaned up by this afternoon.

SCOPE Lists Jobs For 27,000 Volunteers

PHILADELPHIA (CPS)—Students planning to participate in community service and civil rights activities this summer have over 27,000 positions to choose from according to a new directory just published by the U. S. National Student Association (NSA).

The directory, SCOPE, covers the programs of 96 organizations and summer opportunities ranging from voter registration projects in the South to tutorial and community action projects in the North. In addition to the directory listings, SCOPE contains several features which indicate the phenomenal growth of student involvement in community issues since 1960.

In order to make the directory as useful as possible, organizational plans are categorized according to whether jobs will be full-time or part-time. Each entry includes such information as number of volunteers needed, location, salary, special skills required and what expenses the student will be expected to assume himself.

An index offers a breakdown of jobs by such categories as tutoring, camping, community action, civil rights and work with foreign students, the mentally ill and the handicapped.

Published under a Ford Foundation grant, SCOPE is being made available free of charge to students at 2,000 colleges and universities across the country. By May 10 the directory will be in the hands of campus newspaper editors, student government presidents, deans of students and directors of summer placement services for distribution on their campuses. Additional copies of the directory will be available directly from NSA.

Officers For Next Year Elected By Student Senate

by Jim Foudy, Senate Reporter

Amid an atmosphere of excitement, earnestness and occasional joviality, tempered by the rules and regulations of election procedure, the Student Senate elected its officers for 1965-66: President; Richard Dacey (Fraternities), Vice-President; Karen Garvin (Arnold), Secretary; Linda Perlstein (Eugene Field), and Treasurer; Gary Bombardier (Gorman).

Following the swearing in of the new class officers and senators, and prior to the nominating speeches, President William Landis addressed the assembly on its role at the University, the nature of the office of president, and some of the problems the Senate must face.

Landis told the Senators that they have the responsibility of "developing an image of increased respectability" and reminded the Senate of its three basic principles: "right of the majority to rule. . .right of the minority to be heard. . .and the right of absentees to be protected."

PRESIDENT LANDIS FEELS that the biggest problem the Senate has is in finding its own capabilities. He feels that the Senate needs another "long-range program" other than the publication of the Budgets Act, and stressed a need for the Senate to carry through a "planned program or platform", something which the Senate has never done.

Landis asked the senators to commit themselves to the Senate and "strive for the highest," and commenting on the presidency he said that "he (the president) must take the lead in a new order of things", and that his "scope must be wide and no longer constricted in thought."

President Landis then thanked the Senate for working with him and expressed the hope that he left with the senators "the conviction and the will to carry on."

Nominations for president then began with ex-senator Don Boyd acting as parlimentarian and Chief Justice Edward Waterman presiding over the elections.

THE FIRST TO BE nominated was Senator Richard Dacey who in his nomination acceptance speech called on the Senate to develop an "image of increased respectability."

Nominated by Senate Treasurer Joe Piecuch, who stressed Dacey's "honesty, sense of purpose and willingness to serve," the presidential hopeful commented that the burden of the Senate rests with the president and suggested a "policy formation board" to help formulate the executive's long range program.

Dacey, who won by the slim majority of 26-22, asked the Senate for its support in his primary concern of "cultivating an image of responsibility for the Senate."

Also speaking on behalf of Senator Dacey were Senators Bonnie Stokes, Bill Caron and Rusty Swartz.

ACCEPTING HIS NOMINATION with a call for closer co-operation with the administration, Senator Robert Cripps (Mills) the opposing presidential candidate commented that the Senate must "divert its energies" to prevent it from falling behind the expanding University.

Cripps also suggested a strengthening of the Senate officers with the president "an all-around person. . .thorough in parlimentary procedure", and told the assembly that "we can not go off showing independence. . .we must work with and understand the administration."

Speaking on behalf of Senator Cripps, Vice-President Larry Rutstein called it a "great honor to be nominating Bob Cripps in a time when we need leadership that has an ample knowledge of all Senate operations."

The Senate then considered the nominations of Senators Jim Allen and Karen Garvin for the office of vice-president, a post which Larry Rutstein calls "the overseer of good citizenship in the Senate . . . representative of the president" and a position which requires knowledge of the "intricicies of the Senate."

NOMINATED BY SENATOR BILL DONOVAN, Senator Allen, former president of the Stockbridge Senate, called for not only closer work between Senate officers but "closer co-operation among the Senate and class officers."

Speaking for Senator Allen, Donovan noted his understanding of the need for "co-operation between students, faculty and administration and told the body that his candidate "sees the vice-presidency as a complement not a supplement to the presidency."

Opposing Senator Allen and winning the vice-presidency by a vote of 26-20 was Senator Karen Garvin, Chairman of Women's Affairs Committee and a two - year Senate member.

Senator Garvin proposed that the Senate "recoup its status and assume its rightful place in the University."

FEELING THAT THE vice-president should have a greater function, Senator Garvin stated that "he must maintain close surveillance over Senate committees. . .and be a liason between the Senate and administration."

Citing Senator Garvin's participation on committees and in the Senate, Senator Phil Berlin, in the nominating address commented on her "ability to discern what is to be done and what is to be said."

Senator Berlin feels that "the steady flow of resignations" proves that the status of the Senate "depends on the status of those elected to the Senate especially in the office of vice-president."

Third in order of elections, but by far first in the amount of excitement and interest displayed, was the secretarial race and final election of Senator Linda Perlstein to the post.

L. to R.: Linda Perlstein, Dick Dacey, Karen Garvin, Gary Bombardier.

THE NOMINATION OF THREE candidates and failure of any one to get a majority of 24 votes forced a second ballot to be held in which candidate Linda Shapiro was eliminated. Debate was then reopened to consider the two final candidates Linda Perlstein and Mary O'Connell.

Senator Pete Bosworth noted Senator O'Connell's work in the Senate and commented on her "knowledge and concern with the Senate and the University."

In her opening remarks Senator O'Connell said that she would "welcome the responsibility" and promised, if elected, to do her best in assuming the work of the secretary.

Senate Secretary Judy Crooker then took the floor pointing out the "enthusiastic and energetic" qualities of her nominee Senator Perlstein which Secretary Crooker felt would make her capable for the job and be able to meet the deadlines.

CLEARING UP ANY DOUBTS as to Senator Perlstein's ability to work with the administration, Senator Crooker noted the secretary-elect's work on committees, with administrators, and as a Collegian news reporter stating that she has the "time and willingness to work."

Following Senator Perlstein's fourth ballot election (26-20) the Senate ended a long meeting on a quick note with the unanimous selection of Gary Bombardier as Senate Treasurer.

Senator Bombardier, who was running unopposed, has been a member of the Senate for one year and has capably chaired the Senate Budgets Committee.

UMass Trustees Read Crime Comm. Letter

by Pat Petow,

President John W. Lederle read to the April 26 meeting of the University Trustees a letter from Crime Commission Chairman Aufred Gardner, pledging that the final report will contain no mention of the University. The first draft of the Commission report, published by the Boston Herald, had charged impropriety.

Gardner indicated that the conclusion reached from the draft was premature and expressed regret that it had been used.

The original version made this comment on the investigation into certain activities of UMass and the UMass Building Authority:

"IT STOPPED THESE in their initial stages because of lack of available personnel.

"If a new crime commission is appointed under the legislation recommended, the Commission recommends that the investigation be resumed by it.

"If a new crime commission is not appointed, the Commission recommends the appointment of a special commission . . . to make a thorough investigation of the capital expenditures of the University and of . . . contracts . . . to investigate allegations of continued thefts of grain and to investigate the activities of the University of Massachusetts Building Authority.

THE HERALD WROTE, "It will be difficult to explain why, if there was no reason for the comment on the University contained in the original document, it appeared there in the first place."

Spring Day Fiasco

"Know thyself" and "Moderation in all things" said Plato. It is a tragedy that the students of the University could not have listened to him and followed his advice.

Yesterday was Spring Day. Supposedly it was to be a day when students could leave the tensions of the academic world behind, and completely relax. Unfortunately, this was not enough to satisfy a portion of the participants.

While the celebration remained on campus it remained in good taste. Perhaps those who were responsible for turning it into a reckless, irresponsible crowd, were afraid to cause any trouble on campus. However, as soon as the crowd left the campus it started to get out of hand.

By the end of the day, all limits of good taste had been violated, and the celebration had turned into a mere excuse to get drunk and act wild. Although only a small percentage of the students were really out of hand, they made themselves so evident that they could hardly be ignored.

But, where does the responsibility lie? Is it with the students who plan the event? Is it with the thousands who may participate? Perhaps we can place part of the burden on these two bodies, but it is very evident looking back that there is a REAL NEED for some form of administrative cooperation.

The mere presence of a few faculty members and administrators would have been enough to avoid the fiasco which Spring Day became. It probably would have been enough to prevent the injuries which occurred. With approval from the faculty senate, the event could have been held on campus and sponsored oy a responsible group of leaders.

There are two things which we are now forced to recognize. First, students need some form of break before finals and will take one whether or not it is authorized. And, second, such an event must have University sanction and control if it is to run smoothly and successfully.

Editorial Chairman

A Measure of Knowledge

It is a well known fact that grades do not necessarily reflect a student's intelligence nor his comprehension of the suject matter. Yet, there has to be some criterion for evaluating a student's performance in a course. The essence of the entire problem is to devise a grading system which reflects as accurately as possible scholastic achievement and at the same time is easy to administer.

Few people would argue that the present 4.0 grading system at UMass is not easy to administer. However, much doubt arises as to whether this method of grading is accurate enough to warrant its continued use on campus.

To begin with, the 4.0 grading system doesn't differentiate with enough accuracy between different levels of academic achievement. To prove this contention, let us examine the grades of Student X and Student Y who have the same course and the same professor. The professor gives Student X a numerical grade of 70 and Student Y a 79. When the grades of these two students are processed in the IBM office in South College, both will receive a letter grade of C and a total of six quality points, provided the course is a three credit one.

From the preceding example it becomes self-evident that the 4.0 grading system is highly inaccurate. Assuming that the professor has accurately evaluated the ability of each student, it then follows that Student Y with a numerical grade of 79 is obviously entitled to a higher grade than Student X with a 70. Unfortunately, with the present grading system it is impossible to rectify such a discrepancy in academic evalution.

This problem of accurate grade representation threatens to become even more acute since the University is contemplating raising the required graduating cume to a 2.0. Raising the cum required for graduation will obviously make it more difficult for students to stay in school, and as a result, a more accurate marking system should be initiated in order to prevent excessive and unnecessary academic failures. To fail students out of college because the marking system doesn't adequately assess their capabilities is a great injustice.

The most obvious solution to the grade problem is the use of a strictly numerical evalution. This would mean that if a student receeived a 76 from his professor, a 76 would appear on his IBM transcript. Unfortunately, in an institution the size of the Universiy, such a grading method would involve too muc work and would therefore be impractical.

Perhaps, a happy medium in grading could be achieved by assigning pluses and minuses. Under this method, a student would no longer receive a flat B, but rather would receive either a B- or a B+. This grading could be adopted to a 8 point scale. If a student received a D- he would be given 1 quality point, if he received a D+, he would be given 2 quality points. This procedure would continue all the way to an A+ which would be worth 8 points.

The task of criticizing and removing an old grading system is quite easy. What is more difficult, however, is to find a more efficient replacement. An Ad Hoc Student Senate Committee is currently investigating the advisability of changing the present grading system, and is polling students and faculty in order to gauge the campus opinions on this matter. Students and faculty are urged to cooperate in this poll in order to help with the search for an efficient and just system of evaluation.

Is It Worth It?

To the Editor,

Isogon Chapter of Mortar Board seems to have gotten waylaid among the vines of the campus image building wilderness. A campaign to beautify the campus is commendable, but not for the Senior Women's Honor Society.

Mortar Board has among its members some of the most capable of the Senior women, coeds who have demonstrated their capabilities, as such the role of Mortar Board should be one of leadership in University community affairs.

There are campus and off-campus areas of concern which could use the leadership and talent of such a group, for one the students of UMass Boston and for another the under-privileged high school students of the state to whom a tour of the campus and some advice might mean the difference between seeking a college education and a high school drop out.

If refuse and worn paths means more to legislators, prospective freshmen and quests than the academic environment of the University, then is the struggle of so many students, faculty and administration members worth it?

In Appreciation

To the Editor:

At the last meeting of the Sophomore Executive Council, Dave Cummings, our President for the past two years, announced his resignation effective immediately. As one who struggled with him through the formidable organizational morass of our Freshman year, I can attest to the great amount of personal effort which Dave unhesitatingly gave to the Class. It was not an uncommon sight prior to any of our events to find Dave dangling from a ladder as the last minute rush caught us short-handed.

I believe I can speak for my fellow-Exec. Council members, and indeed the entire class of 1967, in expressing our deep appreciation for the untold hours Dave gave us. We regret to accept his resignation, but respect his personal decision to do so.

Many thanks, Dave. I hope that we can have the benefit of your experience as your schedule permits.

Don Hawkes, Soph Exec Council

Thanks!

To the Editor:

I would like, through the Collegian, to extend my sincere gratitude to those sophomores who, in the recent election, expressed their confidence in my ability to represent them in the Student Senate.

Honorary Societies

To the Editor,

In answer to Miss Neilon's editorial on "honor" societies, we, as members of Scrolls, would like to inform her of the requirements for Scrolls and the process of selection, which she obviously, by her editorial, does not understand.

First, Scrolls and Maroon Keys are not "honor" societies, but honorary societies, which infers that high scholastic achievement is not the only requirement for selection. In spite of the seemingly low requirements for Maroon Keys, the overall average of 1965-66 Keys is a 2.7. Eligibility for Scrolls includes a minimum average of 2.6. The overall average of 1965-66 Scrolls is well above that minimum. In addition to this substantial average, a prospective Scroll must have participated in dormitory and campus activities.

We are especially opposed to Miss Neilon's statement that there is an "unwritten quota" of Scrolls for each sorority. During the selection proecss Scrolls take special care that Greek affiliation or high school activities do not influence the choice of new Scrolls. This is the only "unwritten" code by which Scrolls abide, and they do it fervently.

It should be obvious that no quota system exists, by both the varying distribution of new Scrolls among the sororities from year to year and the substantial number of independent women chosen as Scrolls.

In answering this editorial, we hope we have removed any reservations which may have existed in the student body before or subsequent to Miss Neilon's editorial, in which she exhibits an extreme lack of knowledge concerning our sophomore honorary societies.

As I See It

Our Generation

by Georgios Pan Piperopulies

Turbulent and uncertain are the times and anxious and disturbed the souls and minds of this generation, which is desperately striving to realize itself amidst the ugly ruins that our fathers have thrown in front of us.

And this era, of cybernetics and technological miracles, has done at least one thing: it hung overhead a deadly "nuclear" mushroom, while you and I fight once more in keeping up with the History of "homo sapiens," the endless battle that, in my opinion, the first "pethecanthropus erectus" put aptly in saying: "who am I?.

• • • • •

The rigid boundaries of the Biblical "Babylonia" have been shattered. Twentieth century has seen the World's people come together again, both in friendly terms and in wartime.

And much that we knew of the other's existence, once we faced him, "the stranger," we were puzzled. Anthropologists knew it all along, and so did the politicians and the diplomats. But the great lay public, only recently acquired first hand experience, thanks to the rapid progress in interglobal communications.

• • • • •

Sensitively the soul of the worshipper embraces fondly the quiet remnants of civilizations and peoples past, in Rome and Athens. Overwhelmed, fascinated the wonderer runs an eager eye, with a pricked curiosity over the miracles of computers and machinery that proudly the new world offers to its visitors.

And yet, though the Grecian chariot has been replaced by the swift Mustangs, and the time-old abacus gave in to the sophisticated electronic computer, the people remain the same that they always were; some concerns, loves, jealousies, aspirations; problems that always were the sine qua non quality of the human predicament.

Unfortunately, Man seems to proceed even on the same assumptions : the preconceived notions, the stereotypes. One comes to the U.S. expecting to see the "Ugly American" pacing up and down the wide avenues of this country; or roams through Athens and Rome, with scrutiny measuring the natives trying in vain to find the Senecas and the Caesars, the Platos and the Homers.

I was born and raised in the old continent, and I spent five years in this country. I know one thing, rather well: whether in the streets of America, or the alleys of Europe, you are apt to meet only people: bad and good, sophisticated and simple, compassionate and unconcerned. Just people, who are what they are because they individually and deliberately choose to be so, and not because they are Americans, or Europeans.

The availability of means is disproportionately distributed. But I am only referring to material means. The humanity that lays interwoven with each individual is more or less the same, despite color, and nationality. The problems that face us all, the problems imbedded in the human predicament, are the same.

Our generation is faced with problems; they may not be harder, or much different than those of previous ones. And yet since we face them for the first time, to us they are unique. History ironically never made itself felt as an effective teacher. But today we possess the means to come in close contact, to exchange ideas and opinions on a world wide basis.

At UMass, in Sorbanne, at Nairobi, in Tokyo, young minds are striving to come in grips with their own existence, to build a better tomorrow. Why don't we join hands and work side by side ? . . .

Last night the University Theatre opened its production of Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie.

Featured in the leading role of Amanda Wingfield was Senior Patricia Long.

Miss Long assumed the role last week when the orginial Amanda, Paula Norton '65, had to leave the show because of illness. An usually fast study, Miss Long mastered all the lines in one week. Prior to that time she had been assistant director and was familiar with the movements and timing.

Miss Long has played leading or supporting roles in several other University Theatre productions. She was Lavinia in Shaw's Androcles and the Lion, the chorus leader in Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral, Regina in Ibsen's Ghosts, and Ann in Warren's All the King's Men.

Recently elected to Phi Beta Kappa, she is a past member of the executive board of the student dramatic organization, Roister Doisters. She has served on the Collegian staff and is a counselor in Arnold House. She is currently writing her honors thesis in government.

In addition to her acting accomplishments and other activities Miss Long has served in various positions on the production staff. She has been Mistress of Costumes, Makeup, and Properties at one time or another. On occasion she has been in charge of publicity. She stage managed for the Roister Doister One-Act Plays.

Miss Long's performance as Amanda can be seen again this evening and tomorrow in the Student Union Ballroom.

Nat'l. Frat. Warned To Remove Clauses

The Stanford University administration and the campus chapter of Sigma Chi joined forces in a letter April 29 to rid the national fraternity of de facto discrimination. The letter from the director of university relations, Lyle M. Nelson, to the national president of Sigma Chi, Harry V. Wade, of Indianapolis, described the year's attempt to pledge Negro students to membership.

Sent to 135 other university heads, the letter contained a warning from former Sigma Chi member, Montana Senator Lee Matcalf, that provisions of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 forbid aid to any institution practicing or supporting racial discrimination.

THE CONTROVERSY BEGAN when the charter of Stanford's Sigma Chi was temporarily suspended by the national executive committee after the pledging of Negro freshman Kenneth M. Washington. Nelson observed that Sigma Chi several years ago removed a racial discrimination clause to replace it with a social acceptability one.

The chapter notified Wade on Feb. 4, 1965 that it intended to rush on a non-discriminatory basis: Wade replied four days later, that "it is an unkind, ungentlemenly, and needlessly cruel act to pledge anyone of any description to any chapter if you know he has little chance of being initiated."

Lawyers have been retained by the chapter to oppose the suspension.

Glass Menagerie — Backstage

by Tom Donovan
Day Editor

The University Theatre's Spring presentation this year is what is often termed Tennessee Williams' finest effort, 'The Glass Menagerie. The highlight of the play this weekend, directed by speech professor Cosmo A. Catalano, is the use of the "theatre in the round." This is the first use of the circular audience stage concept on the U-Mass campus.

But one of the more fascinating aspects of this production is the overwhelming amount of backstage work which is needed for only three performances. On an average night, the stage crew, in addition to the director, starts work early in the afternoon. They break up at 3:00 a.m.

THE CREW comes at 4 and works until 9:00 when a technical rehearsal begins During these five hours, they work frantically putting up towers for lighting, setting up the seating plan, programming the revolutions of the turntable stage, cueing the sound effects to the action, splicing wires, rewiring a complete controlroom of electronics equipment, fitting costumes, focusing lights, and searching in vain for non-existant extension cords.

Then everything is rechecked, reviewed, changed or deleted. The crew relaxes. Rehearsal begins.

NOW AN AUDIENCE, the crew begins to see the play in a new light. The characters on the stage are now reality. It is the same stage that the crew was hurrying across with shouted orders just minutes before.

The crew is now in a unique phase. The actions and emotions on stage are now starting to reach them—the audience. They feel the joy, the anger, the frustration of the characters.

Then the lights snap on; the director's bull horn awakens with an alarm clock's abruptness.

They blink and squint in the light as a prop is repositioned, a cue replaced. The glare dies, drawing the audience back into the circle of illumination that is the stage.

BUT THIS AUDIENCE isn't quite a whole audience. It is also, at all times, a stage crew. It is as if each individual were looking at the action with special glasses. On one eye is a magnifying lens, bringing him a personal communion with those on stage; on the other is a reducer, giving the crew member a dispassionate, critical appraisal of the action, the production, the mechanics.

Despite all the familiarity with the production, the frequent interruptions, the small mistakes, there is a breath-holding silence when the last character leaves the stage, the lights die, and the music fades away. The crew is now an audience and as an audience, they are awed. They sit still.

The lights come on. The director appears on the stage. He pauses, then begins moving, giving instructions. The crew blinks, then starts toward the stage. They are again a crew.

All are now working noisily on their jobs. It is now business; it is only a wooden platform.

But for a brief, undying moment it was, it is, a reality—a play.

Fly Above The Crowd

Have you ever heard of the UMass Flying Club? There are many students on campus who are unaware of the existence of a flying club at this school, or that the club has its own airplane. The Club is a Registered Student Organiaztion with a threefold purpose.

1. To provide the opportunity for any student on campus to learn how to fly at lowest possible cost.

2. To provide experienced pilots with an inexpensive way to keep in practice.

3. To provide, as a public service, speedy transportation within a 300-mile radius of Amherst, for any member of the faculty, administration, or student body with urgent or official business to conduct.

The Flying Club is currently presenting a series of beautiful color movies on various aspects of aviation travel. The next two films are to be shown on May 7 and 14, Wed. at 8:00 p.m. at the SU.

Membership in the club is open to any member of the university community, male or female, student or staff No flying experience is necessary. If you have never ridden in a light airplane, but think you might be interested in learning how to fly, you can obtain more information, or arrange for a free trial ride in the Flying Club's airplane by contacting: Robert Freedman, pres. at Greenough House.

The U. of Mass Flying Club officers for the coming year are: President, Robert A. Freedman; Vice president, Dick McGee; Treasurer, Bruce Patten; Flight Officer, Charles Jack; Faculty Advisor, Prof. Mitchell, English Dept.

JUST FOUR MORE WEEKS

New York, N Y. (ED)—Great things have happened to beachwear in the last few years, but from all indication the view from the beach will reach its peak this summer.

Pale, little-girl laces, colorful prints, sexy black cut-outs and sleek stretch suits will all be creating excitement during the coming months. Whether you're the bikini-type or you go more for the high-fashion, high-necked one-piecers, you'll be right in style, for never before have seashore fashions enjoyed so wide a range.

But bathing suits are only a small part, figuratively speaking, of the beachwear picture this year. There are a host of other pluses for the complete "look" of the well-dressed water maiden.

Starting at the top, swim caps have really come into their own as a striking fashion note, with new and practical advantages which will please all women who want to preserve their hairdos. (And what woman doesn't worry about falling locks at the beach?)

PIXIE — It's fun to greet the summer sun in this head-flattering ruffled swim cap that stays morning fresh even when wet. This one is called the Masner-Ade and it comes in colors to coordinate with this year's swimsuit fashions. An Aqua Original from U.S. Rubber at $5.98.

PROFUSION OF FLOWERS
The flattery of sculptured petals highlights this beachgoer's pretty face. The cap is Four Seasons from the new Aqua Florals collection of all-rubber caps. Costs $5.98.

Names of some of the new styles give a clue to their bright, exciting look — Ruffles .. Hi-Hat .. Fiesta .. Cream Puff .. Waterlilly .. Flapper.

Aside from swim caps and bathing suits, other fashion news for the beach set this year includes cover-ups, from gay terry cloth prints to the sheerest of fabrics, bright shifts, big bold beach towels, and big straw beach bags.

Cotton print bathing suits with short mid-thigh shifts to match are very much in vogue. The sporty looking denims and terries are as popular as ever, out the "dressy" look on the beach will be more and more apparent this year.

Beach towels, too, are part of the fashion picture. They're gay prints, heady designs of stripes or flowers in the most subtle or the brightest colors. Beach towels are made extra large so you can fully stretch out on them while soaking up the "rays."

And of course en route to seaside destination, it's fashionable to sport thongs or sandles in a complementary color to the rest of your outfit. Styles in beach shoes are as varied as in swim caps . so from tip to toe you can be on top of the fashion parade at beach, lake or pool for '65

OUTING CLUB

Climb Above the Crowd

by Tom Lyman

The Outing Club has begun the Spring climbing season by running several advanced climbing trips to the "Gunks," near New Paltz, New York, and to various areas in New Hampshire in addition to many climbing trips of a less technical nature to areas nearer to campus.

On a recent trip to Franconia Notch, N. H., several club members were introduced to continuous, roped climbing and the problems encountered in this more-or-less alpine area.

ON THIS TRIP, five club members, Sally Peters, Tom Hanley, Pat Andrew, Larry Johnson and Tom Lyman, ascended the "Eaglet," (see photo) an unusual formation on the east wall of the Notch and unique in being the only isolated pinnacle of any size yet discovered in New England.

THE ASCENT INCLUDED two pitches to the saddle and a final short one to the top of the isolated block. Descent was accomplished by means of a 150 foot rappel from the saddle onto the scree slopes below.

The club welcomes anyone interested in technical or non-technical climbing or any of its other activities to join it whenever possible. See sign-up sheets opposite telephones in S. U. lobby.

All-Nighter Pills O.K. — If Used Carefully

by CPS

Using pep pills for one or two days around exam time does not seriously impair health or performance, according to a Food and Drug Administration medical officer.

On the other hand, "the use of sedatives or stimulants to augment the pleasure-producing effect of alcohol, such as might occur at unsupervised social gatherings," is extremely dangerous. This, according to Dr. Norman Alberstadt, could lead to "automobile accidents or impulsive sexual assults."

ALBERSTADT DISCUSSED the physical effects of using stimulants and sedatives in a seminar of the annual meeting of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

Among the stimulants are amphetamines, including amphetamine itself, methamphetamine, desoxyphedrine, and phenmetrazine. Amphetamine drugs are also known as "benzies," "co-pilots," "hearts," and "footballs." Among the sedatives are barbituates, such as phenobarbital, pentobarbital, secobarbital, and amobarbital. Barbituate drugs are also known as "red birds," "goof balls," "yellow jackets," or "blue havens."

UNDER FEDERAL LAW, illegal delivery of amphetamines or barbituates is punishable by a fine and imprisonment. Illegal possession is not an offense under federal law, but the drugs can be confiscated from a person involved in their illegal sale. Illegal possession, however, is an offense under many state and local laws.

Amphetamines are prescribed chiefly to cut appetite and relieve depression, Alberstadt said. Their effect is influenced by the personality and mental state of the user.

STUDIES OF INDIVIDUALS who do not use amphetamine habitually but who take normal doses for 2 or 3 days show that the drug is most effective in "mitigating the effects of fatigue on psychomoter performance," Alberstadt reported. These studies, however, give "no assurance that amphetamine taken daily for one or two weeks of hard work and a minimal amount of sleep would be equally effective in avoiding fatigue, or that they are not harmful to bodily health when used in this way."

Barbituates have a depressant effect on the central nervous system and are usually prescribed to induce sleep, or, in small amounts, a calming effect. An occasional user, however, reacts to a normal dosage with excitement rather than sedation, Alberstadt warned.

Taking barbituate the night before an exam would not be a good idea, according to Alberstadt, for "there is impairment of psychomotor performance for several hours after awakening."

"THUS THERE IS A HAZARD in using barbituates to induce sleep if the subject is going to engage in activities which require complete alertnes the following morning," Alberstadt warned.

"When taken in small doses for daytime sedation, the barbituates alleviate feelings of anxiety, and in normal subjects, produce little if any change in psychomotor performance. With larger doses, such as are used to induce sleep, a significant impairment of overall psychomotor function is produced consistently."

CHRONIC USE BY INDIVIDUALS "habituated" to amphetamines often produces weight loss. "In doses of 20 mg or more, amphetamine usually causes a rise in blood pressure. It can also cause abnormalities of heart rhythm and can precipitate attacks of angina pectoris in certain individuals," Alberstadt said.

"It should not be used by persons with advanced arteriosclerosis, overactive thyroid, or nervousness. Some individuals are unusually sensitive to the drug and develop symptoms of overdosage after taking a normal dose," he continued.

Willis Report Continues To Receive Critical Analysis

by State House News Service

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON—The initial recommendation of the so-caled Willis Commission which calls for a sweeping reorganization of the State Department of Education has run into an in-depth critical assessment that could pin a "dunce cap" on the entire Master Plan for Education in Massachusetts.

IN SUBSTANCE, the original recommendation of the Willis Commission, which was and is officially entitled the Massachusetts Educational Commission, calls for a reorganization of the Department of Education.

Soon after the first recommendation was filed by Senator Kevin B. Barrington (D-Salem), who headed the Willis Commission, so headed the Willis Commission, it ran into the first threat of enactment. It came from the students at Southeastern Mass. Technilogical Inst. They viewed the proposed reorganization complex as outlawing the teaching of liberal arts at SMTI.

SMTI won its point and the issue was resolved when the State Administration committee favorably reported into the House a redrafted bill which was sped to the Ways and Means committee.

REPORTEDLY, MEMBERS of the Ways and Means committee are disturbed by provisions of the bill which say that the Board of Public Education "SHALL" do thus and so. Such things as: "The Board of Public Education shall establish maximum pupil-teacher ratios for classes in elementary and secondary schools," and "the Board of Public Education shall establish the permissible and mandatory ages for school attendance."

From what the Ways and Means committee has learned, the objections to the provisions dealing with the Board of Higher Education are not as extensive. They center, it was reported, on the fact that none of the institutions of public education would be represented on the board. It has been suggested that the University of Massachusetts, the technological institutes, the state colleges and the regional community colleges be represented.

THESE EDUCATIONAL facilities, the committee has been advsed are not satisfied with the Willis Commission's suggestion that there be an advisory commission to the Board of Higher Education which would consist of representatives of th various facilities.

Speakers Announced

Archibald MacLeish, poet, playright and educator, will be the speaker at Smith College's 87th commencement on Sunday, June 6, it was announced by President Thomas C. Mendenhall Degrees will be awarded to 510 members of the senior class.

Mary I. Bunting, president of Radcliffe College and a Commissioner of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, will be the speaker at the 144th Amherst College Commencement May 28.

Dr. Alexander Awarded Fernald Membership

Dr. Charles Paul Alexander, in recognition for his monumental achievements as an entomologist and because of the personal inspiration he has been to students both as teacher and as friend, was recently presented the first Honorary Membership given by the Fernald Entomological Club.

DR. ALEXANDER

Dr. Alexander arrived at UMass in 1922; he has held the positions of head of the dept. of entomology, head of the dept. of entomology and zoology, Acting Dean of the School of Science, and Dean of the School of Science. He was appointed Professor Emeritus on his retirement in 1959.

IN HIS SCIENTIFIC career, Dr. Alexander has published over 860 papers and described almost 10,000 new animal species. He is still actively publishing with over 20 papers in press at this time.

The Honorary Membership was presented by Charles H. Nelson, a graduate student in entomology. The Fernald Club President, David W. Root, and Secretary, Robert Grahame, signed the scroll presented to Dr. Alexander.

Skateboarding Hits UMass; Accident Rates Climb High

by Norm Trump,
Staff Reporter

UMass is keeping up with the times—infirmary accident reports prove it. If you've seen people careering down Baker Hill on two pairs of skate wheels attached to a board, you have witnessed the landlubber sport that's sweeping the country to the tune of $100 million this year.

This dry version of ocean surfing, known as "skate-boarding" or "sidewalk surfing," eliminates the danger of being drowned, but it's not all laughs.

DR. H. A. PETERS of the University Health Services calls it Russian roulette on wheels. Sooner or later a skateboarder takes the spill that really hurts.

Every sport has its degrees of proficiency, and skateboarding is no exception. In the "kick-out," the rider removes his front foot from the board, pushes with his back foot and catches the board as it flips in the air. Others "hang ten." They hang their feet over the board's front edge and scoot down a hill on one pair of wheels.

"SINCE APRIL 1," reports Dr. Peters, "we've had six skateboard accidents that required emergency treatment."

The list of injuries reads like an excerpt from a medical text. One person wound up with multiple abrasions of the back, shoulders, hands and elbows after he hit a bump and bounced down a hill minus his skateboard.

Another person had a deep abrasion of the left knee, but got off lightly compared to someone else with a fracture and dislocation of the ankle.

DR. PETERS FEELS that the sport is one of the most hazardous in the country. "The bystander hit by a runaway skateboard may be hurt worse than the rider who fell off," he said.

Since most of the accidents occur in the evening, the first indication a person may have of a runaway skateboard heading toward him could be a crunch in the shins. Luckily, it hasn't happened yet.

At an American College Health Association convention which Dr. Peters recently attended, doctors from schools where there are available hills for the sport reported similar accidents.

"STUDENTS HERE DON'T seem to realize that if you're going to skateboard at all, you need a smooth surface to travel on," said Dr. Peters. "Some of the roads on campus don't quite will the bill," he added with a smile.

Some cities are becoming alarmed at skateboarding accidents and are either thinking of passing laws to regulate the sport or digging through existing ordinances to find one that applies. Other cities classify skateboards as vehicles, like motor scooters and keep them off sidewalks that way.

"I DON'T FORESEE any University regulation concerning skateboarding. Like any other sport, if you don't use your judgment, you get hurt," said Dr. Peters.

If skateboarding goes the way of the hula-hoop, we might have a safer fad next fall.

"Glass Menagerie"- Called Near Perfect

by Janet Sullivan

Perching upon folding chair number 452, craning to see over three rows of hats and heads, leaves something to be desired; but for all that, comfort was the only thing lacking in Cosmo Cataiano's near-perfect production of Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie.

Ken Bordner, as Tom and Narrator in the "Our-Town grown-up" play, was always convincing, and in parts more than that. In the drunk scene he begins to "rise and shine," and sustains his good performance to the end.

THE VOICE AND GESTURE of Sheila Ferrini, Laura; how to describe it? Vibrant? Enthralling! Never out of character as shy but intense Miss Wingfield, she fits her mother's little aphorism perfectly: "Still waters run deep."

Patricia Long was an admirable Amanda Wingfield, southernly motherly throughout. (Is it my imagination, or does Amanda's Southern accent waver at times?)

"Medium-homely" Phil Bedaw did a good job as the Gentleman Caller with his how-to-win-friends - and - influence - people charley-high-school smile.

THE STAGE AND EFFECTS are worth more than ordinary comment: not the usual out-front audience, but a prefabricated (those folding chairs again) theatre - in - the-round built with a turntable in its center. Scenes were shadowy and very effectively lighted; especially the merry-go-round swirls, and (pardon the cliche) the haunting music.

I sit here thinking of little, picayune things to write; but for the entire length of the play I was completely spellbound. Here is a play unified by four strong characters, acted by four strong actors.

THE ALMOST EMBARRASSING humility of the Wingfields draws great empathetic response. The actors and their well integrated environment are a great success.

Campaign Underway To Beautify UMass

UMASS D'GS CAMPUS BEAUTIFICATION: Members of Mortar Board, University senior women's honorary society, assist University President John W. Lederle and Building Authority member Miss Victoria Schuck (at right) in planting one of three Japanese cherry trees presented to UMass by Miss Schuck at ceremonies in front of the Student Union Thursday afternoon. Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women, is at left in back row. The presentation of the trees was the beginning of a campus beautification program inaugurated by Miss Schuck and the Mortar Boards.

A campiagn to beautify the University campus was inaugurated on Thursday with the planting of four cherry trees in front of the Student Union.

The long term project to bring new trees and shrubs to the University and to keep the campus green will be carried on by Mortar Board, senior women's honorary society.

TO START THE campaign, Dr. Victoria Schuck, professor of political science at Mount Holyoke college and a former UMass trustee, donated three cherry trees to be planted in front of the Union. When Weston Nurseries of Hopkinton realized why she was purchasing the trees, they added an extra one as their donation to the program.

In making the presentation to UMass President John W. Lederle, Miss Schuck said she hopes this program of campus beautification will be carried on by students, faculty and friends of the University.

She mentioned the hard work that had gone into providing good architecture for the University, and said that there should be pretty trees and shrubs to complement these buildings.

MISS ANN WILLIAMS, president of Mortar Board, said, "Mortar Board intends to carry on the campus beautification program. Earlier this year we saw plans for some of the new buildings and became convinced that we should do all in our power to make the surroundings pretty so that the University can be renowned for its beauty as well as its educational quality."

Contracts Total $895,533

UM Facilities Improved

Contracts totalling $895,533 for work at the University of Massachusetts and the Archives Building of the State House have been awarded by the Department of Administration and Finance.

Continuing the refurbishing of the State House, an $8833 contract for improving the display cases and lighting in the Archives Building, where documents dating to colonial times are on display, was awarded to Modern Decorators, Inc., of Winthrop.

New coal-handling facilities to service the growing University of Massachusetts will be provided under a $213,700 contract awarded to Fontaine Brothers, Inc. of Springfield.

Additions to the steam and electrical distributions systems at the university will be made under a $673,000 contract awarded to S. Volpe and Co., Inc. of Boston.

All contracts were awarded to the lowest eligible bidders.

16 UMass Students Fined Total of $531

Sixteen University of Massachusetts students were fined a total of $531 by District Court Judge Charles J. O'Connor for parking violations on the university campus.

Clarence P. Hill, 22, of 4921 8th St. NW, Washington, D.C., and Terry Swanson, 23, of 143 Waverly St., Belmont, were each fined $66.

Richard A. Soble, 21, of 22 Wesser Rd., Newton, was fined $61, while Anthony W. Divver 22, of Montague Rd., Sunderland, was fined $51.

Other fines assessed were $48 to Robert S. Annino, 21, of 81 Queen Ave., West Springfield; $41 to Roderick M. Berry Jr., 23, of 10 Mitchell St., Middleboro; $38 to John T. Murphy, 21, of 124 Edson St., Brockton; $23 to Douglas B. Band, 21, of 256 Gufford Ave., Summerset; Peter M. Adams, 19, of 12 Chester Ave., $18 to Paul F. Feinberg, 20, of 215 Franklin St., Newton; $18 to David J. Giarla, 19, of 19 Ocean St., Nahant; Sharon M. Josephson, 26, of 6 Main St., Greenfield; Stanley H. Piatkowski, 31, of Meadow St., Housatonic and Terry H. Wells, 24, of 83 Gray St., Amherst; $13 to Lawrence T. Schmitt, 25, of 107 Alpine Dr., Amherst, and $11 to Robert E. Bertzell, 34, of 611 Lincoln Apts., Amherst.

In other court action, Kerry P. O'Brien of 381 Prospect St. had his driving to endanger charge dismissed. O'Brien was charged with driving to endanger and speeding on Rte. 9, Williamsburg April 19. He was fined $25, though, on the speeding complaint.

Jefferey P. Tripp of Dexton Ln., Rydal, Pa., paid $25 for a registration violation in Amherst last September. An insurance violation was filed.

Ping-Pong Record

by Tom Donovan,
Day Editor

Last night a new all-time record was set on the UMass campus when two freshmen attempted a marathon ping-pong volley.

Phil Lerner and Stan Levco of Noah Webster house started the volley at 10:00 p.m. and lasted for exactly 61 minutes before they lost control. At one point, the crowd which had gathered almost panicked when the contestants faltered and seemed about to stop.

THE TWO HOPE to establish a new fad on campus when they try to further their record in a Sunday night attempt which is hoped to last until Monday mornig.

If the record is strong enough Lerner and Levco plan to challenge Grayson house to an open competition in the near future.

National Teach-In Set For May 15

by Joe Bradley,
Senior Reporter

Plans for a National Teach-In scheduled for May 15 in Washington have been announced by the Inter-University Committee for a Public Hearing on Viet Nam.

According to a release by the committee's secretary, Anatol Rapoport, three speeches will be given "by prominent members of the academic community."

The information states: "Across the country, university and other groups are planning simultaneous local teach-ins." The Washington program will be relayed to local groups by telephone cable.

The group has invited Undersecretary of State McGeorge Bundy "and other prominent administration spokesmen" to defend administration policy.

Congressional leaders are invited to speak at an evening session. Government officials will be questioned by a "reactor panel."

The group also appealed for sponsors, contribution of time, attendance at Washington and funds.

The address is P. O. Box 1383, Ann Arbor, Mich., 48106.

Commanders Installed

On Thursday evening, April 22, the new commanders of the Arnold Air Society officially took over their positions after being elected to their posts last month.

Elected were Cadet 1/Lt. George Hofmann from Cadet Major Paul Krzynowek as commander of the John P. Granville Squadron and Cadet Capt. Alan Bunce from Cadet Major James Fleming as the Area A-1 commander of the Arnold Air Society.

Sidewalk Surfers: Newest Terror On UM Campus

by Peter Hendrickson
News Editor

There is a new breed of sportsman at UM. This heterogeneous group of enthusiasts is so concerned with athletic excellence that it has had little time to seek publicity.

In training now for the Olympics are the sidewalk surfers who hope to send a representative to the nationals on Fanny Hill. They have made their own skateboards to comply with the rigid regulations set forth by NASS (National Association of Sidewalk Surfers).

The sport is such an individual one that the athletic department has not seen fit to hire a coach for the competitors. Therefore each team member takes it upon himself to faithfully make two or three runs down University hills each day.

Maximum speed is necessary to adequately intimidate those nimble-footed ones, bent upon self preservation, as they drag themselves up the hill to the dorms.

There is a rumor that Eva Nomore, last year's Fanny Hill grand champion, will appear at UM in the near future to show the boys some of her finer points.

"Asphalt" Johnson and "Rip" Reston were injured in an accident involving a cow from the UM experimental farm. According to Asphalt, "We were hanging ten coming past the President's house when this freak animal bounded out into the road and we crashed right into it. It broke my ankle and Rip lost his pants. We're both OK now though."

Without debate, the House advanced to a third reading a bill filed by Senator Stanley J. Zarod (D-Springfield), chairman of the committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles, which calls for the photo of a licensee to appear on the license to operate a motor vehicle. Further action will be taken today.

ROTC Special Forces Train With UNH Mountaineer Unit

This past weekend, the Army ROTC Special Forces unit travelled to the University of New Hampshire at Durham to participate in some cooperative training with a mountaineering unit in the UNH ROTC.

Captan Richard Parker, advisor to the UMass unit, called the training that the 24 cadets received, "The best the unit has had in my stay here." The unit left the campus here on Friday night and upon arrival at Durham began training.

Near its campus, UNH has a 300 foot cliff that is used for training in repeling, the art of descending the sheer faces of cliffs using only a rope and bare hands. After some initial instruction, all of the UMass cadets along with Capt. Parker and M-Sgt. Kenneth Cudworth made the trip down.

THE CADETS ALSO lowered an individual down the side on a litter for the practice. The next phase of the training was a slide for life, in which there is a rope stretched from one high point to a lower one. By means of rings and a special knot, each cadet was to hang on, slide down the rope until it stopped and finally repel the last 125 feet to the ground.

The final area of training was crossing a bridge made up of two ropes. The cadet hangs on to the upper one and moves across on the bottom one. He is attached to both ropes by one around his waist.

Captain Parker said, "This training is similar to that given to regular army special forces units after they have had one month of mountaineering instruction. These cadets had no such extensive training, but still performed admirably."

COUNSELING DAY

Pre-registration material for the Fall Semester and instructions for Counseling Day, Tuesday, May 11, are beig distributed to departments. The Schedule Office has distributed schedule booklets separately. No classes are held on Counseling Day and Departmental faculty should be making whatever arrangements seem necessary to advise and preregister their students on that day.

Alcindor Makes UCLA A College Dynasty

by John Goodrich

One writer called it a matter of the rich getting richer. From the lucky people came delighted cries of "We are extremely pleased." The entire event took 10 minutes before the principle figure in the issue departed for his Russian History class.

So ended one of the best kept secrets and most long awaited events in the annals of the sports world. Lew Alcindor had just announced that he would attend the University of California, Los Angeles.

The seven foot hero of Power Memorial High school ended weeks of speculation. UCLA recently wound up its second consecutive national title in basketball and is in excellent position to do so next year.

THE UCLANS have a parley of five veterans returning, including Mike Lynn, Doug MacItosh, Fred Goss, Kenny Washington, and Edgar Lacey. These men alone will make them tough.

So the arrival of Mr. Alcindor on campus would seem to be a primary factor in the building of a dynasty that has seldom been seen in the history of college basketball.

Few teams have ever won two consecutive titles, the most conspicious being San Francisco when Bill Russell and KC Jones attended there during the fifties, and Cincinnati under Ed Jucker early in this decade. Now the Uclans have a better chance than either of these had to go all the way.

This last statement is not overlooking the point that Cincinnati was beaten in the finals in its third try in overtime by Loyola of Chicago. But UCLA will have a little easier road next year with these men quite able to apply the zone press. They will have many tight games during the tourney portion of their play, but the word is that they were one of the few schools not really wiped out by graduations in their region.

CINCINNATI was extremely hard pressed to even make the tourney because of the conference. UCLA might be able to avoid this. Win or lose next year the Bruins are a strong threat.

Then Mr. Alcindor will be on the scene. A two way player that is relatively fast can help any team. In UCLA he will be the man with Edgar Lacey who will clear the boards and launch the fast-break that coach John Wooden loves. The biggest problem would be the zone press defense that he will have to learn. His mobility will be somewhat limited by his size but he should still more than adequately do the job for the Bruins.

It wouldn't seem possible that a school could build such a power in a limited time span. Even before the last two years the team had made several trips to the National championship. But now they are in a position of potential domination.

The consistent producing of good players in various schools across the nation, not including the Northeast, can be strongly attributed to one basic factor. These schools make extensive use of the junior college systems.

The junior colleges (Jucos) provide a player the opportunity to see two years of steady action, and still not have him lose his three year eligibility in an NCAA school. Often, unless the student is an established star like Alcindor, he cannot hope to work his way right into the lineup. With its fine national tournament, the Jucos provide the simple solution to a coach's dream. Let a player get experience, with a substantial amount of pressure (Jucos take their basketball quite seriously), and then bring him to the college.

SOMEONE LIKE ALCINLOR cannot help but be a star in college without any of the Juco training that other players need. But the one thing that will test Alcindor will be his ability to adjust to college. In the Jucos, players are the same as in a four year college living away from home confronting all the problems except for size that a regular college can offer.

With Alcindor 3000 miles from his home, and no Jack Donahue (his former coach) to protect him from the press, it should be interesting to see how this intelligent man from New York adjusts to the fact that he is he most publicized athlete in high school since Wilt Chamberlain and is heir apparent to the space currently held by Bill Bradley.

Auto Deadline: May 15

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Richard E. McLaughlin cautioned all Massachusetts motorists that the semi-annual Spring motor vehicle inspection will conclude on Saturday, May 15.

Estimates at the Registry of Motor Vehicles are that well in excess of 50 per cent of Massachusetts motor vehicles have now been inspected but this still leaves a large number yet to be checked.

"It is especially important that those motorists whose vehicles will require repairs visit their local inspection station as soon as possble, for in many cases it may take a few days for the station to secure the necessary parts," Registrar McLaughlin said. "All motor vehicles must be inspected prior to midnight, May 15, and there can be no exceptions."

Service Against Poverty

Surprising though it may be, there are 700,000 Massachusetts citizens living in poverty. The Commonwealth Service Corps, established last August, realizes that every individual resident must accept a responsibility for these problems and become personally involved in the solution.

IN DEVELOPING A PROGRAM, the Commonwealth Service Corps has formulated to meet the unique needs of our citizens, especially the poor, during the summer.

The programs include work with migrants, real and potential high school dropouts, mentally retarded and disadvantaged children.

SUMMER PROGRAMS run from Tuesday, July 6 through Friday, August 2. A one week training period will be held beginning Monday, June 28. There will be live-in accommodations during this week. All workers are paid $80 per month according to the current legal statute.

Intramural Report

by Larry Rutstein

The West League of the dormitory intramural softball league completed its regular season play on May 4. The Baker Bruins won the championship as they defeated the Baker Buffaloes 7-2. The Brett Chestnuts lost any chance for the title as they went down to defeat to the Baker Barracudas who tied them for second place with a 10-1 victory.

The other dormitory leagues moved in to the final week of the season with the Chadburne Maroons leading the East League with a 3-1 record and four teams tied for second with 2-2. Two undefeated teams head the South league. The Middlesex Redmen and the Berkshire Bengals are tied at the top with 4-0 records. In the North League the Grayson Aces are undefeated with 4-0 records, with the Thatcher Redwoods close behind at 4-1.

In fraternity baseball last Wednesday evening AEPi smashed Phi Mu Delta 28-4, compiling 34 hits, more than they had compiled totally in their three previous games. Danny Cotton led the Pi men with seven hits in eight at bats. However, the victory left AePi tied for second with TKE, defending intramural champion, a half game behind LCA. LCA did not play last night but hopes to continue its undefeated record against Alpha Sigma Phi tonight as pitcher Dick Ferranti goes for his fourth straight victory. TKE remained in the running by outslugging ATG 17-6.

In the other league B game, PSD nudged by a surprisingly weak KS team 12-10.

IN LEAGUE A, BKP moved into a tie for first place with TEP by defeating SPE 15-10 to remain undefeated at 3-0. TEP drew a bye and QTV stayed in the race by squeezing past TC with 5 runs in the last inning 11-8. PSK moved ZN into the cellar by defeating them 7-4.

Bruce Thompson pitched a 2-hitter to lead the Forresters of the National Independent League to a 12-0 shutout of the Arnold Air Society to remain undefeated at 3-0. In other Independent Action NSRA edged the AEPi Ind. 6-3 to stay on top in the Eastern Division and the Boyden Bombers walloped the Breadwinners 10-4 led by Fred Glatz' two home-runs to lead the American league. Other scores from Wednesday night's play were Kappa Nu 9 Oldtimers 6; Innkeepers 12 IEME 7; Chem Club 7 C.E. 4; and Vicky's 202 10 Pitman 3.

Director of Intramurals Chet Gladchuck reported that all games rained out on Monday, April 26 will be played on May 13

IN OTHER INTRAMURAL sports 'Norma' Chan defeated Rodger Twitchell in the semi-finals of the Undergraduate Singles Badminton Championship. In the best of three match Chan took the first game 15-12, dropped the second 15-7 and came back to defeat Twitchell, former Yankee Conference Tennis champ, 15-3. Chan now moves to the finals. In the Faculty-graduate division Al Wrisley of the Food Tech department whipped Maurice Brosky of the Phys. Ed. Staff in two games 15-12, 15-9, in his semi-final match. Ron Woods defeated John Mackenzie in the other semi 15-8, 15-11. The winner of the faculty division will play the winner of the undergraduate section for the all university crown.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

Toby Kimball, center from UConn and the nation's leading rebounder this past season, was picked in the third round of the NBA draft by the Boston Celtics.

The 6'8" native of Sudbury said that he was surprised but happy. Kimball was All Yankee Conference and All New England Center this past year . . .

First round pick of the Celtics was Ollie Johnson from the University of San Francisco. Next choice was Ronnie Watts of Wake Forest.

The Redmen tennis team will be out to regain the Yankee Conference championship this weekend at Storrs. Steve Kosakowski's men who currently sport a 6-1 record are given a good chance of taking the crown. Kosakowski said that he expected to get the most competition from the University of Vermont . . .

Jerry Whelchel, a pretty fair quarterback for the Redmen this past fall was recently a hero in another capacity. A native of Cochicuate, he has been working as a Wayland fireman and raced back into an inferno yesterday to drag out a fellow fireman who had fallen unconscious. Whelchel suffered burns on his arms, neck and face and was treated in a hospital . . .

TOBY KIMBALL

Let's all go out and support the Redmen baseball team this weeeknd against the University of Maine This, without a doubt, is the biggest series of the year and a sweep will just about guarantee the conference championship.

Redmen Host Black Bears In Conference Showdown

by Mike Gould

A win over UConn last Tuesday would have made life much easier for the Redmen Nine. Unfortunately, the team could not stand prosperity, and lost to the Huskies at Storrs, 4-1.

The loss dropped UMass into a first place tie with defending champ Maine and set the stage for a crucial two-game series at Alumni Field, this Friday and Saturday between the Redmen and the Bears.

A win over UConn would have accomplished a dual purpose. It would have knocked UConn out of the YanCon race and would have necessitated only a split with Maine this weekend for the Redmen to remain in first place.

ENOUGH CRYING over spilt milk. The Redmen are still in good shape. They will have the important home field advantage this weekend. If the thought of a trip to the NCAA World Series is not enough incentive, the players also have the recollection of last year's double defeat at Orono to add to their will to win.

A double victory this weekend would make the Redmen a solid choice to win the conference. A split would leave them in a three way tie, if UConn sweeps their two game series with New Hampshire. A sweep by Maine, and it's wait-'til-next-year for Earl Lorden and the boys.

Carl Boteze will pitch one of the games this weekend. The soph righthander has been impressive every time out this year, as his 1.9 e.r.a. indicates. Either Bill Smith, Jim Ritchie or Ross Piken will hurl in the other game.

MAINE is led by Junior righthander Joe Ferris, who pitched

Lake Park Is Site of Senior Class Picnic

The Senior Class Picnic, to be held Wednesday, June 9th, at Forest Lake Park in Palmer will be one of the highlight events of this year's Senior Week (June 9th through June 13th).

The park, which is less than ten miles from campus, will be open to the class and its guests from 12:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

On an adequate sized lake, Forest Lake Park is the perfect site for this event, having large picnic, recreation and beach facilities, and a huge pavillion-bar where popular beverages can be purchased.

There is also ample space for food preparation, and an unlimited number of hot dogs, hamburgers, pickles, potato salads, etc., will be served from 2:00 to 7:00 p.m.

The feature of the afternoon will be the appearance of sensational Barry and the Remains from 4:00 to 8:00 p.m. in the pavillion. Aside from dancing to the music of "Barry" the afternoon will include swimming, softball, volleyball, picnic lunch and relaxation.

Tickets for the picnic are $1.50 per person and may be purchased by any University student in the Student Union lobby between 10:00 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Monday through Friday until May 26th.

South College Angered By Crime Comm. Report

University officials are still seething about the various remarks in reference to UMass included in the crime commission's latest report, despite the fact that Chairman Alfred Gardner has agreed to delete any reference to the commission's investigation of the University.

In a letter to University President John Lederle, Gardner stated that the investigation was terminated because the services of the men working on it were needed elsewhere and the commission had no other men available for its continuation. In answer to President Lederle's request to clear the University's name Gardner stated that UMass would not be mentioned in the crime board's final report. UMass officials are almost unanimous in their feeling that the University would have been criticized in the report except for Chairman Gardner's current face-saving attempts to alter the final report which was published in The Herald on April 6.

PRESIDENT LEDERLE'S LETTER to Gardner last month constituted the strongest attack ever made on the crime commission's tactics by a responsible public official.

"As you know," Lederle wrote, "the University of Massachusetts cooperated wholeheartedly with the crime commission while its representatives were on our campus."

"When the invetsigation was terminated, your chief representative advised our director of security that, in following up on vague rumors and charges, nothing has been found here that warranted prosecution.

"WE HAD WELCOMED YOU because although we felt there was nothing vitally wrong we wanted to end the unfounded claims or convict the alleged culprits.

"What did we get? A report implyilng guilt by innuendo.

"We felt at the time your investigation terminated, and we still feel, that we are entitled to a prompt and public statement from the commission to the effect that the rumors and allegations after investigation were without foundation."

Lederly went on to say, "All citizens of the commonwealth will support the crime commission's exposure of malfeasance in office. The university has nothing to hide. However, no responsible person or newspaper will support an investigative

Five Debators Inducted Into National Honorary

by Larry Rutstein, Staff Reporter

Five members of the University Forensic Society were formally inducted into the national debate honorary, Delta Sigma Rho—Tau Kappa Alpha, last Saturday evening in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

President Larry Rutstein, Secretary Susan Yokel, Gerry Goldhaber, Alan Davis, and Maureen Flanagan were inducted by Herb James, debate coach of Dartmouth College and head of Region One debate teams, in a secretive ceremony.

Jay Savereid, along with the coach of Amherst College, assisted in the initiation which consisted of the revealing of the meaning of the Greek letters which comprise the society's name.

The five UMass members were the first to be inducted as the Forensic Society was just recently accepted into the honorary.

In order to be admitted into the largest debate honorary in the nation a student must be in the top third of his class scholastically and have participated in at least one intercollegiate debate or forensic activity.

The entire debate club then proceeded to the Hampshire room where they held their annual banquet. Dean Hunsberger of the School of Arts and Sciences was guest of honor and delivered an address on the importance of rhetoric in our society. He felt that if rhetoric were used to persuade nations rather than the threat of nuclear weapons, then the chances of peace would be much greater.

After Dean Hunsberger's speech, Pres. Rutstein inducted the new officers for the year 1965-66.

Mike Farrell, President; Alan Davis, Vice-President; Wren Farren - Executive Secretary; Lee Morin - Treasurer; and Anna Dalton - Secetary were all sworn into office.

During the evening awards were given to graduating seniors Rutstein, Goldhaber, and Yokel. Wren Farren also received the award for the best novice of the year.

The banquet thus ended the year's debating activities. The outlook for next year, according to Farrell, is quite good with only three graduating members and the top varsity team returning in the fall.

UMass Sport Car Club Sponsors First Rally

by Peter Hendrickson, News Editor

"We had a flat tire, we ran out of gas, and we had to change the baby among other things."

The UMass Sports Car Club held a rally Saturday and advisor Armand De Grenier and family (wife, baby and Falcon) ran into a few problems along the rally route.

The winner of the 100 mile rally was Pete Beagen, a sophomore from Zeta Nu, who was driving a white TR-3. His navigator was freshman Cynthia Rossborough. Pete's TR was only ten minutes late for a penalty of ten points.

THE RALLY WAS SET UP so that the entrants were penalized two points for each minute early and one point for each minute late. The drivers were instructed not to exceed any speed limits on the three hour run to Brattleboro and back.

There were three checkpoints along the way that the cars had to pass to receive additional road directions. The directions were lengthy but required that the navigators watch the roads very carefully for signs.

One of the drivers said "I know Leyden (Mass.) like I know Amherst—all those amazing back roads. I almost ran over that Afghan hound loping along the side of the road."

EVERYONE GOT LOST at one time or another. Those who were able to find themselves most quickly did best on over-all times. Only one car, a beat-up red Volvo, finished early for a 20 point penalty. Cars were up to an hour late.

The course had been planned by officers of the club who ran the course with a Healy, an MG and a Sunbeam to compensate for the various cornering abilities and acceleration potentials of different vehicles.

The underdog of the race was a VW convertible that had a four minute handicap. The team still placed well to the rear of the pack. The cars left from Machmer at about one minute intervals to avoid any congestion on the highways of the three state region.

As it turned out, the navigators were the most important part of the team. If the cars had not gotten lost on route, the drivers wouldn't have had to display such a fine degree of backroadsmanship to make up for lost time.

There were no accidents of any sort along the 100 mile route, which is good testimony to the hours of route planning and precautionary measures taken by the infant club.

PRESIDENT STEVE SMITH hopes that many more owners and lovers of sporting cars will join the club. He informed the Collegian that more rallies will be held next year. He said that the entrance fee is minimal to underwrite the cost of the trophies and the planning of the rallies.

Reality Is Topic For Talk Tonight

Speaking in the Colonial Lounge this evening will be Elbert R. Slaughter who has chosen as his topic "Where Are We Going."

The talk, being held at 7:45, is sponsored by the Christian Science Organization and is described as an "exploration of the journey to spiritual reality."

Mr. Slaughter is currently on a tour of the continent as a member of the Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. He is a native of Texas, and attended Southern Methodist University. Once a lumberman and vice president of a savings and loan association, he resigned from business in 1945 to devote full time to the Christian Science healing practice.

The Week In Review

O. A. S.
The Organization of American States decided Saturday to form an inter-American military force that would presumably take action against Communist infiltration and rebel uprisings. After severe criticism of the U.S. military take-over, this plan would allow for for the U.S. flag to be replaced by the O.A.S. flag. The motion was passed by a 14-5 vote, barely a two-thirds majority.

THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC
Wednesday a cease-fire agreement, negotiated by the O.A.S., was reached and a five man civilian-military junta was set up. The new group, claiming control of all 26 provinces and 90 per cent of the capital district, announced a six-point program showing hope for peace, unity, and cooperation with O.A.S. Antonio Imbert Barreras, one of the two surviving assassins of Dominican dictator Molina, heads the Junta. Meanwhile, snipers killed one marine bringing the total to 14 dead and 75 wounded.

GREAT BRITAIN
British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, leader of the Labor Party, won a four-vote, 310 to 306, victory in favor of public ownership of 90 percent of the nation's steel industry. Although this was a victory, it was not without some concessions that would allow for public control, but private ownership.

THE NATION

CIVIL RIGHTS
The trial for fatal shooting of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a 39 year old mother of five who was shot driving to Alabama for a Negro voting drive, ended in a deadlock last week. Collie Leroy Collins, Jr. defended by Mathew H. Murphy, who claims to be the Imperial Klonsel of the United Klans of America, as a Klan member along with the two other men indicted with him. The principal witness, a paid informer, Gary T. Rowe, who joined the Klan as an FBI infiltrator, testified that he was in the car when the shot was fired.

TAX REDUCTION
A long term federal excise tax reduction program is being considered by the administration. Under this plan, taxes on everything except alcohol, tobacco, and gasoline would be eliminated over a five year period.

MILITARY EXPENDITURES
President Johnson signed a bill for an additional $700 million for military expenditures in South Vietnam and the Dominican Republic.

CRITICISM
Senator Robert F. Kennedy, in his first criticism of the Johnson Administration, attacked the President for not consulting the O.A.S. before movng troops into the Dominican Republic.

THE STATE

FIGHT CANCELLED
The Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston boxing championship rematch was moved from Boston to Lewiston, Maine after Suffolk County Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne challenged the promotor's license.

MAIL TRUCK ROBBERY
Postal inspectors may soon be able to crack the three year old Plymouth mail truck robbery which netted highwaymen $1.5 million, the largest cash haul in American history.

URBAN RENEWAL
The Charleston urban renewal hearings continued for the third week. One woman complained that her home and five others were to be taken and used for a teachers' parking lot.

RUSTY PLATES
After the 1963 episode of rusty plates the demon is back again, this time attacking the front plates. The Franklin Paint Co., Inc which is now in the midst of civil action instituted by Atty. Gen. Brooke, supplied 700 to 800 gallons of maroon paint to refinish a batch of rusty plates which had been sent back to the prison. Surprisingly enough this company supplied the paint for the 1963 black and white plates which rusted off after the first few weeks, and again won the contract for the maroon and white plates we now have. They also have the contract for the next plates which will be green and white. The company blames the trouble on salt on the highways, and only one coat of paint on bare metal.

THE CAMPUS

NEW ADVISOR
The Provost's Office announced the appointment of Kenneth J. Suid as Pre-Law Advisor to University students. Suid will coordinate law school admissions procedures starting next September.

STUDENT LEADERS NIGHT
Tuesday night gave rise to a new selection of student leaders including Scrolls, Maroon Keys, Mortar Board, Adelphians, and IFC Guides. Scholarships were awarded by the Campus Chest, Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, Maroon Keys, and Scrolls. The third Annual Metawampe award was given to Prof. Joseph Marcus. Emily Dickinson was awarded first place honors, Lewis received second, and Brooks won third place honors in the Women's Inter-dorm Competition. Also recognized were ten seniors who were awarded the Distinguished Senior Awards by President Lederle.

PHI BETA KAPPA
Twenty-five additional undergraduates were initiated into the UMass Nu chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

SPRING DAY
Spring Day came to the University on Thursday, May 6, at 10:00 a.m., after an unidentified student scaled the tower of the Old Chapel to ring the bells. The fun continued through the day as the students moved to the rifle range.

This Week's Senate Preview

by Jim Foudy, Senate Reporter

In its first meeting under President Richard Dacey, the Student Senate will consider a bill requiring Senate officers, committee chairmen and any officer in an R.S.O. organization receiving more than 1% of the total Student Association Tax Funds to have achieved a cume average "which conforms to the graduation average of his (hers) class" or attain a 2.5 average the semester prior to the appointment to office.

The chairman of the Budgets committee will determine which organizations are to be affected, not including present officers.

In view of the fact that Alumni Field is going to be torn up and that there are only tentative plans for new track and field facilities, the Senate will consider a recommendation by Senator Terry Carpenter (Baker) that provisions be made for the track team to practice and that some "positive assurance" be given to the new track facilities proposed for 1967.

The Senate will also consider a recommendation to President Lederle by Senator Bill Donovan (Commuter) that undergraduate women "who have reached their twenty-first birthday be exempted from the administrative rule . . . requiring residence on campus."

Also under consideration will be bills to:

1. Investigate and evaluate the position of student labor on campus.

2. Appropriate $320 to the Astronomy Club for equipment and traveling expenses.

3. Release the Senate president from his constituency in the fall elections.

4. Support an appeal for the extension of Peter Pan Bus Lines.

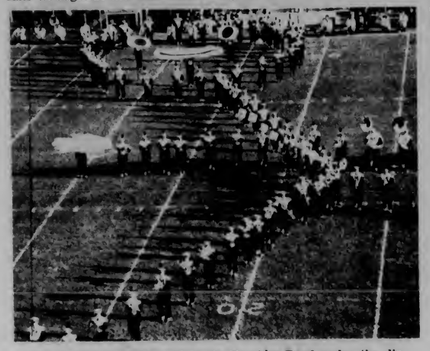
Marching Band--'65

Precision-marching, fast-paced shows and a "big" sound will characterize the all new 1965 University of Massachusetts Marching Band. The Band has become well-known to gridiron fans throughout the East Coast for its action-packed pregame and halftime performances.



The University of Massachusetts Marching Band under the direction of John A. Jenkins performs at a 1964 halftime ceremony.

With a new stadium, brand new uniforms, new shows and new music by the Band's arranger, Jerry Bilik, John A. Jenkins, conductor of bands, is planning a marching unit of one hundred fifty playing members to make the coming Marching Band season the best one yet.

All students interested in joining the 1965 edition of the Marching Band are urged to register for Music 181 (formerly Music 21, Section 2) on Registration Day, May 11.

Marching Band members receive credit toward graduation, plus exemption from physical education during the football season.

The Marching Band will perform at all home games and will accomapny the team to the University of Connecticut and Boston University. Students seeking additional information about the Marching Band should contact the Band Department in Old Chapel on Counseling Day or at any convenient time Monday through Friday.

UM-Boston Faculty Completed

In its drive to recruit 67 faculty members for the new Boston branch, UMass has recruited profesors from some of the country's top institutions of higher learning.

One of the main attractions drawing educators to the new university is the promise of full faculty autonomy in developing the academic program. According to UMass Director of Planning, Donald Cadigan, "Boston itself, and Cambridge, have been the biggest faculty-recruiting lures for us."

THE 67 TEACHERS, chosen from more than 1000 applicants wil come from leading institutions including Notre Dame, Vanderbilt, Wisconsin, CCNY, Mt. Holyoke, Brandeis, Harvard, BC, BU, California, Chicago, MIT, Northeastern, Florida, Iowa, and SMU.

An 18 Ton Cement Truck, A 6 Ton Bridge & Jasper P.

By Tom Donovan, Day Editor

Who is Jasper P. Jablonski? What was the reason he "fearlessly risked his life" in this daring adventure? To date, no one has discovered the identity of Jasper P. or the real story behind this intriguing sign.

There are several theories which partially uncover Jasper's mystery. But each one is not really satisfactory.

For instance, Jasper might well have been late for dinner. He knew his wife would scream at him all over the house. So he didn't even wait to go back to the yard or change his clothes or anything. There was a shortcut home and he took it. Crunch. Not much "foresight and initiative," Jasper.

Or he might have been at the local tavern between runs. That beer really does things to you. I can see him, motoring along, singing a tune, over highways and byways. What a beautiful day. Crunch. What was the song, Jasper? "Over the river and through the bridge..."

Jasper might have been listening to the radio and heard a news report about some war or other. "Oh my gosh! I better rush home and call the Reserve Board. They'll be wanting to ship me overseas where the action is." Careening around corners, speeding down straightaways, flying across... Crunch. As he crawls out through the shattered windshield and staggers to his feet on the hood, he lifts one bloodied arm and gasps, "I regret that I have but one cement truck to give to my country." Stars and Stripes forever, Jasper.

Then again, Jasper might just have made a mistake like all the rest of us make. He might not have noticed that three foot sign on the bridge which says, "LOAD LIMIT 6 TONS."

But we aren't sure. We have tried to find out about this sign. People just don't care about Jasper. We do.

Please, if you know anything about Jasper P. Jablonski or have a valid idea of how all this could have come about, please call us. Thank you.

performance pattern that blurs edges and muddies the distinction between rumor and fact. The commission owes something better than this to the Massachusetts public.

"In turn the vast majority of loyal, dedicated and honest public servants who carry on the commonwealth's affairs deserve to be immune from the devastating effects of unproven innuendo. This certainly includes employees of the University of Massachusetts.

ONE CAN ONLY RESENT a report which after extensive investigation continues a cloud of innuendo over loyal university employees and dedicated board of trustees due to inept sifting of fact from rumor by crime commission investigators.

"It was your obligation after spending so much time here to set the record straight fully and promptly. Instead you have given further credit to rumors and allegations and no credit to or mention of the University's wholehearted cooperation with your investigation.

"The trustees and I are dedicated to making this the finest state university in the country and we do not condone or blink our eyes at possible malfeasance.

"I call upon you to furnish us any facts or evidence of improper conduct so that we can take appropriate steps to review what you consider unsound procedures, if any, or to prosecute delinquents."

Electoral Reform Needed

Now that the elections for class officers are over but still fresh in our memories, it is a good time to give some afterthought to them and reflect upon the faults in the electoral system, so that they might possibly be corrected for next year.

The most glaring problem is that of lack of voters. None of the winning candidates received an absolute majority of the possible votes, an "absolute majority" being more than half of all the students in the class, as opposed to a "relative majority" which include only those who cast ballots. Hence, none of the officers are true representatives of the majority of their classes. Of course, in the Junior and Senior class elections in which the incumbents ran unopposed the lack of voters is understandable and only natural; but in the elections for next year's sophomore class in which there were heated campaigns for most of the positions the problem needs to be explained.

At first the apathy may be considered a fault of the students. It takes only a few minutes to walk down to the Student Union and fill out a ballot, but many students are too lazy to fulfill this duty even when passing right through the lobby of the SU. Certainly, student disinterest cannot be denied, but there is good reason for this lethargic attitude towards campus government.

Students are made to feel remote from the political scene. They are rarely afforded the opportunity to participate in class activities. The class officers and the executive boards are assigned most of the work with the result that the students en masse do not become involved. Without general class participation, without the feeling that everyone has a part to play, there cannot be a general class spirit.

Another reason why students are disinclined to vote is that they are seldom made aware of the real campaign issues. Many potential voters refrain from exercising their right, because they have no knowledge of the candidates' qualifications or experience, except what they can glean from campaign posters. A good solution would be a "candidates' night"—an assembly at which those seeking office would discuss various pertinent issues in public before prospective voters, who could then compare candidates and make a qualified choice, based not on fuzzy reasoning but on accurate information.

Of course, there is a third and probably best solution-simply to bring to the students' attention the power that the executive board and officers possess in handling student money. Many students are not aware of the purpose to which the fees they paid at the beginning of the year are being put. Perhaps, if they realize where their money is going, they will make sure where their votes are going.

Notice of Thanks

The Collegian would like to thank the Flying Club for its cooperation. The members of this club have unselfishly given their time to supply the Collegian with many fine aerial photographs of the campus and the surrounding area. We would like to give proper recognition to the club members for their effort to serve the campus community, even though space has not permitted us to use most of these fine pictures.

Editorial Policy of the Massachusetts Collegian

In order to serve the ever growing campus community the Massachusetts Collegian has adopted the following policy for the editorial pages. The name of the page shall be Massachusetts Collegian Forum so called in order to stimulate those not on the Collegian staff to express themselves on any issue which they feel pertinent to the campus or students.

A Collegian editor, or a member of the editorial staff, will present an editorial on any subject which is felt to be of primary importance or interest to the student body. These editorials, however, are solely the opinion of the author and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the entire staff, or the official view of the Collegian.

At times the Collegian may wish to take an official stand on a matter of primary importance. If this is the case, an editorial will be printed UNSIGNED. An editorial of this nature must have the approval of five editors, and should be regarded as Collegian policy.

The Collegian welcomes all letters to the editor, and will endeavor to print all letters which are deemed to be of general interest to the campus. The editorial staff welcomes all comments and questions regarding editorials, and respects the right of all students to express contrary positions.

The only restriction is that the letters be written in good taste and with the discretion necessary for use in a campus publication. The Collegian reserves the right to edit all letters for language choice, grammar, and length. The editorial staff will make every attempt to retain the full meaning of any letter which must be edited.

Through use of the above policy, the Collegian editorial staff will endeavor to:

1. Uphold freedom of expression on the UMasscampus.
2. Clarify the goals of education at the University.
3. Foster constructive criticism and meaningful debate.
4. Expose existing problems at the University and suggest remedies.
5. Render recognition of deserving individuals and groups.
6. Defend injured parties in order to promote justice.
7. Provide an unbiased forum to air campus grievances.
8. Stimulate creative thinking within the campus community.
9. Bring into closer prospective campus happenings.
10. Comment on local, national, and world affairs.

The preceeding principles will be followed with due discretion so as not to unjustly discredit students, administration, faculty, alumni, and friends of the University.

The Massachusetts Collegian is a "free and responsible press", and is in no way censored or edited by persons on the University Administration.

Letters To The Editor

Grade System Change

To the Editor:

I read with great interest the article that appeared in last Monday's Collegian regarding the work being done on the grading system. It made me wonder how a change might affect me. I feel that it would definitely change my entire outlook on school, it would put more stress on education than an arbitrary tag that supposedly indicates how much I have learned. To illustrate this let me give an example: A hypothetical course X consists of two hour exams and a two hour final. I have a 77 average going into a demanding final week. (Of course the University has seen that it is my best interest to have a one day reading period.) The point that I want to make is that I'm faced with two alternatives. One of which (and the most popular) is to forget about studying and take the "high" C in the course. The second choice is to take time away from my other courses and devote it to this one probably getting a 79 average and the "C" tag anyway. The question is, why study?

I strongly feel that a change to another system as indicated in your article, would help to place the much needed emphasis back on education, or have we forgotten the purpose of a university?

Studiously yours,
Skip Shapio '67

Errors Hurt As Freshman Baseball Team Loses, 6-1

Springfield College gave the freshmen baseball team its first defeat of the season last Wednesday when they used three seventh inning errors for a pair of tie breaking runs and then put the game out of reach with three more unearned scores in the top of the ninth for a 6-1 win.

Letfy John Canty started the game for the Redmen and pitched from one run behind until the seventh as a result of a first inning Maroon's run that Romano drove in with a long three bagger into right centerfield. Charlie Widmer who had singled with two down scored from first.

UMass evened the count in the sixth with three singles off Springfield's Ken Demond. Vin Donahue and Hagen Andersen picked up back to back base hits. One out later Ferron hit a short drive to right and Donahue scored on a close play at the plate. Until that frame the Redmen had two runners on in the second, both cut down stealing, a man in the fourth erased in a double play, and two left on in the third, their only other real threat. Dick Hale singled and Chuck Guss walked but a force out and strike out ended the inning.

In the top of the seventh the Maroons went ahead for good. Demond opened with a line single to right that was misplayed for an extra base. Bruce Worley singled to left with Demond holding at third, and Worley taking second on the throw to the plate. A sacrifice fly scored the tie-breaking run and Widmer followed with a grounder to short that Andersen booted and then threw past first letting Worley in from second.

Singles by Andersen and Ferron in the eighth gave UMass a little hope but a groundout ended the inning. The top of the ninth brought three runs off Gould and put the game out of reach. Gould came into the game in the eighth and retired the side, the only inning all day that the Maroons had no runners.

The freshmen statistics reveal that the team has been having a tough time getting men around the bases. Hagan Andersen leads the hitters with a .429 mark including a double and the only UMass homer. Don Ferron, the cleanup hitter, has a .364 average with a pair of runs batted in and he is the only regular not to have struck out. John Canty and Vin Donahue are both three for nine (.333), and Dick Hale is batting .273. The team has scored eight runs in three games and has left 28 men on base. Coincidentally they have also struck out 28 times.

The team has had only one game in the past 12 days and doesn't play again until Wednesday at Worcester Academy. That game opens an eight day period in which five games are played. Until now the pitching staff hasn't had enough work to keep in shape but the situation will be reversed in the coming week. The pitchers were expected to be the strongest point of the team, and so far they have been just that. The pitchers have been wild more from inactivity than anything else. The regular starters so far have been Gould, Canty, and Rusty Vitallo. The team will play Connecticut Thursday and Leicester Junior College Saturday, both home games. After the Worcester games, with A.I.C. and Springfield College Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. The Aces visit Amherst for their game while the return match with the Maroons will be played in Springfield.

MANY CALLED . . .

the University of Illinois, Tal Brody, Skip Thoren, Bogie Redmond and Roger Taylor along with John Wendelken of Holy Cross.

Now as we move further up the slate of teams we come to St. Louis. Jim Washington of Villanova and Ken MacIntyre of St. John's are the two most likely players to fill a roster that has few openings.

Los Angeles surprised no one by drafting Gail Goodrich although what they intend to do with him is a question. He is the fifth good guard on the Lakers who need help in the forecourt. One of the guards, Jerry West excluded, Goodrich, Walt Hazzard, Dick Barnett or Jim King might be traded for that help. The rest of the Lakers choices were big men with John Fairchild of Brigham Young and A. W. Davis of Tennessee the two better known.

That leaves the big three of the eastern conference. Philadelphia took Bill Cunningham of North Carolina in the first round along with big Henry Finkel of Dayton. The 76ers have a tendency to draft small college players so it is difficult to analyze the choices, although, after their performance this year it would seem there aren't going to be many new faces in the lineup.

Cincinnati drafted big Nate Bowman of Wichita and Flynn Robinson of Wyoming as a guard. Warren Issac of Iona was another choice of the Royals.

Now comes the mighty Celtics. They got a good break when San Francisco passed up a territorial draft so that it could get Hetzel and Barry. That left the door open for the drafting of Ollie Johnson of San Francisco, a good center who will likely be shifted to the forecourt. An unusual fact about the Celtics' choices is that almost every one was a front court man.

Ronnie Watts, Toby Kimball, Don Davidson and Richie Tarrant all play the front area for their respective teams. If there is any problem for the Celts it is that none of their club is retiring just this year. So these men would have to bump John Thompson, Ron Bonham or Mel Counts off of the squad, a most unlikely possibility. Kimball, for instance, is a great rebounder, but at 6'9" he will have to play the corner like Heinsohn, Sanders or Naulls, but he doesn't have a good shooting eye except on layups and short hook shots. So he seems likely to follow Skip Chappell into an early retirement.

A name virtually missed in the draft brought back some memories to this writer. About four years ago, Wilbur Cross High School of New Haven was undisputed king for New England. Their center was signed directly out of high school to the Harlem Globetrotters. His name was Dave Hicks. The Baltimore Bullets drafted him in that special supplementary draft.

Scoring for the Redmen were: Jarret and O'Brien (2); Houde, Brown, Avakian, Arnieri, Pulsiver (1).

REDMEN SPLIT . . .

made a beautiful running catch of a liner hit by Maine's Nelson with two runners aboard.

Devarney was personally responsible for Maine's next two runs. He hit a wind-propelled, bush-hidden homerun to right field in the fourth and tripled in the fifth, scoring on a Babyak misplay when Maine attempted a double steal with runners on first and third.

The Redmen got back in the game with a three - run fifth. Babyak led with a bunt single, went to third on Nordberg's single to right and scored as Jeff Whitney flied to deep left. John Peacock then belted a two run homer into those right field bushes to make it 5-4 Maine.

Defensive lapses and a bit of questionable strategy proved to be the Redmen's undoing in Maine's two-run seventh. Nelson led with a pop-up which the wind carried away from first baseman Peacock for a single. With one out, Maine's big first baseman Steve Sones hit a pop to short left. Leftfielder Nordberg called for the ball and dropped it as Nelson took second. Kuczynski then threw out Maine's Lanza for the second out, the runners moving to second and third. With first base open, tough left-handed batter on deck, Coach Lorden elected to pitch to Merrill. The Maine catcher lined a 2-2 pitch into center for two big runs and a 7-4 Maine lead.

UMass' last threat to pull the game out came in the eighth when two-out singles by pinch-hitters Brita and Roy Lasky and Smith produced a run, but Cassie left two men stranded as he flied to left.

The Redmen outhit the Bears 11-6 in the second game and 17-8 for the double header... Maine's Devarney showed great speed on the bases and tremendous range at shortstop... UMass' Smith allowed just four hits and two walks after entering the scene in the second inning of the second game.

can gain the important advantage of staying in shape year round, instead of going on a crash training program once a year.

Why can't the lacrosse field have a scoreboard of some sort and a P.A. system that could be used to announce the scorers and the penalties? A major complaint of spectators is that they have no way of knowing the score if they happened to arrive at the game after it starts. Undoubtedly any scoreboard that it erected could also be used for soccer since the soccer team uses the same field. Garber attempted to get the scoreboard from Alumni Field installed on the lacrosse field since it is being removed to make room for the new administration building. But it was decided that the scoreboard would be given away to a certain high school instead.

This scoreboard incident illustrates the way that "minor" sports, no matter how much they have contributed to the school's prestige, are treated on this campus.

Tie For First

Redmen Split Doubleheader

by Mike Gould, Sports Staff

The spectators at Alumni Field saw a little bit of just about everything in Saturday's doubleheader between Massachusetts and Maine.

When the afternoon of baseball was over, however, the two teams stood just as they had when it began—tied for first place in the Yankee Conference. UMass took the first game 4-1, behind Boteze, and Maine won the second, 7-5. The doubleheader split enables Vermont and UConn to tie the leaders for the top spot, if they can win their games against Rhode Island and New Hampshire respectively.

The first six innings were scoreless, Maine able to muster but two scratch hits off Boteze, and UMass, victim of some great Maine defensive play, able to get only one hit off Joe Ferris.

The Redmen loaded the bases in the first with one out, but Dennis Della Piana hit into a double play started by shortstop Devarney.

In the fourth, UMass unloaded some heavy timber, but at spacious Alumni Field the blooper is oftentimes more damaging than the bomb. Al Nordberg led off the inning with a drive headed for Goodell Library. Maine's Coughlin caught the ball over his shoulder in front of the 412 foot sign in right center as Nordberg was crossing second base. The crowd was still buzzing about this grab when John Peacock teed off on a Ferris pitch and sent it on a line to deep right center, again Coughlin raced back towards the 412 mark and made the catch, this time with his back to the plate.

The seventh inning was one to be remembered. Devarney led off for the Bears with the first walk off Boteze and took second on a sacrifice. With first base open and C. Merrill a dangerous lefthanded hitter, at bat against the righthanded Boteze, Coach Lorden called for an intentional walk. Catcher Kamena got Lorden's sign, but Boteze evidently did not. Carl started to pitch to the plate, saw his catcher with glove hand extended, and, thoroughly confused, stepped off the rubber. This constituted a balk and allowed the speedy Devarney to take third base. Merrill then came through with a sacrifice fly to put the visitors ahead 1—0.

The Redmen came up to the plate with fire in their eyes in their half of the seventh. Nordberg led with a triple. Mike Brita, batting for Della Piana, walked. John Peacock, delivered a line shot to center, scoring Nordberg and sending Brita to third. After Kamena fanned, Jim Kuczynski scored Brita and reached safely with a suicide bunt. Boteze then laid down a perfect bunt to load the bases for Caisse, who singled through the hole into left to produce two big insurance runs.

Boteze was the master, as he has been in most of his appearances this year. The soph gave Maine only two hits and two walks, while striking out 11 Bears.

The second game was a must victory for the defending champions from Orono. A loss would have ended their chances for a second straight YanCon Pennant.

Maine's Coughlin hit the first pitch of the second game into the bushes in right field for a triple. He scored two pitches later on Ross Piken's wild pitch, and Maine had the lead which it never relinquished. The Bears scored again in the first on a hit batsman, a walk and a throwing error by Jim Babyak at shortstop.

Babyak attoned with a solo homer in the last of the first, to make the score 2-1.

Two walks, a wild pitch and a single gave Maine a 3-1 lead in the second and brought in Bill Smith to pitch for the Redmen. Smith came in with runners on second and third and nobody out. He made the situation a lot easier for himself by picking Maine's Perkins off third base and escaped further damage in the inning when Terry Swanson

Many Are Called— Few Are Chosen

by John Goodrich, Sports Staff

Last week, the National Basketball Association held its annual draft. This event is characterized as one of the highlights of the basketball year, but in fact it appears to be much ado about nothing.

The NBA is a select fraternity of 99 basketball players who are the best in the country. Each year another college crop comes along to be drafted by the pros. Few ever make it in the big time. Each team drafts eight men in the regular session and then four teams hold a special suplementary draft after the other session which accounts for 28 more men.

Without a doubt the teams that benefit by the draft are the lower clubs. They must build fast to compete with the likes of Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Cincinnati and of course, Boston. The men these teams draft are little more than names.

Let's look at the picks team by team. New York picked Bill Bradley and Dave Stallworth in the first round. The first choice was one of protection rather than actual intending to get the Princeton star. The Knicks couldn't risk having him play for some other club. Stallworth appears to be possibly the best pro prospect in a long time and should make it with the N.Y. club. Along with Dick Van Arsdale of Indiana, these were the most important choices for the young Knicks. They did as all clubs do, take some local players to pacify the press in the area. This year it was Larry Lembo of Manhattan and Steve Nisenson of Hofstra.

San Francisco seems to have done a fine job in its choices and they certainly need all the help they can get. Fred Hetzel of Davidson and Rick Barry of Miami are both tall and good scorers. Keith Ericson of UCLA and Wilbur Frazier of Grambling are other important selections.

Detroit took Bill Buntin of Michigan and Tom Van Arsdale as their two best picks. These were the two big names selected but Ron Reed of Notre Dame and Jim King of Oklahoma State might be sleepers.

Baltimore took Jerry Sloan and might have gotten the best player in the lot in the Evansville Ace. The Bullets in both drafts picked four players from

VIEWPOINT

More Support for Minor Sport

by John Cunningham
Sports Associate Editor

Recently this column bemoaned the lack of attention given by the University to the so-called minor sports. I would like to call attention to one of these sports in particular, namely, lacrosse.

Lacrosse has been one of the most popular sports on the U-Mass campus ever since its inception 10 years ago. Under Coach Garber the lacrosse team has won two New England championships and has sent five players to the North-South All Star game, which happens to be the most prestigious lacrosse game in the nation.

Also Garber has not had a losing season since his first in 1955.

So what is Garber's reward for this excellent record? Although lacrosse is second only to football in the number of applicants for its squad, and is third behind football and basketball in the number of spectators it attracts, Garber has found himself faced with an unsympathetic administration. Lacrosse scholarships are unavailable; coaches of the other varsity sports forbid their squad members to go out for lacrosse, and the lacrosse field is inadequate as it now stands.

Although Garber professes that he can do without scholarships, he is now finding his team playing against schools which have an active lacrosse recruiting program. In many colleges lacrosse is replacing baseball as the second major varsity sport; and many coaches and athletic directors have predicted that lacrosse will soon replace baseball in many high schools due to the usefulness of lacrosse as a body conditioner and due to the more exciting nature of this body contact sport. If UMass doesn't take action soon it will find itself well in back of other colleges in the development of a major lacrosse program.

This year especially, coaches of the other varsity sports have attempted to tighten up the ban on lacrosse because they believe that to allow members of their squads to play lacrosse would expose such players to the danger of serious injury, which, of course, might hamper their performances in their other "more serious" varsity sport. Two questions arise here: Has a coach the right to tell an athlete what he can or cannot do during the off-season; and, will playing lacrosse endanger the player? The first question has, of course, many pros and cons. It is usually argued that if a student is given a scholarship to play a particular sport, then he should be restricted to playing that sport since that is what he is, so to speak, "getting paid for." However, to talk in those terms is to regard a player as a business investment and, although this may reveal a lack of sophistication on my part, I find the idea offensive. Such an attitude creates many problems and abuses when followed to its natural conclusion.

As for lacrosse being dangerous: the pros far outway the cons. In lacrosse as in any sport there is a certain danger of injury but the instance of injury in lacrosse is lower than in most contact sports. Lacrosse is a tremendous body conditioner, and Garber tries to put his teams in the best condition possible. Any coach will say that the player who is not in condi would seem that more is to be tion is the one who is most likely to get hurt. In this case it gained by encouraging athletes to play lacrosse than by discouraging them. By playing more than one sport a player

Lacrossemen Dumped By Lord Jefferies

UMass goalies, Lavner and Lawson, fell victims to Amherst's best game of the season and one of the Redmen's worst defensive games. In the first period of play it looked like a close game was in the making. Avakain of the Redmen scored the first goal of the game early in the first quarter by running through the Amherst defenses and drilling a shot past the goalie. Then followed a series of plays in which the Redmen defense really shined; breaking up plays, blocking shots and, in general, giving the Lord Jeffs fits. But a let up by UMass allowed three Amherst goals in this period, two coming with only 30 seconds left in the period.

After a good save on what seemed to be a sure goal Amherst picked up the loose ball and tapped an easy one by Lawson to start the second period. All the breaks went to the Lord Jeffs in this quarter. Amherst scored another as Larner came tripped as he was carrying the goal out of the crease, and they scored another as Yavner came out of the net to try to break up a play and left the goal uncovered. Goals for the Redmen by Jarret and Houde still left UMass five goals behind at the end of the second quarter.

Amherst put the game on ice in the third period by scoring six goals to UMass's 1. The Redmen's highest scoring quarter of the season went to no avail as they picked up 6 points in the fourth while Amherst scored three more, which was more than enough to give them the win.

Both Dave Jarret and Kevin O'Brien shone for the Redmen

3 UMass Students Accused of Arson

Three University of Massachusetts students, accused of arson and other charges, had their cases continued in District Court today to June 15.

Thomas M. Kinsella, 18, of Kingspark, N.Y. denied two counts of malicious injury to personal property, one count of attempted larceny and one count of arson.

Leonard P. Coffin, 18, of 3 Vernon St., Framingham, pleaded innocent to charges of arson, malicious injury and attempted larceny.

Richard K. Yost, 19, of 10 Mildrid Rd., Danvers, denied charges of arson and malicious injury.

Kinsella and Coffin were released on $400 bail each and Yost was freed on $350 bail. Atty. John F. Foley represented Kinsella.

The three students are accused of setting fires in a stuffed chair, waste basket and several wooden chairs in the basement recreation room of Greenough House late Saturday night. Some 150 students live in the dormitory.

Flames were quickly extinguished before much damage was caused and the Amherst Fire Department was called to clear the dormitory of smoke.

The trio was further accused of causing some $15 damage to property of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Kinsella faces an additional malicious injury charge, having allegedly damaged a cigarette vending machine owned by Trico Vending Machine Co. of Northampton.

Kinsella and Coffin also are accused of attempting to steal money from the cigarette machine.

Investigation by UMass campus policemen Philip Cavanaugh and Peter Sienkiewicz was assisted by Dean of Men Robert Hopkins and Assistant Dean William Barnard.

The investigation led to the identities of the trio last night and they were held at the Amherst Police Station. Kinsella was held overnight in lieu of bail, while Coffin and Yost furnished bail.

Federal Gov't. Accused of Creating Campus Unrest

by Pat Petow,
Staff Reporter

SEN. ABRAHAM RIBICOFF in a speech May 9, accused the Federal Government of creating unrest on American campuses by luring professors from the classrooms into research projects.

An opinion was expressed by Neurology Prof. Harry Grundfest of Columbia University in a letter to the New York Times which declared "fallacious" a New York Times editorial linking unrest with "attitudes of the faculties to teaching and research." He minimized the "freakish" aspects of discontent, but said "much of it reflects a serious malaise, social and intellectual in our society."

Sen. Ribicoff deplored "the changing character and content" of education brought about by the Federal Government's concept of only buying research.

"THE STUDENT OF TODAY," said the former Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare," has become . . . a seat in a lecture hall, a number on a card in the administration office, a statistic in university records."

In support of a cabinet-level department of education, for which he filed a bill this year, Ribicofff reported that a recent survey revealed five Federal agencies distributed $1.25 billion for research and development to 124 colleges and universities in 1964.

HE ALSO SAID a majority of advisory panel members, for the Department of Defense, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Atomic Energy Commission, the National Science Foundation, and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, numbering 1,622, came from institutions of higher learning.

The Conn. senator described as "needed desperately" a focal point to coordinate the expanding programs of aid now spent by 41 different branches of the government. The U.S. Office of Education oversees less than a third of the funds, he said.

RIBICOFF TOLD AN assembly of the National Association of College Stores that federally financed research has erected a wall between the professor and the student.

The expressions of discontent, perhaps not caused by the attitudes of instructors, Prof. Grundfest stressed, are dissatisfaction directed against the power of money. "The students are giving a magnificent demonstration of the traditions of the 'university idea,' frightening though it may be to college administrators," the New York educator wrote.

HE COMMENTED THAT the educational wheeler-dealers are usually "neither good teachers nor research workers" and "end up as administrators, where they do their best to stifle or kill 'the university idea'—an "intimate contact with great and learned minds."

Advocating full-time research for the scientist, Grundfest also supported separate "rigorous programs of learning" for the student. He distinguished between the required rapport of intellectual contact and the adequacy of an average college teacher to guide a serious student—a relationship lacking in intellectual rapport but requiring undivided attention.

The letter, published May 10, stated that the "perverse aspects of the unrest should not be made to hide the fact" of its direction.

Dean Soutter Outlines Med. School Purposes

Although he could not say which of the 95 proposed sites would be chosen for the UMass Medical School, Dean Lamar Soutter told delegates to the 1965 Homemakers College that the primary purpose of the school, and its teaching hospital facilities, would be to give medical training which could be spread throughout the state.

He said that medical schools spread health improvement not only through the medical students, but through their training of nurses, technicians and aides, and that this training must be passed down the line, so that doctors are aided by nurses, nurses by aides, secretaries, and even computers.

Although Massachusetts is not hurt as much as other parts of the country from a shortage of doctors, its people do demand high standards of medical training. He noted also that the types of patients are changing, with more old age and children, both of whom require special treatment.

No medical school can operate at a profit, Dr. Soutter said, as the cost of educating each student is over $5000, and the tuition of no school is over $1700.

Although it will take four years for the new medical school to get underway, it will then take 100 students a year. The need for general practitioners is especially great, and for this reason the new school will include exposure to community service in its training program.

Music Will Highlight Frosh Picnic

Three free and separate musical events will highlight the freshman picnic "Caribbean Holiday" this Saturday, May 15 from three to seven p.m. at the campus pond.

Tommy Ray's Jamaican Steel Band will be contrasted with the rock 'n roll sound of the "Boss Tweeds." The Class of 68's own Brian Sullivan will sing at the intermission.

The freshman executive council re-emphasized that admission to the picnic is free and that the picnic is open for everybody. Hot dogs and Cokes will be available.

The area will be decorated in a carnival mood and a limbo contest will highlight the games and contests in the West Indian atmosphere.

Freshman class president Bob Keough expressed the hope that many people will take advantage of the unique free entertainment the picnic will offer.

Plans are being made so that rain will not prevent the picnic from being held.

A sure sign of Spring as students gather by the pond to rest, relax and feed the ducks.

Loans Available For Peace Corps Trainees

College juniors who wish to use the summer before their senior year to prepare for post-graduation Peace Corps service now may borrow up to $600 to help pay their senior year school expenses. Loan repayment may be deferred until after Peace Corps service has been completed.

The loan program, announced today by Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver, is the product of an agreement between United Student Aid Fund, Inc. (USA Fund) and the Peace Corps Volunteers Fund, a non-profit foundation established by the Peace Corps National Advisory Council.

Privately funded, the loans are guaranteed by USA Fund, a non-profit corporation providing loan guarantees to students on 700 campuses with the participation of more than 6000 banks throughout the United States.

The loans are expected to enable more third-year college students to enroll in the Peace Corps Advanced Training Program; a two-phase plan that provides intensive Peace Corps training during the summer months between the junior and senior year and just after graduation. Many students who have had to work during summer months now may participate in the Peace Corps Advanced Program.

Allen D. Marshall president of the USA Fund called the loan program "A unique relationship between two private organizations (USA Fund and the Peace Corps Volunteer Fund) jointly benefiting a unique agency of our Federal Government."

NOTICE TO ALL STUDENTS

As a result of several incidents of late (coinciding with the arrival of the vernal equinox), I would like to restate to you the University's policy on "demonstrations" on or off campus.

Noisy or unruly gatherings constitute an invasion of the privacy in study of other students. Anyone who initiates such activities or in any way participates in any such demonstrations, including remaining present in an area where University officials have requested groups to disperse, contributes to a situation where potential injury and/or property damage may develop. Such activity subjects the participant(s) to immediate dismissal.

Job Outlook Good For June '65 Grads

President Johnson released May 9 a Labor Department survey of job prospects for the 1.5 million men and women receiving bachelor's degrees and 100,000 others obtaining advanced degrees. The report indicated that the job outlook is "generally excellent," with graduates in scientific and technical fields mostly sought after.

For the class of '65 here are some highlights of opportunities and starting pay levels expected:

•Engineering. Excellent prospects both in government and private industry, including defense-related firms, with greatest demand for those with strong science - mathematics backgrounds for research work. Pay for bachelor's degree holders—$575 to $650 per month; Master's degree—$700 to $800.

•Mathematicians. Very high demand for graduates in data processing and computer work, especially those who have taken courses in engineering and physical sciences. Many openings for actuaries in insurance firms. Salaries range from $575 to $625 a month to start.

•Chemists, physicists. Very good prospects for those with degrees in these physical sciences in both private industry and government, especially for research-development work. Pay runs from $550 to $625 a month.

•Agriculture. Favorable outlook for jobs with makers of fertilizers, pesticides and food processing firms as research men, producers and salesmen. Similar prospects for well-qualified forestry graduates. No salary estimates given.

•Medical services. Excellent opportunities for doctors completing training this year and very favorable prospects for dentists, optometrists, pharmacists and nurses. Government agencies and hospitals report shortages of doctors.

•Business. Higher demand for business administration and liberal arts graduates as salesmen, sales and management trainees. Competition is expected to be keener in personnel work, advertising and public relations. Salary range for beginners from $425 to $600 a month.

•Counselors. New openings are being created by greater government emphasis on rescuing high school dropouts, retraining and rehabilitation.

•Law. Good chances for those at the top of their class or those who come from widely recognized law schools.

Miss Schuck Tapped By MortarBoard

Miss Victoria Schuck, professor of political science at Mount Holyoke College and a former University of Massachusetts trustee, was tapped as an honorary Mortar Board member Thursday evening by the UMass Isogon chapter of the national women's honorary society.

University senior Ann Williams, president of the local chapter, conferred the honorary membership at the Isogon chapter's annual I.Q. tea, attended by high-ranking students and faculty members.

Miss Williams explained that honorary membership is the highest honor paid by a Mortar Board chapter.

Honorary memberships are awarded only to women who have made distinguished contributions to education, state, and nation, in scholarship, service and leadership.

The national council of the organization must approve all nominations for honorary membership.

Proposed Bill Would Raise Driving Age

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, May 7—Sixteen-year-olds will be prohibited from driving motor vehicles in Massachusetts if the Legislature goes along with its committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles, which has favorably reported a bill to revise the minimum driving license age to 17 years.

While Registrar of Motor Vehicles Richard E. McLaughlin urged the committee to report out a bill calling for driving licenses to be issued starting at age 18, he reportedly favors the compromise version. But two members of the Highway committee, itself, do not. Rep. J. Robert Mahan (D-Leominster), House chairman, and Rep. Lawrence P. Smith (D-Lawrence) dissented from the favorable report.

Rep. Mahan said the bill provides that a new driver would have to operate on a learner's permit for a six-month period, so the earliest a permanent license could be obtained would be at age 17 and one-half years. He said the bill would not prohibit 16-year-old boys and girls from taking driver-education instructions in the classroom, but it would bar them from the public ways.

During his testimony before the Highways committee, Registrar McLaughlin said the 16 and 17-year-old drivers, a total of 111,00, represent 4.5 per cent of the state's total driving population, and are "involved in fatal accidents at a rate of 50 per cent greater than our other drivers."

Princeton Plans Grade Changes

Princeton University students will be able for the first time next September to take courses for which no official grades are given.

The university faculty approved the plan Tuesday, allowing the students to take four such courses — outside their major — over their four year careers.

The students will be given informal grades by their professors but their official records will include only pass or fail designations for the courses.

CRITIQUE

Why wasn't a new issue of Critique available Counseling Day? The reason is that the staff has used their time and efforts to formulate a new and more comprehensive type of questionnaire for more comprehensive future issues.

In addition there has been a change with senior Dick Littlefield, Critique's outgoing Editor-in-Chief, being replaced by Gail Greenough.

CRITIQUE serves a dual purpose: first, to provide students with a factual account of courses offered at the University; secondly, to provide an accurate feedback to the faculty and administration on the success of their effort and teaching methods.

With these goals in mind, Critique has decided to publish two types of Critiques. One to be for introductory courses and the alternate for advanced courses of which a fall publication for Juniors and Seniors is planned. Each issue will also give intensive coverage to a particular department.

CRITIQUE is on the move and can use as much assistance as is made available to them. Presently, the staff is seeking volunteers to pass out questionnaires during their classes. All those interested please stop by the Critique Office preferably on May 12 to 14 to sign up.

Military Weekend Pass to Paradise

The Airmen of Note of the U.S. Air Force Band, a feature of Military - Ball Weekend.

THIS WEEKEND

A military weekend featuring the Military Ball on Saturday, May 15, 1965, will be held by the cadets of the Army and Air Force ROTC students here at the University.

With a theme of A Pass into Paradise, the music for the affair will be furnished by The Airmen of Note of Washington, D. C. There will be favors given to all at the door.

The tickets, priced at $4.00 per couple, and which provide for favors, refreshment and free color photos of you and your date, will be sold to military and non-military students at Dickinson Hall, Monday through Friday, from 8:45-3:00. Get your ticket now!

A cocktail party and dining-in will be held at Westover AFB from 5:00-7:30 on Saturday evening for advanced cadets.

The ball will be preceded by the annual Spring Review on Friday, May 14, on the lower Athletic Field at 7:00 p.m.

Counseling Day Dilemma

Once again UMass has shown that it is not an IBM run University. In fact, an entire day was set aside just to make the students feel like people. This day, affectionately referred to as counseling day, is designed to show students that UMass really does care what happens to them.

On this momentous occasion students actually get to speak to their advisors. For this is when the counselors appear, as if from out of nowhere, to aid their poor, misguided charges.

You might ask whether or not an advisor can actually be much help to a student with only one day to work with him. Before such a question is raised, however, it should be made clear that although called counseling "day," the conference usually lasts less than ten minutes.

Now ask what good counseling day is and then answer "very little". One day is simply is not enough time to plan a course of study for a half a year. It becomes even less sufficient for students who must pick a major. Far too many students reach their senior year only to find that they have not fulfilled their graduation requirements. More finish a semester feeling that it was a total waste in that they took all the wrong courses.

Something must be done about this problem.

Either more days must be devoted to counseling so that students can meet for at least a half an hour with their advisors, or there should be some provision made for counseling throughout the semester.

One such provision would be to set up a full time advisor for each department. This has already been done for the pre-law students, and its success has already been assured by the strong participation in the program.

Much has been said about the lack of communication between students and faculty members. This would be an ideal area in which to start bridging the gap.

In Loco Parentis

The University of Massachusetts provides an enlightened and diversified curriculum. This program is aimed at producing mature young men and women to live and work in society. This week the Student Senate will present a bill which if passed would be an effective display of the administration's belief in the success of this program. This bill recommends that under-graduate women who have reached their twenty-first birthday be allowed to obtain off-campus housing away from the direct auspices of the University.

It is true that the University must act in loco parentis while these women remain part of the student body, but it is also true that a woman of twenty-one is quite capable of living on her own. Generally a girl of this age would be an upperclasswoman. She will already have resided in a residence hall for at least a year. If by this time she has not learned the rules and regulations of this school, and her responsibility to respect them while a member of the student body, then there is little likelihood that her attitude will change simply because she is subjected to forced discipline in a dorm.

Also, since it is already part of the administration's policy to allow twenty-one year old males to live off campus—and it would seem questionable whether many of these young men men should be left on their own—there seems to be little justification for refusing this privilege to women.

Furthermore, there are many academic and financial benefits for twenty-one year old women living off campus. The work of an upperclass woman is much more time-consuming and exacting, since she must work to fulfill specialization requirements. Therefore, it would seem that a quiet and private off-campus accommodation would be much more conducive to study than the "loud" silence of a dorm. It is also less expensive for four girls to room together off-campus where they can divide up costs rather than each paying individually to room and board at the University.

We should realize that to prevent a twenty-one year old woman from assuming the responsibilities of living on her own as the adult which she legally is, is to defeat the very end which the University wishes to promote.

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

More Flexibility

To the Editor:

The Student Senate poll of our present grading system will surely be helpful, even if it serves only to stir up some useful discussion. For my part, however, I hope that it will lead to a return to the more flexible system of letter grades with pluses and minuses. The present system simply does not allow for fine enough distinctions.

J. W. Swanson
Associate Professor of Philosophy

Present Advantages

To the Editor:

Several times in the past, and again recently, the present grading system here at the University has come under fire. Its critics favor a more articulate system. Few students realize, though, that our existing grading system does have decided advantages.

First of all, it may be easy in a science course to determine a student's grade to within a tenth or hundredth of a point, but this just isn't the case in Humanities, Social Sciences or any course where essay type tests are the rule. To ask a teacher to distinguish among an 81, an 82, and an 83% on an essay test is asking too much.

Our present system gives a decided advantage to the student in allowing him, to a certain degree, to place emphasis where he desires. A dedicated English major is in a position to really plug on an interesting literature course for an "A" or "B", while at the same time taking a low "C" in Zoo 1.

A probably more important facit of this whole question is the atmosphere created by the respective grading system. The effect of a more ridgid system could be detrimental to any intelectual environment that we might have on campus. Critical grading would tend to create a "nose to the grindstone" situation in which students would become more "mark conscious" and less interested in study for study's sake. It would discourage outside reading and research, academic dabbling, and extracurricular activities. The burden of finals would become even heavier, and cheating would be encouraged.

Perhaps our current grading system tends to mark down the hard worker, but this disadvantage is more than made up for by the added degree of intellectual freedom it allows.

Annual ROTC Spring Review Scheduled for Friday Night

On Friday, May 14, the Army and Air Force ROTC will sponsor the annual Spring Review. Each year the entire Army brigade and Air Force Wing mass on the lower athletic field for the final review of the year.

This year Major General Ralph A. Palladine will be reviewing the troops. Gen. Palladine is military executive to the Reserve Forces Policy Board of the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

The Review will begin with the troops marching on the ready line and the presentation of demonstrations by the Precisionettes, Flying Redmen, Bay State Special Forces and Grenadiers.

The Cadets will then march to the final line where the review will take place. After the general troops the line, the cadets to be decorated will advance to the reviewing stand to receive their awards. Some 37 awards will be presented this year.

After the presentation of the awards, the cadets will pass in review to music provided by the 18th Army band from Fort Devens.

TWIRLING TRYOUTS TO BE HELD

Peter Ordway, newly elected manager of the University Bands, has announced that tryouts for the position of twirler with the 1965 University of Massachusetts Marching Band will be held Monday, May 17, at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. All interested twirlers in the University are invited to compete for this position.

. . . And The Grading Controversy Goes On

"I really would like to say that I'm not looking forward to the mid term grading period at all," asserted the bright young professor. "I'm in no position to pass judgement on 430 frightened freshmen who are facing the frustrations of college for the first time. Besides, there's a line four departments deep at the computer; I'll never get the exams corrected in time."

"I CERTAINLY agree with you," enthused the eager student. "It's a crime to force the maturing of oneself educationally into a tight little pattern of statistical computations. The mind should be able to explore knowledge without being limited to the scope and the schedule imposed by the grading system."

"Very well put," suggested the cautious and tactful administrator. "It really hurts when we have to refuse admission or recommendation to a potentially good student just because he couldn't cope with the evaluatory procedure."

"If you ask me," answered the old instructor, "the grading system is the only way to control the classroom process and insure a consistent educational scheme."

"Would ja please give me your order," pleaded the college union building coffee shop waitress.

"Why can't this school be more forward in its thinking," said the professor. "There are schools, you know, where the grading system is being refined or even abolished."

"Really! Gee, prof, you certainly do keep up on all the educational trends. By the way, may I turn in that term paper a day late?"

(laughter)

"No."

"That's a good point," belatedly admitted the administrator. "If we could start some new system here, it would do wonders for us PR-wise. In fact, I bet we could get a foundation grant to study the idea."

"BUT DON'T FORGET," reminded the old instructor, "some alumni—contributors you know—would scream bloody murder if you did anything radical."

"Other schools do it. St. John's College in Annapolis has a twice-a-year 'don rag' which replaces report cards. This is an evaluation discussion among the student and his professors and it is much more helpful and honest than a grading system."

"A friend of mine at Cal Tech told me that freshmen there are not being graded at all; they are just going to be told whether they pass or fail. There will be much less pressure on the student to memorize specific details for a specific course and he will be encouraged instead to understand the total content area."

The Dean at Washington University in St. Louis told me that they are studying a very similar system; and San Jose State is starting an experimental program for freshmen called 'Tutorials in Letters and Sciences' which will eliminate not only exams and grades, but also courses themselves. And then of course there is Goddard College, which eliminates everything."

"THAT DOES present problems, however. How can you determine honor rolls and extra-curricular eligibility? The athletic conference needs the Grade Point Average for all athletes. And what about the poor professor? He has to justify his evaluation to the student and the administration and the family; he can't do this without a consistent system of gradng."

"Have you heard about the guy at Haverford," the young professor asked, rhetorically, "who complained about the grading system and was told by the Committee on Academic Flexibility — now, there's a committee—that he would not be given grades. He presented a long anti-grading statement, and they bought it."

"Of course they did," declared the bright young student. "The poor guy probably had the same problem I have. I started out in organic chemistry, but then last year I switched to education. My grades in chem—which were terrible and don't relate to what I'm doing now—are still on my record and will drag down my ed grades, which are more relevant to what I will be doing."

"I can see it now. Our school, along with Carleton and Brown — who are also in this grade revision business—and the rest of them, pioneering in positive education reform. We could live on foundation money."

"WHO ARE YOU KIDDING?" queried the old instructor, irreverantly. "We would lose the confidence of the alumni; we would be flooded by left wing, bearded faculty; we would be subject to public ridicule; the columnists would tease us; the internal operaton would be impossible. The real reform is going on at places like Queen's College and Michigan where they are adding to the grading system by including plusses and minuses on grade slips. They are doing so because it is becoming more and more necessary to give a really accurate picture of the student's achievement. I think we should be very proud that we have a safe, established, consistent system of gradng."

"That's true," said the young professor and the eager student and the administrator.

"84¢ please," said the cashier.

June Draft Call Rises

The Defense Department Friday called for the drafting of 17,000 men for the Army in June — the biggest monthly draft quota since November 1963.

The June call is 1900 greater than the 15,100 for May and 3300 greater than the 13,700 for April.

"The June call, in accordance with established policies, has been computed by the Army to cover losses, thereby maintaining the approved active Army strength," the announcement said.

Increased draft calls have been made necessary by a drop off in enlistments. Officials have attributed this drop off to rumors that Selective Service would be eliminated.

A Defense Department manpower study now nearing completion is expected to recommend continuation of the draft.

Government Grants Available to Grads

The competition for 1966-67 United States government graduate grants for academic study or research abroad and for professional training in creative and performing arts, opened officially on May 1st, the Institute of International Education announced.

The Institute conducts competitions for U.S. government scholarships provided by the Fulbright-Hays Act as part of the educational and cultural exchange program of the Department of State. Under this program, more than 800 American graduate students will have the opportunity to study in any one of 55 countries. The purpose of the awards is to increase mutual understanding between the people of the U.S. and other countries through the exchange of persons, knowledge and skills.

Candidates who wish to apply for an award must be U.S. citizens at the time of application and have a bachelor's degree or its equivalent by the beginning date of the grant, and be proficient in the language of the host country. Selections will be made on the basis of academic and/or professional record, the feasibility of the applicant's proposed study plan and personal qualifications. Preference is given to candidates who have not had prior opporunity for extended study or residence abroad and who are under the age of 35.

Creative and performing artists will not require a bachelor's degree, but must have four years of professional study or equivalent experience. Social workers must have at least two years of professional experience after the Master of Social Work degree. Applicants in the field of medicine must have an M.D. at the time of application.

Three types of grants will be available under the Fulbright-Hays Act: U.S. government full grants, joint U.S.-other government grants and U.S. government travel-only grants.

Travel-only grants will be available to Austria, Brazil, Denmark, France, Germany, Iceland, Israel, Italy, the Netherlands and Sweden.

Application forms and information for students currently enrolled at UMass may be obtained from the campus Fulbright advisor, William B. Nutting. The deadline for filing applications through the Fulbright advisor is Oct. 15, 1965.

Community Education Aided By Conferences Held at UMass

If you were in charge of conferences at the University of Massachusetts, and a group wanted to tie a cow to a stake on the lawn in front of a prominent building, what would you do?

Harold C. Durgin, UMass Conference Coordinator, was faced with ust this problem when a religious organization held a conference on campus several years ago. Of course he had to deny the request. "They wanted to remind the conferees to give to the needy," says Durgin, "but all I could think about was what it would do to our lawn."

Not all the groups who meet at UMass present such unusual problems, but any off-campus organization that chooses to hold a conference at the University is given the same careful attention and assistance as part of the UMass conference program.

Each year the University opens its doors to 30,000 people, who participate in about 140 conferences and meetings. The University's lecture halls, classrooms, and Student Union are given full use by conferees.

Why are they at UMass? The University invites groups to meet on campus and use its facilities. As the state university, UMass has a responsibility to educate the entire community—not just students. Its contributions to adult education are organizational assistance, modern facilities, and a stimulating academic environment.

For the most part, conferences that are held on campus are for business or public service groups. Other organizations that have met at UMass are from the fields of agriculture, communications, education, engineering, labor, and industry. This year's schedule includes conferences ranging from elementary school principals to retail lumbermen, to a camera college for the New England Camera Club and Boys' State.

The mammoth job of organizing and providing for conferences is handled by Mr. Durgin and his staff. They schedule, plan, and evaluate each conference.

A professional member of the Adult Education Association of America, Mr. Durgin feels that "Adults have found they must go back to school to better understand and improve their environments." He calls the University a "leader in backing up the community's efforts to continue education through conferences."

Before a group can hold its meeting at UMass, it must first be approved by the President of the University through Mr. Durgin. Durgin then meets with the conference chairman to determine the group's special needs. Depending upon the size and nature of the conference, preliminary plans usually can be made in three or four meetings.

The conference office attends to the many administrative details of registration, finance, meeting arrangements, and special equipment. This relieves group directors of time consuming paperwork so that they may concentrate on their conference's program.

While the 10,500 UMass students are on vacation, from 50 to 5000 people have been placed in dormitories and dining rooms while attending conferences.

When the American Institute of Biological Scientists met at UMass for one week in August, 1963, 5000 people converged on the town of Amherst. In addition to using nearly all the University's facilities, the visiting scientists and their families provided a boom to local merchants and area recreational facilities.

The conference office operates on a self-sustaining basis. Money from registration fees provides salaries for the coordinator and his staff and takes care of expenses. Any unusued income is put into a general student fund.

While the conference is on campus, Durgin is available to handle any special problems that should arise. Careful planning and scheduling eliminate conflicts between simultaneously held conferences—on most occasions. One afternoon Durgin received an urgent phone call from a home economics group whose conference was being held in the Student Union. Their reciting poet was struggling for audibility above the strains of the Salvation Army Band playing in the next room. Fortunately, "special problems" of this type are rare.

One of the most meaningful and colorful conferences held on campus was that of the World Association of Youth (WAY). Participants were prime ministers, international youth leaders, and some 500 young adults representing 103 countries.

The superb facilities, set- in an historical and picturesque location made UMass an ideal location for the group's first conference in the United States in 12 years.

Red Cross Blood Donor Day Sponsored By UMass Women

On Monday, May 10, Blood Donor Day, sponsored by University Women, was held in the Recreation Room of Arnold House on the UMass campus.

Mrs. H. Watts has announced that 132 pints of blood were received from the 150 donors who registered. There were 50 walk-in donors representing faculty, sororities, Inter - Fraternity Council members and townspeople who donated especially in response to the need of blood for open-heart surgery for two local residents.

Physicians in attendance were Dr. Robert Gage and Dr. Fred Morse.

Mrs. H. Watts and Mrs. H. Hugill, co-chairmen for this drive, express their thanks to the following:

Nurses, RN's: Mrs. M. Nelson, chairman; Mrs. B. Farrell, Mrs. A. French, Mrs. G. Bostder, Mrs. R. Gage, Mrs. J. Clayton, Mrs. A. DeGrenier.

Nurses, LPN's: Mrs E. Rugg and Mrs. L. Filkoski.

Netmen Beat UConn and AIC; Place 2nd in Yan-Con Tourney

In the past few weeks the University tennis team has learned that tournament competition is a bit more rugged than dual matches.

Last week the Redmen beat UConn 5-4 in the first home match of the season. This match found Bob Neal and Harvey Mednicov winning their singles matches in three sets and Bill Martin and Jerry Johnson sweeping theirs in straight sets.

In the doubles matches Neal and Mednicov couldn't get adjusted as they dropped their match losing two sets in a row. It took a superb effort by Martin and Mike Rose to win at #3 to clinch the match.

THEN CAME THE Yankee Conference championships. Rose played one of his best matches of the year as he beat Ron Masey from UConn in the first round. Mike had lost to Masey the week before in the dual match. After this he lost a three set affair to Deering from UMaine in the second round.

At the number three position Neal took his first round match only to be dropped in three sets in the second round. Martin got to the finals at the #4 position but lost to Ryan of UVM.

The only two singles championships the Redmen could muster were Mednicov at #5 and Johnson at #6. Both of these men played excellent tennis during the tournament.

The only other crown that was taken by UMass was captured by Rose and Martin at #3 doubles. Mednicov and Neal were ahead in their match but succumbed to a UVM team. A win here and the Redmen would have won the championship by one point.

Vermont took the tournament with 19 points followed by

Flamboyant Tennis Coach Steve Kosakowski

UMass with 14, Maine with 10, and UConn, URI and UNH in that order.

THE REDMEN then returned to dual meet competition against AIC. Coach Steve Kosakowski said that this was the strongest team he has ever seen from the Springfield school.

Mike Rose got things under way on the right foot as he was victorious at #1 singles. Then Harvey Mednicov, who is establishing himself as a future great, won his match 6-0, 6-0 for his best performance of the year.

Johnson won at #5 and Harper took his match at #6. Neal and Mednicov won their doubles match as did Harper and Rose.

ONE OF THE MORE interesting highlights of the meet was produced at the #3 doubles position. The Johnson brothers, Jerry and Steve, took on AIC's Adzicki brothers. This was the last victory for AIC.

The Redmen now stand at 7-1 and travel to Harvard Thursday for the New England Championships. Let's hope the boys play this one as if it were a dual meet.

Sports Notes

Bill Cline, the Little All-America tailback from East Carolina, will have a few more meetings with Jerry Whelchel. Cline recently signed a contract with the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League . . . which school has won the most Yankee Conference football games? If you said Maine you were right. The Black Bears have won 42 of 75 contests . . . New Hampshire has won six championships to lead in that department.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

Ford Frick, the Commissioner of Major League Baseball, recently threw a question out to a panel of New York college baseball coaches.

"Why", asked the Commissioner, "should a college boy who signs a pro baseball contract lose his amateur elligibility in other sports?" Frick never received an answer.

The question was a good one and may be applied to other sports besides baseball. For example, why should an inter-collegiate football player, who signs a contract on January 2, be proclaimed ineligible to participate in such winter and spring sports as wrestling and lacrosse? I personally see no harm that can come of this. If anything, participation in these sports would aid the athlete in remaining in excellent physical condition until he finishes his collegiate career.

A case of this point: Jim Nance, the fullback from Syracuse University, signed a contract with the Boston Patriots last week. The reason he waited so long is that he is a top notch wrestler and won the NCAA championshp in the heavyweight class. IF he had signed with the Patriots at the climax of the football season he would have been inelligible to compete in inter-collegiate wrestling matches.

THE COMMISSIONER'S rhetorical question is correct. There is no reason that a baseball player in his junior year should be proclaimed inelligible to participate in such sports as basketball or swimming in his senior year.

The biggest point against Frick is that premature signings in the past have led to dropouts. It has been said that when the dollar signs are waved in front of their eyes the diploma becomes secondary. But if your ambition is to become a professional ball player, wouldn't you come to the realization that one more year of college would be more beneficial to you upon retirement? I think that the college athlete is intelligent enough to comprehend the necessity of remaining in college. The ones that jump at the first offer will regret the situation soon enough.

However the choice should be left up to the individual. It is not up to the amateur bureaucracies, excuse me, committees, to predetermine the standing of an athlete if he has been gifted with the talents to become a professional.

Intramural Report

by Larry Rutstein

J. Pollack of BKP pitched a two-hitter to lead the Fraternity League "A" frontrunners to a 8-0 victory over QTV. TEP remained tied for the lead by edging past ZN 7-5 giving them a 4-0 record. Tomorrow night TEP will meet BKP for the league championship.

In the other League "A" game SPE outslugged PSK 10-8.

Four teams remained tied for the lead in League "B" with 4-1 records as they moved into the last week of the season. TKE defeated KS 15-9 and ASP held off a late PSD rally to win 10-9 to stay in front. LCA, sparked by the 4 hit pitching of Dick Ferranti and the hitting of Gary Powers and Don Rana, stayed on the top of the league as they whipped PMD 9-2.

AEPi continued its massive hitting attack to remain in the race as they slammed out 14 hits and 15 runs to give ATG their fifth straight loss, 15-1.

THE FINAL WEEK should eliminate a couple of the contenders as TKE plays both ASP and LCA.

Only the American and National Leagues of the Independent division were active Monday. In the American the Boyden Bombers continued undefeated as they massacred the Old Timers 20-1 led by a one-hitter by Jack Leaman. Leaman had a no-hitter going into the final two outs of the game when Lazar broke it up with a single. In other American games the Breadwinners went into extra innings to nip the Pitmen 19-18. In the bottom of the eighth Hudson got on base and Roger Deminico batted him in to win the game.

Kappa Nu stayed in contention by winning a forfeit from Vicky's 202's.

B. Thompson's three-hitter helped the Foresters to a 13-0 shutout of the Inn Keepers to remain undefeated in the National League.

In other play the IEME's outscored the Chem Club 7-4 and the Arnold Air Society scored two runs in the top of the seventh and were able to beat C. E. 11-9. The losers scored 7 runs in the bottom half of the inning in a desperate rally.

IM director, Chet Gladchuck, announced once again that all rained out games from April 26 will be replayed May 13.

Visiting Professor Anderson Honors Day Convo Speaker

by Barrie MacKay

Editor's Notes See the 4 page supplement for complete information on the honors program.

"Higher education is not just desirable for the individual or the nation, it is compulsory," John Anderson, former governor of Kansas, and Visiting Distinguished professor of Public Affairs, told a large audience at the annual Honors Day Convocation at the University yesterday.

Anderson, speaking before 200 on "A Public Administrator's View of Higher Education", said: "I firmly believe that the public is little, if any, reluctant to pay the costs of education.

"Higher education is big business . . . It is a broad opportunity for many," he went on, and "it will continue to grow."

Everyone wants his children educated today and the public administrator should mirror the public's viewpoint, according to Anderson, who was governor in 1961-64.

"THE ONLY LIMITATION should be ambition and ability," he said.

Any student with ability should not be forced to forego college because of financial reasons. Yet private funds donated to education often have stipulations that hinder education rather than help it, he declared.

"Costs of education have continued to grow at rates heretofore unknown," he continued. But more important is the need that academic freedom shall not be lost for financial reasons, the speaker added.

ANDERSON SAID: "We are on a course that will help all the people of the world and to do this, education—whatever the cost—is our only hope. The educated man has become indispensible if our nation is to move forward."

Problems such as the recent student demonstrations at Berkeley have been founded in atmospheres that "breathed trouble", he stated. Petty incidents have often grown into large scale demonstrations, Anderson explained.

Students are no longer placid; rather they loudly speak up for things they believe in, he said. Human problems, as always, deal much with human nature and the problems must be faced by everyone, for they cannot be solved by elected officials alone, the lecturer said.

HE CONCLUDED that the problems of the 20th Century must be solved, always being guided by public opinion. "May we apply the ambition of youth together with the greatest power man has today—education—to the solution of these problems," he said.

Provost Oswald Tippo presided at the Student Union Ballroom program and Arthur Elkins, director of the Honors Program, introduced the 44 candidates for Senior Honors.

Gov. Volpe Recommends Funds For UMass Building Projects

Gov. Volpe yesterday recommended that UMass receive $17,052,000 for expansion and improvements as part of his $57,922,000 capital outlay program. The recommended work includes:

1) $12,080,000 for construction of the first phase of a complex to coordinate all campus science research programs. The complex will include a 16 - story chemistry tower, a science library, and a computer center.

2) $1,697,000 for construction of a ten story 220 room addition to Machmer Hall.

3) $1,000,000 for an addition to the University's power plant.

4) $1,000,000 for improvements to roads, walks, and parking facilities.

5) $500,000 for construction of Farm Service and laboratory buildings for the College of Agriculture at South Deerfield and Belchertown.

6) $375,000 for an addition to the library.

7) $280,000 for plans for an addition to the Student Union, a conference center with 100 dcuble room sleeping facilities and a staff dining area.

8) $120,000 for plans for a new building or an addition to the School of Education building.

9) $30,000 for plans for an addition to the Health Services building.

Friday Is Deadline On Conflicts!

Deadline for student reports of final exam conflicts to the schedule office is 5:00 p.m., Friday, May 14.

Conflict reports will be verified and analyzed during the week of May 17, and necessary arrangements for make-up exams made with Departments.

Failure of students to report conflicts before deadline, as required, will complicate the scheduling of make up exams by faculty members, and thus jeopardize the students chance for a make-up solution.

Late-reporting students will be instructed by The Schedule Office to seek their own solutions, which will be at the discretion of individual Faculty Members.

Students are advised to check with their instructor about room assignments for finals.

ATTENTION GRADUATING SENIORS!
Invitations for graduation plus rainy day tickets will be given out on Monday, May 17, Tuesday, May 18, Wednesday, May 19 from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the R.S.O. office. Bring your I.D.

Debates New Proposals Long Senate Meeting

Giving President Richard Dacey a good chance to test his new post, the Student Senate considered the R.S.O. cume requirement bill and unanimously passed a recommendation by Senator Terry Carpenter (Baker) calling for "the basic essentials" in track facilities.

IN A FIVE HOUR MEETING the Senate also passed a recommendation to President Lederle asking that "undergraduate women who have reached their 21st birthday be exempted from required residence in University residence halls," and it established an ad-hoc committee for the "investigation and evaluation" of student labor on campus.

Wednesday's meeting was quickly bogged down in discussion over the bill requiring a 1.8 average for an officer in an R.S.O. organization receiving at least 1% of Student Tax Association Funds.

PRESENTING THE MOTION, .Senate Treasurer Gary Bombardier cited precedent and the Senate's right to control R.S.O. funds as giving them the right to legislate such cume requirements.

"We are not trying to hold anyone's hand," the senator stated, "but these groups will be handling almost $170,000 and they need continuity of officers."

Initial controversy arose over the question of eliminating the Senate from the cume bill (another bill pertaining to Student Government Organizations will be brought up at a later date), but it soon developed into a quagmire of constitutional difficulties, appeals to the chair, and parliamentary confusion.

THE BILL WAS FINALLY tabled to the Finance Committee and will be reconsidered next week.

The recommendation that women 21 years of age be allowed to live off campus was presented by Senator Bill Donovan (Commuter) who commented that "the University should hold people 21 to the task of growing up on their own."

Senator Donovan also pointed out that there is sufficient hous-

SCOPE Sends Students South For The Summer

Several students from UMass will join groups from Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke Colleges to form a S.C.O.P.E. Project team to aid Negro voter registration in Martin County, North Carolina this summer

The S.C.O.P.E. (Summer Community Organization and Political Education), sponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's Voter Registration and Political Education department, is recruiting students and faculty across the nation to spend their summer working in seventy-five southern rural counties and six urban counties

Through these recruits S.C.O.P.E. hopes to reach one of its major goals—establishing links between Southern communities and college campuses in the North and West.

Because of previous involvement in demonstrations of some of the University project members in Williamston, North Carolina last Easter, workers from the University have been assigned that town as their headquarters. Here they will live in the Negro community and set up an intensive program of political education designed to help local leaders organize and develop community action projects.

Most of their time, however, will be spent in outlying parts of the county working with unregistered Negroes. The workers will try to show them the importance of registering and voting as a means of securing political power with which they may more effectively gain their full rights.

Plans are now underway to finance the project. The estimated cost of sustaining a twenty-member team for the summer is $2,500. Many faculty members have already shown their support in response to a letter received by them last week. More are expected to give their assistance. Students will have the chance to help pave the seven hundred hard miles to Martin County on Monday and Tuesday (May 17 and 18) in the lobby of the Student Union.

Saturday Airing Set For Viet Teachathon

On Saturday, May 15, a twelve-hour teach-in will be held at the Nation's capitol on the war which is now being waged in Vietnam and in which the United States is actively involved.

Featured at the teach-in, scheduled to commence early Saturday morning, is McGeorge Bundy, President Johnson's Special Assistant for National Security Affairs. He will be the primary spokesman for the Administrations' policy in Vietnam.

THE PRIMARY SPOKESMAN opposing Bundy will be Professor George M. Kahin of Cornell. In the evening eight concurrent seminars are to be held, and also a panel will discuss the making of American foreign policy.

The newly-formed Four-College chapter of the Universities Committee on the Problems of War and Peace has made plans to support the national lobby and teach-in on Friday and Saturday. Several professors from the area plan to go to Washington to see congressmen and administration spokesmen. They will also attend the teach-in.

SIDNEY KAPLAN, Chairman of the local Chapter and a member of the UMass English department, has arranged for the national teach-in to be carried by WFCR-FM radio (88.5), the Four-College radio station, from 2:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Young Independents, in order to make available for the campus this important discussion on the controversial issue of Vietnam, has made arrangements for listening facilities in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union during the hours of 2:00 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Several faculty members will be present during the afternoon to discuss with students problems in Vietnam.

Seniors Announce Banquet Plans

THE SENIOR CLASS Banquet to be held Thursday, June 10th at the beautiful Schine Inn in Springfield will be the highlight of this year's Senior Week (June 9th through June 13th).

The class has arranged to make all of the many facilities of the Inn available from 12:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. on Thursday.

Tickets for the Banquet (and other Senior Week Activities) are now on sale in the Union lobby. The cost of Banquet tickets is $3.00 per senior and each senior is entitled to two tickets. There are a limited number of banquet tickets, so early purchases are advisable!

University Symphony Band

SUNDAY AT THE ORCHARD

Light classics, traditional marches, and Broadway favorites will highlight the Annual Twilight Concert by the 1965 University Symphony Band in the courtyard of the new Orchard Hill Residence on Sunday, May 16, at 7:00 p.m.

This is the first time a musical organization as large as the Symphony Band has been invited to perform there as a part of the "new concept in University living" program which strives to combine academic, social, and cultural opportunities with dormitory life.

John A. Jenkins will conduct the Band in a program including the "Song" and "Burlesque" from Divertimento for Band and Pageant by Vincent Persichetti; Irish Tune from County Derry by Percy Grainger; and First Suite in E flat for Military Band by Gustav Holst.

The Symphony Band will also perform the award-winning music from Lerner and Loewe's My Fair Lady arranged by Robert Russell Bennett. Traditional marches will include the Italian March Il Bersagliere, Emblem of Unity, and His Honor. Beguine D'Amour by Richard Jackoboice will add a Latin-American touch to the Band's performance.

The Twilight Concert is the final performance of the 1965 Symphony Band season. In case of inclement weather, the Band will perform in the ballroom of the Student Union.

CASTING FOR "KISS ME KATE"

The Operetta Guild is proud to announce that it will open its 19th Musical Theatre season with a production of Cole Porter's Kiss Me Kate. This musical comedy, whose score includes such outstanding songs as So In Love Am I, Too Darn Hot, Wundarbar, Always True to You (in my fashion) and Brush Up Your Shakespeare, will be presented two weekends in the fall.

A meeting for all those interested in working on the production staff or trying out for the cast will be held next Monday and Tuesday, May 17 and 18, at 8:00 p.m. in Old Chapel.

Old man Hassler (Steve Rosoff) had his own way of running the Sleep-Tite Pajama Game. Evidently Gladys (Ellie Swartz) didn't understand this. Both are eligible for the awards to be presented this Saturday evening at Wiggins Tavern.

WANTED: male and female lead singers, chorus singers, dancers, people interested in building and painting scenery, working on costuming or properties. A large cast and crew is needed to work on this exciting production.

As part of a spirited campaign to recruit new members from the University community, the Guild is offering "Apprentice Membership" to all those who, while not having completed a semester's work with the Guild, are interested in doing so. Associate membership is available to those who have done one semester's work with the Guild and full membership to those who have done 2. Membership includes working on Guild production as well as social activities such as the annual Awards Banquet where awards are given in the categories of Acting, Dancing, Orchestra, Production and Most Valuable Member. This year's banquet is to be held May 15 at Wiggin's Tavern

The Guild is fortunate in having enthusiastic advisors, Dr. Stern, Dr. Miller, Dr. Sweeney, Rev. Cooper, who take an active part in the Guild's activities.

IF YOU ARE interested in working on exciting productions, taking an active part in the Guild's social activities come to the open auditions meeting next Monday and Tuesday in Old Chapel.

Time To Study?

There are now only two weeks left in the current semester. Most of the professors are running behind the course schedules, as usual, and are attempting to squeeze over a month's work into 12 class days.

This, in addition to the regular lag between assignments given and those completed, amounts to a fantasticly large amount of work, to be done in a small amount of time. It is hard enough to keep up with regular assignments, but it is nearly impossible to cope with this double load.

The University family has tried to compensate for this problem through the appropriation of a reading and study day at the end of the semester. However, this day can hardly be considered adequate for a student to bring himself up to date.

Last year the Student Senate recommended a three day period at the end of each semester. This time would allow students to catch up with their studies, and also provide for the release of tension, which is so badly needed at this time of year. Unfortunately, the Faculty Senate cut this down to only one day, hardly a sufficient amount of time.

It is obviously too late to change the schedule for this semester. However, it IS time to consider the schedule for next semester. If we forget about this problem now, it will continue to appear at a time too late to remedy.

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions concerning its editorials. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

For All Seniors

To the Editor:

In talking to many seniors it appears that there is a great deal of confusion as to the nature of Senior Week. It seems that many students are laboring under the misconception that it is very expensive and that it is for couples only.

Senior Week is open to all seniors at the nominal cost of $5.50 per person. This is the fee for the entire week's activities, but tickets to individual events may also be purchased if desired.

Further, all seniors with or without dates are invited to participate. Of course, a senior may bring a person from outside the class if he or she desires.

The picnic, banquet, mixers, concert, class night, and graduation day actvities are designed to provide the last fling for the class—the whole class—of 1965.

See you there,
Senior Week Committee

Dorm Counselor

To the Editor:

What makes a good dorm counselor? Is it a strong-willed, hot tempered girl who treats the girls like prisoners; or is it a friendly, but nonetheless competent girl, who keeps firm control on dorm activities, and still manages to be a poised young lady?

The answer would be obvious if it were up to the dorm residents to vote. Since it is not, many girls have been forced to grit their teeth in order to take some counselor's behavior.

I would strongly advise each counselor to review her own behavior, and then determine if she is still qualified to take on the rewarding job that counseling can be.

Does The Job

To the Editor:

Any grading system will have its advantages and disadvantages. Because the 4.0 system is presently used, and because it is easy to administer, it should be kept. However, it can be improved.

First, the purpose of the system should be examined. We must assume the system is to evaluate the individual in relation to all other students at the University. Secondly, because the cum is a composite of many grades, a standard must be set for all departments and all instructors in all courses.

Presently, most grades are determined on the basis of their distribution, an "A" being greater than plus two standard deviations, a "B" being between plus two and plus one S.D.'s, a "C" between plus one and minus one S.D., etc.

Therefore, this system should be universally established. It does fulfill the purpose of ranking the individual.

One exception would be that there should be a minimum amount of knowledge demonstrated on a final examination and anything below this would be a failure, regardless of distribution. This would prevent students from letting the "laws of averages" carry them through a course.

One important point is that these grades are theoretically based on every entering student taking exams. Therefore, in upper level courses there would probably be less failures than in elementary courses.

Using this system a 2.0 graduating cum would mean fifty per cent of entering freshmen would graduate. A 1.8 cum would mean fifty-eight per cent would graduate, and 1.7, seventy-six per cent graduating. This should then be adjusted to ascertain that the University's graduates rank at least with graduates of similar institutions.

Very truly yours,
Richard Coven

Not A Protest

To the Editor:

A misunderstanding has arisen concerning invitations sent to the University community inviting them to a testimonial to Dr. David Leonard of the History Department.

It has appeared to many as if the Testimonial is meant as a protest against the University and its educational philosophy. THIS IS NOT TRUE. The purpose of the Testmonial is to wish Dr. Leonard luck in his new position.

We are sorry for any misunderstanding which may have arisen.

Work Not Scene

To the Editor:

With all the recent comments on the Editorial Page of the Collegian about the Scrolls and Maroon Key Honorary Societies, we the Sophomore Class Officers, would like to take this opportunity to express our feelings. These two organizations did much behind-the-scenes work both in the preparations for the Kingsmen at the Kettle and the Sophomore Banquet. Without their great group effort we would have been caught shorthanded

Our thanks go out to the Scrolls and Keys of 1967 ! !

Marching Band Manager Announces Twirling Tryouts

Peter Ordway, manager of the University Bands, today released additional information concerning twirling tryouts for the 1965 University of Massachusetts Marching Band. Each contestant will be asked to prepare a routine that lasts the duration of a standard march. A record player will be provided for applicants who plan to use their own recording. Primary emphasis will be placed on speed and smoothness of twirling, and on showmanship. Applicants will also be asked to demonstrate marching ability. All interested students should leave their name at the band office, extension 2106, or the music office, extensions 2227 and 2657, before the competition on Monday, May 17, at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

SENATE...

ing in the area to meet necessary accommodations and cited the fact that "women are legally free at age 18."

"Whereas, the facilities for track and field have been deteriorating ... the Athletic Department and Administration ignore the situation ... and the track will now be torn up," the Student Senate passed Terry Carpenter's recommendation that some provisions be made that track practice and that assurance be given of the proposed completion of facilities by 1967.

SENATOR CARPENTER POINTED OUT that the track team and the University are losing valuable athletes because of poor "response" to track needs and because only five away meets are allowed per year.

"They tell us in a general sort of way that we're going to have one (track) by 1967," said Senator Carpenter. .. "we are not asking for a lot ... all we want is the basic essential."

THE ATTITUDE IN THE SENATE was that track facilities have been neglected, and former president William Landis expressed the opinion that he was "not pleased with the attitude of Dean McGurk and the Athletic Committee toward the track."

In a final recommendation, the Senate suggested to the Deans of Men and Women that a list be posted in each dormitory listing "junior and senior residents according to their majors."

The proponent of the bill Senator Elaine Lipson told the Senate that the lists would "serve as a directory for freshmen and sophomores to seek help from upperclassmen," and noted that a student's name can be left off the list if he so wishes.

Musical Day Planned For Frosh Picnic

Free music — four hours of it — will be featured at "Caribbean Holiday" tomorrow from three to seven at the pond. The occasion is the freshman class picnic, and it is open to all.

"As far as I know, this is the first time that so much free entertainment has been offered to the whole campus" said class president Bob Keough.

Featured at the picnic will be the Jamaican Steel Band of Tommy Ray. A limbo contest and carnival decorations will continue the West Indian theme.

The "Boss Tweeds" will provide a different mood of music, and Brian Sullivan of the Class of '68 will round out the entertainment.

Hot dogs and Cokes will be available all day.

Hurry...Europe is waiting for you

By solving problems in astronautics, Air Force scientists expand man's knowledge of the universe. Lt. Howard McKinley, M.A., tells about research careers on the Aerospace Team.

(Lt. McKinley holds degrees in electronics and electrical engineering from the Georgia Institute of Technology and the Armed Forces Institute of Technology. He received the 1963 Air Force Research & Development Award for his work with inertial guidance components. Here he answers some frequently-asked questions about the place of college-trained men and women in the U.S. Air Force.)

Is Air Force research really advanced, compared to what others are doing? It certainly is. As a matter of fact, much of the work being done right now in universities and industry had its beginnings in Air Force research and development projects. After all, when you're involved in the development of guidance systems for space vehicles—a current Air Force project in America's space program—you're working on the frontiers of knowledge.

What areas do Air Force scientists get involved in? Practically any you can name. Of course the principal aim of Air Force research is to expand our aerospace capability. But in carrying out this general purpose, individual projects explore an extremely wide range of topics. "Side effects" of Air Force research are often as important, scientifically, as the main thrust.

How important is the work a recent graduate can expect to do? It's just as important and exciting as his own knowledge and skill can make it. From my own experience, I can say that right from the start I was doing vital, absorbing research. That's one of the things that's so good about an Air Force career—it gives young people the chance to do meaningful work in the areas that really interest them.

What non-scientific jobs does the Air Force offer? Of course the Air Force has a continuing need for rated officers—pilots and navigators. There are also many varied and challenging administrative-managerial positions. Remember, the Air Force is a vast and complex organization. It takes a great many different kinds of people to keep it running. But there are two uniform criteria: you've got to be intelligent, and you've got to be willing to work hard.

What sort of future do I have in the Air Force? Just as big as you want to make it. In the Air Force, talent has a way of coming to the top. It has to be that way, if we're going to have the best people in the right places, keeping America strong and free.

What's the best way to start an Air Force career? An excellent way—the way I started—is through Air Force Officer Training School. OTS is a three-month course, given at Lackland Air Force Base, near San Antonio, Texas, that's open to both men and women. You can apply when you're within 210 days of graduation, or after you've received your degree.

How long will I be committed to serve? Four years from the time you graduate from OTS and receive your commission. If you go on to pilot or navigator training, the four years starts when you're awarded your wings.

Are there other ways to become an Air Force officer? There's Air Force ROTC, active at many colleges and universities, and the Air Force Academy, where admission is by examination and Congressional appointment. If you'd like more information on any Air Force program, you can get it from the Professor of Aerospace Studies (if there's one on your campus) or from an Air Force recruiter.

Tennis Team Smashes UNH 9-0

The University of Massachusetts tennis team, coached by Mr. Likeable, Steve Kosakowski, romped to a 9-0 victory over the University of New Hampshire Wednesday.

The boys had an easy go of it as they all won their matches in straight sets. The victorious singles men were Mike Rose, Bob Neal, Harvey Mednicov, Roger Harper and the Johnson brothers, Jerry and Steve.

In the doubles matches Rose and Neal teamed up for a victory at #1 as did Harper and Mednicov at #2 and Steve Johnson and Bob Hugo at #3.

The victory brought the Redmen to an 8-1 record, their only loss coming to a strong Army team. This weekend the netmen travel to Harvard where they will compete in the New England Championships. They return home Tuesday to take on Brandeis. It is hoped that upon their return the Redmen have in their possession the New England championship trophy which will more than compensate for their second place finish in the Yankee Conference.

Katz, Anderson Lead Frosh

in the inning. Dick Hale walked to reload the bases and John Lent made an infield single out of a ground ball to second that found second sacker Joe Rahal holding the ball and wondering why nobody was covering first.

Erickson retired the side in the second, but a sacrifice fly in the third with the bases loaded by way of two infield singles and a hit batter produced one more run for a 5-0 lead at this point. The Redmen boosted the edge to 7-0 in the fourth before Worcester started chopping away. In that inning Vin Donohue singled and John Canty walked. After a double steal, Erickson uncorked a wild pitch for a run and Don Ferron singled in another.

John Lorry, a southpaw, took over the pitching in the top of the fifth, and he held UMass to only two eighth inning singles the rest of the way. It was more than enough lead for Katz, however, who fanned ten in his first start of the year. He got in trouble on a walk and single in the eighth, but breezed past three men in the ninth to finish the game.

THE STORY wasn't as bright in Wednesday's UConn encounter. Neither team had a hit through three and a half innings, the first coming on a pop double by Alex Vyce lost by the UConn right fielder in the sun. Vitallo allowed three walks and no hits until the sixth. By then UMass had a one run lead via a walk, wild pitch by John Fay and Hagan Andersen's double to left.

The first UConn hit led to a score. Bud Pepin hit a sharp grounder near first that Ferron knocked down but had no play on. Jim Ring forced Pepin and promptly stole second. A wild pitch to Bill Clifford advanced him one more base and a wild pitch to George Greer brought the score home. Both batters grounded to Ferron but it made no difference.

UMass had a chance to break the tie in the bottom of the same inning off relief pitcher Skip Olander. A walk and sacrifice put Canty on second with one out. But Canty ran on a grounder back to the mound and was a dead duck at third. Hale, who reached on the fielder's choice, stole second and Dave Woodcock reached on an error, but a pop to short left both on base. It was the last serious threat of the game for the Redmen.

THE HUSKIES had the upper hand the rest of the way. A single and hit batter put two men on against Vitallo in the seventh, but the scoring came in the eighth when Ring walked, stole second, advanced to third on a ground out and scored on another Vitallo pitch that bounced in the dirt. The pitch was in front of the plate, but the batter Greer swung with two strikes on him and ended up at first to prolong the inning. A single by Paul Gruner put men at first and third, but the Redmen retired the Huskies by breaking up a double steal attempt.

A walk, sacrifice and single by Pepin accounted for the third run in the ninth inning.

for a first place finish.

Doug Renwick was the only Redman to score a double as he once again dominated the shotput with a heave of 49'1" and the discus at 140'7".

THE ONLY SWEEPS by the Redmen were in the pole vault with Lizotte finishing third behind Sadowsky and Murray, and the discus with Morin and Monette finishing second and third behind Renwick.

The UMass Frosh managed to take a hair-raiser from the Little Crusaders 72-71 led by Davis who took two first places. These came in the 120 high hurdles (16.7) and the high jump (6'0).

The Redmen travel to UConn this weekend for the Yankee Conference meet.

KAMENA STARS

Baseball Team Takes URI 10-7

by Mike Gould

The UMass Varsity Nine pounded three Rhode Island pitchers for 15 hits and staved off a late URI rally for a 10-7 victory Wednesday afternoon.

Six men picked up at least two hits for the Redmen, who need only to defeat lowly UNH this Saturday to tie for the YanCon title.

Paul Caisse, Jim Babyak, Terry Swanson, Al Nordberg, and Jeff Whitney, each hit safely twice in the game, while Karl "Bear" Kamena collected three hits, including a homerun.

The Redmen scored nine of their runs in the first four innings on 11 hits. They knocked out URI starter Nick Stenhouse in a four run fourth inning, featuring Kamena's two run double along with a long triple by Caisse.

THE REDMEN led 9-2 after five innings, but the Rams came back to score two off starter Carl Boteze in the sixth and knocked the Redman ace out in a three run eighth.

What looked like a rout had turned into a ball game, and Coach Lorden was forced to call on Bill Smith to put the collar on the rambunctious Rams. Smitty gave up a two run single to make the score 10-7, but stopped the visitors the rest of the way to save the victory for Boteze (4-2).

A baseball oddity occurred in the third inning when URI's Kahanski tagged a Boteze pitch for an apparent homerun. An alert Redmen bench detected that the slugger had not touched third base, however, and he was called out when Boteze retrieved the ball and threw to third base.

The Redmen are now 6-3 in the YanCon, 6-7 overall ... Al Nordberg continued his lusty hitting. The lefthanded swinger is now batting .358 ... The game marked the first time that Carl Boteze has had to be removed from the mound this season in 48 innings ... Jeff Whitney, filling in for ill Dennis DellaPiana in centerfield, is batting .454 ... Consistent Jim Babyak has hiked his average to .298.

The next game for the Redmen is today at Williams College. UMass is still looking for its first win out of the conference.

University of Massachusetts slugging captain Karl Kamena.

Jeff Whitney, outstanding fill-in for Dennis Della Piana.

FROSH WIN 7-4, LOSE 3-1

by Al Rice

The difference between a two game sweep and a split for the freshmen baseball team this week was only two wild pitches with men on third base. The team used the control pitching of lefty Dave Katz to beat Worcester Academy Thursday, but the wildness of Rusty Vitallo cost a 3-1 loss to Connecticut at home yesterday.

The game in Worcester was a 7-4 verdict in favor of the Redmen and only a pair of long homers by starting pitcher George Erickson kept the score respectable for the home club.

Katz retired the first ten men he faced before Tim Walker broke the ice with a line single in the fourth. One out later Erickson tied into one of Katz' pitches and hit a long fly that carried over the left field fence. The ball would have been an easy out at the Redmen's home park, but his second round tripper leading off the seventh would have been good for four bases in any park. A walk, single and sacrifice fly accounted for the final run also in the seventh inning.

UMass found Erickson the pitcher a lot easier to handle than Erickson the hitter. Two walks and a Hagan Andersen single put the first three men up in the game on base. Erickson pulled off a double play that nailed the lead runner and Don Ferron the batter, but UMass still managed four runs

Track Team Bows To Holy Cross 83½-60½

Kevin O'Brien paced Holy Cross over the University of Massachusetts 83½-60½ in a track meet held at Worcester Tuesday.

O'Brien picked up five first place finishes in this the final dual meet of the season for the Redmen. Except for his efforts the Crusaders were soundly beaten, especially in the field events.

Dave Sadowsky and Bob Murray gained a first place tie in the pole vault with a jump of 11'. Bob Karagosian then threw the hammer 158' 4½" to win that event. Connors from UMass hurler the javelin 182'8"

STEVE SHOR AND KELVIN WATER DROPPER. Story on Page D.

THE UNIVERSITY'S HONORS COLLOQUIA this spring has been as varied as it was large. The 114 students, working in 12 sections, have read such diverse writings as the Bible and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolfe". They have considereed "Mortality and Man" and "Existentialism" and have even produced an abstract film.

Here is a list of all participating students and their section topics, as released by the honors director's office:

From the Bible to Virginia Woolfe

Colloquia

FRESHMEN

Morality and Men: Jayne Anderson, Sharon Babcock, Candace Beekman, James Brown, Ralph Dworman, William Laidley, Richard Majka, Carol Mandel, Alince MacDonnell, Jonathan Rhoades, Carol Sandman, Kathleen Smith and Carla Weinberg.

Film: Duncan Crawford, Carol Henning, Norman Cohn, Elaine Gumer, Karen Kidder, Jerry LaMontagne, Marie Maynard, Judy Moulthrop, Leslie Nadeau, Ma-Maryellen Stewart, Janet Sullivan, Richard Teixeira, Norma Young and Janice Wood.

The Two Cultures: Sandra Bryant, Diane DiNapoli, Mary Furmaniuk, Carol Levine, Brian Lilius, Wallace Matthews, Phyllis McGarry, Lindsay Shippee, Ann Voehringer and Carrie Ziemak.

Existentialism: Susan Ackerman, Linda Badavas, Diane Brand, Joan Gamble, Joan Golub, Paul Grudis, Michael Koffman, Mark Kriger, Alice Letteney, Kathy Nolan, Robert Rotstein, Edith Smith, Frances Wisgirda and Patricia Davenport.

SOPHOMORES

Judith Anne Lindsay — English

Project: Literary Detective

by TOM MacLACHLAN

How did your reading your best friend's theme on capital punishment last semester affect the way you wrote the theme on that subject which you passed in this week?

Did you borrow your roommate's ideas on civil rights and unconsciously include them in a speech about Selma you gave yesterday? Would you have given that speech at all had it not been for a bull session down the corridor last month?

These are difficult questions to answer and they can almost never be answered fully. But these are the types of questions which Judith Anne Lindsay must attempt to deal with in writing her honors project theme.

Judith, a slender, attractive honor student in English, selected her theme last year with the help and advice of Dr. H. Leland Varley, her honors advisor and professor of English at UMass. Her paper will attempt to discuss the interaction of style among the works of Gertrude Stein, Sherwood Anderson and Ernest Hemingway.

As her first step, Judy read almost everything of any consequence by these three authors up to 1927. She acquainted herself with the biographies of the writers, paying particular attention to their dealings with each other at different periods in their lives. While biography will play only a small part in her finished paper, it was important for her to know when these authors might reasonably be assumed to have been close enough to have affected each other's writings. This effort was complicated by the fact that time and again Judy found contradictions in biographies. More than once she had to abandon a whole theory which she found to be based upon false biographical assumptions.

Judy has found that each author has a distinctly different style. This has even further compounded the difficulty with which she has had to contend in definitely proving any interaction among them. She has at times found herself toying with the idea that the result of her study may even be a negative one. There are evidences that perhaps no interaction took place. She also at times anticipated a Scotch verdict—not proven.

The basis of all literary criticism must be an analysis of style. This is difficult enough in itself. To pick out areas where one author's style can be seen related to another's is a further step in criticism which can yield very important insights in understanding an author. This is the type of criticism which Judy hopes to achieve in her work.

"Things can be put out of proportion," Judy cautions. In her type of detective work a small clue in some writing may be blown up until an influence which never existed between two authors can be held to be of great importance in their works. Judy must be constantly on guard against this.

Now her 70 to 80 page paper is nearing completion. Each week Judy and Dr. Varley meet and discuss her findings and additions made since their last meeting. During January, Judy was not only busy with her preparations for finals but she was also involved in applying to graduate schools and working on her honors project. "It was a pretty frantic month," she readily admits.

She and Dr. Varley agree she "needs prodding" from time to time. A good working relationship exists between them with this understood. As Judy says of Dr. Varley, smiling, "After April we may again be friends."

Both Judy and Dr. Varley look forward to the completion of her study. "It has been a real pleasure to work both with these authors and with Dr. Varley," Judy commented.

Elaine Klinker — Sociology

A Lecture . . . A Career

by ANN BALTREN

The senior honors thesis on race relations had been outlined, drafted and was being re-written. Then there was Selma.

And after Selma, the outline, draft and re-write were unchanged. In such fast moving controversy, it seemed incredible.

"My paper," explained sociology major Elaine Klinker, "is based on the history and background of civil rights groups; the social setting which gave impetus to their foundation and the social conditions which effected change in their organization."

In this context, Selma doesn't involve re-writing even one sentence.

DIRECT PROTEST non-violent, demonstrations have been going on since the 1942 founding of CORE. They're not a new technique so they're not important, she pointed out.

The spirit of the Black Muslims without their separatist philosophy is what the ultimately successful civil rights group will embody, her thesis concluded.

"Personally, though," Elaine interrupted herself, "I think that Selma is important and so is the demonstration. From my conclusion," she added a bit wistfully, "you can see that I don't think that the demonstration is going to end anything."

This demonstration does, however, remind people that a problem does exist, she said. And, although it doesn't solve the problem, it is a "means to a means." The uplifting of the Negro community from within, she believes, is the ultimate solution. And, the ballot for which Americans are demonstrating in Selma can aid this lift.

EDUCATION, Elaine believes, will play an important role as a means of creating a spirit of Negro self-uplifting. But, the education must be a full enlightenment of all persons of all colors.

"This is where I see my role in the whole problem," she said. "As an active demonstrator I really couldn't accomplish much."

Besides, 'I'm a bit of a coward," she confided.

As an instructor in race relations, however, she feels she can contribute.

Elaine developed her interest in the problem when she took a Race relations course here on campus with Dr. Rose just last year. Now she's completed—well almost completed—a thesis on the subject, and she intends to go on to graduate school in sociology with an emphasis on race.

Like most seniors, however, Elaine is willing to forego grad school for a year in order to travel in Europe.

"South Deerfield, my hometown, is nice," smiles Elaine, "but . . ."

CIVIL RIGHTS can be viewed from many vantage points and though most discussion would tend to be controversial, Elaine has managed to be interested without being involved. This historical look at the problem will aid her just as hindsight on any problem aids understanding, she believes.

The five groups which Elaine discusses—NAACP, CORE, SNCC, Southern Christian Leaders Association and the Urban League—are not the same groups with the same purposes that they were at their founding.

All of these groups have used the boycott, the sit-in, the freedom ride, or all three to call attention to their problem. In 1961 SNCC instituted the freedom ride and in 1964 this group instituted the Mississippi Freedom Summer. No longer are the groups just pointing to the problem, said Elaine. They're doing something while they point.

Elaine has found that attention and action are of equal importance now. The NAACP statistics show that membership has dropped off because of its "middle of the road" tactics. Just working behind the scenes is not enough, she explained.

The Urban League has also become more active in the protest movement since the march on Washington. Before this, Elaine explained, the league investigated cases of racial discrimination. The scope of its purpose has been broadened.

BY THE SAME TOKEN the Southern Leader's Christian Association has become more active in legal matters. This group, commented Elaine, was founded to make public its grievances. Now SLCA is taking legal issue with discrimination while making its case known through demonstration.

The history of the civil rights struggle, as Elaine's study leads her to conclude, will be written in four phases. First, the Negro made his plight known through non-violent direct protest. Next, he began legal action on the problem. Third, civil rights will be legally granted. Finally, once the Negro has obtained the basic legal means, he will lift himself to a higher intellectual and cultural plane and the struggle will be over.

That is how a senior honors sociologist sees the civil rights struggle.

Joanne Crooker as she appeared at last evening's Honors Banquet at the Student Union Ballroom. She was among group of 32 freshmen women welcomed to Alpha Lambda Delta, society for the promotion of intelligent living and high standards of learning. Eligibility requirement is 3.5 or higher in first semester of freshman year. More than 200 students were honored during traditional Honors Day programs.

The Honors Program

How It Works

Upperclassmen are selected for the Honors Colloquia by faculty recommendation and their high scholastic standing. Students receive one credit each semester toward graduation, but no grade. Freshmen are recruited on the basis of high school ranking and various test scores.

Senior Honors participants are chosen for special aptitude in written work. Each student has a three-faculty committee which reads project papers, conducts an oral examination and awards a grade.

Honors work at the University is considered a reward for high scholastic achievement. Most of the participants are excited about their projects, although exasperation may run high at times. But few groups are taking the chances being assumed by the Freshman film section.

Anthony DiNinno — French

A New View Of Cyrano

by RAY WOODIS

"Cyrano de Bergerac was at least 100 years ahead of his time. He believed in the theory of atoms and that the earth was not the center of the universe. He wrote of rockets to the moon. He prefigured the Enlightenment and thought that everything must be based on reason.

"In short, he dared. Anything the Church didn't like, he did. He was a true libertin."

Anthony J. DiNinno should know. This senior French major from Dedham has had his nose in many old books seeking the facts about a famous nose for his Honors thesis, "Cyrano de Bergerac: Libertin".

Collecting this information has not been an easy task. When Cyrano died, a friend planned to have the works published in memory of the author. To obtain the king's permission, "all that was suggestive and libertin was taken out". About 80 years ago the original manuscripts were found and published. Through the years, critics who did not have access to the original manuscripts made many mistakes and quoted the mistakes of each other. Thus, Tony DiNinno has had to rely heavily on the original works to develop his paper.

"The documents on his life are extremely vague. About all that exist are the certificates of his birth and death," reports Tony. "I have been able to obtain the original works at the Amherst College Library and at the BPL, Boston Public Library."

Tony became interested in the subject of libertinage and, more specifically, Cyrano de Bergerac, while taking a 17th Century French literature course taught by Professor Robert Taylor. "Cyrano is still not popular and is not traditionally read even in French Lit. courses," says Tony. "Dr. Taylor is very interested in ideas that were considered revolutionary and thus we were introduced to Cyrano." The excerpts read in the course whetted Tony's appetite and led to this study.

The de Bergerac whom most people know is the character presented in Roustand's play, "Cyrano de Bergerac". Tony, however, doubts that he was the romantic character portrayed there. "Cyrano was never married and no female in his life stands out. He hung around with the most confirmed of libertines but, here again, his life is so vague that it is not really known," he explains.

The famous nose became popularized in Roustand's play and this, Tony says, was true. "It was huge and gross and of course he was easily irritated because of it. All you had to do was to stare at his nose and he would become enraged."

Most of the original works of Cyrano have been found. He was the author of two plays, one novel in two parts and many letters. "It is in these letters and when he gets mad that he really gets libertin," reports Tony. Once when a friend criticized a poem, Cyrano became angry and wrote the vilest satire against his friend. Tony freely translates the letter as "suggesting that because of the foul odor which surrounded this person, his manner of birth must have been via abnormal channels".

The works of Cyrano de Bergerac were in drastic contrast to the utter refinement and moral codes of 17th Century France. Nothing was sacred and Cyrano seemed to take particular delight in tearing down the Roman Catholic Church. Partially because of the censorship of the works before they were published, Voltaire concluded that Cyrano was a madman.

There is substantial evidence that Cyrano was a great soldier. "He was gravely wounded at least twice in battles and gave it up at the age of 20 because of a serious wound in his throat," DiNinno said. A story, which Tony believes is at least in part true, tells of Cyrano's routing 100 men. "He actually killed six or seven of a group of 15 or 16 and scattered the rest; the 100 is an exaggeration," adds Tony.

"There is even a great deal of ambiguity concerning the death of Cyrano," continues Tony. "We know that he had syphillis, but a few months before his death he was hit on the head by a timber falling from a rooftop. Some claim that this was part of a Jesuit plot to get rid of him."

Cyrano repented on his death bed. But true to his libertin nature to the end, Tony believes that Cyrano consented to repent just to be left alone and to die in peace.

When he leaves UMass, Tony plans to enroll at the University of Paris, where he will take a one year course for teachers of French as a foreign language. He feels it will be money well spent for this experience.

"When I first came to college, I had no intentions of teaching. I had not been exposed to any French literature in high school, my only previous contact with the language. Since meeting this aspect of the French language, I have decided that I would like to teach on the college level," explains Tony.

He hopes to be able to specialize in the 17th Century and perhaps, one day, to do his master's or doctoral thesis on libertinage during this period.

As his paper nears completion, Tony feels that he will have a minimum of 50 pages all written in French. "This makes it a little more difficult," he concedes, "I have to concentrate on correct grammar and French literary style as well."

One aspect of Cyrano's life which Tony hopes to expand in his thesis is the question of metempsychosis. Metempsychosis is concerned with the passage of souls from one body to another and can be accomplished only by will.

"Although it doesn't seem likely that Cyrano could believe in it, at least he thought about it. One critic has mentioned Cyrano's passing interest in the subject, but I have found mention of it in five or six works and hope to work some with this idea," DiNinno says.

French is the language of love but for Tony DiNinno it has become the voice of a fascinating era of French literature and a famous (or infamous) character. Except for one semester of Russian, "which hardly constitutes ability in another language," it has become an integral part of his thought and speech patterns. Cyrano de Bergerac has become his senior year companion and the late libertin has opened the doors to an exciting life's work.

Steve Shor — Chemical Engineering

Water Drops And Tests

by NORMAN TRUMP

The threatened closing of a factory making infants' wear has something to do with a device used to bombard the nuclei of atoms. Why?

Well, the factory kept having fires because flammable vapors were igniting in electrostatically hazardous weather. The bombarding device, a Van der Graaff generator, produces up to six billion volts and may be used to accelerate charged particles.

IN BOTH CASES, the common denominator is the electrostatic charge, and it is on this topic that Steve Shor has centered his Honors project.

Shor, a senior majoring in chemical engineering (ChemE), is doing research on an apparatus prosaically called the Kelvin Water Dropper, which looks at first glance like a makeshift Tinker-Toy construction.

The Dropper was invented by 19th Century British physicist William Kelvin. Kelvin never did much work with the apparatus himself and, after searching through the library here, Shor couldn't find record of anyone who had worked on it since.

SHOR BECAME INTERESTED in the Dropper during his undergraduate assistantship in the ChemE department, under the direction of Professor Hans Duus. At the end of his assistantship, Shor asked if he could continue working with the Dropper as a Senior Honors project.

"I don't expect to find any miracle use for the Dropper," said Shor. "However, the data I collect from experimenting with it may be used in understanding electrostatic explosions. Industrial firms are especially interested in this."

"The nice thing about working with the Dropper," he continued, "is that it hasn't been worked over by someone before. I'm getting practice in doing original research, and that alone is a big change from classroom work, where you work on problems that somebody has already solved."

When Shor began work on the project in April, 1964, the basic apparatus was already there, but he replaced much of the equipment, put in new wiring and added material that would make his results more accurate.

WITH STEVE'S SET-UP, an electrostatic charge is built up as two thin streams of water fall through two separate sets of ordinary tin cans. Wires lead from the cans to two steel balls, which gather the charge that is formed. One steel ball gathers a negative charge and the other, a positive charge.

"You'll notice," said Shor, "as the charge increases the water begins to fall through the cans in a spray, rather than a narrow stream. This is because the charge in the cans draws the water to their sides."

The stream narrows again as the charge is released when a spark jumps the small gap between the steel balls.

How does it feel to place a finger on one of the steel balls as the charge is being built up? "Try it," said Shor. "I haven't been able to get anyone else to do it. They all think they'll be electrocuted, or something."

As it turned out, the shock wasn't any worse than one received from a person who has just scuffed across a new rug.

"Nothing can happen from this shock," explained Shor, "because even though the Dropper can produce up to 13,000 volts, there aren't any amps along with them. If this thing gave out 13,000 amps also, I'd be shoveling you up with a dustpan after you touch it."

SHOR HAS BEEN WORKING on the project from four to six hours a week. "It probably seems a minor miracle that I can find so much to do with the Dropper, but there's actually quite a bit of work involved," he said.

"I have about 40 pages of data so far," he continued, "and much of it is a result of refining and altering parts of the Dropper. For instance, I was interested in finding out how large a gap the spark would jump between the steel balls. For this part of the experiment alone I had to do such things as vary the pressure of the streams of water and change the distances between the tin cans. After each little change I had to take down the data and correlate it with past results. Plugging away like that is the only way the final results can have any meaning."

For the most part, Shor manages his 18 credits a semester and the Honors project by dint of heavy concentration on each job at hand.

"If I couldn't concentrate, I'd never get anything done. I fall asleep at the drop of a hat," He smiled.

SHOR WAS ON the freshman golf team but had to stop playing because of his study load. "I'm in the ChemE Club now," he said, "and that's about all I have time for, outside my fraternity."

Actually, Sigma Alpha Mu is a big consumer of Shor's time, since he is both treasurer and historian for the house.

"After I leave in June," he commented, "I'll be going on to ChemE graduate work at Northwestern. When I get there, I'll probably need the 25-hour day I wish I had here."

Honors Colloquia — Section 12

For Freshmen: Fun Film

by DAVID MOORE

Fourteen freshmen and two faculty advisors are making a dice game out of their Honors work. Each student shoots in turn, watches the roll of his dice, and then cuts for his turn at the wheel. The stakes are high, but the money is willingly gambled.

For those who suppose gambling with money to be unorthodox, or at least unlawful for a University Honors group, a definition of terms is in order. All shooting has been done on film, the roll of dice will be replaced by a book of random numbers, and "cutting" will be used in making an abstract movie, not card playing. The "highly unconventional" film is headed for an "underground movie show" in New York before being shown on the UMass campus.

Assisted by David Porter and Peter Park of the UMass English and sociology departments, respectively, one section of Honors Colloquia students have rented an 8mm camera and paid for film from their own money. Each of the 14 freshmen finished shooting half a 50-foot roll of film in March. Each chose whatever subject and location he liked.

Early this month, one reel of footage will be spliced together—completely by chance. The size and position of each student's contribution to the final movie will be determined solely from the tables.

The Porter-Park film group is one of 12 Honors Colloquia sections meeting this semester. Approximately 130 students from the four University classes are participating in a program of weekly discussions and individual investigation. Each group chooses the subject it wishes to pursue. Each section is advised by two faculty members. The 24 faculty members represent 17 disciplines from Woman's Physical Education to Mechanical Engineering.

Since topics discussed are general in nature, advisors can provide "mature and scholarly attention" regardless of individual fields, according to Honors Program Director Arthur Elkins.

Honors Colloquia and Senior Honors Project programs were formalized at UMass in 1960 through the efforts of Dr. Louis Greenbaum of the history department. Dr. Leland Varley, English, continued as program director from 1962 to 1964, when Elkins assumed the position.

Honors Colloquia groups originally comprised sophomores and juniors. Freshmen sections were added in 1961 and a Senior Honors Colloquia in 1963. Elkins estimates that the Senior Honors work began informally in the 1930's or '40's.

"Our film will be highly unconventional," says Dr. Porter, "which is one element that will make it great." Both Porter and Park admit that abstract films are hard to make. But they believe the completely random approach has never been tried, and the temptation and challenge are too much to pass up.

"The idea just seemed to come up" to a group which resisted this semester's names-in-a-hat reshuffling of Honors sections. They chose film study last semester and decided to stick it out a full year to make their own movie. Two other Colloquia sections remained intact, but with additions.

The students avail themselves of the many film opportunities in the four-college area. Discussion periods fare best when "way out" films are seen. "If you take this business (film evaluation) seriously," says Park, "you have to watch the boring ones along with the good ones." The criteria that a film is "boring, and therefore must be good" is often applicable, the group finds.

The story content, artistic quality and abstract value of movies are thrown around in high calibre but down-to-earth fashion by the group. All are "quite serious" about their work. Dr. Porter's remark that "this is not a joke" best describes both original and studied movies.

Retiring Math Professor Honored By Colleagues

Dr. Allen E. Andersen, retiring professor of mathematics, was honored Saturday evening by colleagues, friends, and former students with a banquet at Wiggins Tavern, Northampton.

Dr. Andersen, who will retire July 1st, was presented with a movie camera ,projector, and screen.

Dr. Vernon Helming, professor of English, composed and read a humorous tribute to the retiring professor.

More than 90 people, including Provost Oswald Tippo and Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences, attended Dr. Andersen's fete.

In recognition of his more than 28 years of service to UMass, the University's trustees have voted unanimously to confer the title of Professor Emeritus on Dr. Andersen, effective on the date of his retirement from active teaching.

From 1948 until 1963, when he stepped down to concentrate on teaching, Dr. Andersen was head of the University's math department.

He first came to UMass in 1937 as an assistant professor, after teaching at the University of Nebraska, University of Oklahoma, Northeast Missouri College, Harvard University, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and Wagner College.

A native of South Dakota, Dr. Andersen is a University of Wisconsin graduate. He received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard University.

An amateur mineralogist, he is a member of the American Mathematical Society, the Mathematical Association of America, Sigma Xi, and Phi Kappa Phi.

A resident of Amherst, Dr. Andersen plans not to retire completely, but to teach at Western New England College.

University To Sponsor Summer Fine Arts Festival

The University will hold a fine arts festival, "America and the Arts," in conjunction with the 12-week summer school that will run from June 22 to August 29.

THE SUMMER-LONG ARTS FESTIVAL will include lectures and special events, University Theatre repertory presentations, a film series, several concerts by the Lenox Quartet, and exhibitions of watercolors, oils, sculpture, ceramics, and batiks.

DR. JOHN W. WARD, a professor of history at Amherst College and former chairman of the Program in American Civilization at Princeton University, will formally open the arts festival with a lecture on "Mirror or Lamp? The University in a Democratic Culture" on Tuesday, June 22.

Other speakers who will take part in the University's "America and the Arts" program include Presidential consultant and historian Eric F. Goldman, architect Marcel Breuer, critic Leland Miles, and Richard Kim, author of "The Martyred."

THE UNIVERSITY THEATRE, in its first summer season, will present The Fantasticks by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid, and The Rainmaker by Richard Nash.

Included among the 13 films to be shown as part of "America and the Arts" are Huckleberry Finn, The Grapes of Wrath, Tea and Sympathy, Psycho, Shane, Stalag 17, and To Kill a Mockingbird.

In addition, producer Richard Hilliard will speak on June 25 about the American art film. His new film, The Playground, will also be given a pre-release showing on that day

The Lenox Quartet, currently in residence at Grinnell College, will present concerts at UMass on July 20, August 3, and August 10.

Painter Carl Schmalz, sculptors John Walker and Leonard DeLonga, and Brenda Minisci and Arlene Nilsson, who work in ceramics and batiks respectively, will show their works at the University this summer.

Among the special events scheduled during the festival are appearance by The Voyages, traditional folk singers; the Burke Family Singers; and Chuck Speas his Jazz Septet.

"America and the Arts" is being sponsored jointly by the University's summer program office, the art department, and the University Theatre.

UMass Co-ed Recipient Of Contest Prize

UMass student Justine Metrick, is a winner of a $500 award in the second annual Educational Fund Awards Program, an international competition sponsored by Great Books of the Western World.

The winners were announced in Chicago by Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, noted teacher, philosopher and Associate Editor of the reference work.

In announcing the names of the 1965 winners, Dr. Adler commented: "As any parent knows, the costs of a college education are now extremely high. If the present trend continues, they are likely to rise still higher in the next few years. Financial aid, therefore, becomes of ever - increasing importance. Without it, many deserving students may have to postpone—or miss entirely—the opportunity of going to college."

5,000 Students Attend Washington Teach-In

by Jim Foudy, Staff Reporter

Amidst an atmosphere of preparedness and contemplation, 3-5,000 members of the academic community attended what a student organizer called "an appeal to national recognition" — the National Teach-In in Washington, D.C. on the Viet Nam War.

Later disappointed by the absence of McGeorge Bundy, special Presidential assistant for national security affairs, the anxious morning audience responded heartily to speeches of Prof. Hans Morgenthau, Isaac Deutscher, and former Harvard professor Arthur Schlesinger Jr.

PROF. MORGENTHAU, in his critique of the administration, stated that our policy is based on "mere assumption, not fact . . . facts contradict policy."

"It is absurd to support the present government (in Viet Nam)," asserted Prof. Morgenthau, and called the "peripheral military control" unreasonable, proposing a united Viet Nam under Ho Chi Minh.

Believing that our 1954 involvement in Viet Nam was a "mistake" Mr. Schlesinger noted, however, that the United States is "stuck" in its committment and he favors negotiations as opposed to withdrawal or air escalation.

SCHLESINGER STRESSED that Hanoi will not negotiate until it is convinced that it cannot win, and he advocates interdiction of supplies with a limited increase of combat troops entailing less provocation of Red China.

The third speaker of the morning was Isaac Deutscher, a self-proclaimed Marxist who presented the audience with the consideration that the acceptance of false Cold War assumptions has led to present world crises.

Rather than driving a "wedge" between Russia and Red China, Deutscher suggests that we are bringing about political unity between the two major Communist blocs.

SUMMARIZING one of the main purposes of the Teach-In, Dr. Ernest Nagel began the afternoon's confrontation by pointing out its contribution "to public enlightenment through responsible discussion of the common problem".

In a statement released to the press, Bundy wrote that "I shall miss the meeting more than you will miss me." But the absence of Bundy was well noted and greatly commented upon through the day.

BUNDY'S PROPOSED SPEAKING OPPONENT, Prof. of Government George T. McKahin did appear, however, and presented an outline for achieving more in Viet Nam through "a cease-fire and a negotiated political settlement than through the futile infusion of more and more American military power."

SEPT. ENROLLMENT

The University said Friday it had to refuse more than 10,000 applicants for admission in September.

The university said it will accept 3700 out of the 13,759 who applied. It also turned down 1600 out of 1900 applications for transfer to UMass from other schools.

A spokesman said 1000 students will be accepted out of the 1950 who applied for the Boston branch of the school, scheduled to open for the first time next September.

A record number of 10,250 will be enrolled at the Amherst campus next year, an increase of 1150 now studying there.

The Week In Review

THE WORLD

THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

Three forces are now battling for control in the Dominican Republic. The rebels started the revolution, intending to restore Juan Bosch to office after he was overthrown in 1963 by a junta. The coup was crippled by U.S. forces and Bosch, the legal president, turned his office over to Col. Francisco Camaano Deno. The rebels control a small portion of Santo Domingo under Camaano. A second force is the anticoup army which tried to stop rebel anti U.S. propaganda last week by bombing the rebel radio station. The third group is the U.S. with 22,000 troops held over to stop the supposedly 55 Communists of Bosch and Camaano in Santo Domingo. In accordance with the new OAS military force Costa Rican and Honduran troops made history as they moved troops into Santo Domingo. Other Latin American troops are expected to follow.

THE BRITISH POUND NOTE

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson pledged last week that the pound note would not be devaluated from the present rate of $2.80 after withdrawing $1.4 billion from the International Monetary Fund to defend the pound. This is the second withdrawal in five months supported by 11 nations which made the money available. Even with this support many financiers sold pound futures in favor of other currencies to protect customers expecting payments in the future by pound notes because they were afraid of a devaluation of the pound.

THE NATION

PAY RAISES

President Johnson requested pay raises for armed forces and most federal employees that would call for an increase of $853 million annually and would go into effect January 1. If this is passed the President will have the power to adjust the wage scale in accordance with private industry. This would mean that Government civil servants, except 600,000 "blue collar" workers, would get a three percent pay boost. The base pay of enlisted men in the military with less than two years' service would go up 2.7 percent. The prospects look good for the new package plan.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

To prevent "conflict of interest" scandals such as those of the Eisenhower and Kennedy administration, President Johnson presented a new Executive Order requiring most Government officials to file complete financial statements within the next 90 days. He also prohibited the acceptance of gifts.

TEACH - IN

A protest teach-in aimed at the U.S. policy of aggression in Viet Nam was held in Washington last week. The teach-in was organized by the interuniversity committee originally started at the University of Michigan. This organization has developed into a forum of national debate.

THE STATE

TAXES

The Democratic-controlled Taxation Committee of the legislature disclosed plans for an increase in the income tax instead of accepting Governor Volpe's plan for a sales tax. The new plan would raise $175 million instead of Volpe's $215 million plan.

INDICTED

A Suffolk County Grand Jury, acting on evidence produced by the Crime Commission, indicted suspended Public Safety Commissioner Frank S. Giles and former State Rep. John A. Davis, on conspiracy to obtain direct and indirect interests in contracts with the Mass. Port Authority and the Mass. Turnpike Authority.

M I T TEACH - IN

In conjunction with the Washington teach-in an expected 1,200 fizzled to 250 students and faculty members at the Saturday teach-in in Kresge Auditorium. The guest speaker, Jack Vaugh, Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American affairs and coorginator of the Alliance of Progress did not show. In Washington State Department officials said the McGeorge Bundy, the president's special assistant for national security affairs, also didn't make his scheduled appearance because of new overseas problems.

THE CAMPUS

FACULTY PROMOTIONS

University Provost Oswald Tippo announced the names of 33 U-Mass faculty members promoted to higher academic ranks and 12 who have been granted tenure. These promotions will become effective September 1.

HONORS DAY CONVOCATION

John Anderson, former governor of Kansas, and Visiting Distinguished professor of Public Affairs, was guest speaker at annual Honors Day Convocation Friday afternoon. Anderson spoke before 200 people on, "A Public Administrator's View of Higher Education."

GOV. VOLPE

Gov. Volpe recommended last week that UMass receive $17,052,000 for expansion and improvements as part of his $57,922,000 capital outlay program. This would include money for construction of the first phase of a complex to coordinate all campus science research programs that will include a 16 story chemistry tower.

SPORTS

The UMass Varsity Nine pounded three Rhode Island pitchers for 15 hits and staved off a late URI rally for a 10-7 victory Wednesday afternoon. Kevin O'Brien paced Holy Cross over the University of Massachusetts 83½-60½ in a track meet held at Worcester Tuesday.

UM Hosts All-State Concert

Almost 500 young musicians from the Commonwealth gathered recently at the University to take part in a lively three-day session of rehearsals and concerts.

Occasion for the many youth bands, orchestras, and choruses filling the campus with musical sounds was the Annual Massachusetts Music Educators Association Conference and its All-State Concert.

Co-hosted by the University and the Amherst Public Schools, adults from many Bay State school systems attended meet-

4500 Expected to Attend UM Summer Session

While summertime means vacation for many, it will mean hard work to the 4500 students expected to attend the coming summer sessions at the University.

The two six-week sessions—June 15 to July 23 and July 27 to September 3—will offer 200 courses, plus special programs in nursing home economics.

For the first time at UMass, there will be lower division offerings in the School of Engineering. For the second year in a row, there will be a special six-credit course in comparative physical education with a tour through Europe.

Many will use the summer to accelerate their programs of study so that they can complete degree requirements more quickly.

Adding to the University's role as a year-round facility, about 9000 people will attend 25 conferences to be held on campus during both sessions.

To supply students with the same broad and varied recreation, social, and intellectual stimulation that marks the regular school term, there will be a fine arts program, including speakers, concerts, art exhibits, and a repertory theater.

While the young musicians they teach were busy performing and rehearsing in many buildings on the UMass campus, the music teachers and administrators met in various groups to develop and explore the conference's topic, "Music Through Education, Or Education Through Music?"

Univ. Pres. To Speak Tuesday

The President of the University of the West Indies, Dr. Phillip M. Sherlock, will speak on the "Problems of Education in Underdeveloped Countries" on Tuesday, May 18, at 2:30 p.m. in the Student Union.

Dr. Sherlock's lecture is the last in the current series of programs concerned with the role of American professional people overseas. The talks are supported by the Ford Foundation and sponsored by the U-Mass department of anthropology and sociology.

A historian holding degrees from the Universities of London and Leeds, Dr. Sherlock has

Last June after finals when everyone else was thinking of sun and surf this senior was still pulling all-nighters — to learn Turkish. The reason — she was preparing for a five month cultural exchange trip.

Under the sponsorship of the National 4-H Foundation, along with four other students from various parts of the United States, Dianne travelled to Turkey, and five Turkish participants came to the U.S.

The purpose of the International Foreign Youth Exchange Program is to promote world understanding. The method of the program is to allow each student a two week stay with eight Turkish families. During this time the exchangee follows the family's daily routine, acting as a member of the family.

Dianne did not attend school while in Turkey but she claims to have learned "more in those few short months than she possibly could have studied in college. She noted that the Turkish state universities are set up much like ours. But the primary and secondary schooling in Turkey is completed in 11 years as compared to our 12.

She found the Turkish people, as a whole, pro-Western and was surprised to find many Turks speaking English. Also she felt quite at home in the cities which she said are like any modern cities here.

Annual Military Spring Review Features Awards, Demonstrations

The annual Military Spring Review, held Friday by the University departments of Air and Military Science, was highlighted by the presentaton of over 30 awards by honored guests to outstandng cadets and by demonstrations by various cadet organizations.

Guests of Honor included Provost Oswald Tippo, Head of the Division of Military and Air Science, Lt. Colonel Roy D. Simmons Jr., Professor of Air Science, Col. Albert W. Aykroyd, Professor of Military Science, Lt. William Seach, USN (Ret.), oldest living holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor, Dean of Students, William F. Field, and the Reviewing Officer Maj. Gen. Ralph A. Palladino, Military Executive, Office of the Secretary of Defense.

The demonstrations included Precision Drill units, the Army "Precisionettes" and the Air Force "Flying Redmen." The "Flying Redmen," commanded by Cadet Major Carlton A. Stidsen, exhibited the form which has won national and regional honors for the last 11 years. Most impressive was the Meatgrinder routine in which a miscalculation means a bayonet and a cadet in the same place at the same time.

The Air Force ROTC championship Drill Team, The Flying Redmen, perform at Friday night's Spring Review.

Other demonstrations featured the Army "Bay State Special Forces." The group, trained in the art of guerrilla warfare, gave exhibitions of mountain climbing using the 85-foot ladder on the Amherst Fire Dept. truck; hand-to-hand combat employing the cadet's karate and judo training; and a takeover and destruction of an enemy position. In this simulated battle, the cadets used machine guns, hand grenades, smoke screens, and incendiary bombs to destroy the objective.

Highpoint of the awards presentation was the Air Force Basic Cadet of the Year award given to Cadet Peter V. Ignatovich. The award was initiated in recognition of an outstanding cadet who has displayed superior leadership in the Basic Corps.

In the opinion of the Joint Selection Committee, "Cadet Ignatovich's record and attitude are to be considered exemplary in the AFROTC Basic Cadet Corps.

A REAL "SIT-IN"

(ACP) — Two University of California, Berkeley, fraternities believe they have found the "real thing" in sit-ins, says the Daily Californian.

Until noon one Saturday, the Sigma Alpha Epsilons and the Alpha Kappa Lambdas were locked in a life and death struggle to see who could sit in a chair the longest.

Two chairs were built to scale and donated by a national renting agency. The rules are rigorous: the sit-in cannot lie down, stand up or lean on his elbows.

After 12 hours, beginning at midnight, the SAEs gave up. But Ben Reese of AKL was heading into his 40th hour and planned to go for 100.

Military Ball - "Pass Into Paradise" - Called Success

This year's annual Military Ball, held Saturday night for the first time in the Spring and in conjunction with Friday's Spring Review and Armed Forces Day, was termed an overwhelming success by the more than 200 couples who attended.

Featured at the Ball were the Airmen of Note, the official Air Force Dance Band, the band, formerly the Glenn Miller orchestra, was under the direction of Lt. Johnny O'Seekee. They played many requests including many of the old Glenn Miller favorites such as Moonglow, RoseMarie, and others.

Highlight of the evening was the crowning of the Mili-Ball Queen, Miss Dianne Dube '67. The Queen, crowned by President Lederle, then danced with the President while Mrs. Lederle danced Miss Dube's escort. The other queen contestants then danced with their escorts amidst the applause.

Also performing at the Ball was the Air Force ROTC Glee Club, The Singing Wings, under the direction of Cadet Capt. John C. Cunney, III.

Another feature considered most impressive by the guests was the theme of the Ball, "Pass Into Paradise". The decorations included an archway of flowers and a fountain replete with running water.

The Military Ball was preceded by a Dining In at Westover Air Force Base for advanced cadets and their dates.

FINE ARTS FESTIVAL

Summer Calendar

The University of Massachusetts will hold a fine arts festival, "America and the Arts," in conjunction with the 12-week summer school that will run from June 22 to August 29.

The summer-long arts festival will include lectures and special events, University Theatre repertory presentations, a film series, several concerts by the Lenox Quartet, and exhibitions of watercolors, oils, sculpture, ceramics and batiks.

Growing Pains

Students who eat in the Copper Kettle, remember back in September when you waited nearly an hour for supper in serving lines that extended far outside the building. Those lines may be short compared to what you will experience next semester, when residents of the Southwest Complex also eat in the new commons.

Orchard Hill residents, pity those unknowing individuals, who have decided to live in the new Southwest Complex next year, not realizing the migraines they will suffer as a result of construction noise.

Everyone, pity the car owners, who will continue to pay fines because the only parking spaces within walking distance of their classes were in "no parking" zones. Pity, too, the unwary incoming freshmen, identified like the rest by seven digit numbers, who will find themselves lost among the great assemblage of students.

The University is expanding, and in the process it has been undergoing the customary growing pains. The minor annoyances, mentioned above, plus the more major problems, such as the struggle over the Willis Report and the fear of mass "assembly-line" education, are all the result of this rapid growth.

To truly understand these problems it is important to realize just how quickly the University has developed. Imagine the campus without the Student Union, Bartlett Hall, Boyden Gymnasium, the new Infirmary, Mahar Auditorium, the South Commons, the Orchard Complex, Brett House, Gorman House, and many other recently constructed buildings and dorms. Such was the situation just ten years ago. Within the last decade the student population of the Univeristy has almost doubled, and by 1980 it is expected to be doubled again. The improvement in the health and recreational as well as educational facilities has been so vast that Massachusetts is now ranked with the best of state schools, and will soon be rated among the top of all universities, both private and public.

Still, the problems remain. The students, faculty, and administration all face a difficult job in creating a "great" university, a task made even more perplexing by the suddenness with which the University has grown. Today's students should consider themselves pioneers in education. A great change is occurring in the University of Massachusetts, a new growth and development never hoped for or expected just a few years ago, and we are the first to be a part of it.

Pin-Point Marks

To the Editor:

We students were recently asked to fill out a questionnaire concerning a possible change in the marking system. Most of us have sometimes been dissatisfied with some of our grades, especially at times when a grade "could go either way," but ends up lower that we want, but even more important, lower than we deserve.

We suggest that teachers report grades on the 4.0 system as is used now, but to the accuracy of one-tenth of a point. In this way no drastic changes would have to be made in the system as it is used now, and with this change, if a teacher thinks a person has a C minus for the course, he can give him anywhere from a 2.0 to a 2.9 as the student deserves. Instead of having to decide whether a student with a high C plus should get a B or a C, the teacher can give the student his exact mark, decisions will be eliminated, and we students will be satisfied.

Sincerely,
Walter Willard '67

How Long?

To the Editor:

While sitting in my ghetto contemplating Martin Luther King's recent march for racial equality in the Boston School System, it suddenly occurred to me that there has been no tangible effort to better the lot of other racial minorities—namely, Polish Catholics, Yellow Russians, and disenfranchised Serbs. It is in this regard that I and my fellow travelers are writing.

How long must we endure this travesty, this mockery of Constitutional freedom? When will the Polish Catholics and disenfranchised Serbs of this magnificent land be allowed to call themselves true brothers of the American Negro and American Indian? We do not want platitudes and empty promises. Our demands are small indeed. All we desire is federal aid; free bus rides to Navajo P.S. 47, Enid, Oklahoma, to insure proper racial balancing in America's schools; and end to Irish purges; military assistance to Vatican City; an inclusion of Poles with armbands painting houses and drinking Colt 45 on NBC.

These are our demands. We shall overcome!

To demonstrate our desires we are proposing a MARCH ON TOLEDO to be held on February 30th, 1966.

Too Heavy

To the Editor:

An old Greek proverb states categorically: "It is not the mark of a wise man to make the same mistakes twice." Apparently I am not a wise man . . . Let me explain.

There exists on this campus a certain publication that is formally referred to as CAESURA, the literary magazine.

Last semester, I was informed that this magazine accepts contributions from graduate students as well as undergraduates. I then decided to submit a few pieces of my writing which were translations of short stories published in Greece (by me) and original compositions in English.

They were rejected last term—and so they were this term—but not without a consoling note. The editor in chief, attached to the writings a small note, in which among others she stated: ". . . the philosophical pieces are a bit too heavy for magazine reading."

Thanks a lot. Does this mean that UMass students are not able to enjoy a philosophical piece? Or, if it means that the CAESURA editors don't consider something serious as printable in their magazine, why don't the students have a serious or "a bit heavy, philosophical" journal, on this campus?

Then, again, it is not my money that these editors are using. It is the undergraduates' money. And after having spoken to a couple of the Caesurians, I am glad that it isn't mine.

I am sure, though, that something could be done to check the literary proficiency of magazine editors on campus, as well as the process of elections to editorial offices, etc.

I understand that the officers in UMass magazines are elected from within the staff. But may I remark that the mere presence of a student on a magazine staff, does not provide him or her, as an individual, wth editorial qualifications.

A lot of money is toyed around with. Sometimes good things come out of its use, and sometimes poor and bad things. But unless the students themselves, or their elected representatives get concerner about, standards, practices and modi operandi, there is always a good chance that your writings too might be . . . "a bit too heavy for magazine reading"

Thus spake the Master Caesurian, perpetrating a rather offensive attitude in terms of her knowledge of UMass students' taste for reading, and their capacity for comprehending the works of written language.

UMass Prof. To Chair Engineering Assoc.

Klaus E. Kroner, assistant professor of mechanical engineering, has been elected first chairman of the New England Engineering Graphics Association.

The new professional organization, open to all interested in the teaching of engineering graphics, was formed at the recent 8th Annual New England Engineering Graphics Conference at Tufts University.

Professor Herbert W. Yankee of Worcester Polytechnic Institute was elected secretary of the new association.

A native of Goettingen, Germany, Kroner has been a member of the UMass faculty since 1957. He previously taught at New York University and at the University of Maine.

A Wooster College graduate, Kroner received his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from New York University. He also holds a master's degree in business administration from American International College.

Kroner teaches engineering drawing, descriptive geometry, and nomography in the University's school of engineering.

An active member of the American Society for Engineering Education, Kroner has contributed several articles on graphics and teaching to engineering journals.

UMass Hosts Annual 4-H Achievement Day

The fifteenth annual State 4-H Achievement Day was held at the University Saturday, May 15.

Youngsters from all over the Bay State took part in demonstrations of their project skills, including clothing, color and design, home furnishings, food preparation, public speaking, health, photography, vegetable and ornamental horticulture, entomology, conservation and forestry, livestock, dairy, poultry, dog, horse and sheep projects.

Almost 80 contestants were judged on such demonstrations as "Block Printing," "How to Make A Lamp," and "Propagating Plants." The winners in each group were honored at an awards assembly held at 3 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The 4-H youngsters were also given a career tour of various buildings on the UMass campus, where they were able to see specialists at work. The tour included the School of Home Economics, the Public Health Center, and the department of animal science and plant and soil sciences.

Two UMass Women Collaborate On Book

Two University of Massachusetts women have collaborated on a prison memoir, "Black Nightshade," which will be published this fall by William Morrow and Co. of New York.

Mrs. Theresa de Kerpely, head of residence at Eugene Field House, and Mrs. Rose Vall, wife of Prof. Ferenc Vali of the UMass government department, are the two writers.

"Black Nightshade" is an account of Mrs. Vali's experiences as a political prisoner in Hungary during the Stalin regime of the early nineteen-fifties.

Mrs. Vali was arrested and imprisoned in August, 1951, on a charge of attempting to leave Hungary illegally. At the same time her husband was arrested on a charge of treason.

She remained in a women's penitentiary — where political prisoners worked side by side with murderers, thieves, and other felons — for more than three years.

According to the publishers, Mrs. Vali's memoir is probably the first of its kind ever to be written and published in English.

Mrs. de Kerpely, a native of England, lived in Hungary herself for 12 years.

She is the author of two novels.

Frosh Class Participates In Survey

The Class of 1968 will be perhaps the best informed (about itself) class at the University.

Last summer, on the final day of Summer Counseling, an extensive survey, prepared by The American College Testing Program, was administered to each freshman. In a few days two short follow - up questionnaires will be distributed to freshmen in the dormitories or mailed to students who live off campus. The follow-up questionnaires will build upon the earlier ones by adding information related to this year's experience at UMass.

The information collected from the Class of 1968 will not only contribute to self-enlightenment but also to broad educational planning at the University. In addition, each student will, sometime in the Fall of 1965, have a personal educational-vocational interest profile available in the Counseling and Guidance Office for ready reference. Other results from the questionnaire will be announced to the student body from time to time as analysis progresses.

Lordenmen Drop Two; Lose YanCon Lead Chance

by Al Rice, Sports Staff

Failure to put great pitching and a batch of base hits into the same game cost the Redmen baseball club a pair of losses this past weekend. Thirteen walks nullified 11 base knocks in an 8-6 setback at Williams College Friday, and no runs in support of Carl Boteze for 11 innings resulted in a 1-0 loss at the University of New Hampshire Saturday.

The UNH game cost UMass a share of the Yankee Conference title since they went into it with a 6-3 record and a chance to tie the Vermont Catamounts. The Redmen had their ace on the mound for the must game. Boteze shut out the Wildcats for ten innings before they finally scored. Mike Hargreaves held UMass to five hits in 11 frames and never in the game let a man get to third base.

A line drive to second that Bill Crane turned into a fifth inning double play started Boteze on a streak in which he set the entire batting order down until Pete Van Buskirk led off the ninth with a first pitch single. Cal Fisk followed with a long belt to straightaway center that hung up long enough for Terry Swanson to pull in with a fine running catch, the first of two gems he made. The trouble wasn't over because Larkin delivered another base hit to left, putting two on. A pop to third and Federowicz' third whiff of the day ended the inning.

A nubber to the mound and a pair of outfield flies disposed of the Redmen in the tenth on only eleven pitches, and the Wildcats came back in the bottom of the same inning to scare the Redmen. A leadoff walk, a sacrifice and an intentional walk again put a pair of men on and once again Boteze pitched out of it. The last of his ten strikeouts and the second of Swanson's catches turned the trick.

A two base throwing error on a grounder to third, an intentional walk to Lakin, a walk on a 3-2 pitch to Strobel, and Boteze was relieved by Bill Smith. Smith got a force at the plate for the first out, but an undefensible safety squeeze bunt by Cliff Chadwick brought in the run.

As tough a loss to the Wildcats as it was, the one the previous day at Williams wasn't any easier to take. UMass had a 5-0 lead going into the bottom of the sixth and Williams tied the game in that inning and then added three more in the following frame. The five sixth inning scores came from five walks and two errors, while three singles, a walk, and another error accounted for the go-ahead runs.

Karl Kamena doubled in the first runs of the game in the second off Bob Wallace after Williams booted a bunt attempt into a two base error. Paul Caisse opened the third by drawing a walk. He stole second and kept going when the throw was wild, and Babyak promptly singled him in for a 3-0 edge. Al Nordberg doubled to right in the fifth and John Peacock followed by being hit with a pitch, but the Redmen had to wait one more inning for anyone else to cross the plate.

Caisse forced Ross Piken for the second out and went to second on a wide throw trying for the double play. Babyak singled to left knocking in Caisse from second and Swanson reached on an infield single with Babyak reaching second. Norberg delivered an opposite field one bagger to produce the second run of the inning and the last of the day for Mass until a solo job in the ninth.

Piken had not only pitched five shutout innings for the Redmen but no-hit innings as well. Williams had its share of chances at scoring since he walked one in the first, two in the second, one in the third, and three in the fifth, but hits they didn't get until the seventh. Three walks, a wild pitch, another walk, a throwing error on a double play attempt, the fifth walk, and a dropped fly that cleaned the sacks all added up to a tie ball game.

With one out McPherson singled to right off Piken for the first Williams hit. The next man drew the 13th walk and it was at 13 that Piken left. Bill Russell came on and fanned the first man he faced. The next two both singled and three runs came home with the help of an error along the way.

Track Team Gains 3rd At YanCon Meet

by Terry Carpenter

John Medeiros, junior co-capt of the University of Massachusetts track team, led the winless Redmen to a third place finish in the Yankee Conference Meet held this past weekend.

John Medeiros, co-captain of Redmen track team.

Medeiros enjoyed his best day as a UMass competitor as he placed in four events and was high individual scorer with 15 points.

His first win was in the broad jump with a leap of 21' 10". In between events Medeiros and Doug Sloane qualified for the finals in the 100 yard dash and the 220. In the triple jump Medeiros was forced to settle for second when Mike Zubko, the defending champ from Maine, went 43' 5" on his last jump.

Doug Renwick, the reliable weightman for the Redmen all season, was forced to take third place in the discus with a throw of 149' 4". UConn's Schneider won the event at 153' 5".

Dave Connors took fourth in the javelin throw with a heave of 178'. Clarence Hill took second place in the high jump at 6' 2". In the shotput Renwick came close to defending champ Delaite, but his put of 49' 7" was 11" short as he settled for second

Prior to the mile run, the last event of the day, it was announced that this year's meet was being dedicated to retiring UMass coach, William Footrick. In the mile Don Dean from UNH ran a record breaking 4:14 as Terry Carpenter and Tom Panke placed third and fourth respectively. Both men, Carpenter at 4:17 and Panke at 4:18 were well under their previous best for the year.

Bob Ramsey shaved approximately 30 seconds off his best previous time in the 2-mile as he placed fourth. The event was taken by Reneau of UNH.

In the pole vault Dave Sadowsky cleared the winning height of 13' 6", but lost out on the fewer misses rule as he finished fourth. Bob Murray was fifth behind Clatur of Rhode Island who won the event.

But back to Medeiros. John finished second in the 100 as a last second dive for the tape failed. Doug Sloane placed third in the event. In the finals of the 220, Medeiros who had scraped his head on the dive for the tape, finished fourth behind Buteau who also captured the 100. Doug Sloane came in second for his best performance in the meet.

The final scores: Maine 62, URI 52, UMass 45, UConn 38, UNH 37, UVM 6.

Freshman Lacrosse Team Swamps Brandeis 13-0

Freshmen lacrosse players in action on Saturday.

Ron Bumpus racked up his second shutout of the season Saturday and Marty Kalikow picked up 4 gaols as the freshmen lacrosse team beat the Brandeis lacrosse club 13-0.

Actually the frosh made a very good showing because the Brandeis club is not a freshmen team but a regular varsity club. Brandeis has not been in action long enough to be recognized by the college association.

Jeff Humber, Redmen attackman, scored 3 goals in the rout. All of the little Redmen looked good and served notice to varsity Coach Dick Garber that better times will come.

Freshmen coach Frank Shields is very pleased with this year's team and predicts that these Frosh will be a big help to the varsity next year. Humber and Kalikow, among others, are two that Shields is referring to. There are some good athletes on this year's team and it is hoped that they will fulfill the promise that they have showed.

The Little Redmen now have a 3-3 record. They close out their season Saturday against Dartmouth.

Lawrence Central Star To UMass

Ronald Nowakowski of Methuen has notified University of Massachusetts varsity basketball coach Johnny Orr that he will attend the State University this fall.

Nowakowski, 6'4" 200 lb., is a graduate of Lawrence Central Catholic High School and is currently attending Brewster Academy. He scored 447 points and grabbed 312 rebounds as a senior at Lawrence Central in 21 games and was chosen first team All Catholic Conference. He was Brewster Academy's leading player this winter and scored 494 points (26 average) and had 420 rebounds (22.1 average) in 19 games.

UMass Press To Present Exhibit Of Publications

The University of Massachusetts Press, now in its second year of publication with six books printed, will exhibit its past work, and some materials of future works in the lobby display case of the Goodell Library starting tomorrow.

The exhibit will run until commencement.

One of the items will be a photograph of Thomas Bird Mosher. William Wiljanen, director of sales and promotion at the Press called Mosher "a literary pirate", who published "elegant editions of whatever struck his fancy without obtaining permission". A bibliography of Mosher's works will appear next winter.

The exhibit will also show steps in the production of a book from manuscript to book.

A manuscript given preliminary acceptance by the Press is given to an expert in the field for review. If the reviewer likes it, the manuscript is sent to the publishing committee by Mr. Barron for final approval.

If the committee decides to publish the work it is returned to the Press where Mrs. Barbara Ellis of Design and production designs the book before it is sent to the printer.

The Press, under the direction of Mrs. Leone Barron has published and will continue to publish "original works of scholarship, as well as poetry and art and books of general interest and high quality."

Among the books selected and published by the staff of three is The Talkative President: The Off-the-Record Press Conferences of Calvin Coolidge Edited by Prof. Harold Quint and Robert Ferrell, the first book to appear under the official mark of the Press.

Wiljanen, who emphasized that the Press is "a bona fide publishing house", listed some of the books which will appear next year.

They will include a book version of the Mass. Review article on Thoreau, and Dialectics and Nihilism by Peter Heller of the UMass German - Russian Dept.

In March, the Press will publish Socialism and Labor in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, written by Henry Bedford (Ph.D. UMass). Future publications are planned, but as yet are unannounced.

The exhibit should be one of the more interesting seen in Goodell this year, as the University of Massachusetts Press exemplifies another of the many areas in which UMass is striving forward toward a goal of excellence.

F.B.I. Chief Links Communists With Riots At UC Berkeley Campus

WASHINGTON, May 17—J. Edgar Hoover and a spokesman for the International Association of Chiefs of Police have told Congress there was Communist involvement in the student demonstrations at the University of California last fall.

Testimony by Mr. Hoover before a House Appropriations subcommittee was made public today. The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation appeared March 4.

Charles E. Moore, public relations director of the police chiefs group, appeared today before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee.

MR. MOORE TESTIFIED that the student demonstrations and an accompanying "filthy speech" episode had been "dominated by a small hard-core group" of Communists and Communist sympathizers who generated new demands upon the university's administration as fast as "the university yielded or surrendered at every turn" to other demands.

He called this a typical Communist tactic.

Mr. Hoover testified that individuals with subversive backgrounds who participated in the demonstrations included five faculty members. Thirty-eight others, he said, were students or connected with the university in some capacity.

Mr. Hoover did not identify the individuals in his testimony.

THE DEMONSTRATIONS on the Berkeley campus were cited by the FBI chief as an example of "a demonstraiton which, while not Communist-originated or controlled, has been exploited by a few Communists for their own ends."

"In this instance," he said, "a few hundred students contain within their ranks a handful of communists that mislead, confuse and bewilder a great many students to their own detriment.

COMMUNIST PARTY leaders feel that based on what happened on the campus of the University of California at Berkeley, they can exploit similar student demonstrations to their own benefit in the future."

Mr. Hoover said Mario Savio, spokesman for the Free Speech Movement and the demonstrators, had a previous arrest record for sit-in demonstrations.

He said Mr. Savio made a tour of Midwest and Eastern colleges last November accompanied by Bettina Aptheker, daughter of Herbert Aptheker, whom Mr. Hoover identified as a member of the National Committee of the Communist party.

A New Organization

Bettina Aptheker, Mr. Hoover said, is a member of the W.E.B. Du Bois Club of Berkeley. The W.E.B. Du Bois Club of America, Mr. Hoover said, is a Marxist-oriented youth organization founded in San Francisco last June and named in honor of Dr. William E. B. DuBois, a civil rights crusader who joined the Communist party at the age of 93.

"IN MEMORIALIZING the late Dr. Du Bois, the new organization apparently hopes to win recognition and support from both domestic and international civil rights proponents, African nationalists, and more particularly the Negro youth of the United States," the F.B.I. chief testified.

"Following the trend of recent years of playing down the Communist label, the new Marxist youth organization is designed to attract youth interested in peace, disarmament, civil rights and the like."

The Torch Begins 3rd Publication Year

The Torch, a student sponsored, edited, and published magazine of opinion and social commentary, began its third year of publication Monday with the release of its spring issue.

This issue of The Torch, an intercollegiate publication, is partially sponsored by the Student Government of American International College.

Contributors to this issue include statesmen, legislators, political leaders, educators, and students. The noted statesman D. C. S. Chandrasekhar, Member of the Indian Parliament and presently a lecturer at UCLA, presents an article dealing with the food and population problem of India, and possible solutions through education, sterilization, and other birth control methods.

SENATOR JOSEPH CLARK, Democrat of Pennsylvania, presents a detailed and urgently needed program for the reform of the houses of Congress.

Also interested in reform, but of a slightly different nature, is George Lincoln Rockwell, leader of the American Nazi Party. In an interview with editor Ghareeb, Mr. Rockwell describes how he became a Nazi, and what he believes to be the true goals of national socialism. He also describes his views on Jews, Negroes, racial strife, the Ku Klux Klan, communism and the issues facing America today.

MAJOR SOCIAL PROBLEMS of the modern world are the concern of two penetrating articles by David Leonard (Dept. of History, UMass), and Robert Bohlke (Dept. of Sociology, AIC). Dr. Leonard comments on the dangers inherent in the triple revolution for the future of mankind.

The triple revolution refers to the development of atomic weapons, cybernation, and the international movement for freedom and human rights. Dr. Bohlke comments that, from juvenile delinquents to revolutionary students, the next war will be between the adults and youth of the world.

In addition, there are articles, book reviews, poetry and art, from students representing a wide diversity of schools—AIC, UMass, Bay Path, Smith, Mount Holyoke and the University of Georgia.

It is hoped that this issue of The Torch will encourage commentary and discussion among its readers. Beginning Wednesday The Torch will be on sale in the Student Union at the University and at local book dealers and news - agents.

The Torch is under the editorship of Edmund Ghareeb (AIC), assisted by Victor Aronow (UMass), David Erlanson and William Bertera (AIC), Edward Basmajian and Judy Vassallo (UPenn), Marc Gurvitch (Georgetown), and Condon Rodgers (Smith College).

Senior Coed Receives National Recognition

The standards of the University of Mass. are recognized by the American Association of University Women and its graduates as making it worthy for membership in the Association. The Connecticut Valley Branch awards gift memberships to an outstanding Senior woman in Smith College, Mt. Holyoke and UMass. The award is given to the Senior woman who gives the most promise of constructive citizenship. Miss Linda Fisher has been chosen for the award for this year.

Miss Fisher is originally from West Newton, Mass. During her college years, she has been president of her sorority Kappa Kappa Gamma; she was elected to the Women's Judiciary Board when a sophomore; she was a Scroll; she was leader of her dorm in an Interdorm Sing. In 1963, she composed the music for Campus Varieties. ican Colleges, and is a Mortar Board.

Next year Miss Fisher has a job with the Honeywell Corp. in Boston and also expects to be associated with the branch of AAUW in the Boston area.

Willis Bill Slated For House Action

The Willis bill, providing for a major overhaul of public education in Massachusetts, was slated for House action yesterday, Speaker John F. X. Davoren announced. Sen. Kevin Harrington (D) of Salem, whose committee's studies are the basis for the bill, said the "coming week is a crossroad for Massachusetts' education."

Generally, the bill calls for an increase in state aid, a tightening of standards for receiving it, a reorganization of the State Department of Education, and improvement in standards of supervision and instruction.

Stadium Plans To Be Shown To Amherst

The impact of the new football stadium on the town will be a feature of the Community Breakfast to be held Thursday, May 20 at 8 a.m. in the North Dining Commons.

Co-sponsored by the University of Massachusetts and the Amherst Chamber of Commerce, it is the third of of a series of joint breakfasts.

President John W. Lederle will present welcoming remarks.

Govt. Official Discusses Russian Literary Problems

By Pat Petow, Staff Rep.

"The Soviet Writer and the Communist Party Since Stalin," a Government and History Department Lecture, was given Monday, May 17, by Abraham Brumburg of the United States Information Agency. There exists a struggle between the bureaucrat and the creative artist, Brumburg, holder of an MA in literature from Yale, told the audience.

He discussed relations between the party and the intellectual, a struggle, only in part, determined by the old and young generations.

SHORTLY AFTER THE 1917 REVOLUTION, Russia experienced, "the golden period of Soviet creativeart." Brumburg explained how toleration of art for art's sake was possible for a communist state: the Soviet Union had a rich reservoir upon which to draw; the artists generally identified with the Revolution, though not necessarily Bolshevism; and, also, the country was greatly occupied with other problems of economics and civil war.

Then came a move, Brumburg observed, based on interpretating the ideas of Lenin to channel history and art for the Soviet purpose. "As politics went, so went culture." Eventually, purges were added to censorship under the dictatorship of Stalin, Brumburg said.

Three guidelines promulgated in 1934-1935 were described by the lecturer: the right of expression of nationalities, party-mindedness, and popularism—all called the Doctrine of Socialist Realism.

Brumburg traced, at length, the fortunes of Soviet writers, many popular even in the West, during the period since Stalin. Much had happened in the struggle, as he described it, when in 1953 Khruschev ascended to power, bringing forth a promise of a "thaw" in literature censorship along with de-Stalinization.

But attacks, within a few months, were mounted, he said, by party hacks, "entrenched in power," on Soviet principles of literature.

THE DISTURBING FLUCTUATION of control and thaw, which Brumburg declared "dramatic" in the last few years, sometimes made it seem as "Stalin had risen from the dead."

He predicted an uneven course ahead yet with some sensitivity to the reactions of both the communist and free countries of the world. He repeated that culture had become a "mirror of the political."

Declaring that freedom and decency as well as better literature, were the liberal aims within the communist struggle, he estimated that although the literature under Stalin was of little value, even now in the movement toward "thaw" opportunities for better literature exist.

Church For Willis Plan

The Willis Report master plan for Bay State education was endorsed Sunday by the Massachusetts Council of Churches.

The board of directors of the 1600-church organization met in Boston and voted to urge members of the congregations to make known their support of the first piece of Willis Report legislation through their representatives.

Along with several other activities Saturday, was the Freshmen Class Picnic. Tommy Rae (shown above explaining the use of his instruments) and his Jamaican Steel Band were featured. They, the Boss Tweeds, and Brian Sullivan entertained up to three-thousand students. President Robert Keough expressed his gratitude to all those who participated. The picnic was open to everybody and was run by the Executive Committee, 1968, with help from the Scrolls and the Keys.

Fulbright Program Faces Financial Difficulties

(CPS) — The world-famous Fulbright educational exchange program is facing serious financial problems which could cause a reduction in its size.

Although Fulbright Fellowships have become a household phrase, the program has long had a budgeting problem which is growing worse instead of better. It is described in Washington as "running twice as fast to stay in the same place."

One of the reasons Senator J. W. Fulbright (D) of Arkansas, has been able to interest Congress in what is essentially his program is that it has always been paid for primarily with excess foreign currencies—money owned by the United States Government in excess of requirements for several years ahead. In recent years most of this money has come from the sale of United States agricultural commodities under Public Law 480.

What has happened, however, is that we are rapidly running out of these excess currencies. At present the United States holds excess money in only eight nations: Burma, India, Pakistan, Israel, Indonesia, Poland, United Arba Republic and Yugoslavia. As this source of funds dries up, more money must be appropriated by Congress even to continue the program at its present level. It may require $8 million more from Congress next year than it has in the past.

Financial troubles have already been plaguing the Fulbright program. The United States Advisory Commission on International Education and Cultural Affairs recommended in a 1963 report that Fulbright-Hayes lectureships be made more attractive financially in order to improve the quality of the lecturers, singling out especially the need for funds to cover travel expenses of dependents.

Backers of the Fulbright-Hayes program believe an enormous educational problem is needed to keep it from being slashed. Senator Fulbright has introduced a bill which would establish binational educational foundations in some of the countries where there are now exchange programs, and it is hoped that the bill will focus attention on the problem of financing educational exchange simply with foreign currencies. The foundations would be linited to those nations in which the United States now owns an excess of local currency.

Maroon Keys Elections Pick New Officers

The Maroon Keys, in a meeting held earlier in the week, have elected their officers. Robert Tobin, of Wellesley, was elected President, while Jay Devine was elected Vice-President. Both boys live at Webster House. The offices of Secretary and Treasurer went to Richard Bloom and Bruce Gombar respectively. Richard is a resident of Grayson House, while Bruce resides at Wheeler.

The Keys are already busy with plans for the future. Plans for graduation commencement exercises and next year's freshman orientation program are well under way. This past weekend the Keys were of much assistance to their own Class of '68 at the Freshman Picnic.

West Indies Univ. Pres. Lectures Here

"Problems of Education in Underdeveloped Countries" was the topic of a lecture yesterday afternoon by Dr. Phillip M. Sherlock, President of the University of the West Indies.

The author of a number of books dealing with the Caribbean, Dr. Sherlock dealt with the many hardships that underdeveloped countries have to overcome in order to establish a good system of education.

The lecture was the last in a series of programs concerning the the role of American professional people overseas. The series was supported by the Ford Foundation and sponsored by the department of anthropology and sociology.

In many parts of the nation it is still a crime to be black

The sentence for this in the South crime is life imprisonment in the cell of second class citizenship. Political disenfranchisement, educational deprivation, poverty and violence are the walls and bars of this cell. If Negro citizens of these areas are ever to enjoy their full rights are Amricans and human beings, they first must have their most fundamental right — the right to vote.

To help these Negro citizens secure this right, this summer, a team of students from the Univ. of Mass. will live and work in Martin County, North Carolina, as a part of the S.C.O.P.E. (Summer Community Organization and Political Education) Project sponsored by Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference. They have chosen as their headquarters Williamston, N.C., the scene of previous involvement by many residents of the Amherst area. There they will set up an intensive program of political education, voter registration work.

Faculty and student volunteers have been recruited but more people are needed. Also, many of the students are sacrificing a summer's wages because of their concern. Money is needed to sustain these students and provide legal fees if necessary. They look to you, the students and faculty of the University to help them help the people of Martin County.

Frosh Sluggers Run Wild, Destroy Leicester, A.I.C.

By Al Rice, Sports Staff

The Freshman baseball team went on a rampage in the past two games with 22 runs and 27 hits in a pair of victories over Leicester Junior College and the American International freshmen. Alex Vyce and Bob Chapin combined with a one-hitter in a 12-1 win over Leicester that featured five home runs. John Canty and Harry Gould pitched UMass to a 10-3 win over AIC yesterday.

The frosh bashed out five four baggers off a pair of Leicester pitchers. Starter Rod St. Pierre gave up a single and a homer to Hagan Andersen as the first two batters up in the ball game. He got through the second with only one unearned run, but Don Ferron tied into one leading off the third that went for the circuit and started off a four run inning. A walk, Ron Shepard's single, and Ted Ferraguto's homer to left ended St. Pierre's stay on the mound.

John Canty drove in a pair of runs in the fourth with the fourth team homer of the day, this coming off Bob Lindgren who relieved successfully in the third. The Redmen had to wait two more frames before they boosted the total to an even dozen in the seventh. An error and Rick Elias single set the table for pitcher Vyce to rap a long ball into left that went for a home run.

One swing picked up three runs batted in for Vyce and each of the other homer hitters had a pair of RBI's for the day except Ferron whose clout came with nobody on. Of the 14 hits only Andersen, Vyce, and Ferraguto had more than one hit.

Vyce pitched all but the last inning, allowing one hite while fanning ten. The lone run came in the sixth when a walk, infield hit, the only one of the game for Leicester, and an error allowed St. Pierre to score. He had moved to second base after his pitching duties ended. Bob Chapin, Vyce's teammate at Chicopee High, pitched the last inning and struck out the side.

The Redmen kept on yester-day where they left off on Saturday. They pounded three AIC pitchers for 13 hits and made good use of four walks and a pair of errors. Canty started for UMass but had to leave after three innings with a stiff arm. At the time he was on top of a 2-1 score. The Aces scored when a walk with the bases filled pushed across Jake Lovler.

The home club took the early lead with single runs in the first and second off Ron Smith. Vin Donahue walked as leadoff batter and took two bases on a passed ball. Vyce walked and was cut down in the popup double play that Andersen hit into, but a single by Ferron drove the run in. It was the first of three hits by Ferron who is hitting .407. The second inning had singles by Hale and Chuck Guss and a sacrifice fly account for the run.

The Aces went ahead off reliever Harry Gould with a pair of runs in the fifth. An infield bounder by Smith that he beat out, a double down the right field line by Ken Leja, and a two run single that Paul Procopio lined into right center put AIC in front until Andersen scored the tying run in the bottom of the sixth on a catcher's interference on an intended suicide squeeze with the bases filled.

The big UMass blast came one inning later when five hits produced four more runs. Vyce tripled in Donahue with the first run and scored himself when Ferron singled again. Canty singled to knock in Ferron after he stole second and took third on a wild pitch. Canty notched the fourth run with the help of three more singles.

Ray Noyes took over the Aces pitching in the eighth and retired the first man he faced. After that, a walk to Donahue and a stolen base, singles by Vyce and Andersen, and a throwing error let in one run and left two men in scoring position for the third pitcher, Larry Freed, to worry about. Both Andersen and Vyce dented the plate with the ninth and tenth runs on a wild pitch and passed ball, respectively.

Gould was the winning pitcher for his first decision of the year. He gave up all seven of the AIC hits. Today the team meets Springfield College on the road.

Intramural Report

by Larry Rutstein

In one of the most exciting games of the IFC season TKE edged AEPi 1-0 in nine innings to take the League "B" title.

With none out in the bottom of the ninth, Ken Rowe hit a line drive between rightfielder Danny Cotton and centerfielder John Parnell, that would have been a double or possibly a triple in a ball park with a fence. However, the ball rolled almost 400 feet and AEPi went down to defeat as Rowe circled the bases with a homer.

UP TILL THEN it had been a pitchers' duel between Woody Freedman of Pi and Ron Merrill of TKE. Each allowed only five hits in the extra-inning contest with no extra base hits until the decisive blow. Freedman was forced to pitch out of several threats due to lapses in fielding by the Pimen. TKE now faces BKP for the Fraternity championship.

In the dormitory semi-finals the Middlesex Redmen nipped the Grayson Aces 9-7 and the Baker Bruins were outslugged by the Chadbourne Maroons 15-5.

THE INDEPENDENT League also had its semis with NRSA of the East League falling to the Moody Blues of the International League 6-5. Stevens of the Blues belted a homerun in the top of the seventh to clinch the victory and advance his team to the Ind. finals.

In the other semi the Boyden Bombers shutout Forestry 5-0. Jack Leaman struck out five and permitted only two singles.

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

It has been brought to my attention of late that many readers are getting the wrong impression of matters concerning athletes on scholarships participating in more than one sport.

Recently an article appeared in this column that inferred that many coaches did not appreciate it when their athletes became candidates for other sports in the "off season". This is not so. One only has to bring to mind the name of Terry Swanson.

Terry, a mainstay of the Redmen football team next fall, is currently the starting right fielder for the baseball team and is stinging the ball at a ferocious clip. Because of this he did not participate in Spring football practice.

JIM BABYAK, the shortstop on the baseball team, is also considered a young man with great potential in basketball. Clarence Hill, another basketballer, is of one the best high jump men on the track team. Still on basketball. Rusty Vitallo and Hagen Anderson are two of the more dependable players on the Frosh baseball team, as Billy Tindall is proving himself on the Frosh track team.

John Schroeder, who recently signed a professional football contract with the Holyoke Bombers, is probably the most durable defenseman that Dick Garber has on the Lacrosse team.

To mention all of the "dual" athletes would be impossible, but let it be known that the case is a rare one when an athlete is barred from participating in more than one sport. The only time that occurrence might be enforced is when an athlete's grades are on the border line and he most devote himself to his books.

Don't miss Friday's Collegian Sports pages. We'll have the Varsity and Freshman Athletes of the year plus outstanding athletes in all varsity sports.

Hicks Report Proposes New Fine Arts Council

by Kathy Nolan, Staff Reporter

In a Faculty Senate report, the Concert Association Study Committee proposed the establishmert of a reorganized Fine Arts Council modeled after the Athletic programs linked to academic departments—University Theatre, Chorus, the Con-Council, to control and finance programs in the arts.

The seven-member committee, headed by Professor John Hicks, asked that cert Band, and Orchestra—be included in the regular University budget. For those programs "which involve the whole University community" the committee advised taking financial control from the Student Senate because lack of this control "introduces student government into an area in which it has no place." In order to provide better administration, financial responsibility would belong to the Fine Arts Council.

THE FINE ARTS COUNCIL, consisting of five faculty members nominated by the Committee on Committees of the Faculty Senate, and three students, nominated by the Student Senate, would increase in power by "phases" over three years.

At first the Council would allocate funds for instructive programs connected with departments. Eventually, it would extend into the financing and control of all programs in the arts — including the Concert Series, Art Acquisition fund, Educational Film Series, Caesura and special events.

Funds for this proposed Fine Arts Council would come from a student fee of four dollars per semester, trust funds and public admissions. As a result of this student fee, the Student Senate would be expected to lower the student activity tax by four dollars.

IN ADDITION, the "Hicks Report" noted that the taxing power of the Student Senate should be investigated.

The Student Senate voted unanimously to set up a committee to investigate the report.

Armand De Grenier, Business Manager of RSO, called the report "a good source for discussion in an area which ought to have been under discussion for many years."

ALONG WITH CHAIRMAN John Hicks, the committee included Phillip Bezanson, Howard Brogan, Margaret Damm, Arthur Niedeck, Jay Savareid and William Venman. It was formed to investigate the Concert Association after a report to the Faculty Senate by Prof. Henry A. Lea.

Senior Activities Include New Scholarships

by Ted Weinberg, Senior Reporter

The year 1983 will initiate the beginning of the Class of 1965 Scholarship Program. Five $300 scholarships will be rewarded each year thereafter to deserving students whose parents were graduates of the University and at one time enrolled in the Class of 1965.

Approximately $5,000 of Class funds will be invested with the University Alumni Trust Fund this summer. It is projected that by 1983 this original investment will accrue to $15,000. From this amount, $1,500 will be withdrawn annually until the fund is exhausted.

An applicant for this scholarship must be the child of a graduate of the Class of 1965. He must be enrolled as either an undergraduate or a graduate student in the University.

The scholarship program will continue until approximately the year 2000.

Senior Week tickets, now on sale in the Union Lobby, are diminishing rapidly. It appears now that tickets to the Senior Banquet to be held at the Schine Inn on Thursday, June 10, from noon to midnight will be the first to go. Only a small number are still available.

Barry and the Remains will be host to a large percentage of the class at the Class Picnic at Forest Lake Park Wednesday, June 9, as indicated by ticket sales. There are now less than 100 tickets left for this opening day of Senior Week. A day in the park with swimming, softball, sunning, picnic lunch and dancing for only $1.50.

Following a Friday afternoon Prince Spaghetti Minstrel Concert and free spaghetti dinner, the doors of the Hatfield Barn will swing open with the "Eccentrics."

The weekend will come to an end Saturday with Class Night in the Ballroom and then that final fling at the Quonset Club.

Normality will once again return Sunday as the Class of 1965 becomes 1200 University alumni.

If you are still planning to participate in Senior Week activities, purchase your tickets today in the Student Union Lobby.

Editor's Note: The Collegian extends its best wishes to the graduating seniors of the class of 1965. We are certain that they will miss the University and that the University will miss them.

See editorial page 5.

Senate Record Shows Many Achievements

Much has been accomplished by the Student Senate in the academic year 1964-65. The students of the University are perhaps unaware of the various Senate achievements.

It was through the Senate that a special bus service was organized for the Belchertown Volunteers. A special Boston bound bus on Fridays or other days before vacations was also handled by the Service Committee of the Senate.

DUE TO SENATE ACTION library hours have been extended at Goodell Library on Saturdays. A book return slot was set up at Goodell for returns after library hours. "Late libe" is now applicable to both Goodell and Morrill libraries.

There will be no more handbook exams for University women, and women's curfews have also been changed. The new hours, as of Sepfember 1965, are:

Freshman	11:00 p.m.
Sophomores	11:00 p.m.
Juniors	12:00 midnight
Seniors	12:00 midnight
Friday — All students	12:30 a.m.

EXTENDED CURFEWS:

Homecoming Ball, Winter Carnival Ball, Greek Ball and Military Ball 2:00 a.m.

SPECIAL CURFEWS:

On nights before a full or half holiday 12:00 midnight

On return from a vacation or a Monday holiday, closing hours are 12:00 midnight

There were two notable firsts in the Senate this year, President Lederle addressed the Senate in an open session during which he commented on the marking system, saying that all such systems have their faults.

He noted that the Willis Report was designed to reduce costly duplication of efforts among state supported institutions of higher education and to develop excellent institutions, specialized for definite purposes. When questioned on the possibility of raising tuition, President Lederle stated that he fights such a raise annually.

THE SENATE also gave financial support to the band in connection with its trip to the Tangerine Bowl.

The Senate has now adjourned until September with many proposals in the making. A vending machine committee has been established to see that some profit percentage from the machines is given to the various residence halls. This money would be used to better the social and cultural programs of the dorms.

The Senate Public Relations Committee has planned a Student Government Conference for November. All state supported institutions — community colleges, junior colleges and and four year schools — have been invited.

It has also been recommended that counselors receive full room and board payments for the services they render.

THROUGH AN AD-HOC committee, the present grading system is being thoroughly evaluated. Surveys have been sent to schools throughout the nation and the investigation is receiving the co-operation of the administration, faculty and student body.

Ed. Note—The Collegian takes pride in reporting these accomplishments of the Student Senate and hopes that more students will play an active role in student government.

Adelphians Hold Annual Banquet

by Dan Glosband, Editor-in-Chief

Adelphia, the Senior Men's Honor Society has selected officers for the coming year: Ed Waterman, president; John Webster, vice-president; Kip Johnson, secretary, and John Kucharski, treasurer.

REPRESENTATIVE DAVID BARTLEY (D-Holyoke), graduate of the Unuiversity and one of its foremost spokesman on Beacon Hill, was tapped as an honorary Adelphian in recognition of his outstanding service to UMass. Featured speaker at the fiftieth annual banquet on Sunday at Wiggins Tavern, Chancellor of UMass-Boston John Ryan was also tapped for the fine organizational work he has been doing.

RYAN PICTURED the Boston school as a dream coming true... It will be a University in the Western tradition and it must teach, discover and apply problems of its time—a university of the megalopolis.

He continued: UMass-Boston must start as a baby and build. In all cases its policy will be to adopt, to adapt, to accept and to continue the policies of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. The semester system will be tried for the first year, but the quarter system may be instituted thereafter if it seems advisable. A course load will consist of four courses of four credit hours each with English literature and composition combined into one course.

"UMASS - BOSTON WILL not be specifically a school of the poor or of the stupid poor. It will have a commitment, however, that the child of the lowliest Boston family, with no capital other than his brains, shall have the finest educational opportunity possible," said Ryan.

The University at Boston will share the above chore with America and admittedly it is still in the process of a dream materializing. It is a dream of great magnitude, but, Ryan closed, "Dream no small dreams, they have no power to stir men's souls."

A.P.O. Presents SU With New Benches

The President of Alpha Phi Omega, at the Thursday morning dedication, presented President Lederle with a letter officially dedicating the twelve new benches situated just outside the Student Union on the south Terrace.

With President Roger L. Crouse was Sheila A. McRevey, chairman of the Student Union Governing Board, who worked together with their respective organizations to make the benches possible.

WITH PRESIDENT LEDERLE were Dr. Noffsinger, Harold Watts, Armand DeGrenier, Augustus Ryan and other staff members of the Student Union. A small group of students also witnessed the presentation.

Dean Field, who arrived a few minutes late, said "This is the best attack on grassing that the University has ever had."

Union Representative Recruits Members

The Red Falcon Bus seen on campus this past week is one of the Service Units of the State Employees Union, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO.

Guy Farrell, a busines srepresentative of the union, told the Collegian that he is driving the bus in the current membership drive at UMass. He will remain here until the end of May and plans frequent scheduled service visits as at other state schools which he represents.

UMass Prof. Elected Pres. Of Lang. Assoc.

Dr. Irving P. Rothberg, associate professor of Romance languages at the University of Massachusetts, has been elected president of the New England Modern Language Association, founded in 1903 and numbering more than 500 members.

A faculty member at UMass since 1962, Dr Rothberg is also book review editor of Hispania, the journal of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese.

He is currently vice president of the New England chapter of the AATSP and a member of the national body's executive council.

Dr. Rothberg, 43, is a native of Philadelphia. He is a graduate of Temple University and received his Ph.D. degree from Pennsylvania State University.

In 1960 he was a fulbright lecturer at the Universidad del Valle, Cali, Colombia.

Dr. Rothberg currently teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in Spanish language and literature at UMass.

Former UM ROTC Instructor Makes Cover of "Newsweek"

A former UMass Army ROTC instructor appears this week on the cover of Newsweek magazine. Captain Charles B. Huggins who was stationed at the UMass group just prior to leaving for South Vietnam is the subject of an article dealing with America fighting men in that war.

Captain Huggins is depicted in the story as among the best of the advisors the U.S. has in Vietnam. He is currently assigned to the crack Fifth Reconnaissance Company, one of the top units in the Vietnamese Army.

The article explodes the myth that calls the Vietnamese soldier disinterested and unwilling as well as lazy. A Newsweek writer lived with Huggins and the unit he advises for about a week taking pictures and preparing the material on the unit in actual combat missions.

FOR HIS ACTIONS in Vietnam, Huggins has already been rewarded with Vietnamese silver star and has currently been recommended for this country's Bronze Star.

Capt. Huggins describes why he is in Vietnam with these words, "I came out here because I thought I could help and I think I have helped save a few lives. I suppose some soldiers go home thinking they should never have come out. But I will go home thinking that I have done some good."

While at UMass for two years, Capt. Huggins with his wife and two children resided in Sunderland. He served as advisor to the Precisionettes and was instrumental in having the Army ROTC sponsor the unit after the Marching Band dropped the unit.

The well liked officer was a graduate of Clemson and maintains a permanent residence in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. He will be leaving Vietnam in August for the return to the States and an assignment at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

TESTIMONIAL

A testmonial banquet in honor of those students selected this year for "Who's Who" will be given by the University Monday evening, May 24, in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. Students who were selected this year are asked to contact the RSO office or the SU Lobby Counter by noon Monday to confirm their plans to attend. The banquet will be this Monday at 6:00 p.m.

UMass Coed Appointed To Fashion Board

Pamela Joy Shaw, current winner of the Singer Sewing Young Stylemaker Contest, has recently been chosen to occupy a position on the Jordan Marsh 1965 College Fashion Board representing the University of Massachusetts.

As a member of the board, Pamela will assume certain responsibilities over the coming summer months. She will do informal modeling in and around the Boston stores, she will help sell new fall fashions to perspective college girls, and will help these girls to coordinate their college wardrobes.

A Fashion Retailing major at the University, Pamela feels that this opportunity will leave her with much invaluable experience to be used in future years.

Role Of Reds Seen In California Riots

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and a spokesman for the International Association of Chiefs of Police have told Congress there was Communist involvement in the student demonstrations at the University of California last fall.

Hoover's testimony before a House appropriations subcommittee last March 4 was made public Monday.

Charles E. Moore, public relations director of the police chiefs group, appeared Monday before the Senate internal security subcommittee.

MOORE TESTIFIED that the student demonstrations and an accompanying "filthy speech" episode were "dominated by a small hard-core group" of Communists and Communist sympathizers who generated new demands upon the university's administration as fast as "the university yielded or surrendered at every turn" to other demands.

He called this a typical Communist tactic.

HOOVER TESTIFIED that individuals with subversive backgrounds who participated in the demonstrations included five faculty members.

Thirty-eight others, he said, were students or connected with the university in some capacity.

Hoover did not identify the individuals in his testimony before a Houseappropriations subcommittee on March 4. A transcript of the testimony was made public Monday.

The demonstrations on the Berkeley campus were cited by the FBI chief as an example of "a demonstrations which, while not Communist originated or controlled, has been exploited by a few Communists for their own ends."

"Communist Party leaders feel that based on what happened on the campus of the University of California at Berkeley, they can exploit similar student demonstrations to their own benefit in th future."

Stress On Interdependence At Governor's Conference

"Interdependence, Challenge in Massachusetts State-Local Relations," will be the theme of the 17th Governor's Conference on State-Local Relations, it was announced today by Governor John A. Volpe.

The annual conclave, co-sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Bureau of Government Research and the Governor's Office, will be held at the Hotel Somerset, Boston, June 15 and 16.

Speaking of the increasing need for intergovernmental cooperation, Governor Volpe said today, "Recognition of increasing interdependence in Massachusetts state and local government does not undermine our New England and American concepts of strong local government.

"Rather, such recognition aids local officials and citizens to assume responsibility in solving complex governmental problems in partnership with state authorities.

Conference panels will deal with five specific topics at the two-day meeting:

—Does Massachusetts need a state commission to aid local government?

—State-local planning for natural resources—recent developments in water and land resources planning and air pollution control;

—The image of the public service in Massachusetts;

—State-municipal coordination of anti-poverty effors;

—The plight of municipal finance.

Massachusetts Senate President Maurice A. Donahue and Lt. Gov. Eliot Richardson will both take part in the panel discussions.

Others who will serve as panelists include L. L. Ecker-racy, assistant director of the U. S. Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations; Dr. George Goodwin, professor of government at UMass-Boston; Natural Resources Commissioner Charles Foster, John Cort, director of the Commonwealth Service Corps; Edward Harrington, mayor of New Bedford, and Somerville Mayor Lawrence Bretta.

Governor Volpe will address the conference at a luncheon on Wednesday, June 16.

All interested citizens, state and local officials, and civic leaders are cordially invited to the proceedings.

Those wishing further information should write to the Bureau of Government Research, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass.

Planning for this year's Governor's Conference was done by a committee composed of Raymond M. Trudel of the Governor's office; Dr. Robert A. Shanley, UMass Bureau of Government Research; Robert J. M. O'Hare of Boston College, Aaron Feinberg, Mass. Committee for the Advancement of Public Service; Mayor Cyrille Landry of Gardner, Medford City Manager Howard Reed, Michael Curran, Mass. League of Cities and Towns; Charles Wertheim, Mass. Selectmen's Association, and Mrs. Bernard P. Goldsmith, Mass. League of Women Voters.

Professor Appointed To Assist. Deanship

Dr. Arthur C. Gentile, professor of botany at the University of Massachusetts, has been appointed assistant dean of the University's graduate school and director of research services, Graduate Dean Edward C. Moore announced today.

Dr. Gentile will assume his new administrative duties September 1. He will also continue to teach part-time in the University's botany department.

In announcing the appointment, Dean Moore said, "The rapid growth of the graduate program and the additional assignments of administering the new Water Resources Research Center and the University Press, have placed additional burdens on the Graduate School. It is a pleasure to have a man of Dr. Gentile's capabilities to assist in these areas. Since our office is also responsible for coordinating all University research, Dr. Gentile's scientific background will be of inestimable value."

A native of New York City, the 38-year-old scientist has been a member of the UMass faculty since 1956. He is a graduate of City College of New York and received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago.

Dr. Gentile is an authority on plant metabolism and physiology. He has contributed more than 25 articles to scientific journals and has administered research grants from the National Institutes of Health, National Cancer Institute and National Science Foundation.

The UMass botanist has also been a post-doctoral research fellow at Duke University and Public Health Service research fellow of the National Cancer Institute.

Before joining the University's faculty he was a plant physiologist with the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station in Lake City, Fla.

Dr. Gentile has been intimately associated with planning for the University's new Boston facility, scheduled to open this fall.

He has served UMass-Boston as interim chairman of natural sciences and mathematics.

Dr. Gentile is a member of the Society of the Sigma Xi, the American Society of Plant Physiologists, and the Canadian Society for Plant Physiology.

Final Week— Free Coffee Provided

Again this semester, a joint Student Union-Dining Commons program has been arranged for free coffee to be delivered to residence halls, in the late evening, during the final examination period.

Russell Colvin, manager of S.U. food service, and Mr. John F. Martin, manager of the University's dining commons, are coordinating this service through the Dean of Students' Office.

THE COFFEE will be delivered after 10:30 p.m.; cream, sugar and paper cups will also be provided Last semester, more than 2,000 free cups of coffee were consumed. A schedul of delivery times and locations will be published in each residence hall in the near future.

Labor-Study Program Applications Accepted

Applications are now being accepted by the Graduate School for admission to the M.S. in Labor Studies program to be conducted for the first time this fall by the new University Labor Relations and Research Center.

The program will enable the student in two years to take courses in the graduate departments of Economics, Sociology, Psychology, Business Administration, Government, History and Labor Relations.

It is expected that graduates will find employment in academic work, labor union employment or government service.

For further information call Harvey Freidman at the Labor Relations Centers, Campus Extension 2477.

Faculty Takeover Proposed!

There has been a recent move on the part of the Faculty Senate to take over Caesura and the Fine Arts Council. In a report published by the Concert Association Study Committee the Senate has outlined a proposal to take out of the student domain all activities which deal with fine arts.

The present Fine Arts Council is composed of six faculty members, and six students. In addition, several administrators serve in an advisory capacity. This certainly does not compose a student majority. Funds for the program come entirely from the students, through the Student Senate.

Under the new system, there would be five faculy members, and only three students of the Council. The money, however, would still come entirely from the students in the form of a tax each semester. In effect, the new policy would be: Make the students pay, without a say.

Certain of the activities which they would like to bring under faculty control do in fact belong under their direction. These activities, such as Band, Chorus, and Orchestra, are required by academic departments and receive academic credits. It certainly is not right for a department to plan an academic program and then have to go to the Student Senate for funds to administer it. These programs should be financed entirely by the University.

However, the committee has overstepped its bounds in recommending faculty take over of Caesura, the UNDERGRADUATE literary magazine. The committee believes that the present arrangement "Introduces student government into an area in which it has no place." The fact of the matter is, to put an undergraduate publication, whatver its nature, under University control is introducing faculty control into an area in which it has NO place.

The committee has also recommended that a ceiling be placed on the amount which the Student Senate can tax each student. Here it is clearly intruding in students affairs. If the students want to tax themselves, what gives anyone the right to stop them? By placing a ceiling on student funds available, the Administration can easily take away from student domain any activity which it so desires. An activity can not be supported without funds.

To place such a policy into effect would be a GROSS intrusion into a domain which belongs entirely to students.

The report also suggested that the new Fine Arts Council be set up similiar to the Athletic Council. It even went so far as to illustrate its proposal with facts and figures. No source for these facts was given however, and neither the Chairman nor the Business Manager of the Athletic Council was contactd prior to publication of the report. No one from the Student Senate was contacted regarding its financing, and no one from R.S.O. was asked about its role in fine arts.

With obviously no source of actual knowledge what-so-ever, this committee has presented a report which calls for drastic change. Not only are some of these proposals a major violation of the ideals which, until now, were supposed to exist at this University; but, the method by which this committee operated is one which can only be looked upon with discredit. When a University ceases to exist for the benefit of the student, then it ceases to exist.

Are Finals Necessary?

As the days progress and the time for finals approaches, one cannot help but ask how necessary finals really are.

First, the idea of testing for a whole semester's work within the period of two hours is not academically feasible. It is simply not practicable to attempt to judge four month's of study in such a short amount of time. Finals have become so much of a practice that they are often given just out of habit, a remnant from the old days of strict, authoritarian education. It does not belong in a system of progressive education in which more emphasis is placed on the student's creative ability to formulate ideas of his own, rather than merely recite facts and material from memory.

Secondly, finals are not fair to the student. They only give the student who has wasted his time all year a chance to cram the week before and try to catch up, while to the student who has worked diligently for an "A" all semester, finals only mean the possibility of a disaster.

Of course, it can be argued that a student who has studied all semester should not have to worry about finals; since a quick review should be enough to refresh his memory, a final examination will then only be a confirmation of his knowledge. But the tension built up over finals and the resulting emotional distress can cause many an intelligent pupil to falter under the strain.

Unfortunately, the practice of giving finals has been in use for such a long time that it would be too revolutionary to attempt to do away with them in one quick stroke. Hence, finals will continue to be administered, at least while we are still students, but there is no reason why they should remain part of University policy as a whole.

Since courses differ so much from department to department and even within the departments themselves, the decision to give or not to give a final examination should rest with the individual faculty member. Then again, it often depends on the subject. In science and math, subjects which deal more with specifics than with generalities, it is easy to set up a master program, which can be used by all instructors in all the different sections. But in the humanities, which deal with many abstract ideas that can be interpreted differently by each lecturer, such cannot be done.

Hence, as the person closest to the students, as the one who has seen their daily work and discussed their most troublesome problems, as the man best qualified to judge his students' abilities and the necessities of his own course, the decision to give or not to give a final should be left to the discretion of the individual instructor.

Class Cuts—Whose Responsibility?

Among the many grievances of students on our campus there exists one which ranks quite high on the list. It concerns those classes for which cutting is penalized. The penalty for this offense in many instances is lowering the student's grade by a particular percentage.

What must be realized is that the individual being punished is no longer a child. He is hopefully well on his way to adulthood upon his entrance into college. It was his choice to come and he is finally on his own. It is in exactly this situation that he is expected to do things for himself; particularly to think for himself. And so it follows that the decision to attend or not attend a class should be this alone.

It should be realized that if the class is valuable to the student he will not miss it. If he feels he can do equally well on his own time and his proficiency on exams clearly indicates this, why must he be downgraded for cutting class? On the other hand, if he can not afford to cut a particular class and does so regardless, he himself will ultimately suffer, probably with a very low grade. And, once again to downgrade him seems totally unnecessary.

What seems to be lacking in this dilemna is a clear understanding of the roles of the teacher and the student—To describe them, it may be said that it is the student's role to learn—and to extract his knowledge in a way which is most meaning for to him as an individual. It is the role of the instructor to guide the student along the right path and not to lead him by the hand.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Other Colleges Speak . . .

Better Four-College participation has become a cliché around Mount Holyoke. The phrase is bound to appear in every candidate's platform, and there it seems to stay. We would like to see the idea pass the word stage and be put into action. This could come either from the executive program or the legislative program next year.

The obvious first step would be to form a committee, to serve as a permanent focal point for the exchange of ideas, either under exec. board or legislature. This committee could work unilaterally here on this campus (e.g. providing information) besides trying to promote interaction among similar committees at the other three schools.

A beginning could be in the academic area. Many students do not know what the program is, what courses they are allowed to take, or what courses are offered. Perhaps a booklet could be published and placed in each dorm listing information and also course possibilities. This would not be a full course listing for all four schools. Theoretically the only courses we can take on the program are ones which are not offered here, i.e. mostly upper division courses. Such a publication would put the program on a more official footing, thus encouraging students to participate rather than making them search three catalogues and class schedules which are not readily available. Faculty advisors might also be encouraged to know what courses are offered in their fields so they could suggest appropriate ones to their advisees or classes.

Extra-curricular activities also offer great potential. Obviously it is difficult, though we have done a good job this year, to get a speaker to come any distance to speak to a maximum of 1600 students (and who would dare promise any speaker full attendance?) Not only would audience size be increased, but additional funds would also be a welcome incentive.

The chief stumbling block that we always run into is lack of transportation. Daytime transportation is fairly adequate to Amherst and the University although many students object to having to arrive half an hour before classes and wait til half an hour after to come home.

Night-time transportation is the real problem, however. There is no direct public bus transportation either to Amherst or Northampton at night, and it has been assumed thus far that running the Four-College buses at night would be a prohibitive cost. Perhaps we should concentrate on an informal arrangement at first—a car pool could be organized for important lectures and other events, or maybe an arrangement could be made with Outing Club to use its bus.

Once an official channel is set up, all kinds of possibilities could be worked out. But first we need to arouse student knowledge and interest in the Four-College program. The Four-College exchange is supposed to be one of the big advantages in coming to school in the Connecticut Valley. Let's make this a reality.

Letters To The Editor

Attention:
Conscientious Objectors

To the Editor:

The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors is an advisory group for those men of draft age who want answers about the legal provisions for those who refuse military training and service.

The CCCO supported the three appeals which brought about the "Supreme Being clause" liberalization by the United States Supreme Court this spring. They answer about two thousand specific or technical inquiries each year from young men who are considering or are committed to conscientions objection.

The CCCO has asked us, the two signers of this letter, to represent them on this campus. We will have information furnished by the committee and will be interested in talking to students who have general or specific questions.

A Word In Parting . . .

At the risk of closing out the year in a blaze of clichés, I would like to extend a formal farewell to the members of the University community from the Collegian. To many, I am sure that this will bring no tears, however, there are others to whom the University and its student press have meant a great deal.

To those who will not return next semester, whatever the reason, we wish good luck in finals and thereafter. (If you plan to return next fall, please omit the word 'not' and stop at the word 'finals'.)

The 1965-1966 academic year will see an enlarged student body, an increased faculty, and an expanded campus. The Collegian will be expanding concomitantly with the University in an attempt to service it with the best possible journalism.

Our publication schedule will remain on a tri-weekly basis, but with an expanded number of pages. This year's average was 28 pages per week, while next fall we are budgeted for 32 pages.

We here at the Collegian are looking forward to a good year. Have a nice summer, and I'm sure that you will be seeing a lot of us next fall.

Letters To The Editor

— College Today —

To the Editor:

In an article entitled "Our Colleges Aren't Ready for Today's Students" in the latest issue of the Saturday Review, Harold Howe II, the Director of the Learning Institution of North Carolina and former Superintendent of Schools, Scarsdale, N.Y., has illuminated many problems facing the college student.

Mr. Howe devotes much of the article to the advances made by high schools and compares them to the stagnant college. In relation to the first two years of college Mr. Howe states: "The burden of general education has more and more been accepted by the high schools—but the colleges have been unwilling to give up any of their responsibility. Out of this development comes a high proportion of the duplication that stultifies education for the student. Colleges must make an increased effort to put students where they should be in terms of their learning and to avoid requiring specific learnings of them just because they have normally been a part of the college program in the freshman and sophomore years.... But those colleges will have to ask themselves the difficult question of what they are here for—to offer a good education for people who are seriously intent upon receiving one, or to provide a pleasant stopping place for post-adolescent youth in a combination marriage mart and Chatauqua session?"

"The college with the open door admission policy can, for example, set up programs that start the learning of its entrants where they are in educational development, rather than imposing upon them a system that is full of social waste because of the failures it causes. Perhaps we shall someday come to a definiton of standards in terms of the hurdles each individual should surmount with his particular background, abilities, purposes, and needs rather than in terms of rigid requirements that fail to challenge some and overchallenge others, thereby focusing our institutions on a kind of level of mediocrity which all must reach in the same period of time."

Then Mr. Howe discusses the results of a college education. He feels that the most important outcome "has something to do with the student's feelings about himself and his relationship to the world." ".....Colleges need to do more thinking and planning about this personal and non-academic side of student life, for it is an element in the educational process that has much to do with whether students achieve any solid belief in themselves and in worthwhile values. Colleges need, particularly, to examine the interaction of faculty and students in the college environment to see stitutional authority is being used in a way to whether it is building maturity or whether nprevent the growth of truly responsible attitudes among college students. Education is sorely handicapped when it becomes a series of routines for faculty and students who have no genuine sense of community. Maybe we can capture a new meaning for the liberal arts and sciences by presenting them in a way which allows the students experiencing their liberal influence to be free of the unliberal way they are frequently organized and taught."

The last important point made by Mr. Howe concerns college faculties. "In general, no one in a position of responsibility systematically examines or criticizes the teaching skills and effectiveness of college instructors and professors. Maybe we need to inquire more searchingly whether the academic freedom college faculties prize includes the freedom to be a bad teacher. Right now this freedom is liberally exercised in the halls of hgher education.

HICK'S REPORT

To the Editor:

The proposals of the "Concert Association Study Committee" of the Faculty Senate present their most clear threats to the organizations specifically named in the report revealed Wednesday, but the basic tenants upon which such proposals are founded threaten all student organizations on campus.

The philosophy of "we only want that part with which we are closely concerned; the rest we will leave alone", had been applied to the Sudetenland long before the Committee proposed similar action with campus fine arts. Of course Caesura and the other aspects of creativity on campus are closely linked to the instructional programs of the University; interaction between faculty and students is the key to any program of higher education.

But the Hicks Committee report seeks a program by which the student contribution to this campus would be effectively subordinated to the control of a faculty-heavy "Fine Arts Council". Neither Caesura nor any of the other student organizations which would be engulfed by this plan would survive a faculty takeover in any semblance of their old form. If there are defects in the various program mentioned in the report, I for one would welcome the advisory aid of the faculty in solving them, but it is my hope that Caesura and other campus organizations can continue under student direction and financial control.

Our Appearance

To the Editor:

The University of Massachusetts had a beautiful campus. Now its just a jungle of: weeds and dirt paths. In the past the campus has held an appearance of beauty, if not grandeur in the spring. It seems that this was accomplished by the blending of the flowering shrubs and the clean-cut crop of new grass. While the shrubs are still present to contribute their color to the drab surroundings, the paths composed of bare, dusty ground lend the atmosphere of a deteriorating community to say the least. With all the cries of culture and aesthetic values, one would think that the surroundings in which this is to expound could take on some semblance of neatness if not beauty. It would seem that with the vast pool of agricultural knowledge supposedly residing on this campus someone could be taught to grow grass, and if there is desire for protection of the new vegetation, there must be some old snow-fences not in use in the area which would be available. The areas around the SBA and the dorms at the foot of the hill are a disgrace. If the University is so anxious to put its best foot forward, then it might start with its outward appearance which is the first thing one notices upon arrival or in just passing through the area.

Honorary Degrees

Commencement

CARDINAL CUSHING

ENDICOTT PEABODY

Seven men who have made outstanding contributions to state, nation, and education will be awarded honorary degrees at University of Massachusetts commencement exercises June 13, UMass President John W. Lederle announced today.

The seven are Richard Cardinal Cushing, Catholic Archbishop of Boston; former Bay State Governor Endicott Peabody; Harvard Emeritus Professor Karl Sax; Louis A. Webster, former state representative and former UMass trustee; Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, dean of the school of science at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. Gilbert L. Woodside, former UMass provost; and author-alumnus William Manchester.

A native of South Boston, Cardinal Cushing was made an archbishop in 1944 and elevated to the Church's Sacred College of Cardinals in 1958. Under Pope John XXIII and Pope Paul VI he has been a leader in the ecumenical movement and in the movement for Christian renewal.

Born in Lawrence, former Governor Peabody graduated from Harvard University in 1942, received his Harvard LL.B. in 1948, and helped found the law firm of Peabody, Koufman, and Brewer in 1952. An All-American football lineman for Harvard, he was awarded the Silver Star for World War II service with the U. S. Navy.

Geneticist Karl Sax, a native of Spokane, Wash., is a former president of the Genetics Society of America, a trustee of the Population Reference Bureau, a former Guggenheim Fellow, and a former Sigma XI national lecturer. He has written about 150 scientific articles, has contributed chapters to several books, and is the author of "Standing Room Only," published by Beacon Press.

Louis A. Webster is a 1914 graduate of UMass. He served with the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture over a long period of time, and has been a director of the state federation of farm bureaus, the Massachusetts Fruit Growers Association, and the University's Associate Alumni. He is also a former president of the New England Association of Marketing Officials, a former state representative and a former UMass trustee.

Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, a Detroit native, was named Dean of the School of Science at M.I.T. last year after serving for three years as Special Assistant for Science and Technology to the President of the U.S. He has been a member of the President's Science Advisory Committee since 1957. For his scientific contributions, especially in the field of microwave theory and scatter transmission, he was awarded the President's Certificate for Merit in 1948.

Dr. Gilbert L. Woodside left his position as UMass provost in 1963 to join the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in Bethesda, Md. A distinguished zoologist, he joined the faculty at UMass in 1936, was named head of the zoology department in 1948, dean of the graduate school in 1950, and provost in 1961.

Author-editor William Manchester, a native of Attleboro and a UMass Alumnus, is currently on leave from Wesleyan University, writing the family authorized version of President Kennedy's assassination. He will be the principal speaker at the exercises, scheduled to be held on the southwest playing fields near the Frank L. Boyden Gymnasium.

Approximately 1100 graduating seniors will receive degrees at this year's commencement exercises. About 22 advanced degrees will also be awarded.

Editor's Note: At the close of each year of publication, The Collegian chooses ten seniors considered deserving of special recognition. Many of our choices are probably unknown to a majority of the campus community, for much of their activity has been of a behind-the-scenes nature. Such activity, often worthy of many kudos, rarely receives any praise. It is our purpose to honor those who have been outstanding in a variety of fields, yet have gained little or no public recognition for their superlative efforts.

Our criteria for choice were varied, but revolved about a central point—service and spirit which improved not only their particular activities, but the entire University Community.

The Collegian congratulates them on their achievements, and thanks them and the many others like them for the fine examples they have set during their enrollment at the University of Massachusetts.

FEATURE

SENIOR PROFILE:

Phil Berlin

Class: 1965

Hometown: Chelsea, Mass.

Major: Government

Activities: Senate (Const. & By-Laws, Services, Public Relations), Past treasurer of History Club, Young Democrats

The parking lot in the Orchard Complex, the destruction of the old math building, the bus for the Belchertown volunteers, the special 6:00 bus to Boston before vacations, the book return shoot outside the libe, the check on the bugs in the University water and many more such jobs have been handled by the services committee of the Student Senate—these few have been Phil Berlin's special propects.

He has become the University's representative at two bus company hearings this week. Monday he attended a hearing on behalf of Peter Pan Bus Company which wants to extend to become a touring service and on Thursday he will be on the side of Western Mass. which would like to establish a permanent charter car service.

Senate treasurer Bombadier came into the Senate Office at this point of the interview and began kidding Phil about Service Committee's investigation of the bugs in the water so Phil changed the subject from services to the Constitution and By-Laws Committee.

With the mention of committees one and two Mr. Treasurer came in again and started muttering about the succession order in the Senate. He was then informed by Senator Berlin that the treasurer would not move to the vice president's position if the presidency became vacant but rather that that office would be filled by senate election the first academic year and by presidential appointment the second year, thanks to the work of the Constitution and By-Laws Committee.

Phil went on to say that if this committee became a standing commitee it would eliminate needless debate on the senate floor by absorbing it all in its own meetings.

This ended our discussion until Monday afternoon after the first bus company hearing at which Phil made two accomplishments of note—he started asking the questions rather than answering them and also, he sent the court stenographer into tears by replying that one particular question was "relatively innocuous." He then proceeded to spell innocuous for her.

Heads Of Residence Retire

Memories of dorm dinners, myriads of faces, broken fingers, homes and and hearts, hours of conferences and confidences spring to mind when Mrs. Gerald Judge and Mrs. Lester Pitt think of this their final spring. Retiring Heads of Residence of Knowlton and Crabtree, under the office of Dean Curtis, they have over twenty years service to the thousands of daughters on temporary loan.

MRS. GERALD JUDGE

MRS. LESTER PITT

MRS. JUDGE

Mrs. Judge, an alleged New York Times crossword puzzle addict, is described by one of her counselors as an amazingly energetic woman who manages to attend cultural events, receptions and dorm functions as well as be always available to "just talk". Anyone wandering into her office finds a warmth that makes the impersonal IBM seem a million miles away. Acutely aware of the problems of a growing University, Mrs. Judge commented that girls today work harder. A Wellesley graduate and mother of three boys (MIT and two Amherst) she sympathizes with students in this their final hour. She describes Dean Curtis as a "Tremendous boss" and seems sad to be leaving the University after having seen it grow so much but with so much still to go.

MRS. LESTER PITT

On the phone, at our reporter's visit, with the infirmary inquiring about a girl, Mrs. Pitt immediately impresses us as a brisk efficient image of a Dorm Resident. A counselor-to-be described her as "Just great, I'm really sorry she's leaving."

A Wellesley graduate, she has audited courses, constantly reads, and has noted a steady improvement in the quality of the events at the University—music, art and LVP and even more how many more students attending these events. Originally she came to the University through the influence of Mrs. Judge.

Mrs. Pitt and Mrs. Judge have been honored at a Tea, dorm parties, but most of all by the feelings of the girls that they leave behind. But don't worry, they won't be far. Both women have chosen to live in Amherst.

FASHIONS GO NATURAL!—'65

The trend toward easy living and informality prompted a natural look—influenced by us, the younger generation. It's soft enough to make anything this side of Eve, look stiff by comparison.

Natural makeup, natural clothes and natural figures to fill those clothes, are all a part of it. Bones are out, and flesh is in. Skirts full enough to encourage hips, not just hip bones. And high-fashion photographers are hinting that the day may not be far off when slight plumpness will replace angular boniness in fashion's measure of the ideal woman.

In makeup, it's all softness and light, too, with a natural look for summer that's pure art. "Make it makeup, but make it natural," was the cry of more than 800 college girls in a recent survey on what they wanted most in cosmetics. And their demand for naturalness extended to lipstick, lip gloss, foundation, eye shadow, eye liner, brow darkener, mascara and face powder.

BRUSHED - ON cosmetics seem almost custom-tailored to meet that demand. Heralding a whole new era in cosmetics, brushed-ons are such a froth of color that they actually encourage women to make up to look natural, with the result that prettier faces now seem to be the rule more than the exception.

What's behind this great push for naturalness? Nothing more, according to top fashion experts, than a reflection of the increased self-confidence of young adults. They like healthy good looks. They like freedom of movement. And they have enough assurance not to be pushed easily into every silly fad that comes off the drawing board. Slowly, but surely, their determination is changing the fashion industry into one that works for women—and not, as we have had reasaon to suspect in years past—against them.

And that's a natural trend that's been a long time coming.

Terror, Freud and A Dash of Comedy

Students! Relax and take a break from studying. The Student Union Movie Committee is presenting four excellent movies in the next two weeks

On May 25 the perfect movie with which to start your finals: Experiment in Terror. A classic in suspense, this is the electrifying drama of psychopathic killer's campaign of terror against a pretty bank teller and her sister. Glenn Ford and Stephanie Powers battle the killer to the marvelous mood music of Henry Mancini.

Good news for Psych students! Bone up on the Freudian theory when the committee presents Freud on May 27. This is a bold and momentous film on the five most vital years in the life of the famous Viennese doctor who contributed so much to the world of today with his founding of psychoanalysis.

Release some of your tensions, June 1, and come see a comedy, Once More, With Feeling. Yul Brynner plays an egomaniac maestro, an orchestra leader whose passionate love for music is equalled only by his passionate love for himself.

The last show of the season, June 3, is the movie you have been waiting for, To Kill a Mockingbird, starring Academy Award winner, Gregory Peck. Don't miss this deeply moving experience which awaits you in this tender tale of a Southern lawyer's efforts to minimize the traits of hate and prejudice in the growing minds of his two children.

Spring On The Hill

(Reprinted from Tufts Weekly)

Spring on the Hill is different from
All springs gone by, all springs to come;
The grass grows green, buds open fast,
Your radiator works at last;
The girls wear shifts or pastel smocks,
The men wear sneakers, never socks,
Some program for fall's best-known guts,
And seniors make up old gym cuts;
Construction motors whine for hours
Dorms rise, it seems, like Babel Towers;
Brave workmen follow their pursuits
And right nearby in two-piece suits
Some maidens think they're all alone
With transistors and Coppertone . . .
On roofs, they're soaking up the rays
As workmen through field glasses gaze.
As birds and bees, soar high above
A young man's fancy turns to love;
In trees, initials, some inscribe
Some try the grass 'top the new libe,
Still otners stay in Goodell's stacks,
No grass stains there, but some strained backs.
With tension high, some feel the stress,
And soon comes time to mudt'-ply guess,
And then all students start to pack.
We leave the Hill and Spring soon ends,
We keep our memories and friends;
And years from now, on some occasion,
When asked to make a Tufts donation,
We'll think of April, June and May,
Of sun and frisbies, and we'll say,
"Spring on the Hill is better far,
Than springs before or after are."

Be a Friend to a Foreign Student: Mortar Board

"American students are friendly—to the extent that they don't want intimacy."

"If we ask questions they (Americans) are sincere and friendly."

These are the reactions of two University foreign students; Raman Modi, a graduate student in Mechanical Engineering and Jean Liu, a graduate Accounting student.

Foreign students such as Jean and Raman have influenced Mortar Board to select the promotion of friendship and orientation to campus living among foreign students as this year's service project.

Students are urged to participate with Mortar Board by contributing to the Foreign Students Article Drive, donating bedspreads, curtains, lamps through their dormitories until June 5.

Raman Modi is slender of average height but with a smile that makes him distinctive.

He has varied opinions on all aspects of American life, American girls . . . "I like them very much," their clothing . . . "very attractive on Americans"—but not appropriate to the figures of Indian women, and America as a country . . . "everything is so unusual."

Modi has found he must alter his study habits as great differences exist between American and Indian educational systems. The University of Calcutta, which Modi attended for two years, bases courses on a year's program instead of the two semester system on our campus, and the only means of testing is one final examination.

"A result is," said Modi, "that we fool around for ¾ of a year and cram for the last ¼."

A FEMININE view of America is contributed by Jean Liu, born in Kingsi province, China. Since 1949, however, the eleven children in the Liu family have called Taipei, the capital of Formosa, their home.

Jean has found Alpha Chi Omega sorority, where she lives, as good a substitute as possible for her five brothers and five sisters. Jean's comment on sorority life—"I love it!"—is a result of the friendships she has made with the sorority members.

Unlike Modi, Jean has found few differences in the educational methods used in undergraduate schooling in Formosa and those of the University.

"The main difference I've found is that American professors discuss an assignment after you have done it, while my instructors in Formosa explain the assignment completely before students do it."

Taipei is a very Westernized city, Jean added. Most students there wear Western clothes. Jean's mother still dresses in traditional Chinese clothes, but most businessmen as Jean's father have adopted business suits.

BOTH STUDENTS VALUE their American friendships. Mortar Board encourages students to take a more active interest in the foreign students at UMass through dormitory living and activities sponsored by the International Club.

Nat'l. Education Honor Society Inducts Local Chapter Initiates

by Larry Rutstein, Staff Reporter

Sixty-three education majors and minors were induced into the national education honor society, Kappa Delta Pi, as the local Kappa Lambda chapter was installed at the University last night.

Dr. Gerald Read, National President, delivered the main adress, as UMass became the 247 chapter in the country. The society encourages high professional, intellectual, and personal standards in education.

Initiates include: K. Andrioni, R. Arnone, R. Baker, A. Baltren, D. Bangs, G. Bay, B. Buniske, L. Cameron, J. Cann, J. Dabkowski, M. Dearden, N. Downing, B. Esielionis, R. Fishel, E. Fiske, G. Freedlander.

M. Gibson, C. Green, W. Hall, K. Hebert, E. Howe, S. Kelly, C. Koscew, J. Kotfila, S. Lepowe, D. Lindbergh, J. Macleod, S. Mansur, M. McAdams, J. Mello, S. Minich, L. Mogel, D. Montanal, R. Oaks, J. Oltsch, L. Osborn, C. Payson, P. Pecevich, L. Pratt, C. Purrington, E. Ricci, A. Poupenian.

S. Shea, C. Smith, L. Smith, G. Snook, P. Spatz, A. Stawicki, S. Stone, J. Stutz, J. Traitbman, R. Uzdavinis, J. Ulach, K. Wessman, L. Willis, J. Wood, T. Wright, S. Yokel, and J. Zagzoug.

Among the guests of honor were: Dr. Gerald H. Read, national president of KDPi, Kent State Univ., Dr. J. Richard McElhney, exec. administrator of KDPi, Dr. Esther J. McKeen, First Vice-Pres. of KDPi, of State Univ. College at Oneonta, Dean Albert Purvis, Dean of School of Education, Univ. of Mass. and Ass't Dean Ralph Pippert, School of Education, Univ. of Mass.

Also on hand were: Robert J. McCartney, Sec. of the Univ. of Mass. — representing Pres. Lederle, Dr. A. John Floriono, Counselor, Kappa Lambda Chapter UMass., Dr. Elizabeth Barlow, Counselor, Gammi Chi Chapter, State College at Worcester, and J. Kenneth Taylor, Counselor, Iota Chapter, State College at Westfield.

Student officers initiated at the ensuing banquet last night were: President, Margaret Dearden; Vice-President, Judith Kotfila; Secretary, Susan Kelly; Treasurer, Gretchen Snook; and Historian-Recorder, Daria Montanari.

Washington Teach-In Slated To Continue On New Issues

In addition to climaxing two months of teach-ins at about 50 campuses throughout the country, last week-end's national teach-in on Viet Nam also set into motion an unprecedented effort to extend the academic community's critical involvement with major policy issues.

At a press conference following the 16-hour marathon, four of its faculty sponsors announced plans to establish an on-going organization, consisting of both students and faculty, to continue the debate and discussions started by the teach-ins. The sponsors of the Washington teach-in also reissued their invitation to their principal speaker, McGeorge Bundy, who failed to appear for the scheduled debate.

The statement published by the Inter-University Committee for Public Hearings on Viet Nam, the teach-ins rather loosely-organized sponsoring groups, said that the teach-ins represent not simply a protest against the conduct of foreign policy in Viet Nam, but also a protest against "the way policy has been made, in private consels beyond the reach of public debate in either Congress or elsewhere, and the way consensus has been demanded, as an unquestioning acquiescence to higher authority."

The teach-in, whose atmosphere was one of an oversized course lecture (replete with student note-taking), "surpassed normal dull round of university discussions, it manifested a new level of the combination of intellect and social commitment," declared Arthur Waskow, resident fellow at the Institute for policy studies.

Bundy's statement included a few jibes at the teach-in sponsors as well as a comment that he disagrees "with those who have argued that it is inappropriate for government advisors to take part in discussion of this kind." Although it was revealed on Sunday that Bundy had been on an emergency mission to the Dominican Republic, many people present at the teach-in had felt at the time that he had deliberately backed out of his appearance either as an affront to the sponsors or as a defense against open criticism.

The follow-up group will not confine itself to the problem of Viet Nam, nor will it be restricted to teach-ins as its only forum of activity. There can be no doubt, however, that the teach-in, a unique institution which reflects the characteristics peculiar to its faculty inventors, is now a permanent part of the university community.

New Type of Protest Seen In Woods

Camping out has finally joined sitting in as a protest gesture.

Two University of Maryland students who were refused admission to a camping course spent a recent night in sleeping bags on the mall in front of Maryland's library. They were protesting the physical-education department's policy of closing certain courses, like camping, to students who are not majors in physical education.

The students said they slept well except for the pentrating cold, puddles from a day's worth of rain and snow, and the glare from a photographer's flashbulb.

Redmen Drop Fourth Straight To Cadets

by Al Rice, Sports Reporter

The Redmen baseball team lost its fourth in a row at the Coast Guard Academy yesterday when a windblown fly that carried over the left field fence with a man on base was all that was needed for a 2-1 victory.

As usual in the tight games, Carl Boteze was the victim of the UMass lack of batting support and the bad luck. The Redmen hitters picked up four safeties off starter Don Polk and two more off reliever Mike Rose, including three for extra bases, but the two hits the Coast Guard got were enough to win.

Karl Kamena poked the first of his pair of two baggers in the second inning and John Peacock laced a triple down the left field line in the fifth, but Mike Taylor of the Academy did them one better with a home run in the second. Boteze walked the second batter up after fanning the leadoff man, one of his 11 strikeouts. Boteze got two strikes on Taylor one a pop behind the plate that Kamena misjudged, before he hit a long fly that drifted back with the wind until it cleared the fence.

Don Winchester singled in the sixth for the only other hit off Boteze, but two more walks in that inning put the Pittsfield righty in trouble until a pop to Roy Lasky at first retired the side. A walk in the eighth, a stolen base, an intentional walk to Polk, another walk filled the bases a second time but once again Boteze got out of the jam, this time with a fly that Terry Swanson hauled down in center.

The fourth hit of the day for UMass led to the only run they managed all day. Kamena opened the eighth with his second double, this going on a line drive into left.

Lefty Mike Brita came up as a pinch hitter, and Coast Guard shifted their pitchers with Mike Rose coming in for Polk. The changed worked for awhile as he got Brita on strikes, but Boteze helped his own cause with a single to left, shallow enough to hold Kamena at third. Paul Caisse dropped a perfect bunt down to third that scored Kamena, and Caisse was safe at first when the throw from third was dropped by the first sacker Billy Crane picked up his second base hit of the day, but once again it wasn't long enough to send a man in from second base. Things looked hopeful with the bases filled and Nordberg and Swanson the next two batters. Rose tightened up and got the two big men to end a mamoth jam. The final inning was no contest as he retired the side on two infield grounders, one back to the mound that Rose took himself, and the third out on a routine fly to center that notched the third loss of the week.

Intramural Report

by Larry Rutstein

Louis Priftakis allowed only two hits and collected a triple driving in 3 runs to lead the Moody Blues, the Independent league champs, to the University Softball championship over TKE, 6-2.

The Blues managed 6 hits in all with W. Glarla getting two. It was a different story for the losers, defending University champions, as they were totally baffled by the speedy delivery of Priftakis.

RON MERRILL pitching for TKE received little defensive or offensive help from his mates. Two costly errors and a misjudged fly ball led to their downfall. Merrill and D. Healey got the only hits off the Blues.

This was the fourth game in as many nights for TKE and both the hitters and Merrill seemed a bit tired. The Blues only had one other game this week and were well rested.

In order to reach the finals TKE had to beat BKP for the fraternity championship and the Chadbourne Maroons, the dorm champions. Merrill pitched two-shutouts in leading TKE to its victories. On May 18, he threw a one-hitter against BKP as they won 6-0. The next evening he allowed six hits to the Maroons and with strong hitting by Ken Rowe and Bill Burgess won 11-0.

The Moody Blues surprised the Boyden Bombers to gain their spot in the finals. The Bombers committed 4 errors in helping the Blues to 4-3 victory.

TEP nipped AEPI in the Fraternity consolation game 5-3. In this nosebowl rematch AEPi's seventh inning rally fell short and TEP took third place.

The final batting and pitching statistics for the intramural league play have been compiled. Bob Miller of SPE led all hitter with 12-15 at the plate and a .800 average. He, of course, led the Fraternity division, with Barry Wolk of TEP second at .625 and Denny Healey of TKE following at .600. TKE led all fraternity teams in batting with a .467 average. AEPi and ASP also had over .400 averages.

Butch Pollack of BKP finished the regular season with 6-0 pitching record and 17 strikeouts to lead the IFC hurlers.

In the Dorm circuit L. Cusciano of the Webster Hawks went 9-13 and compiled a league leading .692 average. Ramsey of the Butterfield Lemons and Sanforg of the Greenough Grants were second and third. The leading pitchesrs were Dunn of the Baker Bruins and Cronin of the Middlesex Redmen who compiled 5-0 records. Hollond of the Thatcher Redwoods fanned 16 to lead in that department.

FOUR HURLERS compiled 5-0 pitching records in the independent League. Leaman of the Boyden Bombers, B. Thompson of the Foresters, Bagdon of NRSA, and Priftakis of the Moody Blues all went undefeated in regular season play. Leaman struck out 23 to lead all intramural pitchers.

Al Becker of the Moody Blues batted .700 to lead the league in hitting. He was followed by Al Backry of Kappa Nu and B. Thompson of the Foresters.

The finals in the mixed doubles tennis tournament were held last night with the team of Backry-Smolen defeating Horvitz-Longhi in two sets; 6-3, 6-4. Backry was also runnerup in the men's singles tournament in the fall.

The intramural sports program for the year has come to a close and the Chadbourne Maroons were announced as the University Intramural Champions with 565 points. TEP was second with 532.5 and TKE finished third with 512.5.

Trackmen To New Englands

Seven members of the UMass track team will accompany Coach William Footrick to the New England Championships at Brown University tomorrow.

The men competing for the Redmen will be Co-Capt. John Medeiros in the 100 yard dash, broad jjump and triple jump; Doug Sloane in the 220 yard dash; Dave Sadowsky and Bob Murray in the pole vault; Doug Renwick in the shot put and discuss; Co-Capt. Tom Panke, the Collegian Varsity Trackman of the Year, in the mile; and Terry Carpenter in the mile and two-mile.

The Freshman Athlete of the Year Award has been presented to William Tindall for his excellence in basketball and track.

Any person who witnessed the Frosh basketball games this past season realizes that this youngster will become a future great for the University. He has the height, the shot and the knowhow to lead the Redmen to future success.

But Billy does not limit himself to basketball. This Spring he was a member of the Frosh track team and will also be competing in this sport as an upperclassman.

ALL-STAR

Dick Brown, midfielder on the University Lacrosse Team, Collegian Lacrosse Man of the Year has been selected to play for the North team in the North-South All-Star game to be played at Syracuse in June.

The Lacrosse team has two remaining games on the schedule both to be played tomorrow. At 2:00 p.m. they face Dartmouth and follow it up under the lights at 8 p.m. against the Conn. Valley Lacrosse Club.

VIEWPOINT . . .

If a school, particularly the state university, cannot go big time in some sports why should it just in a few sports? If one were to look at the past years feats of a school like Michigan in all sports, this fact would come home.

So before I too depart for the outside world, I will repeat once more my plea, a swinning tradition in all sports, not just football and basketball!!

Tennis Team on Top 8-1

The University of Massachusetts tennis team brought their season's record to 9-1 as they defeated Brandeis 8-1 Tuesday afternoon.

Winning matches for the Redmen were Mike Rose, the Collegian Varsity Tennis Player of the Year, Sophomore Harvey Mednicov, Bill Martin, Roger Harper and Jerry Johnson.

Mednicov, Harper and Martin won in straight sets and lost a total of nine games between them.

IN THE DOUBLES matches Mednicov and Harper won 6-2, 6-2; the Johnson brothers, Jerry and Steve, had an easy time while winning 6-1, 6-1.

For an exciting climax Bob Hugo and John Gutt teamed up to win 4-6, 6-3, 6-3. Hugo finished his collegiate career by serving an ace to a Brandeis player.

The last match of the season will be played today at Springfield.

Redmen Bow 6-4

by Mike Gould

The UMass Varsity Nine fell victim to the homerun-ball and AIC, 6-4, in a game played last Tuesday at AIC Park.

Dick Klett and Bob Suchecki slammed four-baggers for the victors, totalling five r.b.i.'s between them. Jim Babyak collected three hits and Al Nordberg a pair for the Redmen, as their record slumped to 6-10.

The Aces took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Walt Porowski led off with a walk and came all the way around on Dave Brooks' two-out double off starter Bill Smith.

UMass gained the advantage in the third as Nordberg stroked a two-run tripple and scored on an error.

AIC came right back in their half of the inning with three runs and a 4-3 lead. Hits by Regish and Siombach preceded Kleet's homer, which came on a 2-0 pitch.

SMITTY settled down after the third, holding the Aces scoreless until the decisive eighth. Meanwhile, the Redmen kept starter Bill Davis in constant trouble, but could not push across the tying run until the seventh. Jim Babyak singled with one out and scored on two walks and a wild pitch.

Kleet started the AIC eighth with a single, the tenth safety off Smith. Suchecki then connected and sent the ball over the left field fence for the winning runs.

Smith walked three and gave up eleven hits, while fanning seven. The junior righthander was not as sharp as he has been most of the season.

UMass fans will get their last chance to see this year's club perform next Tuesday at Alumni Field. The Springfield College Maroons will provide the opposition.

TEP-IFC Third

by Barry Wolk, TEP

Tau Epsilon Phi finished an extremely successful Intramural season Wednesday night by defeating AEPi 5-3 in softball.

The win gave the TEPers third place in the I.F.C. league and first place in overall I.F.C. competition for the year.

This year TEP came in second in IM football, second in the I.F.C. sing, second in the chariot races and first in IM bowling.

The bowling team went on to win the campus championships.

The men from TEP feel that they earned these accomplishments with a maximum amount of team work and an average amount of talent. They hold high esteem for Coach Marty Shacat who organized and inspired the victorious teams, and to Saul Needle, the softball pitcher who lead his house to a 6-1 season.

Sports Schedule

In case any of our readers wish to take a break from finals, we are printing the remainder of the sports action in which the Redmen can be seen. Track—The New Engiand Championships at Brown tomorrow and the IC4A at Rutgers next weekend. Baseball — May 25 Springfield at Alumni Field. Tennis—today at Springfield. Lacrosse—Saturday versus Dartmouth on the lacrosse field.

Hard swinging and good form by a Moody Blues slugger.

Intramurals

The Intramural Office takes this opportunity to express its gratitude and appreciation to the Collegian Staff and especially Mr. Howie Davis, the Sports Editor, and his assistants for their coverage of the Intramural Sports programs throughout the year.

The excellent articles and pictures helped immeasurably to stimulate and foster the interest and participation in intramurals by the entire campus.

For their cooperation and assistance in helping to make the Intramural program a huge success we are most grateful and appreciative.

Sincerely
Chet Gladchuk, Director of Intramurals

THE SELECTION of the Collegian Varsity Athlete of the Year Award was based upon ability and sportsmanship in two varsity sports. John Schroeder, this year's selection, has shown the spectators his worthiness by his performances as a quarterback and a safetyman in football and as an impregnable defensemen in lacrosse.

There are many people who feel that John had the misfortune of attending the University during the same years as Jerry Whelchel. For, if he was playing for another institution, he would have easily been the number one quarterback on the field. Needless to say the student body is gratified that he was a representative for the Redmen.

Next year the people of Western Massachusetts will have the

On June 13, some 1100 students will be receiving their diplomas from the University of Massachusetts. Among the numbers will be a group of some of the finest athletes this school has ever seen.

Those of us who are graduating at this time can probably look back on our stays here at the University with the respect to the athletics as the period of emergence. It was during the last four years that UMass decided that it would go big time in the athletic way.

We have seen a football team finish twice on top of the Yankee Conference and twice second. The team under head coach Vic Fusia won two straight New England championships and a trip to the Tangerine Bowl. Graduation will see 18 lettermen lost to this team, but the coaching staff and players have built the level of football in the school high enough so that there will always be plenty of talent on hand.

WITH THE NEW stadium to play the games in, there is no reason why the future teams here at UMass should not continue in the winning tradition of the last four years.

Basketball is just now reaching the full blown proportions. In the four year span, we have seen the change from Matt Zunic's effective ball possession game to the present fast breaking style of John Orr. Each year, the schedule gets a little tougher, making the team just that much more prepared for conference action.

Now we have a big time slate, and there is no reason why the school cannot be a consistent winner. With some good talent returning next year and a fine group of frosh prospects, the club could win the conference crown.

Baseball has been the closest thing to a borderline sport of the big three. Earl Lorden has coached the Redmen for many years. He is noted for the fine work that he does with the pitchers. Yet, he seldom seems able to get a club where both the hitting and pitching combine. In recent years, the closest to this has been this year's team, but even then the club has a losing record. The potential of the club just doesn't appear to be used to its fullest.

TRACK IS considered the fourth major sport at many schools. Yet here we have seen in the last four years, the team go from one of the best in the New England area to a contender. The quality of the participants or coaching has not gone down hill at all. Rather it seems a matter that every meet means travel and consequently, tired competitors. There was no track for practice indoors, there will soon be none for outdoors. One must simply ask why should this sport be ignored by the Athletic Department. Mere finances is not a sufficient answer.

Coach Larry Briggs and his soccer team have started to emerge into the limelight over the past few years. As in lacrosse, winning teams are hard to come by because of a lack of experience by players. Just 20 miles from here is a high school and town that play soccer all year around. The school has won more Western Massachusetts championships than I care to think about. It also has a good string of State championships and a well developed amateur and semi-pro program. A little recruiting from Ludlow could give the University a big boost in this area.

STEVE KOSAKOWSKI has consistently developed winning tennis teams, but has had problems with hockey. The latter sport seems to suffer from a lack of experienced players rather than inferior coaching or lack of desire by participants.

The list could go on and on. Yet, the whole question is why shouldn't this school seek to establish winning traditions in other sports besides the big three? The Athletic Department is football oriented. Basketball is getting more attention now but this has just been a recent switch.

There is little reason why the school should not actively recruit some of the better high school and prep school competitors in the so-called minor sports. A concerted program of publicity for some minor sports might just interest people in them on this campus and around the state.
